[9846] ● Appeal by Special leave by State Govt. against order of acquittal.—The locus standi of State Governments to file appeals in the Supreme Court against judgments or orders rendered in criminal matters, particularly those commenced otherwise than on private complaints, has been recognised over the years and for valid reasons. They have, therefore, a vital stake in criminal matters which explains why all public prosecutions are initiated in the name of the Government. If the State Government is a contesting party to a matter disposed of by the High Court and if it is aggrieved by the judgment or order of the High Court, it is entitled under Article 136 (1) to ask for special leave of the Supreme Court to appeal from the decision of the High Court, though no party is entitled to obtain leave as a matter of right. State of U.P. v. Ram Swarup, AIR 1974 SC 1570 : (1974) 4 SCC 764 : 1974 SCC (Cri) 674 : 1974 CrLJ 1035.

[9847] ● Supreme Court when re-appraise evidence.—Where the prosecution story is fiction-like and the judgments of the lower Courts failed even to refer to the mutually destructive statements of the PWs. on crucial points and the defence evidence was summarily rejected, the Supreme Court interfered. Kaur Sain v. State of Punjab, AIR 1974 SC 329 : (1974) 3 SCC 649 : 1974 SCC (Cri) 179 : 1974 CrLJ 358.

[9848] ● Appeal against acquittal—Interference by Supreme Court.—As a self-made rule of practice, the Supreme Court does not interfere with the findings of fact reached by the High Court, unless exceptional and grave circumstances exist, or forms of legal process have been disregarded or otherwise there has been a gross miscarriage of justice. State of U.P. v. J.N. Gupta, AIR 1974 SC 753 : (1974) 4 SCC 471 : 1974 SCC (Cri) 507 : 1974 CrLJ 625 : 1974 SCD 467. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Raghuvir Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 1974 SC 1516 : (1974) 4 SCC 560 : 1974 SCC (Cri) 596 : 1974 CrLJ 1062; (2) State of Punjab v. Sucha Singh, AIR 1974 SC 343 : (1974) 3 SCC 484 : 1974 SCC (Cri) 1079 : 1974 CrLJ 364 : 1973 SCD 948 : 76 Pun LR 313; (3) Gian Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1974 SC 1024 : (1974) 4 SCC 305 : 1974 SCC (Cri) 406 : 1974 CrLJ 789; (4) Bhoori Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1974 SC 1256 : (1974) 4 SCC 754 : 1974 SCC (Cri) 664 : 1974 CrLJ 929; (5) Irlapati Subbaya v. P.P., A.P., AIR 1974 SC 836 : (1974) 4 SCC 293 : 1974 SCC (Cri) 455 : 1974 CrLJ 706; (6) Balkrishna v. State of W.B., AIR 1974 SC 120 : (1974) 3 SCC 567 : 1974 SCC (Cri) 45 : 1974 CrLJ 280 : 1974 SCD 89 : 1974 MLJ (Cri) 267; (7) Amritsar Municipality v. Hazara Singh, AIR 1975 SC 1087 : (1975) 1 SCC 794 : 1975 SCC (Cri) 354 : 1975 CrLJ 928 : 1975 MLW (Cri) 76 : 1975 KLT 275.

[9849] ● Supreme Court could impose sentence.—This Court is entitled to impose a sentence which the High Court by inadvertence did not pass for the particular offence. Sawal Das v. State of Bihar, AIR 1974 SC 2276 : (1975) 3 SCC 156 : 1974 SCC (Cri) 780 : 1974 CrLJ 1306.

[9850] ● Concurrent findings of fact.—Articles 132, 134, 135, 136.—Normally, the Supreme Court would not interfere with the concurrent finding of facts recorded by the Courts below. The evidence revealed that the currency note was not recovered from the person of the appellant that the Dy. S.P. did not actually see the passing of the note from the complainant to the accused, but it was produced by the panch witness after the Dy. S. P. had finished the search, saying that the accused threw it on the ground. The offer of bribe was made, according to the prosecution at two places. Evidence about the first offer consisted of the statements of the complainant and another panch witness but the latter turned hostile. Complaints against the present complainant about his overcharging the customers on the sale of stamps, he being a stamp-vendor, were being investigated into by the appellant, a police constable, at that time. So he should be having grudge against the appellant. There was thus no independent reliable corroboration of the statements of the complainant and another as regards the first offer. In that background, there should be unimpeachable evidence as to the passing of the currency note from the complainant to the appellant. The circumstances narrated above, cast doubt on that story. As there was no corroboration of the evidence of the trap witnesses (complainant and the panch witness), the appellant is given the benefit of doubt and appeal is allowed. Darshan Lal v. Delhi Administration, AIR 1974 SC 218 : (1974) 3 SCC 595 : 1974 SCC (Cri) 73 : 1974 CrLJ 307 : (1974) 2 SCJ 236.

[9851] ● Power of Supreme Court—Interference with sentence.—What is the proper sentence to impose is a matter primarily for the trial Court to decide. Where the Magistrate exercised the discretion judicially and the sentence has been confirmed by the Sessions Court and the High Court, the Supreme Court has no justification for interfering therewith. Further the sample of Elaichi Dana was found insect-infested and fell within the definition contained in Section 2(i)(f) of the Act and therefore the first clause of the proviso to Section 16 of the Act, under which the Court can impose a sentence less than the minimum prescribed has no application. The second clause of the proviso has also no application as the offence fell under Section 16(1)(a)(i) and not under Section 16(1)(a)(ii) of the Act. Vijay Kumar v. State of Punjab, AIR 1974 SC 687 : (1974) 3 SCC 769 : 1974 SCC (Cri) 245 : 1974 CrLJ 615 : 1974 CurLJ 125.

[9852] ● Appeal by special leave—Appreciation of evidence.—Normally the Supreme Court does not, in an appeal by special leave, go afresh into the question of the credibility of witnesses and reappraise the evidence. But where the High Court had made only a general reference to the evidence of the eye-witnesses and observed, that all the witnesses for the prosecution inspired full confidence and there was hardly any discussion of their evidence worth the name, especially when the High Court was dealing with not only the appeal filed by the appellants but also a reference under Section 374 of the Code (Section 366 (1) of the new Code), for confirming the death sentence, it was essential for the High Court to have re-appraised the evidence in the case and come to an independent conclusion as to the guilt of the accused. Ordinarily in a criminal appeal, it is not necessary for the Court to examine the entire record for the purpose of arriving at an independent conclusion and can dismiss the appeal against conviction if the Court felt that there was no sufficient ground for interference after examining the various grounds urged before it. Hence, the Supreme Court interfered and set aside the conviction. Charan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1975 SC 246 : (1975) 3 SCC 39 : 1974 SCC (Cri) 735 : 1974 CrLJ 1253.

[9853] ● Confirmation of death sentence.—The Supreme Court will interfere with the finding of the High Court in a case of confirmation of death sentence if the High Court failed to take the assistance of the opinion of the trial Judge. Charan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1975 SC 246 : (1975) 3 SCC 39 : 1974 SCC (Cri) 735 : 1974 CrLJ 1253 : (1975) 1 SCR 561.

[9854] ● Acquittal converted into conviction.—No certificate of the High Court under that Article is required for an appeal where an acquittal has been converted into a conviction under Section 302/34, IPC, and a sentence of life imprisonment imposed upon an accused person. The appeal in such a case lies as a matter of right to the Supreme Court under the Supreme Court (Enlargement of Criminal Appellate Jurisdiction) Act, 1970. R.K Pandey v. State of M.P., AIR 1975 SC 1026 : (1975) 3 SCC 815 : 1975 SCC (Cri) 225 : 1975 CrLJ 870.

[9855] ● Appeal against conviction—Murder.—It is true that lapse of a long period between the award of death penalty and hearing of the appeal by the Supreme Court is a factor which in the context of a particular case, may, in conjunction with other circumstances, justify the commutation of the capital sentence by the Court. But this is not an absolute rule justifying interference with the discretion of the trial Court in the matter of sentence in every case. Similarly, that the execution of the death sentence will render extinct the immediate progeny and will throw the family of the condemned prisoner orphaned and resourceless on the scrap heap of society, are matters extraneous to the judicial computer. Nevertheless these are compassionate matters which can be and will be considered by the Executive Government while exercising its powers of clemency. Shanker v. State of U.P., AIR 1975 SC 757 : (1975) 3 SCC 851 : 1975 SCC (Cri) 270 : 1975 CrLJ 634.

[9856] ● Supreme Court does not normally reappraise or review evidence.—It is well settled that while hearing an appeal under Article 136 of the Constitution the Supreme Court will normally not enter into reappraisal or the review of evidence unless the trial Court or the High Court is shown to have committed an error of law or procedure and the conclusions arrived at are perverse. The Court may interfere where on proved facts wrong inference of law is shown to have been drawn. Dab Chand v. Delhi Administration, AIR 1975 SC 1960 : (1975) 4 SCC 649 : 1975 CrlJ 1732. TO THE SAME EFFECT : Dalbir Kaur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1977 SC 472 : (1976) 4 SCC 158 : 1977 CrLJ 273; Ramanbhai Naranbhai Patel v. State of Gujarat, 2000 SCC (Cri) 113 (118) : 1999 CrLJ 5013 : 2000 CrLJR (SC) 138; Rasha Mohan Singh v. State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 2006 SC 951 : (2006) 2 SCC 450 : 2006 CrLJ 1121 (1124).

[9857] ● Summary rejection of appeal.—The power of summary rejection of a criminal first appeal under Section 421 should be exercised only when the Court is satisfied on perusal of the judgment and the record that there is absolutely no reasonable possibility of his success for the reasons mentioned in the order. Where there are arguable points, the High Court should give its grounds and reasons in support of its decision to reject summarily on some absolutely clinching ground. The law having been declared by the Supreme Court, it is the duty of the Bombay High Court to act in accordance with Article 141 of the Constitution and to apply it by giving proper reasons to justify whatever be its view. The order of the High Court rejecting the appeal summarily is set aside. M.S.I. Hussain v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1976 SC 1992 : (1976) 3 SCC 548 : 1976 SCC (Cri) 459 : 1976 CrLJ 1546 : 1976 SCCrR 40 : (1976) 1 SCWR 28 : (1976) 2 SCR 687 : 1976 UJ (SC) 32 : (1976) 1 APLJ (SC) 7 : 1976 CrLR (SC) 22 : 1975 CrAppR (SC) 57 : 1976 ACrC 176.

[9858] ● Interference with findings on question of fact.—The Supreme Court does not interfere with the findings on questions of fact on the strength of minor discrepancies which only indicate that the witnesses were not tutored. The fact that the apparent motive was too flimsy is no reply to the unshaken testimony of credible and natural eye-witnesses who had no motive whatsoever to implicate the accused falsely. Faquira v. State of U.P., AIR 1976 SC 915 : 1976 SCC (Cri) 151 : 1976 CrLJ 677 : 1976 CrLR (SC) 23 : 1976 SCCrR 35 : 1976 UJ (SC) 86 : 1976 CrAppR (SC) 28.

[9859] ● Appeal by special leave against concurrent finding of conviction.—In an appeal by special leave against a concurrent finding of conviction, the Supreme Court interfered and set aside the conviction as on a review of the evidence on record it was noticed that out of various items of misappropriation to the tune of Rs. 5,000/- alleged, the trial Court found an item of Rs. 50/- alone was proved and that too it was based on the tainted evidence of a solitary witness to whom the alleged misappropriated sum had been paid with a contemporaneous entry in the cash register coupled with the signature of the BDO the same day who was responsible for checking the entries, and further the trial Court itself disbelieved the evidence of the BDO in regard to some other charges against the appellant. Mohd. Aslam v. State of U.P., AIR 1976 SC 2529 : (1976) 4 SCC 283 : 1976 CrLJ 1993 : 1976 CrLR (SC) 476 : 1976 SCCrR 591.

[9860] ● Interference with findings of fact in appeal by special leave.—Ordinarily the Supreme Court does not interfere with findings of fact but where the errors of logic as well as law appear to be gross and to have occasioned a miscarriage of justice, the Supreme Court will be constrained to interfere. State of A.P. v. B. Prakasa Rao, AIR 1976 SC 1845 : (1976) 3 SCC 301 : 1976 SCC (Cri) 395 : 1976 CrLJ 1387 : 1976 CrLR (SC) 334 : 1976 SCCrR 320 : 1976 CrAppR (SC) 292 : (1975) 2 APLJ (SC) 31.

[9861] ● Practice not to release person sentenced to life imprisonment.—Where the Supreme Court is not in a position to hear the appeal in a case under Section 302, IPC within a reasonable time, the Court should ordinarily release the appellant on bail in cases where special leave has been granted to him to appeal against his conviction and sentence. Kashmira Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1977 SC 2147 : (1977) 4 SCC 291 : 1977 SCC (Cri) 559 : 1977 CrLJ 1746 : 1977 CrLR (SC) 411 : 1977 SCCrR 365 : 1977 UJ (SC) 593 : 1977 CrAppR (SC) 312 : 1977 BBCJ (SC) 230 : 1977 ChandLR (Cri) 262 (SC) : (1977) 79 PunLR 679 : 1977 AWC 675 : 1977 PunLJ (Cri)

299 : 1977 ACrR 412 : ILR (1977) 2 Kant 1212 : 1977 CurLJ (Cri) 224 : (1977) 3 ALR 525.

[9862] ● Certificate under Article 134(1)(c) unnecessary when.—Article 134(1)(c) and Supreme Court (Enlargement of Criminal Appellate Jurisdiction) Act, 1970, Section 2.—A certificate is not necessary under Article 134(1)(c) of the Constitution if the appellants have a right of appeal under Section 2 of the Act. Kishore Singh v. State of M.P., AIR 1977 SC 2267 : 1977 CrLJ 1937 : 1977 CrLR (SC) 436 : 1977 SCCrR 412 : 1977 UJ (SC) 688 : 1977 CrAppR (SC) 363.

[9863] ● Acquittal set aside by High Court—Accused convicted under Section 302, IPC.—When two Courts come to different conclusions on the same evidence, the Supreme Court has to go through the entire evidence carefully in order to see whether the appreciation of the evidence by the Sessions Judge was so unreasonable and unrealistic as to entitle the High Court to interfere with the same. Rajendra Prasad v. State of Bihar, AIR 1977 SC 1059 : (1977) 2 SCC 205 : 1977 SCC (Cri) 308 : 1977 CrLJ 613 : 1977 CrLR (SC) 164 : 1977 SCCrR 163 : (1977) 2 SCJ 104 : (1977) 3 SCR 68 : 1977 UJ (SC) 276 : 1977 CrAppR (SC) 123 : 1977 MLJ (Cri) 449 : 1977 PatLJR 377 : 1977 ACrC 181 : 1977 ChandLR (Cri) SC 218.

[9864] ● Supreme Court where disagree with conclusion of lower Courts.—Where the Supreme Court disagrees with the conclusion of the lower Courts that a particular witness was an eye-witness to the occurrence and where there is no other evidence, the conviction cannot be sustained. C. Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 1977 SC 386 : (1976) 1 SCC 879 : 1976 SCC (Cri) 215 : 1977 CrLJ 243 : 1975 CrLR (SC) 463 : 1975 SCCrR 468 : 1975 CrAppR (SC) 306 : 1975 BBCJ 730 : 1976 Chand LR (Cri) (SC) 66 : 1975 UJ (SC) 576 : 1975 CurLJ 577 : (1975) 2 CrLT 487 : 1975 ACrC 282.

[9865] ● Interference with sentence when justified.—The imposition of sentence is always a matter of discretion and unless the Supreme Court finds that the discretion has been exercised arbitrarily or capriciously or on unsound principles or that the Session Court or the High Court has not taken into account any relevant factors in imposing the sentence, the Supreme Court would not be justified in reducing the sentence, merely because it feels that a lesser sentence might well have been imposed. Surendra v. State of U.P., AIR 1977 SC 709 : (1976) 4 SCC 232 : 1976 SCC (Cri) 565 : 1977 CrLJ 351 : 1977 CrLR (SC) 56 : 1977 UJ (SC) 60(1).

[9866] ● Leave granted only on question of sentence.—Where special leave was granted by the Supreme Court limited to the question as to the nature of the offence, the appellants cannot be permitted to go behind the findings of fact reached by the High Court as it is only on the basis of those findings that it would be open to the appellants to argue that the offence committed by them is not one under Section 302 or Section 302, r/w. Section 149, IPC, but a lesser offence. On facts also, the Supreme Court held that there was no reason to interfere with the conviction and sentence recorded by the High Court. Ram Sarup v. State of Haryana, AIR 1977 SC 1792 : (1977) 4 SCC 762 : 1977 SCC (Cri) 30 : 1977 CrLJ 1439 : 1977 CrLR (SC) 89.

[9867] ● Appeal by special leave—Criminal matter—Interference.—The Supreme Court will not interfere where the High Court applied its mind in setting aside the order of the Magistrate discharging the accused and directed his commitment to the Court of Session. M. R. Dhavan v. Pratab Bhanu, AIR 1978 SC 1011 : (1978) 2 SCC 184 : 1978 SCC (Cri) 186 : 1978 CrLJ 769 : 1978 CrLR (SC) 163 : (1978) 3 SCR 488 : (1978) 2 SCWR 39 : 1978 UJ (SC) 308 : 1978 CrAppR (SC) 179 : 1978 ACrC 144 : (1978) 5 CrLT 302 : 1978 CurLJ (Cri) 185 : (1978) 80 PunLR (D) 213.

[9868] ● Special leave to appeal granted in exceptional circumstances.—Special leave to appeal can be granted only in very exceptional circumstances. A question of law of general public importance or a decision which shocks the conscience of the Court are some of the prime requisites for the grant of special leave. Madhav v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1978 SC 1548 : (1978) 3 SCC 544 : 1978 SCC (Cri) 468 : 1978 CrLJ 1678 : 1978 CrLR (SC) 362 : 1978 UJ (SC) 847.

[9869] ● Appeal under Supreme Court (Enlargement of criminal appellate jurisdiction)—Power of Supreme Court Act.— Supreme Court (Enlargement of Criminal Appellate Jurisdiction) Act (28 of 1970), Section 2(a).—By virtue of the powers conferred by the said section, the accused, who has been acquitted by the trial Court, but, on appeal by the State, convicted and sentenced by the High Court, as specified in the section, is entitled, as of right, to appeal to the Supreme Court. As a Court of appeal the Supreme Court has got to go into all the questions of fact and law and decide the case on its merits. After a right of appeal has been provided under the said section, the question, whether the High Court interfered on sufficient ground or not, will not be material, as the Supreme Court has to decide the case on its own merits. Bhajan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1978 SC 1759 : (1978) 4 SCC 77 : 1978 SCC (Cri) 515 : 1979 CrLJ 7 : 1978 SCCrR 391 : (1979) 1 SCR 527 : 1978 CrAppR (SC) 330 : 1978 UJ (SC) 737 : 1978 CrLR (SC) 508.

[9870] ● Appreciation of evidence by Supreme Court.—Article 136 and Section 2(a) of the Supreme Court (Enlargement of Criminal Appellate Jurisdiction) Act, 1971).—Undoubtedly, in respect of those accused who were convicted for an offence under Section 302/34, IPC, there was an appeal to the Supreme Court as of right, but in appeals by special leave ordinarily the Supreme Court did not undertake to reappreciate evidence. However, in a situation where the Sessions Judge rejected the entire prosecution evidence as unworthy of belief, and the High Court implicitly relied on almost the entire evidence, the Supreme Court could not escape the duty to examine the evidence for the purpose of ascertaining whether there had been any such error of law or fact as to vitiate the findings in the impugned judgment. Muthu Naicker v. State of T.N., AIR 1978 SC 1647 : (1978) 4 SCC 385 : 1978 CrLJ 1713 : 1978 CrLR (SC) 378.

[9871] ● Rejection of application of bail.—In an appeal by special leave against an order rejecting application of bail, the State cannot be allowed to rely on any new material which was not available to the High Court and which came into existence after the High Court gave its judgment. It would be unfair to the accused to make use of that material without giving him an adequate opportunity to meet it. That will entail a fairly long adjournment which may frustrate the very object of the proceedings initiated by the State. Besides, though in appropriate cases the Court has the power to take additional evidence, that power has to be exercised sparingly particularly in appeals brought under Article 136. The new development could, if the prosecution is so advised, be brought to the attention of the High Court for obtaining suitable relief. Delhi Administration. v. Sanjay Gandhi, AIR 1978 SC 961 : (1978) 2 SCC 411 : 1978 SCC (Cri) 223 : 1978 CrLJ 952 : 1978 SCCrR 252 : (1978) 2 SCJ 159 : (1978) 2 SCWR 175 : 1978 UJ (SC) 534 : 1978 CrAppR (SC) 186 : 1978 CrLR (SC) 309 : 1978 MLJ (Cri) 500.

[9872] ● Power of Supreme Court to interfere.—The impugned order of the High Court was passed merely giving effect to a recent decision of the Supreme Court as to the admissibility of certain statements. The order of the High Court may be wrong or even without jurisdiction. But there can be no doubt that it has passed a correct and just order which is in consonance with the decision of this Court in State of Orissa v. Ram Chandra Aggarwal, AIR 1979 SC 87 : 1979 CrLJ 33, and is calculated to promote the ends of justice. The Supreme Court, therefore, even if the order is wrong, would in exercise of its discrectionary special leave jurisdiction refrain from interfering with the order of the High Court. State of Rajasthan v. Gurucharandas, AIR 1979 SC 1895 : (1980) 1 SCC 250 : 1979 CrLJ 1416 : 1979 UJ (SC) 887 : 1979 CrAppR (SC) 303 : 1979 CrLR (SC) 655 : 1979 CurLJ (Cri) 234 : 1979 WLN 521.

[9873] ● Appeal on grant of special leave.—In an appeal on grant of special leave under Article 136 it is not necessary to deal with all the submissions. Dalip Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1979 SC 1173 : (1979) 4 SCC 332 : 1979 SCC (Cri) 968 : 1979 CrLJ 700 : 1979 CrLR (SC) 81 : 1979 UJ (SC) 334.

[9874] ● Appeal by special leave against acquittal—Scope for interference.—Article 136 invests the Supreme Court with a plenitude of plenary appellate power over all Courts and Tribunals in India as there are no words in the Article itself qualifying that power. It is now the well settled practice of the Supreme Court to permit the invocation of the power under the Article only in very exceptional circumstances, as when a question of law of general public importance arises or a decision shocks the conscience of the Court. But, within the restriction imposed by itself, the Supreme Court has the undoubted power to interfere even with findings of fact, making no distinction between judgments of acquittal and conviction, if the High Court, in arriving at those findings, has acted 'perversely or otherwise improperly'. In dealing with any appeal against acquittal, the Court will, naturally, keep in mind the presumption of innocence in favour of the accused, re-inforced, as may be, by the judgment of acquittal. But also the Court will not abjure its duty to prevent violent miscarriage of justice by hesitating to interfere where interference is imperative. Where the acquittal is based on irrelevant ground, or where the High Court allows itself to be deflected by red herrings drawn across the track, or where the evidence accepted by the trial Court is rejected by the High Court after a perfunctory consideration, or where the baneful approach of the High Court has resulted in vital and crucial evidence being ignored, or for any such adequate reason, the Supreme Court may feel obliged to step in to secure the interests of justice, to appease the judicial conscience, as it were. Dying declaration and testimony of direct witnesses were rejected by the High Court for reasons wholly unsatisfactory. In the light of the principles set out above and in the interests of justice the order of acquittal of A1 by the High Court is set aside and his conviction by the trial Court restored. Judgment of the Madras High Court was reversed. Arunachalam v. P.S.R. Setharathnam, AIR 1979 SC 1284 : (1979) 2 SCC 297 : 1979 SCC (Cri) 454 : 1979 CrLJ 875 : 1979 CrLR (SC) 544 : 1979 SCCrR 316 : (1979) 3 SCR 482 : (1979) 2 SCJ 134 : 1979 LS (SC) 61 : 1979 MLJ (Cri) 527 : 1979 ACrC 165.

[9875] ● Special leave petition—Entertainment of.—Special leave petition is not ordinarily entertained by the Supreme Court without going to the High Court in the first instance. Rajender Kumar v. State, AIR 1980 SC 1510 : (1980) 3 SCC 435 : 1980 SCC (Cri) 757 : 1980 CrLJ 1084 : 1980 CrLR (SC) 454 : 1980 ACrC 201 : 1980 CrAppR (SC) 219 : 1980 ChandCrC 127 (SC).

[9876] ● Appeals against acquittal.—Supreme Court has jurisdiction to entertain appeals against judgment of acquittal by the High Court at the instance of private parties. Where in a murder case the State did not file an appeal against acquittal, a brother of the deceased, a private citizen who is neither a complainant nor a first informant, could invoke the special power under Article 136 for leave to appeal and the same would not violate Article 21. P.S.R. Sadanatham v. Arunachalam, AIR 1980 SC 856 : (1980) 3 SCC 141 : 1980 SCC (Cri) 649 : 1980 UJ (SC) 403 : 1980 CrAppR (SC) 107 : ILR (1980) HP 147.

[9877] ● Habeas corpus—Order of High Court to produce girl.—The High Court ordered parents of the petitioner to produce her before it and also issued coercive process for her production. The petitioner made a statement in Supreme Court expressing apprehension that one of the respondents was after her and was threatening to kill her if she did not go with him and that she never married him or chose him as her life partner. In view of the statement, Supreme Court granted special leave and quashed the orders of the High Court and directed it to dispose of the habeas corpus petition pending before it in the light of her statement before the Supreme Court. Decision of the Allahabad High Court was reversed. Kiran v. Anand Pratap Singh, AIR 1980 SC 1749 : 1980 CrLJ 1268 : 1980 CrLR (SC) 473 : 1980 ACrC 247.

[9878] ● Appeal by special leave in criminal matter.—In an appeal by special leave in a criminal matter where the question raised related to appreciation of evidence, there is no ground for interference by the Supreme Court. Where the State did not prefer any appeal against quantum of punishment the Supreme Court will not interfere with the quantum. Naresh v. State of U.P., AIR 1981 SC 1385 : (1981) 3 SCC 74 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 631 : 1981 CrLJ 1044 : 1981 CrLR (SC) 432 : 1981 ALJ 674 : 1981 ACrR 285 : 1981 AWC 569 : 1981 CrAppR (SC) 243 : 1981 Chand CrC 142 : 1981 ChandLR (Cri) 637.

[9879] ● Complaint of offence under Copyright Act.—Article 136 and Copyright Act, Section 63.—Complaint of offence under the Act was filed before the Magistrate. The accused contended before the lower Courts that the Magistrate had no territorial jurisdiction to hear the complaint. New plea raised for the first time in argument in Special Leave Petition that complainant has no copyright cannot be allowed. Surendra Kumar v. Satya Varshneya, AIR 1981 SC 1234 : (1979) 4 SCC 750 : 1980 SCC (Cri) 172 : 1981 CrLJ 740 : 1979 CrLR (SC) 521 : 1979 UJ (SC) 645 : 1979 CrAppR (SC) 403 : (1979) 2 SCWR 304.

[9880] ● Concurrent finding of fact.— Concurrent findings of fact will not be interfered with by the Supreme Court. Mere circumstance that two or more Courts have taken the same view of facts could not shut out all further inquiry into the correctness of that view. Concurrence in not an insurance against charge of perversity though a strong case had to be made out in order to support the charge that findings of fact recorded by more than one Court were perverse, that is to say, they were such that no reasonable tribunal could have recorded them. Merit of the normal rule that concurrent findings ought not to be reviewed by the Supreme Court consisted in the assumption that it is not likely that two or more tribunals would come to the same conclusion unless it was a just and fair conclusion to come to. Dudh Nath Pandey v. State of U.P., AIR 1981 SC 911 : (1981) 2 SCC 166 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 379 : 1981 CrLJ 618 : 1981 CrLR (SC) 353 : 1981 ALJ 228 : 1981 CrApp R (SC) 152 : 1981 ACrR 165 : 1981 ACrLJ 1 : 1981 AWC 297.

[9881] ● Cryptic judgment.—Where the High Court wrote a cryptic judgment acquitting the accused without trying to displace the reasoning of the trial Court and did not even attempt to scan the intrinsic merits of the evidence, the Supreme Court remanded the appeal. Qamruddin v. Acqeel, AIR 1982 SC 1229(1) : 1982 SCC (Cri) 135 : 1982 CrLJ 1741 (2) : 1982 ALJ 981 : 1981 Supp SCC 58

[9882] ● Concurrent finding of fact not to be opened.—A concurrent finding of fact cannot be reopened in an appeal by special leave unless it is established : (1) that the finding of fact is based on no evidence or (2) that the finding is perverse, it being such as no reasonable person could have arrived at even if the evidence was taken at its face value, or (3) the finding is based and built on inadmissible evidence, which evidence, if excluded from vision, would negate the prosecution case or substantially discredit or impair it, or (4) some vital piece of evidence which would tilt the balance in favour of the convict had been overlooked, disregarded or wrongly discarded. In the present case the finding of guilt recorded by the Sessions Court as affirmed by the High Court was challenged mainly on the basis of minor discrepancies in the evidence. Over much importance could not be attached to minor discrepancies. Discrepancies which did not go to the root of the matter and shook the basic version of the witnesses, therefore, could not be annexed with undue importance. More so, when the all important "probabilities factor" echoed in favour of the version narrated by the witness. Bhoginbhai Hirjibhai v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1983 SC 753 : (1983) 3 SCC 217 : 1983 SCC (Cri) 728 : 1983 CrLJ 1096 : 1983 CrLR (SC) 396 : (1983) 2 Crimes 232 : 1983 BujLH 792 : 1983 CrAppR (SC) 343 : 1983 (2) 24 BujLR 1073 : 1983 IJR (Cri) 126 : 1983 (2) ChandLR (Cri) 509 : (1983) 2 CrLC 252 : (1983) 2 SCWR 190.

[9883] ● Appeal against acquittal.—In an appeal against acquittal, the Supreme Court has power to substitute its own assessment of evidence for that of the High Court when it is impossible to accept its conclusion on any hypothesis. State of Rajasthan v. Sukhpal Singh, AIR 1984 SC 207 : (1983) 1 SCC 393 : 1983 SCC (Cri) 213 : 1983 SCCrR 332 : 1983 CrLJ 1923 : 1983 CrLR (SC) 54 : 1983 CrAppR (SC) 109 : 1983 UJ (SC) 171 : 1983 (1) CrLC 291 : 1983 AllCrLJ (SC) 71 : 1983 IJR (Section 2) 71.

[9884] ● Plea that accused child at time of occurrence not taken during trial.—Article 136 and U.P. Children Act, 1951, Section 27.—Plea that the accused was a child at the time of the occurrence was not taken during the trial. It was also not taken before the High Court when the appeal against the conviction of the accused under Section 302 r/w. Section 34 and Section 394, IPC, was heard. Even in the Special Leave Petition as originally filed that contention was not taken. Only in the additional grounds filed long after the filing of the Special Leave Petition that plea was taken. The Supreme Court refused to entertain that plea and dismissed the Special Leave Petition. Sushil Kumar v. State of U.P., AIR 1984 SC 1232 : (1984) 3 SCC 123 : 1984 SCC (Cri) 418 : 1984 CrLJ 990 : 1984 CrLR (SC) 266 : 1984 CrAppR (SC) 235 : 1984 UJ (SC) 716 : 1984 ACrR 292.

[9885] ● High Courts refusal to enhance sentence.—Petition by State Government against High Court's refusal to enhance sentences awarded to accused for offences under Sections 408 and 477-A, IPC, the State Government failed to file necessary documents. The Supreme Court declined to invoke its jurisdiction under Article 136 though in its view the sentences awarded to the accused were inadequate and based on misplaced sympathy. State of Karnataka v. Surender Kotiankar, AIR 1984 SC 1586 : (1984) 4 SCC 370 : 1984 CrLJ 1727.

[9886] ● High Court reducing sentence.—Order of High Court interfered with sentence imposed by the trial Court and reducing it to sentence already undergone for offence under Section 5(2), Prevention of Corruption Act, by showing misplaced sympathy on utterly untenable reasons. Special Leave Petition was rejected even though High Court was in error in showing such sympathy. Harbans Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1984 SC 1594 : (1984) 4 SCC 1.

[9887] ● Re-appreciation of evidence.—In an offence of theft re-appreciation of evidence was done by the Supreme Court in the interest of justice. Delay in filing the FIR and presence of the accused, a Government servant, at the place of occurrence not having been proved by evidence the accused is entitled to acquittal. Purna v. State of U.P., AIR 1984 SC 454 : (1984) 2 SCC 393 : 1984 CrLJ 187 : 1983 CrLR (SC) 258 : (1983) 1 Crimes 973 : 1983 CrAppR (SC) 201 : 1983 UJ (SC) 532 : 1983 ACrR 390 : 1983 ChandCrC (SC) 53.

[9888] ● Enhancement of sentence.—In an appeal under Article 136 when a notice to enhance the sentence is issued, the case would be wide open and the appellants are entitled to challenge the correctness of the order of the conviction. Sadha Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1985 SC 1130 : (1985) 3 SCC 225 : 1985 CrLJ 1361.

[9889] ● Benefit under U.P. Children Act—Availability.—The Supreme Court allowed the appellant to raise the question regarding the benefit of the U.P. Children Act being raised before it though not raised before the High Court or the Sessions Court in the interest of justice in the special leave petition. Hawaldar Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1985 SC 955 : (1984) 3 SCC 617 :

1984 SCC (Cri) 453 : 1984 SCCrR 96 (2) : 1986 CrLJ 874 : 1984 ALJ 6 : (1983) 2 Crimes 940 : 1984 CrAppR (SC) 83 : 1984 CurCrJ (SC) 33 : 1984 ACrC 36 : 1984 ACrR 36 : 1984 IJR 155.

[9890] ● Appeal against acquittal.—In an acquittal recorded by the High Court the Supreme Court does not ordinarily interfere. But when incriminating evidence of a satisfactory character is brushed aside mainly by relying upon a few circumstances which do not go to detract from the value of such incriminating evidence, it becomes the duty of the Supreme Court to interfere with the acquittal in order to redeem the course of justice. High Court adopted a hyper –technical approach to the entire prosecution case, particularly the direct ocular evidence furnished by the three injured witnesses whose presence at the scene of occurrence could not be doubted and much had been made of the circumstances which do not detract from their evidence. Order of acquittal was reversed. State of U.P. v. Gokaran, AIR 1985 SC 131 : 1985 SCC (Cri) 41 : 1985 SCCrR 13 : 1985 CrLJ 511 : 1984 CrLR (SC) 428 : (1984) 2 Crimes 761 : 1985 CurCrJ (SC) 10. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Chander Kala v. Ram Krishan, AIR 1985 SC 1268 : (1985) 4 SCC 212 : 1985 CrLJ 1490 : 1985 CrLR (SC) 365 : (1985) 2 Crimes 642 : 1985 CrAppR (SC) 191.

[9891] ● Supreme Court can direct reversal of conviction.—Supreme Court can direct reversal of conviction when conviction appears to be not justified in law. Powers of the Court are plenary under the Article and restrictions in the exercise, if any, are self-imposed. Ramesh Chand v. State of U.P., AIR 1985 SC 766 : (1985) 1 SCC 464 : 1985 SCC (Cri) 100 : 1985 CrLJ 530 : 1985 CrLR (SC) 70 : 1985 CrAppR (SC) 65 : (1985) 1 ACrLR 449.

[9892] ● No illegality in order passed by lower Courts.—Where there was no illegality or any question of principle involved in sentencing, the Supreme Court will not interfere. Gopal v. State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 1986 SC 702 : (1986) 2 SCC 93 : 1986 CrLJ 801 : 1986 CrLR (SC) 105 : (1986) 1 Crimes 448.

[9893] ● Special leave petition—Public interest litigation.—The special leave petitions of "small men" are as much entitled to consideration as those of "big industrialists". In fact, the Supreme Court has always regarded the poor and the disadvantaged as entitled to preferential consideration than the rich and the affluent, the businessmen and the industrialists. Bihar Legal Support Society, New Delhi v. C.J. of India, AIR 1987 SC 38 : (1986) 4 SCC 767 : 1986 SCC (Cri) 537 : 1987 CrLJ 313 : (1986) 4 Supreme 264 : 1986 ACrC 563.

[9894] ● Retrial—Supreme Court not to order.—Article 136 and Section 321, CrPC —The Supreme Court will not embark upon a roving enquiry into facts and evidence and set aside the consent given by the Special Judge under Section 321, CPC and direct a retrial. Sheo Nandan Paswan v. State of Bihar, AIR 1987 SC 877 : (1987) 1 SCC 288 : 1987 SCC (Cri) 82 : 1987 CrLJ 793 : 1987 CrLR (SC) 51 : (1986) 4 Supreme 393 : (1987) 1 (1) IJ Rep 253(2).

[9895] ● Bride burning.—In a case of murder of bride burning, one of the accused was acquitted but where no appeal was preferred against the said acquittal, the Supreme Court is not called upon to go into that aspect any further in an appeal filed by the convicted person. Kailash Kaur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1987 SC 1368 : (1987) 2 SCC 621 : 1987 SCC (Cri) 431 : 1987 CrLJ 1127 : 1987 Rajdhani LR 327 : (1987) 1 Supreme 614 : (1987) 2 SCJ 516 : (1987) 2 Crimes 418 : 1987 CrLR (SC) 393 : 1987 APLJ (Cri) 184 : 1987 IJR 281 : (1987) 2 UJ (SC) 223 : (1987) 2 HinduLR 167 : (1987) 2 RecCrR 63 : 1987 PatLJR (SC) 45 : (1987) 2 DMC 94 : (1987) 2 LS (SC) 7.

[9896] ● Appeal against connection by co-accused.—Article 136 and CrPC, Section 386.—Where the appeals of certain accused were allowed by the Supreme Court, it held that the conviction and sentence of the non-appealing accused could not also be sustained consistent with the findings in and the result of the said appeals as the findings were interdependent and inextricably integrated and therefore set aside the conviction and sentence of the non- appealing accused also. Hari Nath v. State of U.P., AIR 1988 SC 345 : (1988) 1 SCC 14 : 1988 SCC (Cri) 14 : 1988 CrLJ 422 : JT1987 (5) SC 316 : (1987) 3 Crimes 667 : (1987) 2 IJ Rep 561 : 1987 ACrC 582 : 1988 BLJ 55.

[9897] ● Power of Supreme Court to review and reappreciate evidence.—The Supreme Court in appeal can review and reappreciate evidence. Order of acquittal grossly erroneous : on reappreciation of facts it can be set aside. State of U.P. v. Krishna Gopal, AIR 1988 SC 2154 : (1988) 4 SCC 302 : 1989 CrLJ 288 : (1988) 3 Crimes 195 : 1988 All WC 1328 : 1988 All Cr R 668.

[9898] ● Concurrent finding of fact.—Where the High Court has reached conclusion based on partly inadmissible evidence and partly on circumstances which are not justified on the basis of evidence, or partly on facts which are not borne out from the evidence on record, it cannot be contended that in an appeal under Article 136 this Court will not go into the facts of the case and come to its own conclusion. Some of the findings of fact reached by the High Court cannot be said to be such which are concurrent or conclusive. This Court is, therefore, put to the necessity of examining the evidence wherever it is necessary. Kehar Singh v. State (Delhi Adm.), AIR 1988 SC 1883 : (1988) 3 SCC 609 : 1988 SCC (Cri) 711 : 1989 CrLJ 1 : (1988) 3 Crimes 209.

[9899] ● Concurrent findings by Trial Court as well as High Court that there was fish on—Board which included hold of trawlers.— Article 136 and Maritime Zones of India (Regulation of Fishing By Foreign Vessels) Act (1981), Sections 13, 22 & 25. Maritime Rules (1982), R. 16.— Where it was contended that at the time of apprehension of the trawlers, no fish was found on board and the net was not wet, that there was no evidence that fish on board was seized nor there was any evidence to show what had happened to the first or who put the fish in the hold of the trawlers and that no presumption under Section 22 of the Act could be drawn, that the trawlers were engaged in fishing within the exclusive Economic Zone of India in contravention of the provisions of the Act and the Rules made thereunder, this contention could not be considered in the appeal by special leave as there had been concurrent findings by the trial Court as well as by the High Court that there was fish on board which included the hold of the trawlers. C.T. Shang v. S.D. Baijal, AIR 1988 SC 603 : (1988) 1 SCC 653 : 1988 SCC (Cri) 162 : 1988 CrLJ 855 : (1988) 1 Crimes 524 : (1988) 1 SCWR 128 : (1988) 90 Bom LR 56 : (1988) 1 ACrLR 468.

[9900] ● Special leave—Grant of—Parties not entitled to open out and argue whole case.—The grant of special leave does not entitle the parties to open out and argue the whole case and they are not entitled to contest all the findings recorded by the Courts below unless it is shown by error apparent on the record that substantial and grave injustice has been done. Appabhai v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1988 SC 696 : 1988 Supp SCC 241 : 1988 CrLJ 848 : (1988) 1 Crimes 606.

[9901] ● Appeal against acquittal.—The principles relating to limitations of the appellate Court in an appeal against acquittal do not detract from the plenitude of the power of the appellate Court to review and re-appreciate the evidence if the order of acquittal on a review of the evidence is found to be grossly erroneous. The powers of the appellate Court, in an appeal against acquittal, are not different from or inconsistent with, those that the appellate Court has in an appeal against a conviction; the difference is, as is sometimes stated, more in the manner of approach and the perspective rather than in the content of the power. The expressions "very substantial reasons", "substantial and compelling reasons", "strong reasons" used in several pronouncements which tend to qualify the power of the appellate Court do no more than to convey the principles stated by the Judicial Committee in Sheo Swarup's case, AIR 1934 PC 227 (2), and in Sanwat Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1961 SC 715 : (1961) 1 CrLJ 766, and Chandra Kanta Debnath v. State of Tripura, AIR 1986 SC 606 : (1986) 1 SCC 549 : 1986 CrLJ 809. There is thus no immunity to an erroneous order from a strict appellate scrutiny. But the appellate Court where it finds justification to reverse an acquittal must record reasons why it finds the lower Court wrong. This, in the ultimate analysis, is merely a reiteration of a principle which every exercise of appellate jurisdiction in the matter of reversal of an order under appeal is subject to. State of U.P. v. Krishna Gopal, AIR 1988 SC 2154 : (1988) 4 SCC 302 : 1988 SCC (Cri) 928 : 1989 CrLJ 288 : 1988 (3) Crimes 195 : 1988 ACrR 668 : 1988 AWC 1328 : 1988 CrAppR (SC) 233.

[9902] ● Interference by Supreme Court in order of acquittal.—The scope of appeals under Article 136 is undisputedly very much limited. This Court does not exercise its overriding powers under Article 136 to re-weigh the evidence. The Court does not disturb the concurrent finding of facts reached upon proper appreciation. Even if two views are reasonably possible, one indicating conviction and the other acquittal, this Court will not interfere with the order of acquittal. But this Court will not hesitate to interfere with the acquittal if it is perverse in the sense that no reasonable person would have come to that conclusion, or if the acquittal is manifestly illegal or grossly unjust. State of U.P. v. Anil Singh, AIR 1988 SC 1998 : 1988 Supp SCC 686 : 1989 CrLJ 88 : (1988) 3 Crimes 367 : 1988 ACrR 621.

[9903] ● Plea of right of defence.—High Court when acquits without intelligent appreciation of the question whether accused acted in exercise of right of private defence, acquittal is to be reversed by Supreme Court (here Supreme Court held that two person in exercise of right of private defence cannot kill two and injure third; the plea of right of private defence per se unbelievable) State of U.P. v. Jodha Singh, AIR 1989 SC 1822 : (1989) 3 SCC 465 : 1989 CrLJ 2113.

[9904] ● Lower Courts if misread evidence.—If the lower Courts have misread evidence or have ignored vital pieces of evidence resulting in miscarriage of justice, it is the duty of the Supreme Court to interfere. Suryamoorthi v. Govindaswamy, AIR 1989 SC 1410 : (1989) 3 SCC 24 : 1989 CrLJ 1451.

[9905] ● Appeal against conviction.—Even in appeal against conviction the Supreme Court will not generally reappreciate evidence. In this case, however on merits the conviction was found justified. Rattan Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 1989 SC 1401 : 1989 Supp (1) SCC 548.

[9906] ● Supreme Court when can interfere with findings of fact of Courts below.—Supreme Court ordinarily is slow, in substituting its findings of fact in place of those recorded by the Courts below. However, this does not mean that the Supreme Court has no power to do so. The discretion conferred by Article 136 of the Constitution is wide enough to permit the Supreme Court to interfere even on facts in suitable cases if the approach of the Courts below has resulted in grave miscarriage of justice. By way of self-imposed discipline, the Supreme Court does not ordinarily reappreciate or reassess the evidence unless it is of opinion that the approach of the Courts below has resulted in failure of justice necessitating correction. Suryamoorthi v. Govindaswamy, AIR 1989 SC 1410 : (1989) 3 SCC 24 : 1989 CrLJ 1451 : (1989) 2 Crimes 176 : 1989 All Cr C 389.

[9907] ● Undue delay in execution of death sentence.—Undue delay in execution of death sentence will entitle the condemned person to approach the Supreme Court under Article 32, Constitution of India. But the Court then will examine the nature of delay caused and circumstances ensued after sentence was finally confirmed by judicial process. The Court will have no jurisdiction to reopen the conclusion reached by Court while finally maintaining the sentence of death. Triveniben v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1989 SC 1335 : (1989) 1 SCC 678 : 1990 CrLJ 1810 : (1989) 2 Crimes 391 : (1989) 30 Guj LR 622 : 1989 Cur CrJ (SC) 153.

[9908] ● Death of accused in Police lockup.—Evidence on record established that an arrested accused suffered death in police lock up because of third-degree-method torture on him. The conviction by trial Court on police officer was reversed by High Court on the finding that a witness, a police officer of some other station would not depose falsely. The Supreme Court can interfere and restore conviction because High Court entirely misdirected itself. Instances are not rare that police officer to save his colleague deposes falsely.

Death in police custody by reason of third-degree-torture, calls for deterrent sentence on concerned police officer. Gourishanker Sharma v. State of U.P., AIR 1990 SC 709 : 1990 Supp SCC 656.

[9909] ● Reappreciation of evidence.—Though generally speaking the Supreme Court does not reappreciate the evidence in an appeal, on special leave being granted, under Article 136 of the Constitution of India where two Courts have appreciated the evidence and recorded concurrent findings, but since the High Court acquitted some of the accused, the Supreme Court may appreciate evidence to determine whether the conviction and sentence recorded against the three appellants is justified or not. Chinta Pulla Reddy v. State of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 1993 SC 1899 : 1993 Supp (3) SCC 134 : 1993 (1) Crimes 1136 : JT 1993 (3) SC 633 : 1993 (2) CCR 100 (SC).

[9910] ● Communal riot—Causing death of woman and child.—A crowd consisting of Muslims unlawfully damaged the house properties of Hindus and attacked some of them resulting in death of wife and daughter of a PW. An injured witness gave details of incident. A dying declaration too gave details of the incident implicating the accused. Conviction followed reversing the acquittal passed by trial Court under TADA by apex Court. Paresh Kalyandas v Sadia Yakabhi, AIR 1993 SC 1544 : 1993 (3) SCC 95 : 1993 CrLJ 1857 : JT 1993 (2) SC 435 : 1994(1) Crimes 20 (SC) : 1993 (3) CCR 244 (SC).

[9911] ● Supreme Court normally not appraise evidence.—Normally Supreme Court does not appraise the evidence for itself under Article 136 of the Constitution. The conclusion of High Court on question of fact on appreciation of evidence is considered to be final. Arjun v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1994 SC 2507 : 1994 Supp (3) SCC 189 : 1995 CrLJ 410 (SC).

[9913] ● Enhancement of sentence.—Trial Court acquitted the accused and the High Court convicted him under Section 226, IPC. The Supreme Court under Articles 136 and 142 can issue suo moto rule of enhancement of sentence. E.K. Chandrasenan v. State of Kerala, AIR 1995 SC 1066 (1067) : (1995) 2 SCC 99 : 1995 SCC (Cri) 329 : 1995 CrLJ 2060 : (1995) 1 Crimes 421.

[9914] ● Supreme Court not be justified in disturbing concurrent findings of fact.—Sitting in the jurisdiction under Article 136, the Supreme Court will not be justified in re-opening the whole case and disturbing concurrent findings of fact recorded on a pure appreciation of evidence unless we hold that those findings have been recorded in utter disregard of mandatory provisions of law resulting in serious prejudice and substantial injustice to the accused. The other area justifying our interference would be where on the proved facts wrong inference of law has been drawn or the conclusions on facts are manifestly perverse and based on no evidence. Ranbir Yadav v. State of Bihar, AIR 1995 SC 1219 : (1995) 4 SCC 392 : 1995 CrLJ 2665 : (1995) 2 Crimes 161 (SC).

[9915] ● Concurrent finding of facts by Court below—Challenge to.—In an appeal pursuant to leave under Article 136, Constitution the appellant challenged concurrent findings of fact recorded by Courts below against the appellant. The apex Court held, the apex Court in appeals against conviction recorded by the trial Court and as confirmed by the High Court usually and as a matter of course does not interfere with concurrent findings of fact based on appreciation of relevant prosecution evidence. In the present case both the Courts, the trial Court as well as the High Court, have placed implicit reliance on eyewitness account of prosecution witnesses. Consequently unless the concurrent findings of fact reached by both the Courts below are found to be unreasonable or are found to involve any error of law or they are shown to be against the weight of evidence, they would not be lightly interfered with by this Court in appeals on special leave. Gitesh Yadav v. State of M.P., AIR 1996 SC 3098 : (1996) 8 SCC 186 : 1996 CrLJ 2159 : (1996) 2 Crimes 1 (SC).

[9916] ● Murdering wife by strangulation—Concurrent finding of fact.—In a case by concurrent finding of fact both the Courts held the accused guilty of murdering his wife by strangulation. The findings were based on circumstantial evidence and autopsy report. The question was whether it was a death by suicide or homicide. One doctor in panel categorically stated the fracture of hyoid bone was ante-mortem in nature. He was corroborated by autopsys surgeon. The Supreme Court refused to interfere in appeal. Mere observation made by a doctor that possibility of hyoid bone fracturing in process of dead body being taken out from well does not in any way weaken the prosecution case. Tej Prakash v. State of Haryana, (1996) 7 SCC 322 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 412 : 1996 CrLJ 394 (SC) : JT 1995 (7) SC 561 : 1995 (5) Scale 734 : 1995(4) CCR 132 (SC).

[9917] ● Normally Supreme Court not reappreciate evidence.—As a normal, rule, the Supreme Court does not in exercise of its jurisdiction under Article 136 of the Constitution of India, while hearing appeals by special leave, reappreciate the evidence, where two Courts have concurrently appreciated the evidence and arrived at findings of guilt of the accused persons. An effort to do justice between the parties is a compulsion of judicial conscience and Courts can and should strive to evolve an appropriate remedy in the facts and circumstances of a given case so as to further the cause of justice. C.Chenga Reddy v. State of A.P., AIR 1996 SC 3390 : (1996) 10 SCC 193 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 1205 : 1996 CrLJ 3461 : JT 1996 (6) SC 739 : 1996 (6) Supreme 83 : (1996) 3 Crimes 119 (SC).

[9918] ● Contempt proceedings—Nature of.—Contempt proceeding is not a dispute between two parties, the proceeding is primarily between the Court and the person who is alleged to have committed the contempt of Court. The person who informs the Court or brings to the notice of the Court that anyone has committed the contempt of such Court is not in the position of a prosecutor, he is simply assisting the Court so that the dignity and the majesty of the Court is maintained and upheld. It is for the Court, which initiates the proceeding to decide whether the person against whom such proceeding has been initiated should be punished or discharged taking into consideration the facts and circumstances of the particular case. Leave to appeal to Supreme Court is not available. State of Maharashtra v. Mahboob S Allibhoy, AIR 1996 SC 2131 : (1996) 4 SCC 411 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 675 : 1996 CrLJ 2879 : JT 1996 (6) SC 151 : 1996 (4) Scale 158 : 1996 (2) CCr 207 (SC) : (1996) 2 Crimes 130 (SC).

[9919] ● Supreme Court's interference under Article 136 with concurrent finding of fact when called for.—While exercising its jurisdiction under Article 136 of the Constitution of India, if the Supreme Court notices that concurrent finding of fact has been recorded by the trial Court and the appellate Court on the testimony of a witness, ignoring or overlooking other evidence and attending facts and circumstances which have an important bearing on the credibility of such a witness, it becomes the duty of this Court to reappraise the evidence, and interfere, with such finding if the interest of justice so requires. Nayudu Srihari v. State of A.P., (1996) 10 SCC 393 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 1285 : 1996 CrLJ 4441 : JT 1996 (10) SC 519 : 1996 (6) Scale 86 : (1996) 3 Crimes 154 (SC).

[9920] ● Power of Supreme Court to convert finding of acquittal into one of conviction.—In appeal against acquittal, if acquittal is found wrongful, then Supreme Court would be competent to convict the accused and the case would not be sent back on remand for retrial. The limitation imposed by Section 401(3), CrPC cannot be read into the power of Supreme Court under Article 136, CrPC Article 136 is not circumscribed by any limitation. In any case power under Article 142, Constitution is available to pass such order as may be deemed appropriate to do complete justice. Dharama v. Nirmal Singh Bitter, AIR 1996 SC 1136 : 1996 (7) SCC 471 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 444 : 1996 CrLJ 1631 (SC) : JT 1996 (4) SC 608 : 1996(1) CCR 139 (SC).

[9921] ● Finding arrived without considering admission of adversary.—It is no doubt true that a finding arrived at on a question of fact by the lower Appellate Court or the High Court is not ordinarily interfered with by this Court under Art. 136 of the Constitution. But if such finding is recorded by non-consideration of some vital piece of evidence or admission of the adversary, then this Court will be fully justified in interfering with the finding in question. In the case in hand, the consistent evidence being that Panditrao and Shevantabai were living together for long years as husband and wife and plaintiff No. 1 is their son and the defendant also admitted the aforesaid fact but contended that there had been no valid marriage between Panditrao and Shevantabai, a legal presumption does arise, though the presumption is rebuttable and this presumption has not been rebutted by the defendant. It has been held by this Court in the case of S.P.S. Balasubramanyam v. Surutayan (1994) 1 SCC 460 : AIR 1994 SC 133 that if a man and woman live together for long years as husband and wife then a presumption arises in law of legality of marriage existing between the two. But the presumption is rebuttable. The High Court, committed an error of law in recording a finding that the presumption would arise only if the factum of marriage is proved. We are afraid if factum of marriage is proved, the question of raising presumption does not arise. The lower Appellate Court on the other hand has merely entered into the arena of conjecture and surmises by interfering with the finding of the Trial Judge without considering the relevant and material evidence on the point. In this view of the matter findings arrived at by the lower Appellate Court as well as by the High Court on the question of relationship of Panditrao and Shevantabai cannot be sustained in law. In our considered opinion a legal presumption arises on the admitted fact that they were living together as husband and wife and the said presumption has not been rebutted. We would accordingly set aside the findings of the High Court as well as the findings of the Additional District Judge on this score and restore the finding of the Trial Judge on this score and hold that Shevantabai was the wife of Panditrao and plaintiff's having been begotten by Shevantabai from Panditrao are the legal heir's over the property of Panditrao. Ranganath Parmeshwar Pandit Rao Mali v. Eknath Gajanan Kulkarni, AIR 1996 SC 1290 (1292) : (1996) 7 SCC 681 : JT 1996 (1) SC 293.

[9922] ● Power of Supreme Court under Article 142 not conditioned by any statutory provision.—The amplitude of powers available to this Court under Article 142 of the Constitution of India is normally speaking not conditioned by any statutory provision but it cannot be lost sight of that this Court exercise jurisdiction under Article 142 of the Constitution with a view to do justice between the parties but not in disregard of the relevant statutory provisions. The transfer of the appeal to the High Court, after hearing the appeal on merits and finding that offence under Section 3 of the Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act on the basis of the evidence led by the prosecution, was not made out, is neither desirable nor proper nor permissible let alone justified. There cannot be piece meal hearing of an appeal on merits—first by this Court to be entered in the register maintained for the purpose and shall be forwarded by the Collector or the DC who receives them under the relevant rule, with or without enquiry, as the case may be, to the Central Government for its consideration in accordance with law; even returned applications shall be called back or fresh ones shall be obtained from the concerned persons and shall be processed and forwarded to the Central Government for consideration; (5) while the application of any individual chakma is pending consideration, the first respondent shall not evict or remove the concerned person from his occupation on the ground that he is not a citizen of India until the competent authority has taken a decision in that behalf. National Human Rights Commission v. State of Arunachal Pradesh, AIR 1996 SC 1234 (1239) : (1996) 1 SCC 742 : JT 1996 (1) SC 163.

[9924] ● Evidence of eye-witness when reliable.—When the evidence of an eye-witness who is a natural, probable and disinterested witness, clearly establishes the guilt of the accused, concurrent finding of conviction recorded by both the Courts below is legally sustainable. Surajdeo Yadav v. State of Bihar, AIR 1996 SC 3157 : 1996 CrLJ 2302 : JT 1996 (6) SC 54 : 1996 (2) Crimes 54 (SC) : 1996(2) CCR 36 (SC).

[9925] ● Concurrent findings of lower Courts when.—The version of eye-witnesses some of whom were injured tallied with medical evidence. FIR was lodged promptly. At the behest of some of the accused some weapons were discovered under Section 27, Evidence Act. They were convicted by the Sessions Judge and then by High Court. The Supreme Court refused to interfere with the conviction observing that in appeal against conviction when the findings of lower Courts are concurrent, well-considered, well supported and well-founded, there is no scope for interference either with the conviction or with the enhancement of sentence awarded by the High Court. Rakesh Singh v. State of H.P., AIR 1996 SC 3173 : (1996) 9 SCC 89 : JT 1996 (4) SC 53 : (1996) 2 Crimes 45 (SC).

[9926] ● Concurrent findings of Courts below not brushed aside in appeal by special leave.—In an appeal by special leave against orders of conviction, the concurrent findings reached by Courts below on evidence cannot be lightly brushed aside and unless it is shown that the findings are against the weight of evidence or are vitiated by any legal error, the Supreme Court does not interfere with them as a matter of course, especially when they are based on appreciation of evidence of eye-witnesses found to be acceptable by both the Courts below. Ram Sanjiwan Singh v. State of Bihar, AIR 1996 SC 3265 : (1996) 8 SCC 552 : 1996 CrLJ 2528 : (1996) 2 Crimes 162 (SC).

[9927] ● Concurrent findings of guilt against appellant when.—All the accused persons armed with rifles attacked the victim. They fired from their respective weapons causing death of one and injury to others. The other accused are convicted under Section 324/34, IPC. The appellant-accused's plea is that the accused simultaneously fired and it is not ascertainable who shot the victim to death. But a reliable eye-witness deposed that the appellant accused fired shot first. This hit the deceased. There is concurrent finding of guilt under Section 302, IPC against the appellant. This Court refuses to interfere. Ram Dutta v. State of U.P., (1996) 2 Crimes 106 (SC).

[9928] ● Conversion of acquittal to conviction.—Conversion of acquittal to conviction by Supreme Court after unsuccessful revision against acquittal by High Court. Yes, the apex Court is competent to convert acquittal to conviction after unsuccessful revision against acquittal in High Court. Dharma v. Nirmal Singh, AIR 1996 SC 1136 : (1976) 7 SCC 471 : 1996 CrLJ 1631 : (1996) 1 Crimes 83.

[9929] ● Expunging of adverse remarks.—While deciding Criminal Appeal No. 548 of 1988 some remarks came to be made against his competence as counsel. These applications have been given by him that those remarks may be deleted as he was not given opportunity to explain his conduct before those remarks were made. K.I. Pavunny v. Asstt. Collector, Cochin, AIR 1998 SC 2613 : (1998) 4 SCC 69 : 1998 CrLJ 4018 (SC) : JT 1998 (2) SC 533 : 1998 (2) Scale 354 : 1998 (4) SLT 371 : 1998 (4) Crimes 89 (SC) : 1998 (8) Supreme 289.

[9930] ● Court martial—Evidence.—On the other hand, the Court Martial has expressly referred to the evidence of 'K' himself and contents of Ex. AW. Secondly, the High Court is wrong in thinking that the report fixing the responsibility on Subedar Sukhdev Singh should have been accepted and the respondent should have been exonerated. Admittedly, Subedar

Sukhdev Singh is a subordinate official. The responsibility for the stores was with the respondent. He cannot escape by contending that a subordinate official was responsible. It is for the Court Martial to consider the said question and come to a conclusion. When the Court Martial has held that the respondent was responsible for the lapse, it was not for the High Court to interfere with the same as there was no omission on the part of the Court Martial to consider the relevant evidence. General Court Martial v. Aniltej Singh Dhaliwal, AIR 1998 SC 983 : (1998) 1 SCC 756 : 1998 CrLJ 1402 at 1405, 1406 (SC) : JT 1997 (10) SC 110 : 1998 (1) Crimes 62 (SC) : 1997 (7) Scale : 1998 (1) SLT 463 : 1998 (78) FLR 414 : 1998(1) CCR 66 (SC).

[9931] ● Order taking cognizance of offences under Sections 193, 194, 211 and 218, IPC.—It was, not proper and legal for the Designated Court at Chandigarh to take cognizance of the offences under Sections 193, 194, 211 and 218, IPC and to proceed with the trial of those offences against the appellant and the other three police officers. However, the process issued by the Designated Court against them need not be set aside as inquiry contemplated by Section 340(1) of the Code has already been held by this Court and a finding has been recorded that they appear to have committed these offences in relations to the proceeding which was pending in the Designated Court at Nabha. In view of sub-section (2) of Section 340 it was competent for this Court to exercise the power of trial Court under Section 340(1) and hold an inquiry. As the appellant and the three police officers prima facie appear to have committed the said offences it was opened to the Designated Court at Chandigarh, now that the case has been transferred to that Court, to have issued process under clause (d) to take security for their appearance before the Magistrate having jurisdiction to try those offences. Arvindervir Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1998 SC 2950 : (1998) 6 SCC 352 : 1998 CrLJ 4014 at 4018 (SC) : JT 1998 (5) SC 329 : 1998 (3) Crimes 125 (SC) : 1998 (4) Scale 403 : 1998 (6) SLT 520 : 1998 (2) JCC (SC) 113 : 1998 (6) Supreme 243.

[9932] ● Identification of accused.—In the circumstances of the case when the accused persons entered that room, it would have been easier for the inmates of the room to identify the new entrants as the former were accustomed to the dim light at that time inside the room. If the accused who had come from outside could identify the victim, whom they hacked with the deadly weapons, there would have been no difficulty for PW 3 in identifying the accused. Jinnat Mia v. State of Assam, AIR 1998 SC 533 : (1998) 9 SCC 319 : 1998 CrLJ 851 at 853 (SC) : JT 1997 (10) SC 104 : 1997 (10) Supreme 449 : 1997 (7) Scale 614 : 1998 (1) Crimes 1 (SC) : 1998 (1) CCR 45 (SC).

[9933] ● Non-service of notice within period prescribed.—The Additional Sessions Judge and the High Court recorded a finding that before filing the complaint the appellant did not serve a notice within the period prescribed under Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act. Since the above finding is one of fact and based on proper appreciation of the evidence no interference in respect thereof if called for. However, the impugned judgment of the High Court so far as it set aside the order of discharge passed in favour of the appellant cannot be sustained for on perusal of the record the Apex Court finds that the trial Court was fully justified in concluding that the evidence adduced on behalf of the respondent was insufficient to make out a prima facia case against the appellant. Tomy Jacob Kattikkaran v. Thomas Manjaly, AIR 1998 SC 366 : (1997) 11 SCC 24 : 1998 CrLJ 661 at 662 (SC).

[9934] ● Scope of interference in criminal matter—Questions of fact.—(i) The powers of this Court under Articles 136 of the Constitution are very wide but in criminal appeals this Court does not interfere with the concurrent findings of fact save in exceptional circumstances.

(ii) It is open to this Court to interfere with the findings of fact given by the High Court, if the High Court has acted perversely or otherwise improperly.

(iii) It is open to this Court to invoke the power under Article 136 only in very exceptional circumstances as and when a question of law of general public importance arises or a decision shocks the conscience of the Court.

(iv) When the evidence adduced by the prosecution fell short of the test of reliability and acceptability and as such it is highly unsafe to act upon it.

(v) Where the appreciation of evidence and finding is vitiated by any error of law of procedure or found contrary to the principles of natural justice, errors of record and misreading of the evidence, or where the conclusions of the High Court are manifestly perverse and unsupportable from the evidence on record. Ganga Kumar Srivastava v. State of Bihar, AIR 2005 SC 3123 : (2005) 6 SCC 211 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 1424 (1429) : 2005 CrLJ 3454.

[9935] ● Criminal appeal—Re-appreciation of evidence.—In the instant case, seven eye-witnesses were examined by the prosecution and out of them some were injured witnesses. The trial Court as well as the High Court concurrently found the appellant guilty. The Courts below had found the evidence of the prosecution witnesses, some of them injured witnesses was worthy of credence and could be relied upon for convicting the appellants. The medical evidence on record corroborated the case of prosecution. The Supreme Court held that in view of the concurrent findings of fact recorded by the Courts below was were found to be based on evidence on record, it was not necessary for the Supreme Court to consider the facts of the case in details. Nagarjit Ahir v. State of Bihar, AIR 2005 SC 722 : (2005) 10 SCC 369 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 1530 (1532) : 2005 CrLJ 904 : 2005 (1) Crimes 191.

[9936] ● Criminal appeal—Where two Courts below concurrently analysed evidence.— Where two Courts concurrently accepted the evidence to sustain the charge the Supreme Court declined to go into the meticulous analysis of the evidence at the invitation of counsel of the appellants. Mangu Khan v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 2005 SC 1912 : (2005) 10 SCC 374 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 1535 (1538) : 2005 CrLJ 1748 : 2005 (1) Crimes 338. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Sheikh Mehboob v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 2005 SC 1805 : (2005) 10 SCC 387 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 1544 (1545) : 2005 CrLJ 2136 : 2005 (1) Crimes 386.

[9937] ● Plenary powers under Article 136.— Court as the appellate dealing with the judgments of the Trial Court and the appellate Court exercising plenary powers under Article 136 of the Constitution while directing retiral has ample jurisdiction to fix the place or the Court which should undertake such exercise, keeping in view the needs of justice in a given case with the object ensuring real, substantial, due and proper justice and that for as an inevitable and necessary corollary of the decision to set aside the judgments of the Courts below. Zahira Habibullah Sheikh v. State of Gujarat, AIR 2004 SC 3467 : (2004) 5 SCC 353 : 2004 CrLJ 2855.

[9938] ● Non-application of mind or erroneous application of law.—When an appeal is heard and Appellate Court finds non-application of mind or erroneous application of law or perversity in appreciation of evidence it is not required to hear the concerned member(s) of judiciary whose orders are questioned. It is only when adverse comments are made personally attributing mala fides or personal bias or involvement in the case, dehors the role as a judicial functionary and that too unrelated to the subject matter of lis, in a given case, the position may be different. Observations made while considering the legality, propriety, reasonableness, rationality or in a given case perversity in the manner of exercise of powers and passing orders by the Courts below under challenge in relation to a particular case do not reflect adversely on the competence of the entire network of Courts. The observations made in any way cannot have demoralizing effect on the highest Court of the State Judiciary in discharging its functions. A judgment, the observations and criticisms as to the manner of disposal have to be soberly read with objectivity and not out of context or even as a provision of an Act or Rule, with pre-conceived notions apparently exposing virtually ones' own hidden desires or agendas, if any, if only this Court intends to castigate or condemn anyone, who deserved such treatment, be it an institution or authority or incumbent in office, there is no need for it to labour on an excuse to do so indirectly. Zahira Habibullah Sheikh v. State of Gujarat, AIR 2004 SC 3467 : (2004) 5 SCC 352 : 2004 CrLJ 2855 (2861).

[9939] ● Transfer of case for trial outside State—Petition for modification of order—Review permissible under Article 137.—A petition was filed for modification of the order passed in Best Bakery case (Vide 2004 AIR SCW 2325) whereby the case was transferred for trial outside the State of Gujarat. The grounds were that the direction for fresh trial outside the State of Gujarat is unwarranted, per incuriam being not permissible in law in violation of principles of natural justice without consideration of real factual scenario, without specific prayer in that regard and reflect adversely on the credibility of the entire judiciary and administration of the State. The Court rejected the petition. A review application can be filed under Article 137 of the Constitution read with order XL of the Supreme Court Rules, 1966. Zahira Habibullah Sheikh v. State of Gujarat, AIR 2004 SC 3467 : (2004) 5 SCC 353 : 2004 CrLJ 2855 (2858).

[9940] ● Courts' power to transfer case for trial outside State.—The Court has power to transfer a case outside the State for trial, if such a prayer is one amongst others, specified as incidental or ancillary to the main relief. A separate application for the purpose is not required. Zahira Habibullah Sheikh v. State of Gujarat, AIR 2004 SC 3467 : (2004) 5 SCC 353 : 2004 CrLJ 2855 (2859).

[9941] ● High Court's judgment perverse conclusions.—Where the order of acquittal passed by the High Court is based on patently perverse conclusions, the same would be set aside. State of Uttar Pradesh v. Devendra Singh, AIR 2004 SC 3696 : (2004) 10 SCC 616 : 2004 CrLJ 3118 (3119).

While hearing a petition under Article 32 it is not permissible for the Supreme Court either to exercise a power of review or some kind of an appellate jurisdiction over a decision rendered in a matter which has come to the Court by way of a petition under Article 136 of the Constitution. T.P. Maideen Koya v. Government of Kerala, AIR 2004 SC 4733 : (2004) 8 SCC 106 : 2004 CrLJ 4957.

[9942] ● Power of Supreme Court under Article 136—Summarised.—After discussing the earlier case law the Supreme Court summarized the law as under—

(i) The powers of the Supreme Court under Article 136 of the Constitution are very wide but in criminal appeals the Supreme Court does not interfere with the concurrent findings of the fact save in exceptional circumstances.

(ii) It is open to the Supreme Court to interfere with the findings of fact given by the High Court if the High Court has acted perversely or otherwise improperly.

(iii) It is open to the Supreme Court to invoke the power under Article 136 only in very exceptional circumstances as and when a question of law of general public importance arises or a decision shocks the conscience of the Court.

(iv) When the evidence adduced by the prosecution fell short of the test of reliability and acceptability and as such it is highly unsafe to act upon it.

(v) It is open to the Supreme Court to interfere where the appreciation of evidence and finding is vitiated by any error of law of procedure or found contrary to the principles of natural justice, errors of record and misreading of the evidence, or where the conclusions of the High Court are manifestly perverse and unsupportable from the evidence on record. Ganga Kumar Srivastava v. State of Bihar, AIR 2005 SC 3123 : (2005) 6 SCC 211 : 2005 CrLJ 3454 (3457).

[9943] ● Acquittal not interfered by Supreme Court.—There was no evidence to suggest that soon before the occurrence the deceased was subjected to torture or harassment, the medical evidence was also ambiguous, the acquittal recorded by the High Court for offence under Section 304B reversing the judgment of conviction recorded by the trial Court was not interfered. State of Orissa v. Niranjan Mahapatra, AIR 2005 SC 970 : (2005) 9 SCC 578 : 2005 CrLJ 1427 (1427).

[9944] ● Bail order interfered with by Supreme Court.—Where the High Court without looking into the gravity of the crime and threats to the life of the complainant and other witnesses given by the complaint granted bail in a case under Sections 302, 307 after conviction recorded by the trial Court by a non-speaking order, held that the Supreme Court would be justified under Article 136 of the Constitution in setting aside bail order passed by the High Court. Panchanan Mishra v. Digambar Mishra, AIR 2005 SC 1299 : (2005) 3 SCC 143 : 2005 CrLJ 1721 (1725) : 2005 (1) Crimes 244.

[9945] ● Private interest public interest.—Where a private interest is pitted against the public interest, in such cases the latter must prevail over the former. Tarak Singh v. Jyoti Basu, AIR 2005 SC 338 : (2005) 1 SCC 201 (211).

[9946] ● Element of doubt—Supreme Court refused to interfere.—Where the accused was alleged to have killed the deceased by fire by gun when the deceased along with his wife was going the deceased's wife is not examined in the case the presence of the two eye-witness on the spot in doubtful, there being conflict between medical evidence in the testimony of one witness and another witness being inimical, the Supreme Court refused to interfere with acquittal in view of the element of doubt permeating in the case. State of Uttar Pradesh v. Shiv Kumar, AIR 2005 SC 2992 : (2005) 11 SCC 212 : 2005 CrLJ 2604 : (2005) 2 Crimes 153.

[9947] ● Acquittal of accused—Supreme Court did not interfere.—In a case under the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act, 1954 (hereinafter referred to as 'the Act') the High Court after considering the evidence on record found that the prosecution has not been able to make out a case under Section 16(1)(a)(ii) read with Section 7 of the Act. It accordingly allowed the appeal and acquitted the respondent. As the finding recorded by the High Court was based on evidence, the Supreme Court did not interfere with the judgment of acquittal. Accordingly appeals were dismissed. State of Haryana v. Satish Kumar, AIR 2005 SC 1297 : 2005 CrLJ 1726 (1726) : (2005) 1 Crimes 372.

[9948] ● Expunction of adverse remarks.—A Sessions Judge filed Special leave petition before the Supreme Court for expunction of certain adverse remarks. The Supreme Court directed the Sessions Judge to file application before the High Court for expunction of remarks. S.K. Bhatt v. State of Uttar Pradesh, (2005) 3 SCC 634 : 2005 CrLJ 1747 (1748) : 2005 (1) Crimes 398.

[9949] ● Detention order—Ground for quashing.—The detention of the detenu would not be set aside/quashed on the mere ground that the earlier incidents were state. Collector and District Magistrate, Eluru v. Sangala Kondamma, AIR 2005 SC 1165 : (2005) 3 SCC 666 : 2005 CrLJ 689 (692).

[9950] ● Matter totally outside scope of proceedings for contempt.—There was also no justification for the further direction by the single Judge in the contempt proceedings, that too by an interlocutory order, that the complainant should immediately and forthwith be reinstated into the service of the Bank, and shall be deemed to be in the service of the Bank all through, that the employee shall not be prevented in any manner from discharging his duties and that he shall be paid all arrears of salary within four weeks, and that the suspension order shall be deemed to have been revoked. These were totally outside the scope of the proceedings for contempt and amounted to adjudication of rights and liabilities not in issue in the contempt proceedings. At all events, on the facts and circumstances, there was no disobedience, breach or neglect on the part of the Bank and its President and Secretary, to even assuming that such directions could be issued in the course of the contempt proceedings. Hence, directions (2) and (3) and the direction relating to revocation of suspension are liable to be set aside. Midnapore People's Co-op. Bank Ltd. v. Chunilal Nanda, AIR 2006 SC 2190 : (2006) 5 SCC 399 : 2006 CrLJ 2903 (2912).

[9951] ● Appeal against acquittal.—Where the order of acquittal passed by the High Court did not suffer from infirmity, the Supreme Court declined interference with acquittal. State of Rajasthan v. Yusuf, AIR 2009 SC 2674 : (2009) 12 SCC 139 : 2009 CrLJ 3470. To the same effect : State of Andhra Pradesh v. P. Khaja Hussain, (2009) 15 SCC 120 : 2009 (6) SCR 660 : JT 2009 (7) SC 477.

[9952] ● Appeal against acquittal.—We have found that Assadid Poddar (A-2) had absolutely no role to play in the whole affair. We have already rejected the theory of illegal intimacy between Sonali Mukherjee (A-1) and Assadid Poddar (A-2). Even otherwise, according to the evidence led by Subbash Dass (PW-5), Assadid Poddar (A-2) had no opportunity to administer the tablets to Biswajit. He was acting like a true family friend in going with Sonali Mukherjee (A-1) to receive the deceased from Chennai. Even according to Subbash Dass (PW-5), they were all through together outside the house. We do not, therefore, think that there is any case against Assadid Poddar (A-2). The High Court is correct in acquitting Assadid Poddar (A-2) and we confirm the judgment of the High Court. In the result, we also dismiss the appeal, challenging the acquittal of Assadid Poddar (A-2). Sonali Mukherjee v. Union of India, 2009 (14) SCR 858 : 2009 (13) Scale 42 : JT 2009 (12) SC 626.

[9953] ● Jurisdiction under Article 136.—Jurisdiction under Article 136 of the Constitution is to be exercised wherever it is required to do so for securing the ends of justice. S.V.L. Murthy v. State, AIR 2009 SC 2717 : (2009) 6 SCC 77 : 2009 CrLJ 3930.

[9954] ● Reappraisal of evidence.—While hearing an appeal under Article 136 the Supreme Court will normally not reappreciate a review the evidence unless the trial Court or High Court is shown to have committed an error of law or procedure and the conclusions arrived at are perverse. Chikkarangiah v. State of Karnataka, 2009 CrLJ 4667 : 2009 (13) SCR 1182.

[9955] ● Two views.—Appellate Court would not interfere with acquittal only because another view is possible. Union of India v. Bal Mukund, (2009) 2 SCC 161 : 2009 CrLJ 2407 : 2009 (2) Crimes 171 (SC).

[9956] ● Appeal against conviction.—It is one thing to say that ordinarily a concurrent finding of fact shall not be interfered with by this Court in exercise of its jurisdiction under Article 136 of the Constitution, but it is another thing to say that despite opining that accused are entitled to acquittal, a judgment of conviction passed against them should be upheld. In fact, the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court must be exercised wherever it is required to do so for securing the ends of justice and to avoid injustice. S.V.L. Murthy v. State, AIR 2009 SC 2717 : (2009) 6 SCC 77 : 2009 CrLJ 3930 (3942).

[9957] ● Circumstances on which Court would be justified in interfering with acquittal.—Following are some of the circumstances in which perhaps this Court would be justified in interfering with the judgment of the High Court, but these are illustrative not exhaustive.

(i) The High Court's decision is based on totally erroneous view of law by ignoring the settled legal position;

(ii) The High Court's conclusions are contrary to evidence and documents on record.

(iii) The entire approach of the High Court in dealing with the evidence was patently illegal leading to grave miscarriage of justice;

(iv) The High Court's judgment is manifestly unjust and unreasonable based on erroneous law and facts on the record of the case;

(v) The Court must always give proper weight and consideration to the findings of the High Court.

(vi) This Court would be extremely reluctant in interfering with a case when both the Sessions Court and the High Court have recorded an order of acquittal. State of Uttar Pradesh v. Banne, 2009 (4) SCC 271 : 2009 CrLJ 2234 (2242) : 2009 (3) Scale 35.

25. ARTICLE 137

[9958] ● Power of Supreme Court to—Review judgment.—Article 137, Constitution of India gives a special power to the Supreme Court to review any judgment pronounced or order made by it. An order passed in a criminal case can be reviewed and set aside only if there are errors apparent on the record. When a Bench of Supreme Court in a proceeding admits a review petition but does not set aside the earlier judgment sought to be reviewed, the earlier judgment is not set aside. The direction to rehear the appeal is only to ascertain reasons to see whether judgment could be set aside. (Mr. Jagannath Mishra, CM, Bihar was charged for various criminal offences-the prosecution was withdrawn after Sri Mishra came to Power as CM—Supreme Court allowed the withdrawal. Sheo Nandan Paswan v. State of Bihar, AIR 1983 SC 194 : (1983) 1 SCC 438 : (1983) 2 SCR 61 : 1983 CrLJ 348.

[9959] ● Withdrawal of prosecution.—This decision was sought to be reviewed by a Bench consisting of two learned Judges and by A.N. SEN, J. who delivering the order said the review petition is admitted but did not set aside the earlier judgment and that judgment is reported in AIR 1983 SC 1125 : (1983) 4 SCC 104. Next, in this decision the Supreme Court (Majority) pointed out the scope after the review petition being admitted and eventually the Supreme Court held that the order allowing withdrawal of prosecution should remain unaffected. Sheo Nandan Paswan v. State of Bihar, AIR 1987 SC 877 : (1987) 1 SCC 288 : 1987 SCC (Cri) 82 : 1987 CrLJ 793 : (1986) 4 Supreme 393.

26. ARTICLE 141

[9960] ● Decisions of English Courts persuasive authority.—Decisions of the English Courts are merely of persuasive authority. Even where a later decision of an English Court is at variance with a decision of the Supreme Court, that cannot by itself justify an application to the Court to reconsider its earlier decision on a question of law. Manipur Administration, Manipur v. Thokchom Bira Singh, AIR 1965 SC 87 : 1965 (1) CrLJ 120 : 1965 SCD 8 : (1965) 1 SCJ 451 : (1964) 7 SCR 123 : 1965 ACrR 250 : 1965 MLJ (Cri) 233 : 1965 AWR (HC) 358 : (1965) 1 ALT 96.

[9961] ● Nothing in Constitution to prevent Supreme Court from departing its previous decision.—There is nothing in our Constitution which can prevent Supreme Court from departing from its previous decision if it is satisfied of its error and its baneful effect on general interests of the public. While continuity and consistency are conducive to the smooth evolution of the rule of law, hesitancy to set right deviations will retard its growth. *Supdt. [9963] ● Common law doctrine that crown not bound by statute.—The rule of construction that the King is not bound by a statute unless he is expressly named or brought in by necessary implication, which was accepted by the Privy Council in interpreting statutes vis-à-vis the Crown is inconsistent with and incongruous in the present set up. We have no Crown. It is inconsistent with the rule of law based on the doctrine of equality. It introduces conflicts and discrimination. There is no justification to accept the English canon of construction, for it brings about diverse results and conflicting decisions. The said canon of construction was not 'the law in force' within the meaning of Article 372 of the Constitution, and should not be applied for construing statutes in India. There is an essential distinction between a law and canon of construction. Supdt. And Remembrancer of legal Affairs, West Bengal v. Corporation of Calcutta, AIR 1967 SC 997 : 1967 CrLJ 950 : (1967) 1 SCA 508.

[9964] ● Declaration of law by Supreme Court to be respected.—Declaration of law by the Supreme Court even if it be only by the way has to be respected. Even obiter dictum of that Court should be accepted as binding. But it does not mean that every statement contained in a judgment of that Court would be attracted by Article 141. Statements on matters other than law have no binding force, as on facts no two cases could be similar and its own decisions which were essentially on questions of fact could not be relied upon as precedents for decision of other cases. Amritsar Municipality v. Hazara Singh, AIR 1975 SC 1087 : (1975) 1 SCC 794 : 1975 SCC (Cri) 354 : 1975 CrLJ 928 : 1975 MLW (Cri) 76 : 1975 KLT 275.

[9972] ● Observations from—Judgment of not to be read in isolation.—The observations from a judgment of the Supreme Court cannot be read in isolation and divorced from context in which the same were made and it is improper for any Court to take out a sentence from the judgment of Supreme Court divorced from the context in which it was given, and to treat such an isolated sentence as the complete enunciation of law by the Supreme Court. Sukhawant Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1995 SC 1601 : (1995) 3 SCC 367 : 1995 SCC (Cri) 524 : JT 1995 (3) SC 495 : (1995) 2 Crimes 148 (SC).

[9973] ● Supreme Court's order to High Court—Binding nature of.—In a case there was a deliberate and conscious obstruction, put and recorded by the Hon'ble Judges of the High Court, even when the judicial order of the Supreme Court was before them, in support of the prayer for an early hearing of the appeal. This case is of a negative or reverse action instead of a bare in action of far less in gravity on the part of the Judges of the High Court. Patently the order of the Supreme Court had been flouted by the High Court.

An order by the Supreme Court to the High Court should outwardly neither be commanding in nature nor be explicitly in terms of a direction. Such is not the sheen and tone of the order of the Supreme Court in this case, meant as it was, for a high constitutional institution, being the High Court. It comes from another high constitutional institution (the Supreme Court) hierarchically superior in the corrective ladder. When one superior speaks to another it is always in language sweet, soft and melodious; more suggestive than directive. Judicial language is always chaste. Spencer v. Vishwadarshan Distributors, (1995) 1 SCC 259 : JT 1995 (1) SC 113 : 1994 (5) Scale 93.

[9975] ● Judicial power under Article 142 and executive power under Article 161 both exercisable in same field.—The judicial power under Article 142 and the executive power under Article 161 are both exercisable in the same field, and hence they cannot be exercised at the same time. The question that immediately arises is whether the two Articles can be reconciled on the principle of harmonious construction so as to avoid the conflict between the two authorities, one judicial and the other executive, in the exercise of the same power. The first thing to be noted in this connection is that neither Article 161 nor Article 142 is made subject to the other specific words, and neither of the two Articles contains any words of limitation. Thus in the fields covered by them, both Articles are entirely unfettered. It will also be seen that the ambit of Article 161 is very much wider than that of Article 142, and it is only in a very narrow field that the power contained in Article 161 is also contained in Article 142, namely, the power of suspension of sentence during the period when the matter is sub-judice in the Supreme Court. Therefore, on the principle of harmonious construction and to avoid a conflict between the two powers, it must be held that Article 161 does not deal with the suspension of sentence during the time when Article 142 is in operation and the matter is sub-judice in the Supreme Court. It is open to the Governor to grant a full pardon at any time, even during the pendency of the case in the Supreme Court, in the exercise of what is ordinarily called "mercy jurisdiction". If such a pardon is granted after the accused person has been convicted by the Supreme Court, it has the effect of completely absolving him from all punishment or disqualification attaching to a conviction for a criminal offence. That power is essentially vested in the head of the Executive, because the judiciary has no such mercy jurisdiction. But the Governor cannot exercise his power to suspend the sentence for the period when the Supreme Court is in seizure of the case. If it were held that under Article 161 the Governor has the power to suspend the sentence during the same period when the Supreme Court is in seizure of the case, it would mean that both the judiciary and the executive would have the power to function in the same field at the same time, and this would lead to the possibility of a conflict of jurisdiction. Such a conflict was not and could not have been intended by the makers of the Constitution. So long as the judiciary has the power to pass a particular order in a pending case, to that extent the power of the executive is limited, both in view of the words of Sections 401 and 426 of the Code of Criminal Procedure and of Articles 142 and 161 of the Constitution. If Articles 142 and 161 are to be harmonized, and if Sections 401 and 426 of the Code are to be similarly harmonized, that can only be done by holding that what is covered by Article 142 is not covered by Article 161, and that what is covered by Section 426 is not covered by Section 401. On such an interpretation alone, would it be possible to say that there is no conflict between the prerogative power of the Sovereign State to grant pardon and the power of the Courts to deal with a pending case judicially.

There is an essential difference between the general power to grant pardon and the power to suspend sentence in criminal matters pending before the Supreme Court. The first is an exclusively executive power vesting in the Governor under Article 161, and as it does not vest in the Supreme Court, the field covered by it is exclusively subject to the exercise of the executive power. In such a case, there can be no question of any conflict. On the other hand, the power of suspension of sentence vests both in the Supreme Court and the Governor and so the same field is covered under both Articles, and that raises the problem of a possible conflict between the two powers. It cannot be said, therefore, that the power to suspend sentence, is part of the larger power to grant pardon and can be similarly exercised. So to say it ignores the essential difference between the very nature of the two powers. For all these reasons, it must be held that once a petition for special leave to appeal under Article 136 has been filed before the Supreme Court, it is for the Supreme Court alone under Article 142 to deal with the case in accordance with law, and to pass such orders as are required in the matter of grant of bail or surrender to sentence, and the Governor has no power to make any order under Article 161 as regards suspension of sentence for the period during which the matter is sub judice in the Supreme Court. K.M. Nanavati v. State of Bombay, AIR 1961 SC 112 : (1961) 1 CrLJ 173 : (1961) 1 SCA 54 : (1961) 1 SCR 497 : (1961) 2 SCJ 100.

[9976] ● Apex Court when ordered CBI investigation consent of State Govt. not needed.—When apex Court in exercise of power under Article 142, Constitution orders CBI investigation, consent of concerned State Government is not needed. Maniyeri Madhavan v. Sub-Inspector of Police, AIR 1994 SC 1033 : (1994) 1 SCC 536 : 1994 CrLJ 3063 (SC) : (1993) 3 Crimes 550 : 1994 SCW 1131.

[9977] ● Powers of Supreme Court under Article 142.—The amplitude of powers available to the Supreme Court under Article 142 of the Constitution of India is normally speaking not conditioned by any statutory provision but it cannot be lost sight of that this Court exercises jurisdiction under Article 142 of the Constitution with a view to do justice between the parties but not in disregard of the relevant statutory provisions. The transfer of the appeal to the High Court, after hearing the appeal on merits and finding that offence under Section 3 of the Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act on the basis of the evidence led by the prosecution, was not made out, is neither desirable nor proper nor permissible let alone justified. There cannot be piece meal hearing of an appeal on merits—first by Supreme Court to determine if an offence under the Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act is made out or not any then by the High Court. Bonkya alias Bharat Shivaji Mane v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1996 SC 257 : 1995 SCC (Cri) 1113 : (1995) 6 SCC 447 : 1996 CrLJ 414 : JT (1995) 7 SC 194.

[9979] ● Supreme Court confirmed conviction of accused.—The accused has a further right in this case to canvass for reviewing the finding arrived at by this Court over again. The right envisaged in Section 377(3) of the CrPC 1973 shall be confined to appeals presented by Government to the High Court against sentence on the ground of its inadequacy. There is no scope to afford a further opportunity in the appeal, at this stage, since the finding of the trial Court has already been considered elaborately by re-evaluating the entire evidence in the light of the elaborate arguments canvassed on behalf of the parties. A repetition of the whole process over again is, apart from waste of time of this Court, unnecessary and unwarranted by law. Chandrakant Patil v. State, AIR 1998 SC 1165 : (1998) 3 SCC 38 : 1998 CrLJ 1613 at 1614, 1615 (SC) : 1998(1) Scale 326 : 1998(1) Supreme 428.

The Supreme Court quashed the proceedings exercising jurisdiction under Article 142 of the Constitution. Mohd. Shamim v. Mahid Begum, AIR 2005 SC 757 : (2005) 3 SCC 302 : 2005 CrLJ 889 (892) : (2005) 1 Crimes 108.

[9982] ● Transfer of under-trial prisoner to jail outside State.—A convict or an under-trial who disobeys the law of the land, cannot contend that it is not permissible to transfer him form one Jail to another because the Jail Manual (a case of Bihar Jail Manual, Rules, 623, 626, 628) does not provide for it. If the factual situation requires the transfer of a prisoner from one prison to another, be he a convict or an under-trial, Courts are not to be a helpless bystander when the rule of law is being challenged with impunity. The arms of law are long enough to remedy the situation even by transferring a prisoner from one prison to another, that is by assuming that the concerned Jail Manual does not provide such a transfer. The facts of the case clearly showed that the respondent had time and again flouted the law even while he was in custody and sometimes even when he was on bail. Therefore, it was found imperative to transfer the respondent outside Bihar. The Supreme Court exercising powers under Article 142 of the Constitution transferred the respondent outside the State of Bihar, even though the Jail Manual did not contemplate such transfer. Kalyan Chandra Sarkar v. Rajesh Ranjan, AIR 2005 SC 972 : (2005) 3 SCC 284 : 2005 CrLJ 1441 (1449).

[9983] ● Jurisdiction of Supreme Court under Article 142.—In a case students of MBBS were prosecuted for offences under Sections 452, 323, 504 and 506 IPC as they had dispute with college-staff and Principal. Keeping in view their future career, criminal proceedings were quashed by Supreme Court in exercise of its jurisdiction under Article 142 of the Constitution. Monica Kumar v. State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 2008 SC 2781 : 2008 AIR SCW 4618 (4633, 4634) : (2008) 8 SCC 781.

[9984] ● Power of Supreme Court to put an end to dispute.—Under Article 142 of the Constitution the Supreme Court has jurisdiction to put an end to dispute between the parties. Monica Kumar v. State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 2008 SC 2781 : 2008 AIR SCW 4618 (4633, 4634) : (2008) 8 SCC 781.

[9985] ● Power under Article 142 is a Constitutional power and hence not restricted.—Power under Article 142 of the Constitution is a Constitutional power and, hence, not restricted by statutory enactments. Though the Supreme Court would not pass any order under Article 142 of the Constitution which would amount to supplanting substantive law applicable or ignoring express statutory provisions dealing with the subject, at the same time these Constitutional powers cannot in any way, be controlled by any statutory provisions. However, it is to be made clear that this power cannot be used to supplant the law applicable to the case. This means that acting under Article 142, the Supreme Court cannot pass an order or grant relief, which is totally inconsistent or goes against the substantive or statutory enactments pertaining to the case. The power is to be used sparingly in cases which cannot be effectively and appropriately tackled by the existing provisions of law or when the existing provisions of law cannot bring about complete justice between the parties. Laxmidas Morarji v. Behrose Darab Madan, 2009 (10) SCC 425 : 2009 (14) SCR 777 : JT 2009 (12) SC 291.

[9986] ● Supreme Court cannot render provisions of statutes nugatory.—The Supreme Court, while exercising its powers under Article 142 cannot render provisions of statutes nugatory or otiose. Lail David v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 2009 SC 3272.

[9987] ● Power under Article 142, Constitution of India.—The Supreme Court has power under Article 142 to pass appropriate orders in line with Section 320(8), CrPC in an application under Section 147 of N.S. Act in order to do justice to the parties. K.M. Ibrahim v. K.P. Mohamed, AIR 2010 SC 276 : (2010) 1 SCC 798 : 2010 CrLJ 525 : (2009) 4 Crimes 271 : JT 2009 (14) SC 651.

[9988] ● Power of Supreme Court under Article 142, Constitution—Compounding of offence.—The appellant is ready and willing to get the disputes and differences between the parties settled. In that view of the matter and keeping in view the peculiar facts and circumstances of this case and with a view to do complete justice to the parties, we, in exercise of our jurisdiction under Article 142 of the Constitution of India, direct that in the event the appellant appears before the learned Magistrate within a period of four weeks from date and files an application for grant of bail, he shall be released on bail on such terms and conditions as the learned Magistrate may seem fit and proper. In the event, the appellant files an application for exemption from his personal appearance, the same may also be considered on its own merits. It would be open to the complainant to consider the offer of the appellant. Mahesh Choudhary v. State of Rajasthan, 2009 (4) SCC 439 : 2009 (3) SCR 1005 : JT 2009 (3) (SC) 314 : 2009 (2) Supreme 721 (2) : 2009 (2) Crimes 38 (SC).

[9989] ● Power of Supreme Court under Article 142.—The Supreme Court can grant the relief in cases where manifest injustice has been done or where this manifest illegality or manifest want of jurisdiction. Pazhassi Raja Charitable Trust v. Union of India, AIR 2010 SC 310 : 2009 (15) SCR 1290.

28. ARTICLE 227

[9990] ● Article 227 not limit jurisdiction of High Court.—Article 227 is of wider ambit; it does not limit the jurisdiction of the High Court to the hierarchy of Courts functioning directly under it under the Civil Procedure Code and Criminal Procedure Code but it gives the High Court power to correct errors of various kinds of all Courts and tribunals in appropriate cases. The subordination for the purpose of Section 3 of the Contempt of Courts Act means judicial subordination and not subordination under the hierarchy of Courts under the Civil Procedure Code or the Criminal Procedure Code. Thakur Jugal Kishore Sinha v. Sitmarhi Central Cooperative Bank Ltd., AIR 1967 SC 1494 : 1967 CrLJ 1380 : (1967) 2 SCA 428.

29. ARTICLE 227 AND CRPC SECTION 397 (3)

[9991] ● Power of High Court under Article 227 discretionary.—The power of the High Court under Article 227 is a discretionary one and should be sparingly exercised to keep subordinate Courts and Tribunals within the bounds of their authority and not to correct mere errors. Jagir Singh v. Ranbir Singh, AIR 1979 SC 381 : (1979) 1 SCC 560 : 1979 SCC (Cri) 348 : 1979 CrLJ 318 : 1979 CrLR (SC) 29 : 1979 SCCrR 182 : (1979) 2 SCR 282 : 1979 CrAppR (SC) 79 : 1979 ACrC 74 : (1979) 1 APLJ (SC) 17 : 1979 Hindu LR 179 : (1979) 81 PunLR 205 : (1979) 3 MahLR 103 : 1979 MLW (Cri) 64 : (1979) 6 CrLT 17 : 1979 MatLR (SC) 84 : 1979 MarrLJ 1.

[9992] ● Administrative power of High Court exercised to transfer cases.—From the material on record it is clear that the order was passed by the High Court in its administrative jurisdiction under Article 227 of the Constitution every High Courts has superintendence over all Courts and Tribunals throughout the territories in relation to which it exercises jurisdiction and its trite that this power of superintendence entitles the High Court to pass orders for administrative exigency and expediency. In the instant case, it appears that the High Court had exercised the power of transfer in the context of the petition filed by some of the accused from jail complaining that they could not be accommodated in the Court room as a result of which some of them had to remain outside. It further appears that the other grievance raised was that the Court was so crowded that even clerks of the lawyers were not being allowed to enter the Court room to carry the briefs. Such a situation was obviously created by the trial of a large number of persons. If in the context of the above facts, the High Court exercised its plenary administrative power to transfer the case to the 5th Court, which we assume had a bigger and better arrangement to accommodate the accused, lawyers and other connected with the trial, no exception can be taken to the same, particularly by those at whose instance and for whose benefit the power was exercised. Ranbir Yadav v. State of Bihar, AIR 1995 SC 1219 (1223, 1224) : (1995) 4 SCC 392 : 1995 SCC (Cri) 728 : 1995 CrLJ 2665.

30. ARTICLE 145

[9993] ● Law on subject fully decided by Supreme Court.—A substantial question of interpretation of a provision of the constitution as contemplated by Article 145(3) cannot arise when the law on the subject has been finally and effectively decided by the Supreme Court. Bhagwan Swarup v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1965 SC 682 : 1965 (1) CrLJ 608 : (1964) 2 SCJ 771 : (1964) 2 SCR 378.

31. ARTICLE 166

[9994] ● Executive act of State Govt. within Article 166.—The decision that he circumstances mentioned in Section 144 (6), CrPC continue to exist and the original order passed by the Magistrate should be continued for a certain period of time or indefinitely is that of the Government. Hence it is an executive act of the State Government coming within Article 166. State of Bihar v. K.K. Misra, AIR 1971 SC 1667 : (1969) 3 SCC 337 : (1970) 2 SCA 574 : (1970) 3 SCR 181 : (1971) 1 SCJ 621 : 1969 PatLJR (SC) 93 : 1971 MLW (Cri) 24 : 1971 MLJ (Cri) 305.

[9995] ● Sanction to prosecute—Validity.—Where the High Court disposed of the appeal solely on the ground that the sanction to prosecute the respondent was not given by the Governor and where the State alleged that the Chief Minister had sanctioned the prosecution earlier after seeing the case and all that remained was a formal order embodying that decision and it was that order which had been signed by the Chief Secretary during the period when Haryana was under President's Rule, the validity of the sanction would have to be decided both on the basis whether the Chief Minister had seen the case as also on the basis whether the Chief Secretary could be said to have made the sanction order and there being no materials on record to show whether the Chief Minister had seen the case, the Supreme Court remanded the matter to the High Court for fresh disposal on merits. State of Punjab v. M.L. Puri, AIR 1975 SC 1633 : (1975) 4 SCC 112 : 1975 SCC (Cri) 366 : 1975 CrLJ 1425.

(See article 32, 226)—ARTICLE 233

[9996] ● Civil Judge when appointed as ASJ.—When a Civil Judge is also appointed as an Additional Sessions Judge or when a person is appointed both as a Civil Judge and also an Additional Sessions Judge such appointment as an Additional Sessions Judge is made in exercise of power under Section 9 of the CrPC. When such an appointment is made, the appointee exercises both the powers of a Civil Judge and those of an Additional Sessions Judge and falls within the definition of a "District Judge" in Article 236(a). Since such a post falls under that definition it would be Article 233 and the Rajasthan Higher Judicial Service Rules which would apply to him and not Article 234 or the Rajasthan Judicial Service Rules, 1955. Articles 233 and 234 contemplate appointments falling under one or the other. It cannot fall under both the Articles. If such a construction were to be adopted, it would render the two Articles unworkable. If the appointment is in contravention of Article 233, it becomes valid under the new Article 233 A. Prem Nath v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1967 SC 1599 : 1967 CrLJ 1569 : (1967) 2 SCA 253 : (1967) 2 SCWR 543.

[9997] ● Defective appointment of de facto Judge—Challenge to.—Articles 233 & 21 and CrPC, Section 9.—Appointment of Sessions Judge was subsequently declared as invalid on the ground that his appointment was in violation of Article 233. Judgments pronounced by him prior to such declaration are not void. De facto doctrine applies to such acts and saves them. It is a doctrine of necessity and public policy. Defective appointment of a de facto Judge cannot be challenged in a collateral proceeding. Gokaraju Rangaraju v. State of A. P., AIR 1981 SC 1473 : (1981) 3 SCC 132 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 652 : 1981 CrLJ 876 : 1981 CrLR (SC) 294 : 1981 CrAppR (SC) 236 : 1981 ACrC 203 : 1981 BBCJ (SC) 187 : 1981 ChandLR (Cri) 560 (SC) : 1981 ChandCrC (SC) 133 : 1981 MLJ (Cri) 258.

[9998] ● Writ petition for quashing detention order—Maintainability.—A writ petition for quashing the detention order is not maintainable, before the order of detention was actually served and the detenu was taken into custody. Union of India v. Vidya Bagaria, AIR 2004 SC 2220 : (2004) 5 SCC 577 : 2004 CrLJ 2480 (2481) : 2004 (2) Crimes 362.

[9999] ● Competency of Legislature to create fictions.—The submission that a law can create only a single fiction must also be repelled. This Court in Yellappagouda Shankargouda Patil v. Basangouda Siddangouda Patil, AIR 1960 SC 808; held that the Legislature may sometimes create a chain of fictions by the same Act or by succeeding Acts. If the Legislature is competent to enact a provision creating a legal fiction, we see no reason why it cannot create a chain of fictions if necessity arises. It is true that in interpreting a provision creating a legal fiction it is not open to the Court to import another fiction. State of West Bengal v. Sadan K. Bormal, AIR 2004 SC 3666 : 2004 CrLJ 3034 (3041) : (2004) 6 SC 59 : 2004 (3) Crimes 161.

[10000] ● Administrative action—Judicial review.—The Court will be slow to interfere in such matters relating to administrative functions unless decision is tainted by any vulnerability, like illegality, irrationality and procedural impropriety. Whether action falls within any of the categories has to be established. Mere assertion in that regard would not be sufficient. State of (NCT of Delhi) v. Sanjeev, AIR 2005 SC 2080 : (2005) 5 SCC 181 : 2005 CrLJ 2179 (2185) : 2005 (2) Crimes 70.

[10001] ● Administrative Action—Reasonableness.—To arrive at a decision on reasonableness the Court has to find out if the administrator has left out relevant factors or taken into account irrelevant factors. The decision of the administrator must have been within the four corners of the law, and not one which no sensible person could have reasonably arrived at, having regard to the above principles and must have been a bona fide one. The decision could be one of many choices open to the authority but it is for that authority to decide upon the choice and not for the Court to substitute its views. State of (NCT of Delhi) v. Sanjeev, AIR 2005 SC 2080 : (2005) 5 SCC 181 : 2005 CrLJ 2179 (2185) : 2005 (2) Crimes 70.

[10002] ● Magistrate taking cognizance—Jurisdiction of High Court to interfere.—The High Courts should not ordinarily interfere with an order taken cognizance passed by a competent Court of law except in a proper case. Furthermore only such High Court within whose jurisdiction the order of subordinate Court has been passed, would have the jurisdiction to entertain an application under Article 227 of the Constitution of India unless it is established that the earlier cause of action arose within the jurisdiction thereof. Musaraf Hossain Khan v. Bhagheeratha Engg. Ltd., AIR 2006 SC 1288 : (2006) 3 SCC 658 : 2006 CrLJ 1683 (1689).

[10003] ● Jurisdiction of High Court to interfere.—In this case, the averments made in the writ petition filed by the respondent herein even if given face value and taken to be correct in their entirety would not confer any jurisdiction upon the Kerala High Court. The agreement was entered into within the jurisdiction of the Calcutta High Court. The project for which the supply of stone chips and transportation was being carried out was also within the State of West Bengal. Payments were obviously required to be made within the jurisdiction of the said Court where either the contract had been entered into or where payment was to be made. For the purpose of proving the aforementioned ingredients of the offence under Section 138 of the Act, the complainant appellant was required to prove the facts constituting the cause of action therefore none of which arose within the jurisdiction of the Kerala High Court. It is, apt to mention that in Prem Chand Vijay Kumar, (2005) 4 SCC 417) this Court held that cause of action within the meaning of Section 142(b) of the Act can arise only once. For the reasons aforementioned, we are of the opinion that the Kerala High Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the writ petition as no part of cause of action arose within its jurisdiction. Musaraf Hossain Khan v. Bhagheeratha Engg. Ltd., AIR 2006 SC 1288 : (2006) 3 SCC 658 : 2006 CrLJ 1683 (1691).

[10004] ● Relief beyond issue cannot be granted.—It is unfortunate that the High Court while considering the Habeas Corpus writ petition filed under Article 226 of the Constitution of India by the wife of the detenu challenging the order of detention on various grounds, on going through the materials of the department as if as an Appellate Court relying on Section 482 Code of Criminal Procedure directed the Commissioner of Customs ICD, Tughlakabad, to lodge a report with the police station Tughlakabad within a period of 15 days along with he complete of relevant documents to enable them to register a case under Sections 199, 420, 468 and 471 of the Indian Penal Code against the detenu. The said direction is not warranted considering the fact that issue before the High Court was about the validity of detention order and the curtailment of the personal liberty of detenu and nothing more. We are of the view that the High Court is not justified in issuing such direction and awarding an exemplary cost of Rs. 60,000/- payable to the sponsoring authority. Pooja Batra v. Union of India, 2009 AIR (SC) 56 : 2009 (5) SCC 296 : 2009 (5) SCR 67 : 2009 CrLJ 97 : 2009 (2) Supreme 790 : 2009 (2) Crimes 9 (SC). To the same effect : Dharimal Tobacco Products Ltd. v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 2009 SC 1032 : (2009) 2 SCC 370 : 2009 CrLJ 974.

[10005] ● Alternate remedy.—Rule of exhaustion of alternative remedies is a rule of convenience and discretion rather than a rule of law. Mohmmed Ishaq v. S. Kazam Pasha, (2009) 12 SCC 748 : 2009 CrLJ 3063 : (2009) 3 Crimes 96.

[10006] ● Disappearance of writ petitioner's husband from custody—Compensation.—Questioning correctness of the order, counsel for the appellant-State and the concerned Police officials i.e. respondents 2 to 4 have submitted that when the matter was pending in a criminal Court, the High Court's observations about the officials being responsible for the disappearance for the writ petitioner's husband and the conclusions about the remissness and failure of duty are clearly unsustainable. These observations are bound to have effect on the trial. It is pointed out that before this Court passed the order of stay on 10.11.2006, the State Government had already made payment of the amount as directed by the High Court on 20.5.2006. We agree with learned counsel for the appellant and the respondent police officials that when the matter is pending adjudication in a trial before a criminal Court, the High Court should not have made any observation which would have effect on the trial by the trial Court. We, therefore, dispose of this appeal with the direction that even if payment has been made pursuant to the High Court's order by the State Government, that shall not be construed to be a concession to the allegations made. The trial before the criminal Court shall be conducted in accordance with law, without being influenced by any observation made by the High Court about the remissness and neglect in duty is by the police officials. The appeal is accordingly disposed of. State of Punjab v. Paramjit Kaur, 2009 (11) SCC 255 : 2009 CrLJ 2844 : 2009 (4) SCR 1145 : JT 2009 (14) (SC) 231 : 2009 (5) Scale 33.

[10007] ● Issuance of writ of mandamus.—The High Courts in India exercising their jurisdiction under Article 226 have the power to issue a writ of mandamus or a writ in the nature of mandamus or to pass orders and give necessary directions where the Government or a public authority has failed to exercise or has wrongly exercised the discretion conferred upon it by a statute or a rule or a policy decision of the government or has exercised such discretion mala fide or on irrelevant considerations or by ignoring the relevant considerations and materials or in such a manner as to frustrate the object of conferring such discretion or the policy for implementing which such discretion has been conferred. In all such cases and in any other fit and proper case a High Court can, in the exercise of its jurisdiction under Article 226, issue a writ of mandamus or a writ in the nature of mandamus or pass orders and give directions to compel the performance in a proper and lawful manner of the discretion conferred upon the government or a public authority, and in a proper case, in order to prevent injustice resulting to the concerned parties, the Court may itself pass an order or give directions which the government or the public authority should have passed or given had it properly and lawfully exercised its discretion. Destruction of Public & Private Properties v. State of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 2009 SC 2266 : 2009 (5) SCC 212 : 2009 CrLJ 2807 : 2009 (6) SCR 439 : JT 2009 (6) (SC) 1 : 2009 (3) Supreme 557.

[10008] ● Suo motu initiation of public interest litigation.—A writ petition was filed by selected candidates for the recruitment of Panchayat Secretaries. The High Court while entertaining writ petition formed an opinion prima facie as regards the systematic commission of fraud. In such circumstances, the High Court while dismissing writ petition entitled to initiate a suo motu public interest litigation. Nirmal Singh Kahlon v. State of Punjab, AIR 2009 SC 984 : 2009 CrLJ 958.

[10009] ● Supervisory Jurisdiction of High Court.—The High Court apart from exercising its supervisory jurisdiction under Articles 227 and 235, of the Constitution has a duty to exercise continuance of superintendence over the Judicial Magistrates in term of Section 483 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Dharmeshbhai Vasudevbhai v. State of Gujarat, (2009) 6 SCC 576 : 2009 CrLJ 2969 (2971, 2972) : 2009 (2) Crimes 369 (SC).

[10010] ● Courts cannot undertake Governmental duties and functions.—The Courts cannot be called upon to undertake Governmental duties and functions. Courts should not ordinarily interfere with a policy decision of the State. While exercising power of judicial review the Court is more concerned with the decision-making process than the merit of the decision itself. State of Maharashtra v. Prakas Prahlad Patil, AIR 2010 SC 463 : (2009) 12 SCC 159 : 2010 CrLJ 466 (467) (SC).

33. ARTICLES 245 AND 254

[10011] ● Law relating to preventive detention within legislative competence of Parliament.— A law relating to preventive detention is within the legislative competence of Parliament if it is made for any of the purposes mentioned in List 1 Entry 9 or List III Entry 3 of the 7th Schedule. The Preventive Detention Act, 1950, was not ultra vires, since the purposes for which a detention could be made under it are covered by the said Entries. A.K. Gopalan v. State of Madras, AIR 1950 SC 27 : 1950 CrLJ 1383 : 1950 SCJ 174 : 1950 SCR 88.

[10012] ● Law relating to closure of shops one day in week.—A provision in a law relating to shops and establishments which requires all shops in the State to remain closed for one day in a week, and makes it an offence not to do so, is within the legislative competence of the State Legislature under Entry 26 of List II and Entries 24 and 33 of List III. Manohar Lal v. State, AIR 1951 SC 315 : 52 CrLJ 1237 : 1951 SCJ 475 : 1951 SCR 671 : 1951 (2) MLJ 139 : 1951 ALJ 605 : 1951 MWN 763 : 64 MLW 943 : 1951 MWN (Cri) 231.

[10013] ● Bombay Prohibition Act validity of.—The provisions of the Bombay Prohibition Act, 1949, in so far as they prohibit the possession, sale or purchase of foreign imported liquor were perfectly constitutional and intra vires since they were covered by Entry 8 of List II. Even assuming that the impugned provisions touched the matter of "import" which falls under Entry 41 of List I, it could not be said merely on that account that these provisions were outside the legislative competence of the State Legislature, because in their pith and substance they related to activities concerning imported liquor only after it had come into State territory. State of Bombay v.

F.N. Balsara, AIR 1951 SC 318 : 52 CrLJ 1361 : 1951 SCJ 478 : 1951 SCR 682 : 1951 (2) MLJ 141 : 53 BomLR 982.

[10014] ● Legislation by Parliament and State "in respect same matter".—Article 254 provides for the situation when in relation to the same subject matter Parliament as well as a State Legislature have made laws, and the two laws are inconsistent with each other. The question which arises in such a case is which of the two laws shall prevail in that State, and that question is to be decided according to the following rules :—

(1) The law made by Parliament shall prevail over the law made by the State Legislature, whether it is passed earlier or later, and the State law shall, to the extent of its repugnancy with the Parliament law, be void. But this rule is subject to what is stated in Rule 2 below [254(1)].

(2) If the State law is later in time and it has received the assent of the President under Article 200, it shall prevail in that State over the Parliament law [254(2)].

(Note :—Article 200 provides that when a Bill has been passed by the State Legislature it shall be presented to the Governor of the State for his assent, but the Governor may at his discretion withhold his assent and may reserve the bill for the consideration of the President, in which case Article 201 provides that the President shall either give his assent to the Bill or withhold his assent therefrom).

(3) Even when a State Legislature has made a law inconsistent with an earlier law made by Parliament, and it is in force in that State by reason of the President's assent, Parliament shall have the power to enact a law with respect to the same subject-matter which adds to, amends, varies or repeals the law so made by the State Legislature (254 Proviso). Zaverbhai Amaidas v. State of Bombay, AIR 1954 SC 752 : 1954 CrLJ 1822 : 1954 SCA 1295 : 1954 SCJ 851 : 1955 SCR 799 : 1955 AWR (Sup) 1 : 57 BomLR 589.

[10015] ● Essential Supplies (Temporary Powers) Act validity.—The provisions of the Essential Supplies (Temporary Powers) Act, 1946, which declared that orders made under the Act were to be effective notwithstanding anything inconsistent therewith in any other enactment, were perfectly constitutional and intra vires. Parliament was supreme and had full power to make such a provision. Harishankar Bagla v. State of M.P., AIR 1954 SC 465 : 1954 CrLJ 1322 : 1954 SCA 824 : 1954 SCJ 637 : 1955 SCR 380 : (1954) 2 MLJ 211 : 1954 AWR (Sup) 63 : 1954 MWN 749.

[10016] ● Provisions of Preventive Detention Act and Foreigner act constitutional.—The provisions of Section 3(1)(b) of the Preventive Detention Act, 1950, and Section 3(2)(c) of the Foreigners Act, 1946, which authorize the detention of any foreigner with a view of making preparation for his expulsion, are perfectly constitutional and intra vires, as they fall under Entries 9 and 10 of List 1 which authorize Parliament to make a law relating to preventative detention for reasons connected with "foreign affairs" which means all matters which bring the union in relation with any foreign country. Hans Muller of Nurenburg v. Supdt., Pres. Jail, Calcutta, AIR 1955 SC 367 : 1955 CrLJ 876 : 1955 SCA 487 : 1955 SCJ 324 : 1955 SCR 1284 : 1955 MWN 478 : 1955 (1) MLJ (SC)188.

[10018] ● No Customs duty or tax be levied or collected except by authority of law.— Article 265.—No Customs Duty or tax can be levied or collected except by authority of law. Hence no customs duty is leviable on the basis of administrative instructions. Every levy of customs duty or any other tax must be sanctioned by law. The decision in ILR (1969) Bom 484 is reversed. H.L. Mehra v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1971 SC 1130 : (1971) 2 SCC 54 : 1971 CrLJ 842 : 1971 UJ (SC) 512 : (1971) 2 SCCrR 449.

[10019] ● Maintenance of public order.—To appreciate the terms one has to imagine three concentric circles. Law and Order represents the largest circle within which is the next circle representing public Order and the smallest circle represents security of State. It is then easy to see that an act may affect law and order but not public order just as an act may affect public order but not security of the State. Ram Manohar Lohia v. State of Bihar, AIR 1966 SC 740 : 1966 CrLJ 608 : (1966) 1 SCR 709. To the same effect : (1) Kartar Singh v. State of Punjab, (1994) 3 SC 569 : 1994 CrLJ 3139 (3171) (SC).

[10020] ● No Customs duty or tax be levied or collected except by authority of law.— Article 265.—No Customs Duty or tax can be levied or collected except by authority of law. Hence no customs duty is leviable on the basis of administrative instructions. Every levy of customs duty or any other tax must be sanctioned by law. The decision in ILR (1969) Bom 484 is reversed. H.L. Mehra v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1971 SC 1130 : (1971) 2 SCC 54 : 1971 CrLJ 842 : 1971 UJ (SC) 512 : (1971) 2 SCCrR 449.

[10021] ● Repugnancy between law made by State and by Parliament.—Where the provisons of a Central Act and a State Act in the Concurrent List are fully inconsistent and are absolutely irreconcilable, the Central Act will prevail and the State Act will become void in view of the repugnancy.

Where, however, a law passed by the State comes into collision with a law passed by Parliament on an Entry in the Concurrent List, the State Act shall prevail to the extent of the repugnancy and the provisions of the Central Act would become void provided the State Act has been passed in accordance with clause(2) of Article 254.

Where a law passed by the State Legislature while being substantially within the scope of the entries in the State List entrenches upon any of the Entries in the Central List the constitutionality of the law may be upheld by invoking the doctrine of pith and substance if on an analysis of the provisions of the Act it appears that by and large the law falls within the four corners of the State List and entrenchment, if any, is purely incidental or inconsequential.

Where, however, a law made by the State Legislature on a subject covered by the Concurrent List is inconsistent with and repugnant to a previous law made by Parliament, then such a law can be protected by obtaining the assent of the President under Article 254(2) of the Constitution. The result of obtaining the assent of the President would be that so far as the State Act is concerned, it will prevail in the State and overrule the provisions of the Central Act in their applicability to the State only such a state of affairs will exist only until Parliament may at any time make a law adding to, or amending, varying or repealing the law made by the State Legislature under the proviso to Article 254.

Hence, on a consideration of the various provisions of the Tamil Nadu Public Men (Criminal Misconduct) Act, 1973, the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973, the Prevention of Corruption Act and the Criminal Law Amendment Act, the Supreme Court held that what the State Act did was merely to create different and distinct offences and not to overrule any provisions of the Central Act. M. Karunanidhi v. Union of India, AIR 1979 SC 898 : (1979) 3 SCC 431 : 1979 SCC (Cri) 691 : 1979 CrLJ 773 : 1979 CrLR (SC) 219.

[10022] ● Conflict between Central and State law.—Article 254 of the Constitution made provision firstly as to what would happen in the case of conflict between a Central and State law with regard to the subjects enumerated in the concurrent List, and secondly for resolving such conflict. That being so, when Parliament stepped in and enacted the Central Amendment Act, it being a later law made by Parliament 'with respect to the same matter', the West Bengal Amendment Act stood impliedly repealed. Just as a person accused of the commission of an offence had no right to be tried by a particular Court or to a particular procedure, the prosecutor equally had no right to insist upon that the accused be subjected to an enhanced punishment under the repealed Act. Even if the Central Amendment Act had not expressly repealed the W.B. Amendment Act, it would still be repealed by necessary implication under the proviso to Article 254(2) as it conflicts with a later law with respect to the same matter enacted by Parliament.

It was quite clear that in so far as the Central Amendment Act created new offences or enhanced punishment for a particular type of offence no person could be convicted by such ex post facto law nor could the enhanced punishment prescribed by amendment be applicable. But in so far as the Central Amendment Act reduced the punishments for an offence punishable under Section 16 (1) (a) of the Act, there was no reason why the accused should not have the benefit of such reduced punishment. The rule of beneficial construction required that even ex post facto law of such a type should be applied to mitigate the rigour of the law. The principle was based on both sound reason and common sense. The accused should have the benefit of these reduced punishment. T. Brrai v. Henry Ah Hoc, AIR 1983 SC

[10023] ● Legislative competence of Parliament to pass law by virtue of residuary power.—Under clause (1) of Article 246, notwithstanding anything in clauses (1) and (3) of the said Article, the Parliament has exclusive power to make laws with respect to any of the 97 subjects enumerated in List 1 of the Seventh Schedule. Under clause (3) of the said Article, the State Legislatures have exclusive powers to make laws with respect to 66 items enumerated in List II. The powers in respect of the 47 items enumerated in List III are concurrent i.e. both the Parliament and the Legislature of any State, subject to clause (1) have power to make laws. With regard to a law made in respect of matters enumerated in the Concurrent List provision has been made in Article 254 which gives overriding effect to a law made by Parliament in the event of there being any repugnancy between the said law and the law made by the legislature of a State and the State law would prevail over a law made by Parliament only if such State law was enacted after the law made by Parliament and has received the assent of the President. While examining the question of legislative competent of Parliament to make a law, the proper approach is to determine whether the subject matter of the legislation falls in the State List which Parliament cannot enter. If the law does not fall in the State List, the Parliament would have the legislative competence to pass the law by virtue of the residuary powers under Article 24B read with Entry 97 of the Union List and it would not be necessary to go into the question whether if falls under any entry in the Union List or Concurrent List. Kartar Singh v. State of Punjab, (1994) 4 SCC 569 : 1994 CrLJ 3139 (3169) following TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Union of India v. *H.S. [10024] ● Examining particular legislation its pith and substance.—But the entries cannot be construed in a narrow and pedantic sense and that widest amplitude must be given to the language of these entries. Sometimes the entries in different lists or the same list may be found to overlap or to be in direct conflict with each other. In that event it is the duty of the Court to find out its true intent and purpose and to examine the particular legislation in its (pith and substance) to determine whether it fits in one or other of the lists. Synthetics & Chemicals v. State of U.P., AIR 1990 SC 1927 : (1990) 1 SCC 109 : 1989 Supp (1) SCR 623 (673). TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) India Cement v. State of T.N., AIR 1990 SC 85 : (1990) 1 SCC 12 : 1989 Supp (1) SCR 692; (2) Kartar Singh v. State of Punjab, 1994 CrLJ 3139 (3169) (SC).

34. ARTICLE 300

[10025] ● Article 300 (1) Scope—Suits by or against Government.—By referring to Article 300(1), it would be noticed that this Article consists of three parts. The first part deals with the question about the form and the cause title for a suit intended to be filed by or against the Government of India or the Government of a State. The second part provides, inter alia, that a State may sue or be sued in relation to its affairs in cases like those in which a corresponding Province might have sued or been sued if the Constitution had not been enacted. In other words, when a question arises as to whether a suit can be filed against the Government of a State, the enquiry has to be : could such suit have been filed against the corresponding Province, if the Constitution had not been passed? The third part of the Article provides that it would be competent to the Parliament or the Legislature of a State to make appropriate provisions in regard to the topic covered by Article 300 (1). Since no such law has been passed by the respondent in the present case, the question as to whether the respondent is liable to be sued for damages at the instance of the appellant, has to be determined by reference to another question and that is whether such a suit would have been competent against the corresponding Province. Kasturi Lal Ralia Ram Jain v. State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1965 SC 1039 : 1965 (2) CrLJ 144 : (1965) 1 SCA 809 : (1965) 2 SCJ 318 : (1965) 1 SCWR 995 : 1965 MLJ (Cri) 571 : (1965) 2 AnWR (SC) 15 : (1965) 2 MLJ (SC) 15.

35. ARTICLE 309

[10026] ● Pleasure of—President not to be fettered by ordinary legislation.—Pleasure of the President under Article 310 could not be fettered except by provisions of Article 311. Accordingly their pleasure could not be fettered by ordinary Legislation. Sampuran Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1982 SC 1407 : (1982) 3 SCC 200 : 1982 CrLJ 1973 : (1982) 2 SCWR 148 : (1982) 8 ALR 665 : 45 FacLR 272 : 1982 BBCJ (SC) 183 : (1982) 2 LabLN 663 : 1982 SCCrR 357 : 1982 CrAppR (SC) 327 : (1982) ServLJ 551.

[10027] ● Provision placing embargo on prosecution of Govt. servant.—Articles 309, 21 & 14, Punjab Civil Services Rules, Column 2, Chapter 2, Rule 2.2(b), Proviso 3.—It is not proper to say that an assurance to an employee that he shall not be prosecuted after his retirement, even though guilty or committing a grave misconduct or negligence during the period of his service, after the lapse of a particular time is a condition of service calculated to ensure a person peace of mind after retirement, and so falls within the purview of "conditions of service" as contemplated by Article 309. It is likely to be an incentive not for efficient work but for committing offence including embezzlement and misappropriation by some of them at the fag end of their tenure of service. Such a situation cannot be created by framing a rule under Article 309 laying down an embargo on prosecution as a condition of service. Granting such immunity only to Government servants would on the face of it be discriminatory and thus arbitrary. On the face of it, Government servants cannot constitute a class by themselves so as to bring their case within the purview of reasonable classification if the purpose of granting immunity from prosecution is ensuring peace of mind in old age. The principle that there should be speedy trial may not be disputed; yet it cannot be invoked by the respondents in support of their interpretation of the third proviso to clause (b) of Rule 2.2 framed under Article 309 whose purpose is not to place an embargo on prosecution. The third proviso has been framed for a different purpose, namely, to provide an exception to the power of the Government in the matter of withholding or withdrawing etc. of pension of a retired Government servant contained in clause (b) of Rule 2.2. It was then urged for the respondents that the third proviso to clause (b) of Rule 2.2 is in the nature of a beneficent legislation and in case of doubt has to be interpreted in favour of the person for whose benefit the Rule has been framed. Keeping in view the scope of the power to frame a rule under Article 309 and the purpose of Rule 2.2, this Court is of opinion that there is no doubt with regard to the interpretation of the said rule. By applying the rule of interpretation with regard to a beneficent legislation, a benefit never intended to be conferred cannot be conferred. State of Punjab v. Kailash Nath, AIR 1989 SC 558 : (1989) 1 SCC 321 : 1989 CrLJ 813 : 1989 CrLR (SC) 16 : (1989) 1 Crimes 126 : (1989) 1 ATLT 55 : (1989) 1 CaseLR 60 : (1989) 58 FacLR 32 : (1989) 1 ServLR 12 : (1989) 1 ReCCrR 139 : (1989) 1 LabLN 256.

36. ARTICLES 352 AND 359

[10028] ● Expression "any Court" in Article 359 of Constitution.—The expression "any Court" in Article 359 takes in every Court of competent jurisdiction and includes the Supreme Court as well as the High Courts, and the words "right to move any Court for the enforcement of such rights", cover all legal actions which can be taken by a detenue for the enforcement of the rights specified in the Presidential Order during the operation of the Proclamation of Emergency, so as to preclude proceedings under Articles 32 and 226 of the Constitution as well as proceedings under Section 491 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Makhan Singh Tarsikka v. State of Punjab, AIR 1964 SC 381 : 1964 (1) CrLJ 269 : (1964) 2 SCA 663.

[10029] ● Validity of Defence of India Act—Challenge to.—As long as the present Presidential Order remains in force, no application can lie in any Court for challenging the validity of the Defence of India Act, 1962, or the Rules made thereunder on the ground of violation of the fundamental rights of the detenu under Articles 14, 21 and 22 of the Constitution, and in any proceeding before any Court it is not open to the detenue to urge that the said Act or Rules are void for the reason that they offend against his said rights. Makhan Singh Tarsikka v. State of Punjab, AIR 1964 SC 381 : 1964 (1) CrLJ 269 : (1964) 2 SCA 663.

[10030] ● Provisions of Article 358 and Article 359—Distinction between.—There are three points of distinction between the provisions of Article 358 and Article 359.

(1) Article 358 provides that as soon as Proclamation of Emergency under Article 352 has been issued by the President, and so long as the Proclamation is in operation, Article 19 becomes automatically suspended, and to that extent the powers of the Legislatures as well as the Executive are widened. The suspension of Article 19 during the pendency of the proclamation of emergency removes the fetters created by Article 19, and if the legislature makes laws or if the executive does acts which are inconsistent with the rights guaranteed by Article 19, their validity is not open to challenge as long as the proclamation is in force. As soon as the Proclamation ceases to operate, Article 19 is automatically revived and the laws passed and the executive actions taken during the course of the emergency shall be inoperative to the extent to which they conflict with the rights guaranteed under Article 19. Article 358, however, makes it clear that during the period of emergency, the suspension of Article 19 is complete, and that things done during the emergency cannot be challenged even after the emergency is over. Article 359, on the other hand, does not purport expressly to suspend any of the fundamental rights. It authorises the President to issue an Order declaring that the right to move any Court for the enforcement of any such right as is specified in the Order shall remain suspended for the period during which the Proclamation of Emergency is in force or for any shorter period. Thus, under Article 359, the rights covered by the Order are not expressly suspended, but only the citizen is deprived of his right to move any Court for their enforcement. That is one important distinction between Article 358 and Article 359.

(2) The other distinction between the two Articles lies in the fact that whereas under Article 358 the suspension of Article 19 continues so long as the Proclamation of Emergency under Article 352 is in operation, under Article 359 the suspension of the right to move any Court brought about by the Presidential Order can last either for the whole period of proclamation or for any shorter period, if it is so specified in the order.

(3) The third distinction between the provisions of Article 358 and Article 359 is this that, whereas the suspension of Article 19 provided for in Article 358 applies to the whole of the country, and so covers all legislations and all executive actions, the order issued under Article 359 may be made to extend to the whole of India or may be confined to any part of the territory of India. Makhan Singh Tarsikka v. State of Punjab, AIR 1964 SC 381 : 1964 (1) CrLJ 269 : (1964) 2 SCA 663.

[10031] ● Presidential order—Effect of.—Even while a Presidential Order issued under Article 359 is in force and the right of the detenu to move any Court for the enforcement of his fundamental rights specified in the Order is suspended, it is open to the detenu to challenge the legality or propriety of his detention on any of the following grounds :—

(a) that he has been detained in violation of the mandatory provisions of the Defence of India Act, or the Rules made thereunder under which the order of detention was made;

(b) that the order of detention was made 'mala fide'; provided that it would not be enough to make an allegation of mala fides against the detaining authority, and that before the plea can succeed, the allegation would have to be proved;

(c) that the operative provisions of the law under which he is detained suffer from the vice of excessive delegation and are, therefore, invalid.

In short, Article 359 or the President Order made under it does not bar the detenu from challenging the validity of his detention on any ground which is independent of his fundamental rights, the enforcement of which is suspended under the said order. Makhan Singh Tarsikka v. State of Punjab, AIR 1964 SC 381 : 1964 (1) CrLJ 269 : (1964) 2 SCA 663.

[10032] ● After the petitioner had been deprived of his right to move the Court it is manifestly that.—It was not open to the petitioner to raise before the Court any question as regards the vires or constitutionality of the said Ordinance or the Rules and Orders made thereunder. Mohan Chowdhury v. Chief Commissioner, Union Territory of Tripura, AIR 1964 SC 173 : 1964 (1) CrLJ 132 : (1964)1 SCA 611.

[10033] ● Proclamation of emergency.—Article 352 requires only a declaration of emergency threatening the security of India by one of the causes mentioned. The words "to that effect" can have no other meaning. The power to make the declaration can no doubt be exercised only when the President is satisfied about the emergency, but we do not see that the Article requires the condition precedent for the exercise of the power, that is, the President's satisfaction to be stated in the declaration.

Article 352 by clause (2) provides that a Proclamation issued under clause (1) may be revoked by a subsequent proclamation and shall cease to operate at the expiration of two months unless before the expiration to that period it has been approved by resolution of both Houses of Parliament. This clause also states that the Proclamation shall be laid before each House of Parliament. It has not been stated that the Houses of Parliament did not approve of the proclamation within the period of two months. It would appear, therefore, that the only way a proclamation ceases to have effect is by one of the events mentioned in this clause. None of this has happened. Nothing contained in an address by the President to the House of the Parliament can operate to terminate the Proclamation. P.L. Lakhanpal v. Union of India, AIR 1967 SC 243 : 1967 CrLJ 282 : (1967) 2 SCJ 165 : (1967) 1 SCA 443.

[10034] ● Validity of ordinance or rule or order made under presidential order.—Articles 358, 359(1).—Defence of India Rules (1962)—Rule 30—During the pendency of the Presidential Order, if a citizen seeks to challenge the validity of the ordinance, rule or order made thereunder on any ground other than the contravention of Articles 14, 21 and 22, the Presidential Order cannot come into operation. It is not, however, open to a citizen to challenge the order on the ground of contravention of Article 19, because as soon as a Proclamation of Emergency is issued by the President under Article 358, the provisions of Article 19 are automatically suspended. Jaichand Lal Sethia v. State of W.B., AIR 1967 SC 483 : 1967 CrLJ 520 : (1966) 2 SCA 299 : 1967 SCD 84 : (1966) Sup SCR 464 : (1967) 2 SCWR 559 : 9 LawRep 111 : 1967 MLJ (Cri) 601.

[10035] ● Order of detention—Satisfaction of Government subjective.—The satisfaction of the Government which justifies the order is a subjective satisfaction and if the order is prima facie regular and in conformity with the language of Rule 30, it is not ordinarily open to a Court to enter into an investigation about the sufficiency of material on which the order is based. Jaichand Lal Sethia v. State of W.B., AIR 1967 SC 483 : 1967 CrLJ 520 : (1966) 2 SCA 299.

[10036] ● Order of detention—Satisfaction of Govt.—When can be challenged.—The accuracy of the recital that the State Government was satisfied, in a normal case, in the absence of any evidence as to its inaccuracy, can be accepted by the Court as establishing that the necessary condition was fulfilled. Jaichand Lal Sethia v. State of W.B., AIR 1967 SC 483 : 1967 CrLJ 520 : (1966) 2 SCA 299.

[10037] ● Order of President to comply with Article 14.—There is nothing in the Article 359 which prevents the President from restricting the scope of the order to a class of persons, provided the operation of the order is confined to an area and to a period. If the orders apply to the entire country the fact that only the persons who are affected by that order cannot move the Court for the enforcement of their right cannot make them any the less valid orders. An order making an unjustified discrimination in suspending the right to move a Court under Article 14 itself, will be void at its inception. However, if the order does not violate Article 14, it can validly take away the right to move the Court to enforce Article 14. Ghulam Sarwar v. Union of India, AIR 1967 SC 1335 : 1967 CrLJ 1204 : (1967) 1 SCA 246 : (1967) 2 SCR 271.

[10038] ● President's order under Article 359 providing for suspension of fundamental right.—Where the President's Order under Article 359 provided that enforcement of fundamental rights under Articles 14, 21 and 22 would be suspended if any person is deprived of such right under the Defence of India Ordinance (later replaced by the Act) or the rules or the orders made thereunder, it is not necessary to make any express provision in the Defence of India Act or the rules for the suspension of the enforcement of fundamental rights under Articles 14, 21 and 22. Mohd. Yaqub v. State of J&K, AIR 1968 SC 765 : 1968 CrLJ 972 : (1968) 1 SCA 418 : (1968) 1 SCWR 793 : 1968 SCD 930 : (1968) 2 SCJ 914 : (1968) 2 SCR 227 : 1968 LabIC 872 : 16 LawRep 774 : 1968 MLJ (Cri) 793.

[10039] ● Detention order passed in State of J&K.—Articles 359 & 22(5) and DOI Rules (1962), Rule 30(1)(b) & (h).—When the President makes an order under Article 359 suspending Article 22, it follows that clause (5) of Article 22 cannot continue. There is, therefore, no question of furnishing any ground under Article 22 (5) to the detenu if the detention is under the Act or the Rules, for the entire Article 22 has been suspended.

Where a detention order is passed in the State of Jammu and Kashmir under the DOI Rules, 1962, Rule 30 (1) (b) in the form required by Section 45 of the Constitution of Jammu and Kashmir though not in the form as required by Article 166 of the Constitution of India, the presumption is that it was passed validly unless it can be shown that it was not passed as required by law since Article 166 does not apply to the State of Jammu and Kashmir. Mohd. Yaqub v. State of J&K, AIR 1968 SC 765 : 1968 CrLJ 972 : (1968) 1 SCA 418 : (1968) 1 SCWR 793 : 1968 SCD 930 : (1968) 2 SCJ 914 : (1968) 2 SCR 227 : 1968 LabIC 872 : 16 LawRep 774 : 1968 MLJ (Cri) 793.

[10040] ● President can suspend enforcement of any of fundamental right.—It is open to the President to suspend the enforcement of any of the fundamental rights conferred by Part III by an order under Article 359 and this Article shows that whenever such suspension is made it is in the interest of the security of India and no further proof of it is necessary, An order passed under Article 359(1) cannot be tested with the aid of Article 13(2) under that very fundamental right the enforcement of which it suspends. Mohd. Yaqub v. State of J&K, AIR 1968 SC 765 : 1968 CrLJ 972 : (1968) 1 SCA 418 : (1968) 1 SCWR 793 : 1968 SCD 930 : (1968) 2 SCJ 914 : (1968)

2 SCR 227 : 1968 LabIC 872 : 16 LawRep 774 : 1968 MLJ (Cri) 793.

[10041] ● Fundamental rights concerning personal liberty—Suspension of.—Fundamental rights concerning personal liberty are suspended during the operation of the proclamation of emergency and the COFEPOSA and the orders made under it are not open to challenge on the ground of their being inconsistent with or repugnant to Articles 14, 19, 21 & 22 in view of the Presidential Orders dated 27-6-1975 and 8-1-1976 which totally take away the locus standi of the detenus to move any Court for the enforcement of the aforesaid fundamental rights and the petitions out of which the present appeals had arisen did not seek to enforce the orders laying down the conditions of detention but on the contrary challenged them and covertly sought to enforce the very rights that were suspended. Hence it was not open to the High Court to strike down the particular clauses of the Maharashtra Detention Order, 1974. Union of India v. Bhanudas, AIR 1977 SC 1027 : (1977) 1 SCC 834 : 1977 SCC (Cri) 208 : 1977 CrLJ 785.

[10042] ● Detenu confined in prison—Not treated as civil prisoner.—The mere fact that a detenu is confined in a prison for the sake of administrative convenience does not entitle him to be treated as a Civil Prisoner or to be governed by the provisions of the Prisons Act. Union of India v. Bhanudas, AIR 1977 SC 1027 : (1977) 1 SCC 834 : 1977 SCC (Cri) 208 : 1977 CrLJ 785.

[10043] ● Bar to jurisdiction of High Court.—The jurisdiction of the High Court under Article 226 is barred during the emergency if the object of a proceeding is to enforce the fundamental right to personal freedom even if it involves adjudication on the question of vires of a rule made under enactments authorizing preventive detention. Union of India v. Bhanudas, AIR 1977 SC 1027 : (1977) 1 SCC 834 : 1977 SCC (Cri) 208 : 1977 CrLJ 785.

[10044] ● Proclamation under Article 356(1) subject to judicial review.—The proclamation under Article 356 (1) is not immune from judicial view. The Supreme Court or the High Court can strike down the proclamation if it is found to be mala fide or based on wholly irrelevant or extraneous grounds. The deletion of clause (5) which was introduced by 38th (Amendment) Act by the 44th (Amendment) Act removes the cloud on the renewability of the action. When called upon, the Union of India has to produce the material on the basis of which action was taken. It can not refuse to do so, if it seeks to defend the action. This Court will not go into the correctness of the material or its adequacy. Even if part of the material is irrelevant, the Court cannot interfere so long as there is some material which is relevant to the action taken. S.R. Bommai v. Union of India, AIR 1994 SC 1918 (2112, 2113) (1994) 3 SCC 1.

[10045] ● Power of President to suspend enforcement of fundamental right.—While clause (1) of Article 359 empowers the President to suspend the enforcement of the fundamental rights named in such notification (and any and all proceedings in that behalf in any Court), it does not empower the President to suspend the fundamental rights. Evidently, the founding fathers did not think it necessary to clothe the President with such a power. The words in clause (1) are clear and unambiguous. They only speak of suspending the enforcement of the rights in Part III and not suspending the rights themselves. There is no justification and no basis for holding that the suspension of enforcement of the rights means in effect the suspension of the rights themselves. If that were the intension of the Founding Fathers, they would have said so expressly. Indeed, they have stated what tney meant in explicit language. In view of the fact that the fundamental rights in Part III are allowed to be affected by a Presidential Order, one ought not to read anything more than what the clause expressly says—and its language leave no room for any doubt. Attorney General for India v. Amratlal Prajivandas, AIR 1995 SC 2179 : (1994) 5 SCC 54 : 1994 SCC (Cri) 1325 : 1995 CrLJ 426 (SC) : JT 1994 (3) SC 583.

CONSTRUCTIVE LIABILITY
§ (See "COMMON INTENTION" and "COMMON OBJECT")

CONSULTATION

[10046] ● Preparation of FIR in consultation with others.—Regarding preparation of the FIR in consultation with others, it is noticed that this is spoken to by PW-2 who is the brother of the deceased. The complaint is said to have been prepared by PW-1, son of the deceased, late in the night at about 2.00 a.m. When there are two male members of the family who were grief-stricken, it was but natural that PW-1 and his uncle (PW-2) should talk about giving the complaint and draft the same. This fact, in the circumstances of this case, can hardly be a ground to weaken the case of the prosecution. State of Uttar Pradesh v. Nahar Singh, AIR 1998 SC 1328 (1332) : (1998) 3 SCC 561 : 1998 SCC (Cri) 850 : 1998 CrLJ 2006 : 1998 CrLR (SC) 224 : JT 1998 (2) SC 41

CONSUMERS PROTECTION ACT, 1986

[10047] ● "Deficiency in service" scope—Doctors.—With the awareness in society, and people in general gathering consciousness about their rights, actions for damages in tort are on the increase. Not only are civil suits filed, the availability of a forum for grievance redressal under the Consumer Protection Act, 1986 having jurisdiction to hear complaints against professionals for "deficiency in service", which expression is very widely defined in the Act, has given rise to a large number of complaints against professionals, in particular against doctors, being filed by the persons feeling aggrieved. Criminal complaints are being filed against doctors alleging commission of offences punishable under Section 304-A or Sections 336/337/338, IPC, alleging rashness or negligence on the part of the doctors resulting in loss of life or injury (of varying degree) to the patient. The present one is such a case. Jacob Mathew v. State of Punjab, AIR 2005 SC 3180 : (2005) 6 SCC 1 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 1369 (1385) : 2005 CrLJ 3710 : 2005 (3) Crimes 63.

[10048] ● Negligence.—[Note. The order of reference enabled the Apex Court to examine the concept of "negligence in particular" professional negligence and as to when and how it does give rise to an action under the Criminal Law. The Apex Court dealt with the issues in the interests of settling the law.]

[10049] ● Motor accident—Death of victim in hospital—Jurisdiction of consumer forum.—In the instant case, one Mr. Rajeev Sapra was travelling in a Maruti car. The car was hit by a tempo as a result of which he said Mr. Sapra became unconscious and was rushed to Safdarjung Hospital. The appellants who are the wife and children filed a claim before the National Consumer Disputes Redressal Commission for damages on the ground of negligence of the hospital and the doctors. By the impugned judgment, the National Commission dismissed the claim merely on the ground that in view of the judgment of this Court in the case of Chairman, Thiruvalluvar Transport Corpn. v. Consumer Protection Council, (1995) 2 SCC 479 : AIR 1995 SC 1384 they had no jurisdiction.

The Supreme Court held as under :

"In our view, this judgment has no relevance at all. That was a case where the claim before the National Commission was based on the accident itself. In that context this Court held that the claim based on a motor accident can only be before the Motor Accidents Claims Tribunal. In this case, the claim is not based on the accident. The claim is based on the alleged negligence of the hospital and doctors after the said Mr. Sapra was taken to the hospital. That is entirely a different cause of action. In respect of such a claim the National Commission would have jurisdiction.

It was, however, urged that the appellants have also filed a claim before the Motor Accidents Claims Tribunal claiming therein that the death had taken place due to the accident. It was submitted that if death had taken place due to accident there was no question of maintaining a claim based on the negligence of the hospital and doctors. This raises questions which are to be decided by the National Commission. It will be open to the National Commission whilst considering the merits to decide whether the appellants can maintain an action under the Motor Vehicles Act on the basis that death resulted from the accident as well as a claim for damages for alleged negligence of the hospital and doctors.

We, thus, set aside the impugned order and remit the matter back to the National Commission. The appeal is disposed of accordingly. No order as to costs." Geetu Sapra v. B.L. Kapoor Memorial Hospital, (2005) 10 SCC 549 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 1621 (1622).

1. SECTION 1

[10050] ● Law of contempt—Object of.—The object of the law of contempt is not to vindicate the prestige or position of a presiding Judge, for which the proper remedy is an action in libel or defamation by the officer concerned, but to maintain the continuity of the crystal-clear flow of the stream of justice by sustaining the confidence of the public at large in the administration of justice. Brahma Prakash v. State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1954 SC 10 : 1954 CrLJ 238 : 1953 SCR 1169. To the same effect : (1) Tuka Ram G. Gakar v. R. N. Shukla, AIR 1968 SC 1050 : 1968 CrLJ 1234 : 1968 (3) SCR 422.

[10051] ● Act or words spoken tending to obstruct administration of justice.—The law of contempt stems from the rights of the Courts to punish by imprisonment or five persons guilty of words or acts which either abstracts or tend to obstruct the administration of justice. This right is exercised in India by all Courts when contempt is committed in facie cunae by the superior Courts on their own behalf or on behalf of the Courts subordinate to them even if committed outside the Courts. Formerly it was regarded as inherent in the powers of a Court of record and now by the Constitution it is a part of the powers of the Supreme Court and the High Courts. E.M.S. Namboodripad v. T.N. Nambiar, AIR 1970 SC 2015 : (1970) 2 SCC 325 : 1970 CrLJ 1670 : (1971) 1 SCR 697 : 1971 LW (Cr) 145 : 1971 Mad LJ (Cr) 315 : (1971) 1 SCJ 631.

[10052] ● Power to punish for contempt to be exercised cautiously.—"We ought never to forget that the power to punish for contempt, large as it is, must always be exercised cautiously, wisely, and with circumspection. Frequent or indiscriminate use of this power in anger or irritation would not help to sustain the dignity and status of the Court, but may sometimes affect it adversely. Wise Judges never forget that the best way to sustain the dignity and status of their office is to deserve respect from the public at large by the quality of their judgments, the fearlessness, fairness and objectivity of their approach, and by the restraint, dignity and decorum which they observe in their judicial conduct". S. Mulgaokar In re, AIR 1978 SC 727 (743) : (1978) 3 SCC 339 : 1978 SCC (Cri) 403 : 1978 (3) SCR 162.

[10056] ● Court—What constitutes.—Before a person or persons can be said to constitute Court it must be held that they have derived their powers from the state and are exercising judicial powers. Bharat Bank v. Employees Bharat Bank, AIR 1950 SC 188 : 1955 SCA 317 : 1950 SCR 459 : 1950-51 (2) FJR 1 : 1950 LLJ 921.

[10057] ● Libel and contempt of Court—Distinction.—A libellous reflection upon the conduct of a Judge in respect of his judicial duties may certainly come under Section 499, Penal Code, and it may be open to the Judge to take steps against the libeller in the ordinary way for vindication of his character and personal dignity as a Judge; but such libel may or may not amount to contempt of Court, which is something more than mere defamation and is of a different character. What is made punishable in the Indian Penal Code is the offence of defamation as defamation and not as contempt of Court. If the defamation of a subordinate Court amounts to contempt of Court, proceedings can certainly be taken under Section 2, Contempt of Courts Act, quite apart from the fact that other remedy may be open to the aggrieved officer under Section 499 Penal Code. Ramakrishna, Bathina v. State of Madras, AIR 1952 SC 149 : 1952 CrLJ 832 : 1952 SCR 425 : (1952) 1 Mad LJ 736 : 1952 SCJ 137 : 7 DRR (SC) 161 TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Brahma Prakash v. State, AIR 1954 SC 10 : 1953 SCR 1169 : (1953) 2 Mad LJ 231 : 1953 SCA 624.

[10058] ● Contempt of Supreme Court.—When any publication criticising a decision not only preaches the Court of law the sermon of divine detachment from extraneous consideration such as politics and policies but also proceeds to attribute improper motive to the Judge, it not only transgresses the limits of fair and bona fide criticism but had a clear tendency to affect the dignity and prestige of the Court and thus it amounts to contempt of Court. Aswani Kumar Ghose v. Arbinda Bose, AIR 1953 SC 75 : 1953 SCJ 381 : 8 DLR 91 SC : 1953 SCA 188 : 1953 SCR 215.

[10059] ● Contempt of Court—What amounts to.—Where an application containing allegations against a trial Magistrate is made by a third party to the District Magistrate the latter is entitled to use his powers under CrPC and send the application in the normal and usual course of his functions to the Magistrate concerned for remarks. There is nothing in such action of the District Magistrate which amounts to a contempt of Court. Rizwan-ul-Hasan v. State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1953 SC 185 : 1953 CrLJ 911 : 1953 SCR 581 : 1953 SCA 546 : 1953 SCJ 255 : 8 DLR 260 (SC).

[10060] ● Member of Bar Association do not occupy privileged position in matter of contempt.—In the matter of contempt the members of the Bar Association do not occupy a privileged position. Brahma Prakash v. State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1954 SC 10 : 1954 CrLJ 238 : 1953 SCR 1169 : 1953 SCA 694 : 1953 All LJ 571 : (1953) 2 Mad LJ 231 : 7 All Cr D 720 : 8 DLR (SC) 493 : 1953 SCJ 52B : 1953 BLJR 600.

[10061] ● Defamatory attack on Judge libel.—No lenient attitude can be shown to the President Bar council of India in case Vinay Mishra In re, AIR 1995 SC 2348 : 1995 CrLJ 3934 : (1995) 2 Crimes 38. A defamatory attack on a judge may be a libel as far as the Judge is concerned and it would be open to him to proceed in a proper action if he so chooses. If, however, the publication of the disparaging statement is calculated to interfere with the due course of justice or proper administration of law by such Court, it can be punished summarily as contempt. One is a wrong done to the Judge personally while the other is a injury to the public if it tends to create an apprehension in the minds of the people regarding the integrity, ability or fairness of the Judge or to deter actual and prospective litigants from placing complete reliance upon the Court's administration of justice, or if it is likely to cause embarrassment in the mind of the Judge himself in the discharge of his judicial duties. It is not necessary to prove affirmatively that there has been an actual interference with the administration of justice by reason of such defamatory statement; it is enough if it is likely, or tends in any way, to interfere with the proper administration of law. Brahma Prakash v. State of U P., AIR 1954 SC 10 : 1954 CrLJ 238 : 1953 SCJ 52B : 1953 SCR 1169 : 1953 SCA 694 : 1953 All LJ 571 : (1953) 2 Mad LJ 231 : 7 All Cr D 720 : 8 DLR (SC) 493 : 1953 BLJR 600.

[10062] ● Nature of jurisdiction to punish for contempt.—The jurisdiction of a High Court in a contempt proceeding being a special jurisdiction High Court can deal with it summarily and adopt its own procedure. It is, however, desirable that a Judge who has been personally attacked should not as far as possible hear a contempt matter which to that extent concerns him personally. It is otherwise when the contempt is not directed towards him personally. No general rule, however, can be laid down, for there may be only one Judge or two or more who have been attacked. Other cases may also arise where it is more convenient and proper for the Judge to deal with the matter himself as for example in a contempt ex facie curiae. Sukhdev Singh Sodh v. Chief Justice, AIR 1954 SC 186 : 1954 CrLJ 460 : 1954 SCR 454 : 1954 SCA 363 : (1954) 1 Mad LJ 137 : 1954 Mad WN 133 : 1954 SCJ 67.

[10063] ● Allegation of political motivation against Judge—Contempt.—Allegation of political motivation against a Judge is contempt.

Hiralal Dixit v. State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1954 SC 743 : (1955) 1 SCR 677.

[10064] ● Origin of Jurisdiction to punish for contempt.—So far as contempt of High Court, as distinct from a subordinate Court is concerned, the constitution vests these rights in every High Court. So no Act of the legislature can take away that jurisdiction and confer it afresh by virtue of its own authority. Sukhdev Singh v. Teja Singh, Chief Justice, AIR 1954 SC 186 : 1954 CrLJ 460 : 1954 SCR 454.

[10065] ● Scandalizing Court.—A section of the Bar is under an erroneous impression that when a counsel is acting in the interests of his client, or in accordance with his instructions he is discharging his legitimate duty to his client even when he signs an application or a pleading which contains matter scandalizing the Court. They think that when there is conflict between their obligations to the Court and their duty to the client, the latter prevails. The misconception has to be rooted out by a clear and emphastic pronouncement, and we think it should widely made known that counsel who sign applications or pleadings containing matter scandalizing the Court without reasonably satisfying themselves about the prima facie existence of adequate grounds therefore, with a view to prevent or delay the course of justice, are themselves guilty of contempt of Court, and that it is no duty of a counsel to his client to take any interest in such applications; on the other hand, his duty is to advise his client for refraining from making allegation of this nature in such applications. M.Y. Shareef v. Hon'ble Judges of the Nagpur High Court, AIR 1955 (SC) 19 : 1955 CrLJ 133 : 1955 (1) SCR 757.

[10066] ● Court and Tribunal Distinction.—"It may be stated broadly that what distinguishes a Court from a quasi judicial tribunal is that it is charged with a duty to decide disputes in a judicial manner and declares the rights of parties in a definitive Judgment. To decide in a judicial manner involves that the parties are entitled as a matter of right to be heard in support of their claim and to adduce evidence in proof of it. And it also imports and obligation on the part of the authority to decide the matter on a consideration of the evidence adduced and in accordance with law. When a question therefore arises as to whether an authority creates by an Act is a Court as distinguished from a quasi judicial tribunal what has to be decided is whether it possesses all the attributes of a Court." Virendra Kumar Satyawadi v. State of Punjab, AIR 1956 SC 153, 157 : 1956 CrLJ 326 : (1955) 2 SCR 1013 : 1956 SCJ 138.

[10067] ● Pronouncement of definitive Judgment essential sine qua non of Court.—The pronouncement of a definitive Judgment is considered the essential sine qua non of a Court and unless and until a binding and authoritative Judgement can be pronounced by a person or body of persons it cannot be predicted that he or they constitute a Court. Brijnandan Sinha v. Jyoti Narayan, AIR 1956 SC 66 : 1956 CrLJ 156 : (1955) 2 SCR 955.

[10068] ● Courts—Commissioners appointed under Public Servant (Inquiries) Act not.—Commissioners appointed under the Public Servants (Inquiries) Act are not Courts. Brijnandan Sinha v. Jyoti Narayan, AIR 1956 SC 66 : 1956 CrLJ 156 : (1965) 2 SCR 955 : 1956 SCA 52 : 1956 SCJ 155.

[10069] ● Professional misconduct—Imputations of partiality and unfairness against Munsiff in open Court.—A member of the Bar undoubtedly owes a duty to his client and must place before the Court all that can fairly and reasonably be submitted on behalf of his client. He may even submit that a particular order is not correct and may ask for a review of that order. At the same time, a member of the Bar is an officer of the Court and owes a duty to the Court in which he is appearing. He must uphold the dignity and decorum of the Court and must not do anything to bring the Court itself into disrepute. It is gross overstepping of the limits of propriety when he made imputations of partiality and unfairness against the Munsif in open Court. In suggesting that the Munsif followed no principle in his orders, the appellant was adding insult to injury, because the Munsif had merely upheld the order of his predecessor on the preliminary point of jurisdiction and Court fees which order had been upheld by the High Court in revision. Scandalising the Court in such manner is really polluting the very fountain of justice. Such conduct as the appellant indulged in was not a matter between an individual member of the Bar and a member of the judicial service. It brought into disrepute the whole administration of justice. Lalit Mohan Das v. Advocate General, AIR 1957 SC 250 : 1957 SCJ 338 : (1957) 1 Mad LJ (Cr) 151 : 1957 SCR 167.

[10070] ● Scandalising Court itself.—There are innumerable ways by which attempts could be made to hinder or obstruct the due administration of justice in Courts and one type of such interference is found in cases where there is an act which amounts to "scandalising the Court itself" : this scandalising might manifest itself in various ways but in substance it is an attack on individual

Judges or the Court as a whole with or without reference to particular cases, causing unwarranted and defamatory aspersions upon the character and ability of the Judges. Such conduct is punished as contempt for the reason that it tends to create distrust in the popular mind and impair the confidence of the people in the Courts which are of prime importance to the litigants in the protection of their rights and liberties. State of M. P. v. Revashanker, AIR 1959 SC 102 : 1959 CrLJ 251.

[10071] ● High Court right to protect—Subordinate Courts against contempt.—The High Court has the right to protect subordinate Courts against contempt, but subject to this restriction that cases of contempt which have already been provided for in the IPC should not be taken cognizance of by the High Court. It was observed-that it was not necessary to determine exhaustively what were the cases of contempt which had been already provided for in the Indian Penal Code; it was pointed out, however, that some light was thrown on the matter by the provision of Section 480 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. (now Section 345, CrPC, 1973) which empowers any civil, criminal or revenue Court to punish summarily a person who is found guilty of committing any offence under Sections 175, 178, 179, 180 or Section 228 of the Indian Penal Code in the view or presence of the Court. The essential ingredients of Section 228, IPC are : (1) intention, (2) insult or interruption to a public servant and (3) the public servant insulted or interrupted must be sitting in any stage of a judicial proceeding. In the case at hand there was an initial difficulty that the respondent was sought to be proceeded against by reason of the aspersions he made in the application dated December 17, 1953, and the affidavit dated December 21, 1953. It is not very clear from the record if the Magistrate was sitting in any stage of a judicial proceeding when the application and the affidavit were filed. But the petition and affidavit casting aspersions which prima facie showed that they were much more than a mere insult to the Magistrate; in effect, they scandalised the Court in such a way as to create distrust in the popular mind and impair the confidence of people in Courts. Two of the aspersions made, taken at their face value, were (1) that the learned Magistrate had joined in a conspiracy implicate the respondent in a false case of theft. In the affidavit it was stated that the learned Magistrate had sent for the respondent and his brother and had asked them to make a false report to the police that the ornaments of Chandra Mukhi Bai had been stolen. The learned Magistrate characterised the aspersion as totally false and said that he neither knew the respondent nor his brother and had no acquaintance with them. Another aspersion was that the Magistrate had taken a bribe of Rs. 500. This aspersion was also stoutly denied. In the facts above the contemnor should be dealt with by the High Court for contempt. State of Madhya Pradesh v. Reva Shanker, AIR 1959 SC 102 : 1959 CrLJ 251 : 1959 SCR 1367.

[10072] ● Aspersions against Magistrate.—An accused filed an application under Section 528, CrPC, 1898 and an affidavit containing serious aspersion against the Magistrate, viz., the man had a hand in the conspiracy to involve the accused in the case and that the Magistrate had been paid illegal gratification. It amounted to contempt. State of Madhya Pradesh v. Reva Shankar, AIR 1959 SC 102 : 1959 CrLJ 251 : 1959 SCR 1367 : 1959 SCJ 86.

[10073] ● Special committee constituting itself as Court of parallel enquiry.—The circumstances do not establish that the Special Committee had constituted itself as a Court of parallel enquiry to look into matters in issue in the Section 497 case against B.K. Sen or which were in issue in the pending proceedings in the High Court. What exactly is meant by a Court of parallel enquiry is not clear. No doubt it would be mischievous for a newspaper to systematically conduct an independent investigation into a crime for which a man has been arrested and to publish the results of that investigation. This is because trial by newspapers, when a trial by one of the regular tribunals of the country is going on, must be prevented. The basis for this view is that such action on the part of a newspaper tends to interfere with the course of justice whether the investigation tends to prejudice the accused or the prosecution. There is no comparison between a trial by a newspaper and what has happened in this case. The Special Committee had embarked upon an enquiry on the directions of the Corporation in order to discover malpractice on the part of the Corporation's servants. Malpractices on the part of a servant of the Corporation would presumably include making unworthy appointments. The ascertainment of the motive for the appointments would be merely incidental to the main purpose of the enquiry. It would be difficult to conclude therefrom that the Special Committee were holding a parallel enquiry on matters pending decision by a Court of law and that thereby their action tended to interfere with the course of justice. Saibul Kumar Gupta v. B.K. Sen, AIR 1961 SC 633 : 1961 (1) CrLJ 749 : 1961 (3) SCR 460.

[10074] ● Interference with due administration of justice.—Direction by under Secretary to the Magistrate not to follow the binding decision of the High Court till the matter is again contested before the High Court on appropriate case is a flagrant interference with the administration of justice by the Court. Dibakar Satpathi v. Hon'ble the Chief Justice and his Companion Justices of the Orissa High Court, AIR 1961 SC 1315 : (1961) 2 CrLJ 437 : 1962 (1) SCR 326.

[10075] ● Contempt to be constituted by any conduct.—To speak generally contempt may be said to be constituted by any conduct that tends to bring the authority and administration of law to disrespect or disregard or to interfere with or prejudice parties, litigants or their witnesses during the litigation. Pratap Singh v. Gurbux Singh, AIR 1962 SC 1172 : 1962 (2) CrLJ 262 : 1962 Supp (2) SCR 838.

[10076] ● Service of order not essential for founding action in contempt.—The judgment or order should be served on the party personally, except in the following cases : (1) prohibitive orders, the drawing up of which is not completed; (2) orders embodying an undertaking to do an act by a named day; (3) orders to answer interrogatories or for discovery or inspection of documents; (4) where an order for substituted service has been made; (5) where the respondent has evaded service of the order.......

In order to justify committal for breach of a prohibitive order it is not necessary that the order should have been served upon the party against whom it has been granted, if it be proved that he had notice of the order aliunde, as by telegram, or newspaper report, or otherwise, and knew that it was intended to be enforced, or if he consented to the order, or if he was present in Court when the order was pronounced, or when the motion was made, although he left before the order was pronounced, or when the motion was made, although he left before the order was pronounced.

There may be circumstances where officials entrusted with the duty of carrying out a legal order may have valid reasons to doubt the authenticity of the order conveyed to them by interested parties and in those circumstances it may be said that there was no wilful disobedience of the order made.

The appellants were informed not merely by interested parties but by an Advocate, who was an officer of the Court, that the High Court had extended the stay order up to May 23, 1958. A formal application supported by an affidavit was made to that effect. Hoshiar Singh v. Gurbachan Singh, AIR 1962 (SC) 1089 : 1962 (2) CrLJ 236 : 1962 Supp (3) SCR 127 : 1962 All WR (HC) 553.

[10077] ● Powers of High Court for punishment of contempt.—The High Court's powers for punishment of contempt have been preserved by the Constitution and they are also inherent in a Court of Record. The learned Judges were perhaps in error in describing it as contempt in facie curiae. That is contempt of a different sort. This was contempt by disobedience of an order of the High Court which is sometimes a civil contempt punishable under the Code of Civil Procedure and sometimes a criminal contempt punishable by imprisonment. The only curbs on the powers of the High Court to punish for contempt of itself are contained in the Contempt of Courts Act which limits the term for which a person can be imprisoned to six months simple imprisonment. The High Court was justified in punishing this contempt. In view of the grossness of the contempt it cannot be said that the punishment of three months simple imprisonment was excessive. Mohd. Ikram Hussain v. The State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1964 (SC) 1625 : 1964 (2) CrLJ 590 : 1964 (5) SCR 86.

[10078] ● Assistant Registrar functioning under Bihar and Orissa Co-operative Societies Act Court.—Assistant Registrar working under Section 48 read with Section 6(2) of the Bihar and Orissa Co-operative Societies Act, 1955 is a Court in the specific case and as such the Contempt of Courts Act is applicable in the case. Thakur Jugal Kishore v. Sitamarhi Central Coop. Bank, AIR 1967 SC 1494 : 1967 CrLJ 1380 : (1967) 2 SCA 428 : 1969 Mad LJ (Cr) 344.

[10079] ● Commission of enquiry when appointed to enquiry into matter of justice importance.—When a commission of enquiry had been appointed to inquire into matters of public importance there would not be any contempt of Court even though the matters which would be enquired into by the inquiry commissioner were the same as those which were pending in a litigation before the Civil or Criminal Court. T.C. Waker v. N.L. Shukla, AIR 1968 SC 1050 : 1968 CrLJ 1234 : 1968 (3) SCR 422. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) K.T. Chandy v. M.R. Jardi, AIR 1974 SC 642 : (1974) 1 SCC 414 : (1974) SCC (Cri) 210 : 1974 (1) LLJ 278 : 1974 CrLJ 594 : 1974 CrLR (SC) 81 (2) : 1974 (2) SCR 650.

[10080] ● Interference with due course of justice in pending proceedings.—The plaintiff in a suit lost in election for membership of primary congress committee and to his opponent B. This led the plaintiff to sue in Munsif's Court for having the election of B declared void and inoperative. He had alleged various irregularities regarding the conduct of the election and he also filed an application for injunction restraining the District Election Officer and other officers from holding elections for membership of the District Congress Committee. He also asked for an injunction restraining B from taking part in those elections and the interim injunction was granted. The Working Committee of the Indian National Congress passed a resolution dated December 4/5, 1950, the substance of which was that any member of the Congress, having any grievance, in respect of any action taken, or decision given, by a Congress Organization, should take advantage of the tribunals provided to seek redress by way of appeal or reference, and that such matters should not be taken to law Courts. That resolution further provided that initiating of such litigation, and securing of ex parte interlocutory orders, against the Congress Committee and Congress authorities, was highly detrimental to the discipline of the organisation, and its smooth working. The resolution wound up, by saying that the Working Committee resolved that any member, who instituted a suit or other proceeding in law Courts against any Congress Committee or official did so at the risk of being considered guilty of gross indiscipline and of being summarily, and without any further notice removed from membership of the Congress, by order of the Provincial Congress Committees concerned or the Working Committee. When application for vacating the injunction filed by B came up for hearing the appellant filed an affidavit mentioning the fact that S had been expelled form the Congress organisation. The City Munsiff dismissed the injunction application filed by B on the ground that S was no longer a member of the Congress Organisation. The passing of the orders of expulsion by the appellant, against S and filing of a supporting affidavit in the suit by him clearly indicated that it was a deliberate attempt by the appellants to interfere with, or prejudice S in by him and it was no answer that the action by way of expulsion was taken on the basis of the Resolution of the All India Congress Working Committee and to enforce discipline in the Congress Organisation. Govind Sahai v. State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1968 SC 1513 : 1968 CrLJ 1661 : 1969 (1) SCR 176.

[10081] ● Punishment under law of contempt when called for.—A question whether there is contempt of Court or not is a serious one. The Court is both the accuser as well as the Judge of the accusation. It behoves the Court to act with as great circumspection as possible making all allowances for errors of judgment and difficulties arising from inveterate practices in Courts and tribunals. It is only when a clear case of contumacious conduct not explainable otherwise, arises that the contemner must be punished. It must be realised that our system of Courts often results in delay of one kind or another, in the matter of transmission of orders of the superior Courts. The remedy for it is reform and punishment departmentally. Punishment under the law of Contempt is called for when the lapse is deliberate and in disregard of one's duty and in defiance of authority. To take action in an unclear case is to make the law of contempt do duty for other measures and is not to be encouraged. Debabrata Bandopadhaya v. State of W.B., AIR 1969 SC 189 : 1969 CrLJ 401 : (1969) 1 SCWR 377 : 1969 Mad LJ (Cr) 404 : (1969) 1 SCJ 533.

[10082] ● Tendering of unqualified apology by Advocate.—Unqualified apology tendered by advocate on behalf of his client for contemptuous language used by him in a notice under Section, 80, CPC is accepted. S.G. Mahendar v. B.K. Lala, (1969) 3 SCC 709.

[10085] ● Parallel enquiry on matter pending not contempt.—If parallel enquiry on a matter pending before a Court is held, the enquiry does not necessarily amount to contempt. Jang Bahadur v. Baijnath, AIR 1969 SC 30 : (1968) 2 SCJ 935 : 1969 Lab IC 194 : (1968) 2 Andh LT 280 : 1968 BLJR 939 : 1968 MPWR 885 : (1969) 1 SCA 263 : 1969 Mad LJ (Cr) 75 : 17 Fac LR 300 : (1969) 1 Lab LJ 567 : 1969 Cr R 267 : 1968 SCD 913 : 1968 All WR (HC) 580 : 1968 All LJ 1008.

[10086] ● Delay in transmission of orders of superior Court to subordinate Court.—Orders of stay, bail, injunctions received from superior Courts must receive close and prompt attention and unnecessary delay in dispatching or dealing with them may well furnish grounds for an inference that it was due to a natural disinclination to deal with the matter born of indifference and sometimes even of contumaciousness. Debabrata Bandopadhaya v. State of W.B., AIR 1969 SC 189 : 1969 CrLJ 401 : (1969) 1 SCJ 533 : (1969) 1 SCWR 377 : 1969 Mad LJ (Cr) 404.

[10087] ● Authority holding enquiry in good faith not guilty of contempt.—An authority holding an inquiry in good faith in exercise of the powers vested in it by a statute in not guilty of contempt of Court, merely because a parallel inquiry is imminent or pending before a Court. Security & Finance v. Dattatrya, AIR 1970 SC 720 : (1969) 1 SCC 181 : 1970 CrLJ 756 : (1970) 1 SCJ 508 : 72 Bom LR 415 : 1970 Mad LW (Cr) 154 : (1969) 2 SCR 668 : (1970) 1 SCA 251 : (1969) 2 Um Nip 659 : 1970 SC Cr R 90 : (1969) 2 SCWR 162 : 1969 Mah LJ 522 : 1969 MPLJ 454.

[10088] ● Interference with administration of justice.—Any act done or writing published which is calculated to bring a Court or a Judge into contempt, or to lower his authority, or to interfere with the due course of justice or the lawful process of the Court is a contempt of Court. Contempt by speech or writing may be by scandalising the Court itself, or by abusing parties to actions, or by prejudicing mankind in favour or against a party before the cause is heard. It is incumbent upon Courts of justice to preserve their proceedings from being misrepresented, from prejudicing the minds of the public against persons concerned as parties and causes before the cause is finally heard has pernicious consequences. Speeches or writings misrepresenting the proceedings of the Court or prejudicing the public for or against a party or involving reflections on parties to a proceeding amount to contempt. To make a speech tending to influence the result of a pending trial, whether civil or criminal is a grave contempt. Comments on pending proceedings, if emanating from the parties or their lawyers, are generally a more serious contempt than those coming from independent sources. The question in all cases of comment on pending proceedings is not whether the publication does interfere, but whether it tends to interfere, with the due course of justice. The question is not so much of the intention of the contemner as whether it is calculated to interfere with the administration of justice. In re, P.C. Sen, AIR 1970 SC 1821 : 1970 CrLJ 1525 : (1970) 2 SCJ 67 : (1969) 2 SCR 649.

[10089] ● Allegation of class bias—Contempt.—Allegation of class bias is contempt. R.C. Cooper v. Union of India, AIR 1970 SC 1318 : (1970) 2 SCC 298. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) E.M.S. Namboodiripad v. T.N. Nambiar, AIR 1970 SC 2015 : (1970) 2 SCC 325 : (1970) SCC (Cri) 451 : 1970 CrLJ 1670 : (1971) 1 SCR 697.

[10090] ● Judiciary—Instrument of oppression.—E.M.S. Namboodiripad, the then Chief Minister of Kerala told at a press conference :

> "Marx and Engels considered the Judiciary as an instrument of oppression and even today when the State set-up has not undergone any change it continues to be so, Mr. Namboodiripad told a news conference this morning. He further said that Judges are guided and dominated by class hatred, class interests and class prejudices and where the evidence is balanced between a well dressed pot-bellied rich man and a poor ill-dressed and illiterate person the Judge instinctively favours the former, the Chief Minister alleged. The Chief Minister said that election of Judges would be a better arrangement, but unless the basic State set-up is changed, it could not solve the problem. Referring to the Constitution the Chief Minister said the oath he had taken was limited only to see that the constitutional provisions are practised. 'I have not taken any oath' the Chief Minister said "that every word and every clause in the Constitution is sacred". This utterance held to constituted contempt. E.M.S. Namboodiripad v. T.N. Nambiar, AIR 1970 SC 2015 : (1970) 2 SCC 325 : (1970) SCC (Cri) 451 : 1970 CrLJ 1670 : (1971) 1 SCR 697.

[10091] ● Acts or words spoken tending to obstruct administration of justice—Amount to contempt of Court.—The law of contempt stems from the right of the Courts to punish by imprisonment or fines persons guilty of words or acts which either obstruct or tend to obstruct the administration of justice. This right is exercised in India by all Courts when contempt is committed in facie curaie and by the superior Courts on their own behalf or on behalf of Courts subordinate to them even if committed outside the Courts. Formerly, it was regarded as inherent in the powers of a Court of Record and now by the Constitution of India, it is a part of the powers of the Supreme Court and the High Courts. There are many kinds of contempt's. The chief forms of contempt are insult to Judges, attacks upon them, comment on pending proceedings with a tendency to prejudice fair trial, obstruction to officers of Courts, witnesses or the parties, abusing the process of the Court breach of duty by officers connected with the Court and scandalising the Judges or the Courts. The last form occurs, generally speaking, when the conduct of a person tends to bring the authority and administration of the law into disrespect or disregard. In this conduct are included all acts which bring the Court into disrepute or disrespect or which offend its dignity, affront its majesty or challenge its authority. Such contempt may be committed in respect of a single Judge or a single Court but may, in certain circumstances, be committed in respect of the whole of the judiciary or judicial system. The question is whether in the circumstances of this case the offence was committed. E.M.S. Namboodiripad v. T.N. Nambiar, AIR 1970 SC 2015 : (1970) 2 SCC 325 : (1970) SCC (Cri) 451 : 1970 CrLJ 1670 : (1971) 1 SCR 697.

[10092] ● Interference with due administration of justice.—If the speech which was broadcast by the Chief Minister was calculated to interfere with the Court of justice, it was liable to commit a contempt of the Court even assuming that he had not intended thereby to interfere with the due course of justice. There is nothing in Saibal Kumar Gupta v. B. K. Sen, [AIR 1961 SC 633) : (1961) SCR 460], on which counsel for the appellant relied which supports the contention that intention of the contemner is the decisive test. P.C. Sen, In re, AIR 1970 SC 1821 : 1970 CrLJ 1525 : (1970) 2 SCJ 67 : (1969) 2 SCR 649.

[10093] ● Corporate body can be punished for contempt.—A corporation (Municipal Board in the case) is liable to be punished by imposition of fine and by sequestration for contempt for disobeying orders of competent Courts directed against them. A command to a Corporation is in fact a command to those who are officially responsible for the conduct of its affairs. If they, after being apprised of the order directed to the Corporation, prevent compliance or fail to take appropriate action, within their power, for the performance of the duty of obeying those orders, they and the corporate body are both guilty of disobedience and may be punished for contempt. Aligarh Municipal Board v. Ekka Tanga Mazdoor Union, AIR 1970 SC 1767 : (1970) 3 SCC 98 : (1970) SCC (Cri) 570 : 1970 CrLJ 1520 : (1970) UJ (SC) 729 : 1970 SCD 904.

[10094] ● Contempt for breach of prohibitive order of Court.—In order to justify action for contempt of Court for breach of prohibitive order it is not necessary that the Order should have been officially served on the party against whom it is granted, if it is proved that he had knowledge of the exact order aliunde and he knew that it was intended to be enforced. Official communication is not a condition precedent, provided there is no valid reason to doubt the authenticity of the order conveyed to him. Aligarh Municipal Board v. Ekka Tonga Mazdoor Union, AIR 1970 SC 1767 : (1970) 3 SCC 98 : (1970) SCC (Cri) 570 : 1970 CrLJ 1520 (SC) : 1970 UJ (SC) 729 : 1970 SCD 904.

[10095] ● Principle governing cases of contempt by scandalising Court.—The principle governing cases of contempt by scandalising Court are as follows : (1) It will not be right to say that committals for contempt by scandalising the Court have become obsolete, (2) the summary jurisdiction is to be exercised with caution only when its exercise is necessary for the proper administration of law and justice, (3) it is open to anyone to express fair, reasonable and legitimate criticism of any act or conduct of a Judge in his judicial capacity or even to make a proper and fair comment on any decision given by him because justice is not a cloistered virtue and she must be allowed to suffer the scrutiny and respectful, even though outspoken comments of ordinary men, (4) distinction must be made between a mere libel or defamation of a Judge and what amounts to a contempt of Court. The test in each case would be whether the impugned publication is a mere defamatory attack on the Judge or whether it is calculated to interfere with the due course of administration of justice—it is only in the latter case it is contempt, (5) alternatively the test is whether the wrong is done to the Judge personally or it is done to the public. Publication of a disparaging statement will be an injury to the public if it tends to create an apprehension in the minds of the public regarding the integrity, ability and fairness of the Judge or to deter actual or prospective litigants from placing complete reliance upon Court's administration of justice. Perspective Publication v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1971 SC 221 : 1971 CrLJ 268 : (1970) 2 SCJ 35 : (1969) 2 SCR 779 : 1970 Mad LJ (Cr) 425 : 73 Bom LR 57.

[10096] ● Scandalising Court.—Scandalising the Court cannot be justified. If a Judgment is criticised on containing errors and coupled with such criticism dishonest is alleged, the Court hearing contempt petition would first have to act as an appellate Court and decide whether there are errors or not. This is not and cannot be said to be the function of a Court trying to justify allegations amounting to contempt, it would tend to encourage disappointed litigants to avenge their defeat by abusing the Judge. C.K. Daphtary v. O.P. Gupta, AIR 1971 SC 1132 : (1971) SCC 626 : 1971 CrLJ 844 : 1971 Supp SCR 76.

[10097] ● Contempt of Court—Scandalising Court.—"(1) It will not be right to say that committals for contempt for scandalising the Court become obsolete.

(2) The summary jurisdiction by way of contempt must be exercised with great care and caution and only 'then its exercise is necessary for the proper administration of law and justice.

(3) It is open to anyone to express fair, reasonable and legitimate criticism of any act or conduct of a Judge in his judicial capacity or even to make a proper and fair comment on any decision given by him because "justice is not a cloistered virtue and she must be allowed to suffer the scrutiny and respectful, even though outspoken, comments of ordinary men"

(4) A distinction must be made between a mere libel or defamation of a Judge and what amounts to a contempt of the Court.

The test in each case would be whether the impugned publication is a mere defamatory attack on the Judge or whether it is calculated to interfere with the due course of justice or the proper administration of law by this Court. It is only in the latter case that it will be punishable as Contempt.

(5) Alternatively the test will be whether the wrong is done to the Judge personally or it is done to the public. To borrow from the language of MUKHERJEE, J. (as he then was) (Brahma Prakash Sharma's Case) (1953 SCR 1169) : (AIR 1954 SC 10) the publication of a disparaging statement will be an injury to the public if it tends to create an apprehension in the minds of the people regarding the integrity, ability or fairness of the Judge or to deter actual and prospective litigants from placing complete reliance upon the Court's administration of justice or if is likely to cause embarrassment in the mind of the Judge himself in the discharge of his judicial duties." Perspective Publication v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1971 SC 221 : 1971 CrLJ 268 : (1970) 2 SCJ 35.

[10098] ● Article imputing dishonesty.—Article imputing dishonesty and lack of integrity on the part of a Judge of the High Court in a case decided by him, it being an indirect imputation and mostly innuendo but imputation being such that it create, strong prejudicial impact on the mind of the reader about the lack of honesty, integrity and impartiality of Judge deciding the suit—it amounts to gross contempt of Court. Perspective Publication v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1971 SC 221 : 1971 CrLJ 268 : (1969) 2 SCR 799 : (1970) 2 SCJ 35.

[10099] ● Scandalising Court.—In a case the allegation was that the Magistrate was friendly relation with advocates and he enjoys their hospitality on the question whether such allegation constitute contempt of Court. The mere statement in an application for transfer that a Magistrate is friendly with a party who happens to be an advocate and enjoys his hospitality or has friendly relations with him will not constitute contempt unless there is an imputation of some improper motives as would amount to scandalising the Court itself and as would have a tendency to create distrust in the popular mind and impair the confidence of the people in the Courts. It is true that in the garb of a transfer application a person cannot be allowed to commit contempt of Court by making allegations of a serious and scurrilous nature scandalizing the Court and imputing improper motives to the Judge trying the case. But then the nature of the allegations has to be closely examined and so long as they do not satisfy the requirements of what may be regarded as contempt of Court no punishment can he inflicted. Govinda Ram v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1972 SC 989 : (1972) 1 SCC 740 : 1972 CrLJ 620.

[10100] ● Lowering authority of Court or interference with due course of justice not—Ingredient of contempt of Court.—Two persons K & P by names were accused in a criminal case and the criminal case was sought to be withdrawn by public prosecutor on the ground that it was inexpedient for State and public policy to prosecute them. After hearing the counsel for the complainant and others, the committing magistrate dismissed the said application on October 6, 1967. The application for withdrawal of the prosecution amounted to an abuse and improper interference in the normal, course of justice. As intention of contemnor to cause the effect of bringing a Court or Judge into contempt, or lowering his authority, or interfering with the due course of Court is not a necessary ingredient of contempt of Court and it is enough to show this act was calculated to obstruct or interfere with the due course of justice and administration of law. Shambhu Nath Jha v. Kedar Prasad Sinha, AIR 1972 SC 1515 : (1972) 1 SCC 573 1973 CrLJ 453 : (1972) 3 SCR 183.

[10101] ● Absence of precedent.—Absence of precedent should not preclude an act being held to be contempt of Court. The absence of precedent only puts the Court on guard that the area of contempt is not being unduly extended. Barada Kanta Mishra v. Bhimsen Dixit, AIR 1972 SC 2466 : (1973) 1 SCC 446 : (1975) SCC (Cri) 360 : 1973 CrLJ 19 : (1973) 2 SCR 495 : 1973 Mad LJ (Cr) 226.

[10102] ● Contempt—What amounts to.—Two revision petitions were filed against the order dated 6, October, 1967. One of the revision petitions was filed by the State of Bihar and the other was filed by one Abani Kumar Mandal. Both the revision petitions were admitted by the High Court on November 30, 1967. During the pendency of the above mentioned criminal revision petitions, the Governor of Bihar as per notification dated March 12, 1968 appointed a Commission of Inquiry consisting of Shri T.L. Venkatarama Aiyer, retired Judge of the Supreme Court, under Section 3 of the Commissions of Inquiry Act, 1952 (Act 60 of 1952) to inquire into a number of charges against 14 persons who had earlier held the offices of Chief Minister and ministers in the State of Bihar. One of the persons against whom inquiry was ordered was Shri Hasibur Rahman who had held the office of Minister during the period from March 16, 1967 to January 28, 1968. The allegations which were the subject matter of the inquiry were set forth in the schedule annexed to the notification. Allegation No. J-4 which was the subject of inquiry against Shri Hasibur Rahman was as under :

'K' and 'A' were facing prosecution along with nine others in a serious case of rioting with murder which was pending before the Munsif-Magistrate Jamui. They filed a revision petition before the Additional Sessions Judge, Monghyr against their prosecution, which was dismissed. Thereupon on 6th June, 1967 they presented an application direct to the then Minister for Law, 'H' who directed that the Law Secretary should examine the matter and report and in the meanwhile the District Magistrate was requested to take two month's adjournment of the case and also send the case diary with his report.

'H' ignoring the positive advice of Law Department and of the District Magistrate ordered to ask for withdrawal. When the matters before the Commission of Enquiry appointed under Section 3 of Commissions of Inquiry Act and the matters for the decision of the Court in a pending criminal revision are distinct and separate and are not identical the publication of the Notification appointing the Commission in press does not amount to contempt of Court particularly when the notification is published in whole and not in part. It may be that some of the matters which were connected with the criminal revision petition were the subject of inquiry by the commission of inquiry, but that would not attract liability for contempt of Court. Shambhu Nath Jha v. Kedar Prasad Sinha, AIR 1972 SC 1515 : (1972) 1 SCC 573 : 1973 CrLJ 453 : (1972) 3 SCR 183.

[10103] ● Contemptuous imputations made with reference to administrative function of High Court.—Contemptuous imputations made with reference to the administrative functions of the High Court amounts to contempt, although it may be made in the memo of appeal. Barada Kanta Mishra v. Registrar, Orissa High Court, AIR 1974 SC 710 : (1974) 1 SCC 374 : (1974) SCC (Cri) 128 : 1974 CrLJ 631 : 1973 SCD 981 : ILR (1973) Cut 1243.

[10104] ● Wrong or misleading statement deliberately and wilfully made.—If a wrong or misleading statement is deliberately and wilfully made by a party to a litigation with a view to obtain a favourable order, it would prejudice or interfere with the due course of judicial proceeding and thus amount to contempt of Court. But it must be established satisfactorily that any deliberate and wrong statement was made and there was a favourable order in consequence of the statement. Naraindas v. Govt. of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1974 SC 1252 : (1975) 3 SCC 31 : (1974) SCC (Cri) 727 : 1974 CrLJ 924.

[10105] ● No right to compel Court to initiate proceeding for contempt.—So far as criminal contempt is concerned it is a matter entirely between the Court and the alleged contemner. No one has a statutory or a common law right to say that he is entitled to an order for committal because the alleged contemner is guilty of contempt. All that he can do is to move the Court and draw its attention to the contempt alleged to have been committed and then it is for the Court, if it so thinks fit, to take action to vindicate its authority and commit the alleged contemner for contempt. It is for the Court in exercise of its discretion to decide whether or not to initiate a proceeding for contempt. Even if the Court is prima facie satisfied that contempt has been committed, the Court yet may choose to ignore it and decline to take action. There is no right in anyone to compel the Court to initiate a proceeding for contempt even where a prima facie case appears to have been made out. Barada Kanta Mishra v. Cati Krishna Mishra, C.J., Orissa, AIR 1974 SC 2255 : (1975) 3 SCC 535 : (1974) SCC (Cri) 128 : 1975 CrLJ 1 : 1974 CrLR (SC) 124 : (1974) 2 Serv LR 549.

[10106] ● Exhibition of film contrary to Supreme Court judgment.—Court order was passed declaring a resolution passed by a Town Municipal Committee allowing conversion of a lecture hall to cinema illegal, but even after the order cinema was exhibited in the hall, it is contempt. K. Ramadas Shenoy v. Chief Officer, Town Municipal Council, Udipi, AIR 1976 SC

994 : (1976) (1) SCC 24 : (1975) SCC (Cri) 746 : 1976 CrLJ 722 : 1975 UJ 705.

[10107] ● Test to decide contempt.—The test to decide contempt is whether the act complained of was calculated to construct or had an intrinsic tendency to interfere with the course of justice and due administration of law the standard of proof is the same as in any criminal proceeding. Abdul Karim v. M.K. Prakash, AIR 1976 SC 859 : (1976) 1 SCC 975 : (1976) SCC (Cri) 217 : 1976 CrLJ 641 : 1976 Cur LJ (Cr) 50 : 1976 Ker LT 184.

[10108] ● Criminal contempt not be confused with contumacious conduct.—Members of Bar Association met and resolved that the Chief Justice was acting in a most partisan manner under the influence of the Allahabad Bar. The text of the resolution was this—"The Action Committee is of the opinion that the Chief Justice's action in the discharge of administrative power under cl. 14 of the U.P. High Courts (Amalgamation) Order, 1948 is in a most partisan manner under the influence of Allahabad Bar quite unbecoming of the office which he holds." High Court did not take any penal measure and discharged its notice observing "It is a matter of regret that the contemners who are prominent members of the Avadh Bar should have themselves embarked on the path of vilifying the Chief Justice of this Court and that we do not want to be over-sensitive in the matter, keeping in mind the surrounding circumstances in which the contumacious act was committed by them and also keeping in view the fact that it was a single act of the Chief Justice for which the attack was made, we do not propose to punish contemners for the contumacious conduct for which we have adjudged them guilty, though we express our strong disapproval of that conduct and hope that the indiscretion will not be repeated." It is not a contumacious conduct but also contempt. Hargovind Dayal Srivastav v. G. N. Verma, AIR 1977 SC 1334 : (1977) 1 SCC 744 : (1977) SCC (Cri) 175 : 1977 CrLJ 1003 : (1977) 2 SCR 601.

[10109] ● Suit against Receiver without obtaining leave of Court.—Suit against Receiver appointee under Order. 40 CPC without obtaining leave of the Court appointing the said Receiver is contempt. Everest Coal v. State of Bihar, AIR 1977 SC 2304 : (1978) 1 SCC 12 : (1978) 1 SCR 571 : (1978) 1 SCJ 188.

[10110] ● Criticism of judiciary by press.—The first rule in this branch of contempt power is a wise economy of use by the Court of this branch of its jurisdiction. The Court will act with seriousness and severity where justice is jeopardised by a gross and/or unfounded attack on the Judges, where the attack is calculated to obstruct or destroy the judicial process. The Court is willing to ignore, by a majestic liberalism, trifling and venial offences—the dogs may bark, the caravan will pass. The Court will not be prompted to act as a result of an easy irritability. Much rather, it shall take a look at the conspectus of features and be guided by a constellation of constitutional and other considerations when it chooses to use, or desist from using, its power of contempt. The second principle must be to harmonise the constitutional values of free criticism, the fourth estate included, and the need for a fearless curial process and its presiding functionary, the Judge A happy balance has to be struck, the benefit of the doubt being given generously against the Judge, slurring over marginal deviations but severely proving the supremacy of the law over pugnacious, vicious, unrepentant and malignant contemners, be they the powerful press, gang-up of vested interests, veteran columnists or olympian establishmentarians. Not because the Judge, the human symbol of a high value, is personally armoured by a regal privilege but because be you—the contemner—ever so high, the law—the People's expression of Justice—is above you. Curial courage overpowers arrogant might even as judicial benignity forgives errant or exaggerated critics. Indeed, to criticise the Judge fairly, albeit fiercely, is no crime but a necessary right, twice blessed in a democracy. For, it blesseth him that gives and him that takes. Where freedom of expression fairly exercised, subserves public interest in reasonable measure, public justice cannot gag it or manacle it, constitutionally speaking, free people are the ultimate guarantors of fearless justice. Such is the comerstone of our Constitution; such is the touchstone of our Contempt power, oriented on the confluence of free speech and fair justice which is the scriptural essence of our Fundamental Law. Speaking of the social philosophy and philosophy of law in an integrated manner as applicable to contempt of Court, there is no conceptual polarity but a delicate balance, and judicial 'sapience' draws the line. As it happens, our Constitution-makers foresaw the need for balancing all these competing interests.

The third principle is to avoid confusion between personal protection of a libelled Judge and prevention of obstruction of public justice and the community's confidence in that great process. The former is not contempt, the latter is although overlapping spaces abound.

Because the law of contempt exists to protect public confidence in the administration of justice, the offence will not be committed by attacks upon the personal reputation of individual Judges as such. In re, S. Madagaonkar, AIR 1978 SC 727 : (1978) 3 SCC 339 : (1978) SCC (Cri) 402 : 1978 MLJ (Cr) 593.

[10111] ● Judiciary not immune from criticism.—The judiciary cannot be immune from criticism. But, when that criticism is based on obvious distortion or gross misstatement and made in a manner which seems designed to lower respect for the judiciary and destroy public confidence in it, it cannot be ignored. It is not correct to say that an action for contempt of Court, which is discretionary should be frequently or lightly taken. But, at the same time, it is not correct to suggest that the Court should abstain from using this weapon even when its use is needed to correct standards of behaviour in a grossly and repeatedly erring quarter. It may by better in many cases for the judiciary to adopt a magnanimously charitable attitude even when utterly uncharitable and unfair criticism of its operations is made out of bona fide concern for improvement. But, when there appears some scheme and a design to bring about results which must damage confidence in our judicial system and demoralise Judges of the highest Court by making malicious attacks, any one interested in maintaining high standards of fearless, impartial, and unbending justice will feel perturbed. Re. S. Mulgaokar, AIR 1978 SC 727 : (1978) 3 SCC 339 : (1978) SCC (Cri) 402 : (1978) 2 SCJ 114 : 1978 Mad LJ (Cr) 593.

[10112] ● Fearless and impartial Courts of justice bulwark of healthy democracy.—The judiciary cannot be immune from criticism, but, when that criticism is based on obvious distortion or gross mix-statement and made in a manner which seems designed to lower respect for the judiciary and destroy public confidence in it, it cannot be ignored. I am not one of those who think that an action for contempt of Court, which is discretionary, should be frequently or lightly taken. But at the same time, one should not abstain from using this weapon even when its use is needed to correct standards of behaviour in a grossly and repeatedly erring quarter. It may be better in many cases for the judiciary to adopt a magnanimously charitable attitude even when utterly uncharitable and unfair criticism of its operations is made out of bona fide concern for improvement. But, when there appears some scheme and a design to bring about results which must damage confidence in our judicial system and demoralize Judges of the highest Court by making malicious attack, any one interested in maintaining high standards of fearless, impartial and unbending justice will feel perturbed. One may be able to live in a world of Yogic detachment when unjustified abuses are hurled at one's self personally, but when the question is of injury to an institution, such as the highest Court of justice in the land, one cannot overlook its effects upon national honour and prestige in the comity of nations. If fearless and impartial Courts of justice are the bulwark of a healthy democracy, confidence in them cannot be permitted to be impaired by malicious attacks upon them. Re. S. Mulgaokar, AIR 1978 SC 727 : (1978) 3 SCC 339 : (1978) SCC (Cri) 402 : (1978) 2 SCJ 114 : 1978 Mad LJ (Cr) 593.

[10113] ● Contempt of Court—False representation to Court.—The reasons why a breach of clear undertaking given to the Court amounts to contempt of Court is that the contemner by making a false representation to the Court obtains a benefit for himself and if he fails to honour the undertaking, he plays a serious fraud on the Court itself and thereby obstructs the course of justice and brings into disrepute the judicial institution. The same cannot, however, be said of a consent order or a compromise decree where the fraud, if any, is practised by the person concerned not on the Court but on one of the parties. Thus, the offence committed by the person concerned is qua the party not qua the Court, and, therefore, the very foundation for proceeding for contempt of Court is completely absent in such cases. Where there is an express undertaking given in writing before the Court by the contemner or incorporated by the Court in its order, there can be no question of wilful disobedience of such an undertaking. Babu Ram v. Sudhir Bhasin, AIR 1978 SC 1528 : (1980) 3 SCC 47 : (1980) SCC (Cri) 527 : 1979 CrLJ 952 : 1979 (3) SCR 685.

[10114] ● Wilful breach of undertaking.—It is manifest that any person appearing before the Court can give an undertaking in two ways : (1) that he files an application or an affidavit clearly setting out the undertaking given by him to Court, or (2) by a clear and express oral undertaking given by the contemner and incorporated by the Court in its order. If any of these conditions are satisfied then a wilful breach of the undertaking would doubtless amount to an offence under the Act. Babu Ram v. Sudhir Bhasin, AIR 1979 SC 1528 : (1980) 3 SCC 47 : 1979 CrLJ 952.

[10115] ● Breach of undertaking.—An offence of cheating punishable under Section 420, IPC was compounded and the accused was acquitted on the basis of an undertaking namely that he would refund a sum. Breach of undertaking would entail an offence of contempt of Court. Pushpaben v. Naran Das, AIR 1979 SC 1536 : (1979)

2 SCC 394 : (1979) SCC (Cri) 511 : 1979 CrLJ 960 : 1979 CrLR (SC) 421 : 1979 (3) SCR 636.

[10116] ● Disobedience of Court order by Govt..—It is true that filing of appeal or revision is no excuse for not complying with Court's order but when Government was the respondent the Court should have given more time than mere 15 days to comply with its order as it is common knowledge that necessary formalities could not have been completed in such short time. Union of India v. Satish Chandra Sharma, AIR 1980 SC 600 : (1980) 2 SCC 144 : (1980) 2 SCR 298 : 1980 BLJR 95.

[10117] ● Resorting to judicial proceedings mala fide.—Resorting to judicial proceedings mala fide to thwart a previous judicial proceeding to circumvent an earlier order of a competent Court may amount to contempt. Advocate General, Bihar v. M.P. Khaira, AIR 1980 SC 946 : (1980) 3 SCC 311 : (1980) SCC (Cri) 688 : 1980 CrLJ 684 : 1980 CrLR (SC) 260 : 1980 Cr App R (SC) 135 : (1980) 2 SCJ 33 : 1980 BLJR 233 : 1980 UJ (SC) 474 : 1980 Mad LJ (Cr) 511 : (1980) 2 SCR 1172.

[10118] ● Proceedings for contempt—Duty of Court.—Every abuse of the process of the Court may not necessarily amount to contempt of Court abuse of the process of the Court calculated to hamper the due course of a Judicial proceeding or the orderly administration of justice we must say, is a contempt of Court. It may be that certain minor abuses of the process of the Court may be suitably dealt with as between the parties, by striking out pleadings under the provisions of Order 6, Rule 16 or in some other manner. But, on the other hand, it may be necessary to punish as a contempt, a course of conduct which abuses and makes a mockery of the judicial process and which thus extends its pernicious influence beyond the parties to the action and affects the interest of the public in the administration of justice. The public have an interest, an abiding and a real interest, and a vital stake in the effective and orderly administration of justice, because, unless justice is so administered, there is the peril of all rights and liberties perishing. The Court has the duty of protecting the interest of the public in the due administration of justice and, so, it is entrusted with the power to commit for contempt of Court, not in order to protect the dignity of the Court against insult or injury as the expression "Contempt of Court" may seem to suggests, but, to protect and to vindicate the right of the public that the administration of justice shall not be prevented, prejudiced, obstructed or interfered with. We are satisfied that the filing of the application dated December 14, 1972, was an abuse of the process of the Court, calculated to obstruct the due course of a judicial proceeding and the administration of justice and was, therefore, a criminal contempt of Court. Advocate General, State of Bihar v. M.P. Khair Industries, AIR 1980 (SC) 946 : (1980) 3 SCC 311 : (1980) SCC (Cri) 688 : 1980 CrLJ 684 : 1980 CrLR (SC) 260 : 1980 CAR 135.

[10119] ● Criminal contempt.—It seems to be criminal contempt. Section 1 of the Judicial Officers' Protection Act, 1850 affords protection to two broad categories of acts done or ordered be done by a judicial officer in his judicial capacity. In the first category fall those acts which are within the limits of his jurisdiction. The second category compasses those acts which may not be within the jurisdiction of the judicial officer, but are nevertheless, done or ordered to be done by him believing in good faith that he had jurisdiction to do them or order them to be done. If the judicial officer is found to have been acting in the discharge of his judicial duties, then, in order to exclude him from the protection of this statute, the complaint has to establish that, (1) the judicial officer complained against was acting without any jurisdiction whatsoever, and he was acting without good faith in believing himself to have jurisdiction. The tone, temper and contents of the notice issued by the appellants of the notice issued by the appellant, particularly of the passage which inputs malice, partiality and dishonesty to the subordinate judge in the judicial adjudication of the aforesaid suits against the appellants, constitute a deliberate attempt to scandalise the judge to terribly embarrass him and to lower the authority of his office and the Court. The act and conduct of the appellant in issuing the notice : therefore, fell squarely within sub-clause (i) and (ii) of the definition of "criminal contempt" given in Section 2 of the Contempt of Courts Act. Rachapuddi Subba Rao v. Advocate General, Andhra Pradesh, AIR 1981 SC 755 : (1981) 2 SCC 577 : (1981) SCC (Cri) 566 : 1981 CrLJ 315 : 1981 CrLR (SC) 87 : (1981) 2 SCJ 27 : 1981 Cr App R (SC) 46 : 1981 Cur LJ (Cr) 60 : 1981 Mad LJ (Cr) 340 : (1981) 2 SCR 320.

[10120] ● Gross contempt—Hurling shoe to Presiding officer of Court.—Hurling shoe to presiding officer of Court is a gross contempt (Supreme Court however in view of apology tendered reduced six months. R.I. to one month). R.K. Garg, Advocate v. State of Himachal Pradesh, AIR 1981 SC 1382 : (1981) 3 SCC 166 : (1981) SCC (Cri) 663 : 1981 CrLJ 1029 : 1981 CrLR (SC) 325 : 1981 Ker LJ 406 : 1981 Cr App

[10121] ● Snatching away child from custody of mother.—Father snatching away child from mother's custody resulting in a criminal case under Section 363, IPC launched against him—father proceeded against for contempt of Court for not complying with Court's order for returning the baby—held the father cannot make a grievance that the writ should not have been issued as he was proceeded against for the offence of snatching away the child and he was protected by Article 20(3), Constitution of India in not divulging his defence in the criminal case and that the entire question whether he had unlawfully removed the child from the custody of his mother could be exhaustively enquired into in the criminal case. Capt. D. Somal v. Sushma Somal, AIR 1981 SC 1026 : (1981) 2 SCC 277 : (1981) SCC (Cri) 413 : 1981 CrLR (SC) 576 : 1981 Cr LT 719 : 1981 BBCJ (SC) 62 : 1981 Cur LJ (Cr) 125 : 1981 Cr App R (SC) 284 : 1981 Chand Cr R (SC) 169 : 1981 Chand LR (Cr) 325 (SC).

[10123] ● Breach of undertaking—Contempt petition.—The defendant in a suit for recovery of possession who lost his case eventually filed a special leave for appeal to Apex Court under Article 136 Constitution. The leave petition was also dismissed but on agreement between the parties and on an undertaking being given by the defendant to the Court that he would give possession of disputed, premises in agreed time the Court pave time to the defendant to give vacant possession of the disputed property to the plaintiff. Just before the expiration of the period granted by the Supreme Court the defendant filed a petition urging the Supreme Court to extend time. The plaintiff thereupon alleged that the defendant has committed a contempt of the Supreme Court as he has committed willful breach of the solemn undertaking given in the Supreme Court. The defendant appeared in response to the notice issued and contended that he is willing to handover possession of that part of the property which was subject matter of litigation but further contended that he is in possession of some other portion of the plot which he could not be asked to vacate under the hanging sword of contempt proceedings. The defendant had also filed a suit for declaration of his title to the said other portion of plot. The Supreme Court thereupon ordered the Sub-Divisional Magistrate having jurisdiction over the locality to take possession of entire property i.e. property which was subject-matter of litigation and also the other property possessed by the defendant. At the hearing of the contempt petition the defendant agreed that the entire property be given in possession of the plaintiff until the decision of the suit for declaration of title filed by him and also gave an undertaking that he was willing and ready to carry out the undertaking given to Supreme Court. In these circumstances the Supreme Court refused to take action against the defendant-contemner. Shanti Sarup Gupta v. Anjuman Isnai Ashria, AIR 1982 SC 1461 : (1982) 3 SCC 128 : 1982 SCC (Cri) 632 : 1982 CrLJ 1941 : 1982 CrLR (SC) 521.

[10124] ● Writ petition against non—Granting of accreditation.—Where a writ petition is filed against the order of Government declining to grant accreditation under R 2(1) of S II of the Rules for Accreditation of Press Correspondents and News Agencies and the operative part of the order therein was based on the assurance given by the Government advocate that he 'would advise the Government' that accreditation be issued to the petitioner on condition that he should be at the headquarters of the Government, as required by the said R. 2(1), however, the Government advocate never intended or meant to convey that the Government would in all circumstances grant accreditation, there being no undertaking for the grant of accreditation, the failure of the Government to do so would not amount to contempt of Court. Union of India v. Mario Central, AIR 1982 SC 691 : (1982) 3 SCC 262 : 1982 CrLJ 187 : 1982 CrLR (SC) 51.

[10125] ● Departmental proceeding after acquittal.—Departmental proceeding after acquittal. Whether or not a departmental proceeding should continue after acquittal depends upon the nature of findings given by the Court. Normally when the accused is acquitted honourably and completely exonerated of the charges it is not expedient to continue a departmental enquiry on the basis of the same charges. But this does not take away the power of the authority to continue the departmental proceeding. Corpn. of City of Nagpore v. Ramchandra G. Modak, AIR 1984 SC 636 : (1981) 2 SCC 714 : 1984 Lab IC 179 : (1981) 3 SCR 22 : 1981 (43) FLR 78 : 1981 UJ 316 : 1981 (1) Scale 503.

[10126] ● Criminal contempt—Standard of proof.—Considering the high position which Chief Minister occupy in the public life of our country, their words and deeds have to be presumed to be intended. The defence that what was said or done was not intended is not open to persons occupying high public offices. The formal expression of regard for the Courts under the pressure of a contempt notice becomes a mere escape if speeches and writings betray defiance of judicial authority and constitute an exhortation to the public to disregard orders passed by Courts. But, the Chief Minister denies to have made the utterances, as stoutly as the editor asserts that the reports of the speeches published in his newspaper are true. There is word against word, and no preponderating circumstance which, objectively, compels the acceptance of the word of one in preference to the word of the other.

It is not for us to advise a chosen representative of the people as to how he should conduct his public affairs and what precautions he should take in order to protect himself from similar allegations in future. But, it causes us some surprise that there is no official record whatsoever of the speeches made by the Chief Minister at the two functions. He was invited at those functions in his capacity as the Chief Minister. And, admittedly, he spoke at those functions. With the little knowledge that we have of these matters, we suppose that when a Chief Minister makes a formal speech, an official record of the speech is generally available. If he speaks from a prepared text, that forms the record of what he spoke, But, whether he speaks from a text or speaks extempore, it is unlikely, in the times in which we live, that a speech made by a Chief Minister on a formal occasion will not be taken down of tape-recorded. Tapes have become a part of our life, public and private, sometimes to the point of annoyance.

It is so much safer for persons who have to make frequent public appearance to have their utterances duly put on paper, before or soon after the event. For those who have nothing to conceal or fear, that is a prudent course of action. For the rest, a constant friction with the law of contempt is inevitable. The former will lay their cards on the table and be cleared. The latter have to live in the hope that the rigorous standard of 'proof beyond a reasonable doubt' will act as their saviour. The latter course of conduct leaves much to be desired from the point of view of men of honour. Courts are not astute to resort to their power to punish any one for criminal contempt. But that reluctance should not be overtaxed.

The Chief Minister has stated in his affidavit that he spoke extempore. We are not on that. In the first place, extempore speeches confer on greater immunity on the speaker than the speeches made from prepared texts. Secondly, extempore speeches are not to be made without the application of a careful mind. That is not the definition of an extempore speech. Thirdly, more the extempore, greater the need to keep a written record of the spoken word. In the written record lies the safety of the public speaker, though not, perhaps, the benefit of posterity.

Those who attack the judiciary must remember that they are attacking an institution which is indispensable for the survival of the rule of law but which has no means of defending itself. In the very nature of things, it cannot engage itself in an open war, nor indulge in releasing contradictions. The sword of justice seisin the hands of the Goddess of Justice, not in the hands of mortal Judges. Therefore, Judges must receive the due protection of law from unfounded attacks on their character. M.R. Parashar v. Dr. Farooq Abdullah, 1984 AIR (SC) 615 : 1984 SCC (Cri) 254 : 1984 CrLJ 337 : 1984 CrLR (SC) 113 : 1984 CAR 259 : 1984 KerLT 264.

[10127] ● Breach of undertaking when.—When there is clear breach of undertaking, Court can direct in addition to imposing sentence, its closure of breach. Mohammed Idris v. Rustam Jehangir Babuji, AIR 1984 SC 1826 : (1984) 4 SCC 216 : 1985 CrLJ 353.

[10128] ● Habeas corpus petition—Failure of Govt. to produce person.—Government failing to produce a person on habeas corpus petition—it is grave contempt (a fine of one lakh imposed). Sebestian v. Union of India, AIR 1984 SC 1026 : (1984) 3 SCC 82 : 1984 CrLJ 830 : (1984) 2 Crimes 22.

[10129] ● Power to commit contempt to be exercised with greatest caution.—The power to commit for contempt of Court has to be exercised with the greatest caution. Neither too sensitive attitude nor on easy escape from performing the harsh duty would help in maintaining respect and decorum for the judicial process. The Court is to steer clear between two extremes but it must be remembered that the petitioner who has moved for taking action in contempt is not entitled as a matter of right to withdraw the petition when ever it suits his purpose once the Act, which prima facie shows that contempt of the Court has been committed is brought to the notice of the Court, it is the Court which has to decide whether the contempt has been committed or not or whether it is appropriate to take action or at a later date whether to drop the proceedings. The matter is primarily between the Court and the contemner. Shri Amrit Nahata v. Union of India, AIR 1986 SC 791 : (1985) 3 SCC 382 : 1985 SCC (Cri) 402 : 1986 CrLJ 806 : 1985 CrLR (SC) 362.

[10130] ● Contempt—Officer expressing independent opinion against Court orders' in notings not necessarily amount to contempt.—A Government functions by taking decisions on the strength of views and suggestions expressed by the various officers at different levels, ultimately getting finality at the hands of the Minister concerned. Till then, conflicting opinions, views and suggestions would emanate from various officers at the lower level. There should not be any fetter on the fearless and independent expression of opinions by officers on matters coming before them through the files. This is so even when they consider orders of Courts. Officers of the Government are often times confronted with orders of Court, impossible of immediate compliance for various reasons. It would be dangerous to found an action or contempt, for the views expressed in the file notes, on the discovery of unpleasant or unsavory notes, on a perusal of the notes filed by the Court after getting them summoned. This would impair the independent functioning of the civil service essential to democracy. This would cause impediments in the fearless expression of opinion by the officers of the Government. The notings on files differ from officer to officer. It may well be that the notes made by a particular officer, in some cases, technically speaking is in disobedience of an order of the Court or may be in violation of such order but a more experienced officer sitting above him can always correct him. To rely upon the notings in a file for the purpose of initiating contempt therefore, would be to put the functioning of the Government out of gear. Courts must guard against being over sensitive, when they come across, objectionable notings made by officers, sometimes out of inexperience, sometimes out of over zealousness and sometimes out of ignorance of the nuances of the question of law involved. State of Bihar v. Kripalu Shankar, AIR 1987 SC 1554 : (1987) 3 SCC 34 : 1987 SCC (Cri) 442 : 1987 CrLJ 1860 : 1987 CrLR (SC) 521 : JT 1987 (3) SC 49 : 1987 (3) SCR 1 : 1987 (2) SLJ 96 : 1987 (1) Scale 1070.

[10131] ● Administration of justice and Judges open to public criticism.—Administration of justice and Judges are open to public criticism. Criticism about Judges and judicial system is welcome. But any criticism which hampers the administration of justice or which erodes the faith in the objective approach of judges and brings administration of justice into ridicule is contempt. P.N. Duda v. Shiv Shankar, AIR 1988 SC 1208 : (1988) 3 SCC 167 : 1988 SCC (Cri) 589 : 1988 CrLJ 1745 : 1988 CrLR (SC) 641 : JT 1988 (2) SC 102 : (1988) 1 SCWR 230 : 1988 (3) SCR 547 : 1988 (1) Scale.

[10132] ● Status quo—Connotation.—The expression 'status quo' is undoubtedly a term of ambiguity and at times gives rise to doubt and difficulty. According to the ordinary legal connotation' the term 'status quo' implies the existing state of things at any given point of time. The qualifying words 'as in the High Court' clearly limit the scope and effect of the status quo order. In the present case, the High Court determined only one question, namely, that slurry was not coal or mineral. It refrained from entering into the question of right or title of the parties on the ground that it involved investigation into disputed questions of facts. Therefore, apart from the abstract question that slurry was not coal or mineral, the impugned Judgement does not adjudicate upon the rights of the parties. Viewed from that angle, it is obvious that status quo as in the High Court cannot mean anything else except status quo as existing when the matter was pending in the High Court before the Judgement was delivered. In the fact situation of the particular case, no case for contempt is made out as in consequence of status quo order parties were relegated to position that obtained when writ petition was pending and they were subject to order of High Court permitting petitioner to remove sludge/slurry. Bharat Coking Coal v. State of Bihar, AIR 1988 SC 127 : 1988 CrLJ 396 : 1987 Supp SCC 394 : JT 1987 (4) SC 403 : (1988) 1 SCJ 9 : 1988 (1) SCR 869 : 1987 (2) Scale 1015.

[10133] ● Public interest litigation couched in savoury language.—The petition has been couched in the savoury language and the petition seems to have made an intentional attempt to indulge in mud slugging against the advocates, this Court in particular as also other constitutional institutions. Many of the allegations in his writ petition are likely to lower the prestige of this Court as the apex judicial institution. At one place in the writ petition, he has alleged :—

> "Thus the working of the Judges are cocktail based on Western Common Laws and American techniques, as such unproductive and out-dated according to socio-economic conditions of the country."

At one another place, the petitioner has stated that :—

> "This Court has become a constitutional liability without having control over the illegal acts of the Government.......Thus the people for whom the Constitution is meant have now turned down their faces against it which is a disillusionment for fear that justice is a will of the wisp."

Yet at another place the petitioner has stated that his Court is sleeping over the issues like Kumbhkarna. The reading of the writ petition gives the impression that it is clearly intended to denigrate this Court in the esteem of the people of India. We are of the prima facie view that the petition has been drawn up with a designed purpose of bringing the Court into contempt and the petitioner is, therefore, prima facie guilty of contempt. Charan Lal Sahu v. Union of India, AIR 1988 SC 107 : (1988) 3 SCC 255 : 1989 SCC (Cri) 662 : 1988 CrLJ 181 : 1988 CrLR (SC) 757.

[10134] ● Public interest litigation—Designed to bring Court into contempt.—An experienced advocate filed a writ petition in Apex Court alleging it to be a Public Interest Litigation alleging inter alia, that working of the Judges are based on Western Common law and American techniques which are unproductive and outdated in India. It was also alleged that the Supreme Court has become a constitutional liability without having control over illegal acts of Govt. Pleadings were also meaningless. The reading of the writ petition gives the impression that it is clearly intended denigrate the Supreme Court in the esteem of the people of India. The prima facie view would be that the petition has been draw up with a designed purpose of bringing the Court into contempt and the petitioner is, therefore, prima facie guilty of contempt Supreme Court directed issue of show cause notice to petitioner. Charan Lal Sahu v. Union of India, AIR 1988 SC 107 : (1988) 3 SCC 255 : 1988 CrLJ 181 : JT 1989 (4) SC 582 : 1990 (1) Comp LJ 125 : 1989 Supp (2) SCR 597.

[10135] ● Criminal proceedings pending in trial.—Supreme Court directed that trial Court is to conduct trial from day to day and that prosecution must examine every witness, but no witness examined even after one year of such direction. Contempt proceeding cannot be initiated as no charge has been framed and stage of examination of witness has not come. Diwan Naubat Rai v. State (Delhi Administration), AIR 1989 SC 542 : (1989) 1 SCC 297 : 1989 SCC (Cri) 142 : 1989 CrLJ 802 : 1989 CrLR (SC) 1 : JT 1988 (4) SC 570.

[10136] ● Contempt proceedings—Initiation of.—We see no justification to initiate any contempt proceeding against the respondents for withholding a sum of Rs. 1,20,000/- out of the sum of Rs. 4 lakhs directed to be paid to the petitioner. Rs. 1,20,000/- has been withheld on the plea that under Chapter XVII of the Income-tax Act of 1961, the Union of India has the obligation to deduct income-tax at source. The intention of the payer in the facts of the case for withholding the amount cannot be held to be either mala fide or is there any scope to impute that the respondents intended to violate the direction of this Court. Lt. Col. K.D. Gupta v. Union of India, AIR 1989 (SC) 2071 : (1989) 3 SCC 566 : 1989 SCC (Cri) 653 : 1989 CrLJ 2204 : 1989 CrLR (SC) 644.

[10137] ● Undertaking to vacate given by—Tenant.—When Court accepts an undertaking given by one of the parties and passes orders based on such undertaking, the order amounts in substance to an injunction restraining that party from acting in breach thereof. The breach of an undertaking given to the Court by or on behalf of a party to a civil proceedings is, therefore, regarded as tantamount to a breach of injunction although the remedies were not always identical. For the purpose of enforcing an undertaking, that undertaking if broken, would involve the same consequences on the persons breaking that undertaking as would their disobedience to an order for an injunction. It is settled law that breach of an injunction or breach of an undertaking given to a Court by a person in a civil proceeding on the faith of which the Court sanctions a particular course of action is misconduct amounting to contempt. The remedy in such circumstances may be in the form of a direction to the contemnor to purge the contempt or a sentence imprisonment or fine or all of them. Noor Ali Babul v. K.M.M. Shetty, AIR 1990 SC 464 : 1990 (1) SCC 259 : 1990 CrLJ 316 (SC) : JT 1989 (4) SC 573 : Supp (2) SCR 561.

[10138] ● Undertaking based on implication or assumption known by contemner to be false.—The party giving undertaking to Court based on implication or assumptions which are false to its knowledge is guilty of misconduct amounting to contempt. In a case, a tenant (a company) filed a writ petition against eviction decree passed against it and on it petitioner being dismissed prayed for grant of time to vacate the premises and the time was granted subject to its filing a written undertaking that it would not part with the possession of the suit premises or create third party interests in the suit premises and the tenant Company although knowing fully well that the Chairman of the Company was already a lawful sub tenant of the suit premises, gave the requisite undertaking which clearly implied that the Company was in possession of the suit premises after the time granted to vacate the premises expired and thus mislead the Court, the tenant was guilty of misconduct amounting to contempt. Roshan Samboyee (Dr.) v. S.R. Cotton Mills, AIR 1990 SC 1881 : 1990 (2) SCC 636 : 1990 CrLJ 1770 (SC) : JT 1990 (3) SC 522 : 1990 (1) SCJ 611 : 1990 (2) (SCR) 381 : 1990 (1) Scale 718.

[10139] ● Criminal contempt.—The definition of criminal contempt is wide enough to include any act by way a person which would tend to interfere with the administration of justice or which would lower the authority of Court. The public have a vital stake in effective and orderly administration of justice and, so, it is entrusted with the power to commit for contempt of Court, not to protect the dignity of the Court against insult or injury, but to protect and vindicate the right of the public so that the administration of justice is not perverted, prejudiced, obstructed or interfered with. "It is a mode of vindicating the majesty of law, in its active manifestation against obstruction and outrage." (FRANK FURTER, J. in Offutt v. U.S., (1954) 348 US 11). The object and purpose of punishing contempt for interference with the administration of justice is not to safeguard or protect the dignity of the Judge or the Magistrate, but the purpose is to preserve the authority of the Courts to ensure and ordered life in society. In a case a Chief Judicial Magistrate was assaulted, arrested and handcuffed by police inspector and other police officer. The police officers tied him with a tick rope as if he was wild animal. In that condition he was taken to hospital for medical examination where he was made to sit in varanda exposing him to the public gaze, providing opportunity to the members of the public to see that the Police had the power and privilege to apprehend and deal with a Chief Judicial Magistrate according to its sweet will. This constituted gross criminal contempt. Delhi Judicial Service Association v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1991 SC 2176 : (1991) 4 SCC 406 : 1991 CrLJ 3086 : 1991 CrLR (SC) 753 : JT 1991 (3) SC 617 : 1991 (3) SCR 936 : 1992 (1) CCR 23 : 1991 (3) Crimes 232 : 1991 (2) Scale 501 : 1992 CAR 17.

[10140] ● Wilful and deliberate disobedience of order of Court.—For committing contempt there must be wilful and deliberate disobedience of order of Court. Jiwani Kumari Parekh v. Satyabrata Chakravorty, Managing Director and Chief Executive of the West Bangal Handicraft Development Corpn. Ltd., AIR 1991 SC 326 : (1990) 4 SCC 737 : 1991 CrLJ 471.

[10141] ● Unfounded and uncalled allegation against Judges.—Unfounded and uncalled for allegation against Judges and statements casting aspersions on Court would justify initiation of contempt proceeding as scandalising Court. S.P. Sawhney v. Life Insurance Corp., AIR 1991 (SC) 661 : (1991) 2 SCC 318 : JT 1991 (5) SC 122 : 1991 LIC 648 : 1991 (16) ATC 483 : 1991 (1) Scale 90 : 1991 (1) SLR 785 : 1992 (1) ATR 45 : 1991 (1) UJ 478.

[10142] ● Wilful disobedience of order of Court by Govt. officer.—We find ourselves unable to conclude beyond all doubt that the appellant had acted wilfully in this regard. We think that we should give the appellant the benefit of doubt in the circumstances of the case. Such lapses, even during a short interval, can sometimes cause irreparable damage and injury. In the circumstances of this case we have, though with a certain degree of reservation, extended to the appellant the benefit of doubt but we should like to put out a warning that where a case of wilful disobedience is made out, the Courts will not hesitate and will convict the delinquent officer and that no lenience in the Court's attitude should be expected from the Court as a matter of course merely on the ground that an order of conviction would damage the service career of the concerned officer. Tapan Kumar Mukherjee v. Heramani Mondal, AIR 1991 (SC) 281 : (1991) 1 SCC 397 : 1991 SCC (Cri) 198 : 1991 CrLJ 390 : 1991 CrLR (SC).

[10143] ● Contempt of Court union of India represented by Secretary guilty of.—Shri A.N. Verma is a senior administrative officer and should have taken appropriate care to strictly comply with the direction of this Court. This Court on an earlier occasion pointed out that Courts constitute an inbuilt mechanism within the framework of the Constitution for purposes of social audit and to ensure compliance of the rule of law. In enforcing compliance of orders of this Court and in punishing for lapses in the matter of compliance by invoking the power of contempt, this Court seeks only to ensure that the majesty of this institution may not be lowered and the functional utility of the constitutional edifice may not be rendered ineffective. This Court expects the Union of India to exhibit the most ideal conduct for others to evaluate. We have, therefore, come to the conclusion that the respondent Union of India in the Ministry of productive represented by Shri A.N. Verma, Secretary is guilty of contempt of this Court. M.L. Sachdev v. Union of India, AIR 1991 SC 311 : 1991 (1) SCC 605 : 1991 CrLJ 392.

[10144] ● State Govt. not wilfully or deliberately or contemptuously flouting or disobeying order of Court.—We are not satisfied that it is a case in which it can conclusively be said that the respondents have wilfully or deliberately or contemptuously flouted or disobeyed the orders of this Court dated 7-2-1991. It appears to us to be a case of misinterpretation of executive directions and order of this Court dated 7-2-1991 and is, therefore, not a fit case in which contempt proceedings need to proceed any further. We, accordingly, drop the contempt proceedings and discharge the rule issued against the respondents. Ashok Kumar Singh v. State of Bihar, AIR 1992 (SC) 407 : (1992) 1 SCC 152 : 1992 SCC (Cri) 84 : 1992 CrLJ 284 : 1992 CrLR (SC) 174.

[10145] ● Interference with administration of justice.—The contemner is guilty of contempt. He deliberately used insulting language to overawe the Court with a view to securing a favourable order. Of late this type of behaviour by litigants appearing in person is on the increase.

It is a painful duty which we are called upon to perform, more so because the contemner had no valid or good reason for the manner in which he behaved in this Court. Even the order which we were passing was an innocuous one. Such behaviour and utterances cannot be tolerated as it vitiates the Court's prestige and dignity and affects the working of the Court as it vitiates the atmosphere in which the Court normally functions. It has a direct impact on the Court's independence, dignity and decorum. To protect the administration of public justice, we are constrained to take action as his conduct and utterances cannot be ignored or pardoned. As stated earlier, he does not regret his action, on the contrary he has filed a written reply which is not only defiant but adds insult to injury and dares the Court to send him to jail. However, notwithstanding his conduct and behaviour we do not desire to be harsh with him but at the same time, as stated earlier, we cannot overlook his unbecoming conduct and the use of insulting language. We, therefore, hold him guilty for per se contempt and direct him to suffer simple imprisonment for one month. Mohd. Zahir Khan v. Vijay Singh, AIR 1992 (SC) 642 : 1992 Supp (2) SCC 72 : 1992 SCC (Cri) 526 : 1992 CrLJ 610.

[10146] ● Criminal contempt sentence.—It appears from the order of the High Court that the appellant had adopted a defiant attitude and tried to justify the aspersions made by him even without thinking it necessary to apologise. Before this Court also, the appellant has neither expressed any contrition nor has he any repentance for the vicious allegations made against the learned Judges of the High Court. But on the other hand he was exhibited a dogged determination to pursue the matter, come what may. A reading of his memorandum of grounds and the written and signed arguments show that he has ventured into another bout of allegations against the High Court Judges and persisted in his campaign of vilification. His present conduct has aggravated rather than mitigating his offence. Therefore, having regard to the sentencing policy that punishment should be commensurate with the gravity of the offence, we hold that the sentence of 2 months imprisonment in no way calls for interference and accordingly the sentence is confirmed. Pritam Lal v. High Court of Madhya Pradesh, Jabalpur through Registrar, AIR 1992 (SC) 904 : 1993 Supp (1) SCC 529 : 1992 CrLJ 1269 : 1992 CrLR (SC) 244 : 1992 (1) Crimes 1012.

[10147] ● Newspaper reports—Hearsay secondary evidence.—In the present case, no evidence has been let in proof of the statement of facts contained in the newspaper report. The absence of any denial by Ch. Bhajan Lal will not absolve the applicant from discharging his obligation of proving the statement of facts as appeared in the Press report. In fact, Ch. Bhajan Lal in his counter-affidavit has taken a stand that the statements attributed to him based on the newspaper report are mere hearsay and cannot in law be relied upon for the purpose of initiating such proceedings. Therefore, in the absence of required legal proof, the Court will not be justified in issuing a suo motu notice for contempt of Court. As Mr. Kapil Sital has pointed out. When this alleged statement was made, the entire proceedings inclusive of investigation culminating from the registration of the FIR had been quashed by the High Court and no stay had been granted by the Supreme Court and the petitioner was not a party to the proceeding. A perusal of the news item does not spell out any reference to the case of corruption or its proceedings pending before the this Court. In the alleged contemptuous statement (Annexure A) only the view of the reporter is mentioned as if Ch. Bhajan Lal had perhaps been provoked about the proceedings of the case before the Supreme Court. We do not see any reason much less compelling reasons to issue "suo motu" notice to Ch. Bhajan Lal for contempt of Court for reason mentioned." State of Haryana v. Ch. Bhajan Lal, AIR 1993 SC 1348 (1354-1355) : (1993) 3 SCC 151 : 1993 CrLJ 1042.

[10148] ● Remarks intended to bring down image of judiciary in estimation of public—Contemner guilty of gross contempt.—Judgments of the Court are open to criticism. Judges and Courts are not unduly sensitive or touchy to fair and reasonable criticism of their judgments. Fair comments, even if, outspoken, but made without any malice or attempting to impair the administration of justice and made in good faith in proper language don't attract any punishment for contempt of Court. However, when from the criticism a deliberate, motivated and calculated attempt is discernible to bring down the image of the judiciary in the estimation of the public or to impair the administration of justice or tend to bring the administration of justice into disrepute the Courts must bestir themselves to uphold their dignity and the majesty of law. No litigant can be permitted to overstep the limits of fair, bona fide and reasonable criticism of a judgment and bring the Courts generally in disrepute or attribute motives to the judges rendering the judgment. Perversity, calculated to undermine the judicial system and the prestige of the Court, cannot be permitted for otherwise the very foundation of the judicial system is bound to be undermined and weakened and that would be bad not only for the preservation of rule of law but also for the independence of judiciary. Liberty of free expression is not to be confused with a licence to make unfounded, unwarranted and irresponsible aspersions against the judges or the Courts in relation to judicial matters. No system of justice can tolerate such an unbridled licence. Of Course "Justice is not a cloistered virtue : she must be allowed to suffer the scrutiny and respectful even though outspoken comments of ordinary men", but the members of the public have to abstain from imputing improper motives to those taking part in the administration of justice and exercise their right of free criticism without malice or in any way attempting to impair administration of justice and refrain from making any comment which tends to scandalise the Court in relation to judicial matters. If a person committing such gross contempt of Court were to get the impression that he will get off lightly it would be a most unfortunate state of affairs. Sympathy in such a case would be totally misplaced mercy having no meaning. His action calls for deterrent punishment to that it also serves as an example to others and there is no repetition of such contempt by any other person. Roshan Lal Ahuja In re, 1994 SCC (Cri) 75 : 1993 Supp (4) SCC 446 : 1992 (3) Crimes 1145.

[10149] ● Disobedience of order.—Once a decree has been passed it is the duty of the Court to execute the decree whatever may be consequence thereof. But while examining the grievance of the person who has invoked the jurisdiction of the Court to initiate the proceeding for contempt for disobedience of its order, before any such contemner is held guilty and punished, the Court has to record a finding that such disobedience was wilful and intentional. If from the circumstances of a particular case, brought to the notice of the Court, the Court is satisfied that although there has been disobedience but such disobedience is the result of some compelling circumstances under which it was not possible for the contemner to comply with the order, the Court may not punish the alleged contemner. Niaz Mohammad v. State of Haryana, AIR 1995 SC 308 : 1994 (6) SCC 332 : 1995 CrLJ 3280 : JT 1994 (6) SC 260 : 1994 (4) Scale 292 : 1995 (5) SLR 600 : 1995 (1) UJ 124.

[10150] ● Flouting of order of Court by contemner.—In a case writ petition was filed for directing the respondent to provide telecast and broadcast of a few cricket matches. High Court passed an interim order which was flouted by the respondent, the contemner working as Deputy Secretary to Ministry of Information and Broadcasting. In the affidavit sworn by the Deputy Secretary there was reckless accusation against the Court and further it attributed motive to Court. It was held not only the author of the affidavit but also the advocate who filed it in Court are guilty of contempt. The unconditional apology of advocate accepted. But the apology tendered by the other contemner was not accepted and he was sentenced to pay fine by the Apex Court. Sanjiv Datta, in re., (1995) 3 SCC 619 : 1995 CrLJ 2910 (SC) : JT 1995 (3) SC 538 : 1995 (2) Scale 704 : 1995 (2) UJ 786 : 1995 (2) SCJ 707 : (1995) 2 Crimes 312 (SC).

[10151] ● Order not communicated by lawyer to contemnor.—Order restraining construction was served on contemnor's lawyer not upon the contemnor. The contemnor was not communicated the order by his lawyer. Contempt proceeding fails. Suresh v. Imran Khan, 1995 Supp (3) SCC 306 : 1995 CrLJ 3652 (SC).

[10152] ● Wilful circumvention of Court's order.—It is not merely positive acts of violation but also surreptitious and indirect aids to circumvention and violation of the orders that are equally impermissible. If reasonable steps are not taken to prevent the violation of the orders of the Court, Government cannot be heard to say that violation of the orders were at the instance of others. The presumption is that the Government intended not to take such preventive steps. In the facts and circumstances of the case, we are unable to persuade ourselves to the view that the Government was helpless and the situation that had developed was in spite of all reasonable steps taken by the Government. Indeed there is no indication that the Government bestirred itself to take any steps, reasonable or otherwise, to prevent large scale building material getting into the site. The Chief Minister having given a solemn assurance to the National Integration Council and permitted the terms of that assurance to be incorporated as his own undertaking to this Court and allowed an order to be passed in those terms cannot absolve himself of the responsibility unless he placed before the Court sufficient material which would justify that he had taken all reasonable steps and precautions to prevent the occurrence. . . . .

There is no immunity for any authority of Government, if a personal element is shown in the act of disobedience of the order of the Court, from the consequence of an order of the Court. Even in England where the maxim "Crown can do no wrong" has had its influence, a distinction is made between the Crown as such and the Executive.

The State Government is, therefore, liable in contempt. A Minister or Officer of Government is also either in his official capacity or if there is a personal element contributing to contempt, in his personal capacity, liable in contempt. We find that the undertaking given by Sri Kalyan Singh was both on his personal capacity and on behalf of his Government. There has been a flagrant breach of that undertaking. There has been wilful disobedience of the order. It is unhappy that a leader of a political party and Chief Minister has to be convicted of an offence of contempt of Court. But it has to be done to uphold the majesty of law. We convict him of the offence of contempt of Court. Since the contempt raises larger issues which affect the very foundation of the secular fabric of out nation, we also sentence him to a token imprisonment of one day. We also sentence him to pay a fine of Rs. 2,000. The fine shall be paid within a period of two months. Mohd. Aslam alias Bhure v. Union of India, AIR 1995 SC 548 (554, 557) : (1994) 6 SCC 422.

[10153] ● Contempt punishment.—The Apex Court ordered on April 5, 1991 that respondents should comply with the directions within four months from the date of the receipt of the Judgement. The contempt application was filed on 9-1-1992. No time for extension was sought for. Even after the contempt proceedings, while notice was issued, though time was repeatedly taken the respondents have done the exercise at a snail's speed. These facts clearly impress us that the respondents have deliberately delayed in finalisation of seniority list to benefit the existing promotees till they retired from the service. This impression gets fortification from a cursory glance at the mandatory time frame fixed in the Judgement, orders passed from time to time and final list prepared by the respondents. Even then the fitment itself has not been done as per the specific and unambiguous findings recorded and directions contained herein. There was no sincerity on the part of the respondents in implementation of the Rules as directed by this Court. This conduct is wilful and the impugned action was designedly done to give a twist to the orders so as to favour the promotees for whom the respondents already fought for but lost. Therefore, the respondents are directed to rectify this illegality as pointed out earlier and place the rectified order within one week. The concerned officer should be present on that day to receive appropriate orders on contempt. A.N. Sahgal v. Raja Ram Shedran, 1995 CrLJ 2919 : JT 1995 (5) SC 664 : (1995) 2 SLR 431.

[10154] ● Contempt of High Court.—When Article 129 Constitution vests Supreme Court powers of the Court of record accordingly to punish for contempt of itself, it vests such powers in the Supreme Court in its capacity as the highest Court of record and also as a Court charged with the appellate and superintending powers over the lower Courts and tribunals as detailed in the Constitution. To discharge its obligations as the custodian of the administration of justice in the country and as the highest Court imbued with supervisory and appellate jurisdiction over all the lower Courts and tribunals, it is inherently deemed to have been entrusted with power to see that the stream of justice in the country remains pure, that its course is not hindered or obstructed in any manner. That justice is delivered without fear or favour and for that purpose all the Courts and tribunals are protected while discharging their legitimate duties. To discharge this obligation, the Supreme Court has to take cognisance of the deviation from the path of justice in the tribunals of the land, and also of attempts to cause such deviations and obstruct the course of justice. To hold otherwise would mean that although the Supreme Court is charged with the duties and responsibilities enumerated in the Constitution, it is not equipped with the power to discharge them. Therefore, it cannot be said that Supreme Court cannot take cognisance of the contempt committed of the High Court. Re. Vinay Chandra Mishra, AIR 1995 SC 2348 : (1995) 2 SCC 584 : 1995 CrLJ 3994 : (1995) 2 Crimes 38.

[10155] ● Conduct having tendency to interfere with administration of justice amounts to commission of criminal contempt.—Any conduct which has the tendency to interfere with the administration of justice or the due course of judicial proceedings amounts to the commission of criminal contempt. The swearing of false affidavit in judicial proceedings not only has the tendency of causing obstruction in the due course of judicial proceedings but has also the tendency to impede, obstruct and interfere with the administration of justice. Filing of false affidavits or making false statement on oath in Courts aims at striking a blow at the rule of law and no Court can ignore such conduct which has the tendency to shake public confidence in the judicial institutions because the very structure of an ordered life is put at stake. Dhananjay Sharma v. State of Haryana, AIR 1995 SC 1795 : (1995) 3 SCC 757 : 1995 SCC (Cri) 608 : (1995) 2 Crimes 592.

[10156] ● Filing of forged and fabricated document in Court.—The respondent filed a forged and fabricated document in the Court to resist his wife in having a matrimonial proceeding transferred on the ground of her poverty. It interferes with the course of justice. Not only fine but corporeal punishment is needed to be imposed on the contemnor. Chandra Shashi v. Anil Kumar Verma, (1995) 1 SCC 421 : 1995 SCC (Cri) 239 : JT 1994 (7) SC 459 : 1995 (1) UJ 242 : 1995 (78) ELT 7 : 1995 (1) SCJ 84 : 1994 (4) Scale.

[10157] ● Criminal contempt—Refusing of bail—Magistrate acted with mala fide intention.—One Gurdial Singh was arrested on the basis of an F.I.R. dated 24th April, 1983 by the police of Anandpur Sahib, District Ropar, for offences under Sections 307/353/392/394 etc. of the Indian Penal Code. He was then produced before Judicial Sub Divisional Magistrate, Anandpur Sahib, for remand and he was remanded to judicial custody. A bail application was filed and the learned Magistrate refused bail though it was not a case under Section 307, IPC Aggrieved by this order, Gurdial Singh served notice on the Magistrate which was drafted by the appellant. In the said notice, certain remarks have been made against the learned Magistrate. Since they were found to be somewhat scandalous, proceedings under contempt of Courts Act were initiated and the matter was placed before the High Court. A division bench after considering the remarks made against the Judge reached the conclusion that they were scandalous and that they tended to pervert the course of justice and likely to interfere with the proper administration of justice. These remarks against the Magistrate who refused to grant bail are definitely scandalous and are definitely with reference to the discharge of his judicial function. We are unable to agree that the objectionable remarks made in the notice do not in any way interfered with the administration of justice by that Court. Shamsher Singh Bedi v. State of Punjab, AIR 1995 SC 1974 : 1996 (7) SCC 99 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 181 : 1995 CrLJ 3627.

[10158] ● Allegation by contemner that order passed in undue haste and against national interest.—Contemnor, a public servant filed an affidavit alleging that an order passed by the Apex Court was passed in undue haste and was against national interest and was leading to undermine the sovereignty of nation. The contemnor before filing such affidavit did not even take any advice of advocate. The contemnor is guilty of contempt of Court. The Apex Court decided to accept apology and was sentenced to pay sum of Rs. 2000/-. Sanjiv Dutta in re, 1995 (3) SCC 619 : 1995 CrLJ 2910 (SC) : JT 1995 (3) SC 538 : 1995 (2) Scale 704 : 1995 (2) UJ 786.

[10159] ● Suo-motu proceedings for criminal contempt.—A Judge wrote a letter to Enquiry committee constituted under Judges Enquiry Act in proceeding for his removal by impeachment in Parliament. In this letter were made certain sweeping allegations against the Judges and judiciary. But by a subsequent letter the Judge explained the context of his letter. As a result the apprehension about the generality of the sweep mitigated. Suo motu contempt proceeding was dropped. Sub Committee of Judicial Accountability v. Justice V. Ramaswamy, (1995) 1 SCC 5 : 1995 (1) SCJ 227 : 1994 (4) Scale 634.

[10160] ● Petition for suo motu initiation of contempt proceedings.—The petitioner sought for a suo motu contempt proceeding against the members of the sub-committee for judicial accountability as they made certain statements and utterances against a sitting Judge of the Supreme Court proceeding for whose removal by impeachment proceeding was under contemplation. Those statements were alleged to be impairing the public image about judiciary. The petition was rejected and suo motu proceeding not started. Rajiv V. Garg v. Shanti Bhushan, AIR 1995 SC 573 :

[10161] ● Misbehaviour and bad conduct of Judge—Self-regulation against in-house procedure laid-down.—Articles 124 (4) and 121 would put the nail squarely on the projections prosecutions or attempts to by any other forum or group of individuals or associations statutory otherwise, either to investigate or enquire into or discuss the conduct of a Judge or the performance of his duties and on/off Court behaviours except as per the procedure provided under Articles 124(4) and (5) of the constitution, and Act and the Rules. Thereby equally no other agency or authority like the CBI, Ministry of Finance, the Reserve Bank of India, as sought for by the petitioner would investigate into the conduct or acts or action of a Judge. No mandamus or direction would be issued to the speaker of Lok Sabha or Chairman of Rajya Sabha to initate action for impeachment when its allegations are against a judge of High Court, the Bar Association could take up the matter with the Chief Justice of the High Court and want his response for the action taken thereunder for a reasonable period. In case the allegations are against Chief Justice of a High Court, the Bar should bring them directly to the notice of the chief Justice of India on receipt of such complaint the Chief Justice of India would in the same way act as stated above give complaint against a judge of the High Court, and the Bar would await for a reasonable period the response of the Chief Justice of India.

It would thus be seen that yawning gap between proved misbehavior and bad conduct inconsistent with the high office on the part of a non co-operating Judge/ Chief Justice of a High Court could be disciplined by self regulation through in house procedure. This in-house procedure would fill in the constitutional gap and would yield salutary effect. C. Ravichandran Iyer v. Justice A.M. Bhattacharjee, (1995) 5 SCC 457 : 1995 SCC (Cri) 953 : JT 1995 (6) SC 339 : 1995 (7) SLR 161 : 1995 (2) LLN 615 : 1995 (5) Scale 142 (2).

[10162] ● PIL—Maintainability—Vague allegations.—A person styling himself to be a sevadar in a Gurudwara filed a public interest writ petition alleging that an oil mill owners were engaged in nefarious activities including smuggling and selling of opium, heroin, brown sugar, poppy husk and the like. The High Court observe that "howsoever absurd the prayer may be and whatever may be the intention of the petitioner in filling the alleged public interest litigation, one thing is clear that he is obsessed with great and lofty ideals and therefore for whatever worth it is, in order to satisfy his vanity, we direct to whomsoever it may concern, the smuggling and underground activities in such dangerous articles should be stopped and sooner the better for the country". The High Court also noted that the officers who were alleged to have been carrying on nefarious activities were more imaginary than real but it directed that the officers who were carrying on such activities should be sacked "and the entire administrative machinery of the country should be overhauled by recruiting only conscientious and devoted people like the petitioner. On the basis of the order of the Court the petitioner made complaints before different authorities. A miscellaneous petition was filed by him before the High Court alleging that no action was taken on the complaint.

The High Court having dismissed the petition, the complaint approached the Supreme Court. Dismissing the special leave petition, the Apex Court held : if the High Court intends to pass an order on an application presented before it by treating it as a public interest litigation, the High Court must precisely indicate the allegations or the statements contained in such petition relating to public interest litigation and should indicate how public interest was involved and only after ascertaining the correctness of the allegation, should give specific direction as may deem just and proper in the facts of the case. In this case the application was disposed of by the High Court in a lightervein and its order is couched in veiled sarcasm. Such course of action, to say the least, is not desirable and the High Court should not have issued mandate in general and sweeping terms which were not intended to be implemented and were not capable of being implemented because of utter vagueness of the mandate in general and sweeping terms which were not intended to be implemented and were not capable of being implemented because of utter vagueness of the mandate and of its inherent absurdity. In the special leave petition there was an allegation against a Judge. As to this Supreme Court observed : The petitioner has also made a wide and sweeping allegation against a Judge of the High Court without giving any instance how and in what manner the said Judge has influenced the other judicial officers of the State. Such sweeping allegations against a Judge and other judicial officers need to be deprecated in no uncertain terms. But it appears that the petitioner is a confused person obsessed with various lofty ideals and perhaps has failed to appreciate the consequence of making wild allegation against judicial officers. Such statements, to say the least, reveal utter confusion and obsessions of the petitioner. It is, therefore, not necessary to take any serious view of the wild allegations made against some of the members of the Judiciary. Giani Devender Singh v. Union of India, AIR 1995 SC 1847 : (1995) 1 SCC 391 : JT 1995 (1) SC 263 : 1995 (1) UJ 425 : 1995 (1) Crimes 298 : 1995 (1) Scale 25.

[10163] ● Advocate not having wider protection than layman when he commits contempt of Court.—An Advocate has no wider protection than a layman when he commits an act which amounts to contempt of Court. It is most unbefitting for an Advocate to make imputations against the Judge only because he does not get the expected result, which according to him is the fair and reasonable result available to him. Judges cannot be intimidated to seek favourable orders. Only because a lawyer appears as a party in person, he does not get a license thereby to commit contempt of the Court by intimidating the Judges or scandalising the Courts. He cannot use language, either in the pleadings or during arguments, which is either intemperate or unparliamentray.

The appellant has, undoubtedly committed contempt of the Court by the use of the objectionable and intemperate language. No system of justice can tolerate such unbridled license on the part of a person, be he a lawyer, to permit himself the liberty of scandalising a Court by casting unwarranted, uncalled for and unjustified aspersions on the integrity, ability, impartiality or fairness of a Judge in the discharge of his judicial functions as it amounts to an interference with the due course of administration of justice. . . . . . . In view of the unqualified apology tendered by the appellant and reiterated in absolute terms by him and his learned Counsel at the Bar and being satisfied that the appellant is genuinely repentant, we accept his unqualified apology but issue a strong admonition and warning to him to be more careful in future and let the matters rest there. Jaswant Singh v. Virender Singh, AIR 1995 SC 520 : 1995 Supp (1) SCC 384.

[10164] ● Advocate resenting questions asked by Judge.—For an advocate to resent the question by any member of the bench, be he a junior or senior member of the Bench, while hearing a case to be disrespectful to him, to question his authority to ask the questions, to shout at him, to threaten him with transfer and impeachment, to use insulting language and abuse him, to dictate the order that he should pass, to create scenes in the Court, to address him by losing temper, are all acts calculated to interfere with and obstruct the course of justice. Such acts tend to overawe the Courts and to prevent it from performing its duty to administer justice. Such conduct brings the authority of the Court and the administration of justice into disrespect and disrepute and undermines and erodes the very foundation of the judiciary by shaking the confidence of the people in the ability of the Court to deliver free and fair justice. If the judiciary is to perform its duties and functions effectively and true to the spirit with which they are sacredly entrusted to it, the dignity and authority of the course have to be respected and protected at all costs. Otherwise the very cornerstone of our constitutional scheme will give way and with it will disappear the rule of law and the civilized life in the society. It is for this purpose that the Courts are entrusted with the extraordinary power punishing those who indulge in acts whether inside or outside the Courts, which tend to undermine their authority and bring them in disrepute and disrespect by scandalising them and obstructing them from discharging their duties without fear or favour. When the Court exercises this power, it does not vindicate the dignity and honour of the individual Judge who is personally attacked or scandalised to uphold the majesty of the law and of the administration of justice. The foundation of the judiciary is the trust and the confidence of the people in its ability to delivery fearless and impartial justice. When the foundation itself is shaken by acts which tend to create disaffection and disrespect for the authority of the Court by creating distrust in its working, the edifice of the judicial system gets eroded.

The contemnor advocate is suspended from practice for three years with the consequence that all elected and nominated offices/posts held by him in his capacity as an advocate stand vacated by him forthwith Re. Vinay Chandra Mishra, AIR 1995 SC 2348 : (1995) 2 SCC 584 : 1995 CrLJ 3994 : (1995) 2 Crimes 381.

[10165] ● Contempt—Punishment.—This Court on May, 13th, 1994 passed an order which read as follows : "So far as the NRI quota is concerned, we fixed the same as 15 per cent last year. We fixed the NRI quota in respect of minorities institutions as 5 per cent. Although the NRI quota should not, normally, be more than 5 per cent, but keeping in view the reduction in the fee structure, we fix the same as 10 per cent (of the total seats) for this year. We further make it clear that in case any seat in the NR1 quota remains unfilled, the same can be filled by the management at the discretion." This brought a contempt proceeding suo moto when it was brought to the notice of the Court the government of Maharashtra has framed rules regarding admission to medical, dental and engineering courses reserving fifteen per cent seats for NRIs/ Foreign students contrary to the orders of this Court dated April 5, 1994 and May 13, 1994. The order was clear and there was no scope of its being misunderstood. The officers acted deliberately to subvert orders of the Court at the instance of certain association. It is necessary to erase an impression which has been gaining ground that 'montra' of unconditional apology is complete answer to violations and infractions of orders of Supreme Court. The officers concerned are guilty of contempt of Court. Direction is given that order of Court should form part of annual confidential reports of each of officers. T.M.A. Pai Foundation, Petitioners v. State of Karnataka, AIR 1995 (SC) 1938 : (1995) 4 SCC 1 : 1995 CrLJ 3220 : JT 1995 (4) SC 624 : 1995(3) Scale 387 : 1995(2) UJ 552 : 1995(4) SLR 12.

[10166] ● Hearing of case—Every member of Bench on par with other member or members of Bench.—Every member of the Bench is on par with the other member or members of the Bench and has a right to ask whatever questions he wants to appreciate the merits or demerits of the case. It is obvious that the contemner was incensed by the fact that the learned Judge was asking the questions to him. This is clear from his contention that the learned Judge being a junior member of the Bench, was not supposed to ask him any question and if any questions were to be asked, he had to ask them through the senior member of the Bench because that was the convention of the Court.. The Apex Court did not endorse its view and held that assuming that there is such a convention, it is for the learned Judges forming the Bench to observe it inter se. No lawyer or a third party can have any right or say in the matter and can make either an issue of' it or refuse to answer the questions on that ground. The lawyer or the litigant concerned has to answer the questions put to him by any member of the Bench. In re., Vinay Chandra Mishra, AIR 1995 SC 2348 : (1995) 2 SCC 584 : 1995 CrLJ 3994 : (1995)2 Crimes 38.

[10168] ● Wild allegations of corruption by Advocates against authority functioning under U.P Sales Tax.—Advocates who made wild allegations of corruption against authority functioning under Section 9. U.P. Sales Tax and demanded enquiry and transfer of its functions to other jurisdiction are guilty of criminal contempt. U.P. Sales Tax Service Association v. Taxation Bar Association, AIR 1996 (SC) 98 : (1995) 5 SCC 716 : 1996 (100) STC 108 : 1995 (71) FLR 836 : 1995 (3) SCJ 672 : JT 1995 (6) SC 306 (2) : 1995 (5) Scale 102.

[10169] ● Govt. officer meeting Judge of Supreme Court at his residence.—An I.A.S. officer met a Supreme Court Judge at his residence and asked for lenient view in the matter of sentence on his colleague namely Mr. J Vasudevan, the concerned Judge being K. RAMASWAMY J. The said I.A.S. officer made the request not on the behest of Mr. J. Vasudevan. He did on his own. It is contempt of Court. J. Vasudevan v. *T.R. [10170] ● Acts done in violation of Court order.—The Court is not entitled to give appropriate directions for remedying and rectifying the things done in violation of the orders of the Court. The inherent powers of the Court can be exercised by overruling technical objections to ensure full justice to the parties. Delhi Development Authority v. *Skipper construction Co. Pvt. [10171] ● None of contemnor making any candid admission or tendering apology.—None of the contemnors made any candid admission nor tendered unqualified contrite apology. Police Officers, who are supposed to be the so-called disciplined force, have deliberately fabricated false records placed before this Court without any compunction. It is, therefore, of utmost importance to curb this tendency, particularly, when they have the temerity to fabricate the records with false affidavit and place the same before the highest Court of the land. Their depravity of the conduct is writ large. M.S. Ahlawat is unworthy to hold any office of responsibility. Therefore, Randhir Singh (ASI) and Ishwar Singh (SI) shall be punishable under Section 193, IPC and accordingly they are convicted and sentenced to undergo rigorous imprisonment for a term of 3 months and 6 months respectively. Ahlawat, the Superintendent of Police, is punishable under Section 193, IPC He also committed contempt of the proceedings of the Supreme Court punishable under Article 129 of the Constitution. Accordingly, he is convicted and sentenced under Section 193 IPC to undergo rigorous imprisonment for a term of one year. He is convicted and sentenced to undergo rigorous imprisonment for a term of 6 months under Article 129 of the Constitution. Both the sentences are directed to run concurrently. Krishna Kumar, Head Constable, is exonerated of the charge under Section 193, IPC with warning to show exemplary conduct hereafter. His bail bonds are discharged. Afzal v. State of Haryana, AIR 1996 SC 2326 : (1996) 7 SCC 397 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 424 : 1996 CrLJ 1679 : JT 1996 (1) (SC) 328.

[10172] ● Handcuffing of under-trial prisoners—Contempt.—The handcuffing of the under-trial prisoners cannot, however, be justified even under the provisions of Regulation 465 of the M.P. Police Regulations in as much as the said regulation requires an express authorization from the Magistrate/Jail Officer for the purpose of taking him to Court from Jail and from Jail to Court. Admittedly no such authorization was obtained in this case. As regards the role and responsibility of contemnors Nos. 1 to 5 in these actions involving handcuffing of under-trial prisoners, it may be stated that contemnors Nos. 3 to 5 were directly involved in the said incidents of handcuffing because the handcuffing was done under their directions or in their presence. Contemnors Nos. 1 and 2, even though not directly involved in the said incidents since they were not present, must be held responsible for having not taken adequate steps to prevent such actions and even after the said actions came to their knowledge, they condoned the same by not taking stern action against persons found responsible for this illegality.

That a note regarding the disapproval of their conduct by this Court be placed in the personal file of all of them.

The contemnor was apprised about the decision of the Supreme Court and he is reported to have stated that "…. the Supreme Court decision has no application there and that the Police has the right to transport the accused as they want, with or without handcuffs". In re M.P. Dwivedi, AIR 1996 SC 2299 : (1996) 4 SCC 152 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 612 : 1996 CrLJ 1670.

[10173] ● Threatening of writ petitioners—Criminal contempt.—Threatening of writ petitioners is an attempt to contempt of interfere with the proceedings pending before the Court and the contemner is guilty for criminal contempt. In re Balwan Singh, (1996) 11 SCC 74 : JT 1996 (10) SC 733 : 1996 (4) Crimes 226 (SC) : 1996 (8) Scale 485 : 1996 (8) Supreme 363 : 1997 (1) CCR 51 (SC).

[10174] ● Premises not vacated inspite of undertaking.—Inspite of an undertaking given to vacate the premises the premises were not vacated. The party in contempt case, took the plea that he was not informed by his counsel about the undertaking. The party had refused to accept dasti notice of contempt. It was held that the order of sentence for six months imprisonment was not liable to be recalled. Dental v. Mohan Prasad, (1996) 5 SCC 378 : 1996 (5) Scale 77 : 1996 (5) Supreme 480 : 1996 (5) AD (SC) 695.

[10175] ● Obstruction in execution of warrant.—In Govt. of A.P.V.G. Lakshman Reddy 1997 CrLJ 3127 the Court passed a decree directing demolition of a compound wall of a Police Station. A warrant was issued for demolition of the wall. The warrant was entrusted to one Shri Madhusudhan Bhat for enforcement. He went along with Venkaiah another bailiff, Syed Ahmad Ali and G. Vinayak Raj process servers, alongwith workmen to the site to demolish the constructed wall. While they were in the process of demolishing the wall, it is now clear from the record that Circle Inspector of Police, Narsimaha Raju, the Sub-inspector of Police, Laxminarayan and other police force had gone there and obstructed the execution of the warrant. They took the Court officers to the police station. It is the report of the bailiffs that they were wrongly confined in the police station, despite the fact that they had informed that they are Court officers and had came to the spot with their duty to execute the warrant. On the basis of that report, a complaint came to be filed and is pending decision. In the case of pollution of river by discharge of effluent in the river contrary to the order of the Court by obtaining consent of Pollution Control Board the contemnor is guilty of contempt and Rs. 5 lakhs is imposed on him as fine. Vineet Kumar Mathur v. Union. of India, (1996) 7 SCC 714 : JT 1996 (1) SC 454 : 1996 (1) Scale 504 : 1996 (1) Supreme 500 : 1996 (1) AD (SC) 797 : 1996 (1) UJ 269.

[10178] ● Submission of false affidavit—Criminal contempt.—Submission of false affidavit in order to mislead the Court is a criminal contempt of judicial proceedings of the Court. Afzal v. State of Haryana, AIR 1996 SC 2326 : (1996) 7 SCC 397 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 424 : 1996 CrLJ 1679 : JT 1996 (1) SC 328 : 1996 (l) Scale 340 : 1996 (l) Supreme 397 : 1996 (l) AD (SC) 537 : 1996 (3) CCR 148 (SC). TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Rita Markandey v. Surjit Singh Arora, AIR 1997 (SC) 2174 : (1996) 6 SCC 14 : 1996 (2) UJ 787 : 1996(7) Scale 275 : 1996 (7) AD (SC) 868 : Supreme 233 : 1996(2) RCR 472 : JT 1996 (8) SC 590.

[10179] ● Contempt of judicial process.—A Police Officer in charge of Criminal administration, first filed a fabricated counter-affidavit to obtain a favourable order. Later having found atmosphere in congenial fabricated further false evidence to show that his subordinate has forged his signature without his knowledge on the counter-affidavit. He is guilty of contempt of judicial process. Afzal v. State of Haryana, AIR 1996 SC 2326 : (1996) 7 SCC 397 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 424 : 1996 CrLJ 1679 (SC) : JT 1996 (1) SC 328 : 1996 (1) Scale 340 : 1996 (1) Supreme 397 : 1996(1) AD (SC) 537 : 1996 (l) Crimes 58 (SC) : 1996 (3) CCR 148 (SC).

[10180] ● In contempt proceedings mens rea not relevant.—"In a contempt proceedings the motive, in other words, the mens rea is not relevant. What would be the effect of the act or conduct of imputation is the relevant question for decision ? It is true that in an indicatable offence under penal law generally mens rea is an essential ingredient and the burden lies on the prosecution to prove it affirmatively. In a contempt proceedings of summary nature, the proof of mens rea is absolutely unnecessary. What is material is the effect or the tendency of the act, conduct or the publication of the words, written, spoken or by signs or by visible representation or otherwise and whether it scandalises or tends to scandalise or lowers or tends to lower the authority of the Court or prejudices or tends to prejudice or interfere or tends to interfere with the due course of any judicial proceeding or interferes or tends to interfere with or obstruct the administration of justice in any othermanner. The tendency due to the publication, whether by words written or spoken or by signs or by visible representation or otherwise, of any matter or the doing of any other act whatsoever is relevant and material." D.C. Saxena v. Hon'ble the Chief Justice of India, AIR 1996 SC 2481 : (1996) 5 SCC 216 : 1996 CrLJ 3274.

[10181] ● Scandalising Court—Hostile criticism of judges.—"Scandalising the Court, therefore, would mean hostile criticism of judges as judges or judiciary. Any personal attack upon a judge in connection with the office he holds is dealt with under law of libel or slander. Yet defamatory publication concerning the judge as a judge brings the Court or judges into contempt, a serious impediment to justice and an inroad on the majesty of justice. Any caricature of a judge calculated to lower the dignity of the Court would destroy, undermine or tend to undermine public confidence in the administration of justice or the majesty of justice. It would, therefore, be scandalising the judge as a judge, in other words, imputing partiality, corruption, bias, improper motives to a judge is scandalisation of the Court and would be contempt of the Court. Even imputation of lack of impartiality or fairness to a judge in the discharge of his official duties amounts to contempt. The gravamen of the offence is that of lowering his dignity or authority or an affront to the majesty of justice. When the contemnor challenges the authority of the Court, he interferes with the performance of duties of judge's office or judicial process or administration of justice or generation or production of tendency bringing the judge or judiciary into contempt. Section 2(c) of the Act, therefore, defines criminal contempt in wider articulation that any publication, whether by words, spoken or written, or by signs, or by visible representations, or otherwise of any matter or the doing of any other act whatsoever which scandalises or tends to scandalise, or lowers or tends to lower the authority of any Court; or prejudices, or interferes or tends to interfere with, the due course of any judicial proceeding; or interferes or tends to interfere with, or obstructs or tends to obstruct, the administration of justice in any other manner, is a criminal contempt. Therefore, a tendency to scandalise the Court to tendency to lower the authority of the Court or tendency to interfere with or tendency to obstruct the administration of justice in any manner or tendency to challenge the authority or majesty of justice, would be a criminal contempt. The offending act apart, any tendency if it may lead to or tends to lower the authority of the Court is a criminal contempt. Any conduct of the contemnor which has the tendency or produces a tendency to bring the judge or Court into contempt or fends to lower the authority of the Court would also be contempt of the Court." D.C. Saxena (Dr.) v. Chief Justice of India, AIR 1996 SC 2481 : (1996) 5 SCC 216 : 1996 CrLJ 3274.

[10182] ● Threat of filing complaint against Judge in respect of judicial proceedings conducted by him—Positive attempt to interfere with due course of administration of Justice.—Any threat of filing a complain against the judge in respect of the judicial proceedings conducted by him in his own Court is a positive attempt to interfere with the due course of administration of justice. In order that the judges may fearlessly and independently act in discharge of their judicial functions, it is necessary that they should have full liberty to act within the sphere of their activity. If, however, litigants and their counsel start threatening the judge or launch prosecution against him for what he has honestly and bona fide done in his Court, the judicial independence would vanish eroding the very edifice on which the institution of justice stands. Ajay Kumar Pandey In re, AIR 1997 SC 260 : (1996) 6 SCC 510 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 1391 : 1997 CrLJ 231.

[10183] ● Attack on Judges scurrilous.—After evaluating the totality of factors, if the Court considers the attack on the Judge or Judges scurrilous, offensive, intimidatory or malicious beyond condonable limits, the strong arm of the law must, in the name of public interest and public justice, strike a blow on him who challenges the supremacy of the rule of law by fouling its source and stream. T. Deen Dayal v. High Court of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 1997 SC 3451 : (1997) 7 SCC 535 : 1997 CrLJ 4080 : 1997 (3) Crimes 271.

[10184] ● Wilful Disobedience of Court order.—The Supreme Court directed the Principal secretary of the Medical Health and Medical Education Ministry to remain present in the Court on the next date of having, the contempt petition heaving been adjourned for two weeks. The said offer left the country without finding out whether the Court had passed an order exempting her from appearance. She expressed deep regret and apology for the error stating that the mistake on her part was an account of legal advice she received and which she believed as correct. The counsel for the secretary pointed out the circumstances in which she was not present in Court. He submitted that the lapse was unintentional and due to erroneous legal advice. Taking the factors into account the Court accepted the unqualified apology tendered by the secretary. Anuj Maheshwari v. Ramesh Yadav, (1997) 5 SCC 453.

[10185] ● Criminal contempt—Vacation of premises.—Law is well settled that if any party gives an undertaking to the Court to vacate the premises from which he is liable to be evicted under the orders of the Court and there is a clear and deliberate breach thereof it amounts to civil contempt but since, in the present case, the respondent did not file any undertaking as envisaged in the order of this Court the question of his being punished for breach thereof does not arise. How ever even in a case where no such undertaking is given, a party to a litigation may be held liable for such contempt if the Court is induced to sanction at particular course of action or inaction on the basis of the representation of such a party and the Court ultimately finds that the party never intended to act on such representation or such representation was false. In other words, if on the representation of the respondent herein the Court was persuaded to pass the order extending the time for vacation of the suit premises, he may be held guilty of contempt of Court, notwithstanding non furnishing of the undertaking, if it is found that the representation was false and the respondent never intended to act upon it. However, the party cannot be held liable for contempt on this score also for the order in question clearly indicates that it was passed on the basis of the agreement between the parties and not on the representation of the respondent made before the Court. It was the petitioner who agreed to the unconditional extension of time by four weeks for the respondent to vacate and subsequent extension of time on his giving an undertaking and this Court only embodied the terms of the agreement so arrived at in the order. Rita Markandey v. Surjit Singh Arora, AIR 1997 SC 2174 : (1996) 6 SCC 14 : 1997 CrLJ 2503.

[10186] ● Attempt to impede or undermine or obstruct free flow of justice.—Anyone who makes an attempt to impede or undermine or obstruct the free flow of the unsoiled stream of justice by resorting to the filing of false evidence commits criminal contempt of the Court and renders himself liable to be dealt with in accordance with the Act. Rita Markandey v. Surjit Singh Arora, AIR 1997 SC 2124 : (1996) 6 SCC 14 : 1997 CrLJ 2503.

[10187] ● Advocate making imputations against Judge only because he did not get expected result.—It is most unbefitting for an Advocate to make imputations against the Judge only because he does not get the expected result, which according to him is the fair and reasonable result available to him. Judges cannot be intimidated to seek favourable orders. Only because a lawyer appears as a party in person, he does not get a licence to commit contempt of the Court by intimidating the Judges or scandalising the Courts. He cannot use language, either in the pleadings or during arguments, which is either intemperate or unparliamentary and which has the tendency to interfere in the administration of justice and undermine the dignity of the Court and the majesty of law. These safeguards are not for the protection of any Judge individually but are essential for maintaining the dignity and decorum of the Courts and for upholding the majesty of law. Judges and Courts are not unduly sensitive or touchy to fair and reasonable criticism of their judgments. Fair comments, even if out-spoken, but made without any malice and without attempting to impair the administration of justice and made in good faith in proper language do not attract any punishment for contempt of Court. However, when from the criticism a deliberate, motivated and calculated attempt is discernible to bring down the image of judiciary in the estimation of the public or to impair the administration of justice or tend to bring the administration of justice into disrepute, the Courts must bitter themselves to uphold their dignity and the majesty of law. The alleged contemnor, has, undoubtedly committed contempt of the Court by the use of the objectionable and intemperate language. No system of justice can tolerate such unbridled licence on the part of a person, be he a lawyer, to permit himself the liberty of scandalising the Court by casting unwarranted, uncalled for and unjustified aspersions on the integrity, ability, impartiality or fairness of a Judge in the discharge of his judicial functions, as it undoubtedly amounts to an inference with the due course of administration of justice. No litigant, even a lawyer appearing in person in his own cause, can be permitted to overstep the limits of fair, bona fide and reasonable criticism of the judgment and bring the Courts generally into disrepute or attribute motives to the Judges rendering the judgment. Perversity, calculated to undermine the judicial system and the prestige of the Court, cannot be permitted for otherwise the very foundation of the judicial system is bound to be undermined and weakened. Liberty of free expression is not to be confused with a licence to make unfounded, unwarranted and irresponsible aspersions against the Judges or the Courts in relation to irresponsible judicial matters. In re Ajay Kumar Pandey, AIR 1998 SC 3299 : (1998) 7 SCC 248 : 1998 CrLJ 4606 : JT 1998 (6) SC 571.

[10188] ● Advocate using intemperate language and casting unwarranted aspersions on various judicial officers.—The contemner was a practising Advocate who himself had filed criminal complaint against a brother advocate (Mr. Mahesh Giri) and Ms. Saroj Bela who was a member of the lower judiciary posted as VII Addl. District Judge at Lucknow after giving them a notice demanding compensation for having defamed him by publicly saying that he had sexual relations with one of them, namely, Ms. Saroj Bala. This complaint was dismissed at the initial state as indicated in the earlier part of this Judgment, but he raised a number of controversies, including a demand for enquiry to be set up by the District Judge, Lucknow. The contemner filed a Revision before the High Court against the order by which his complaint was dismissed and the application for summoning the witnesses through Court process was rejected. This revision, was dismissed by Mr. Justice Virendra Saran. In the special Leave Petition filed against that Judgement, the contemner criticised Justice Virendra Saran in intemperate language and termed his Judgement as forged and fictitious, besides imputing bad motive. When the Supreme Court noticed the scandalous and even abusive language by the contemner used against 'V' and other officers of the judiciary, it required the contemner to delete those sentences or portions and/or file a fresh petition. Not satisfied, the contemner moved an application for recall of the order and in that application he again used intemperate language and thereafter started making efforts to avoid the Court (Hon'ble ANAND and MUKHERJEE JJ.) and for this purpose, he adopted derogatory and bad tactics. He gave notice to the two hon'ble Judges seeking unconditional apology from them for their conduct and behaviour in the Court and also demanded compensation from them. He wrote to the President of India for sanction to prosecute the Hon'ble Judges for offences under Sections 167, 500, 504 and 506, IPC giving two months time to the President to grant sanction or else he would treat the sanction to have been granted to him. He also threatened to go on hunger strike before the Supreme Court with effect from 25-9-1996. He then filed a complaint against the Hon'ble Judges Banding their conduct as goondaism. He pleaded for his case to be listed before some other Bench nor to be referred to the constitution Bench on the ground that both the Hon'ble Judges were personally involved in the case and therefore they need not hear the matter, but he was unsuccessful. Ajay Kumar Pandey, In re, AIR 1998 SC 3299 : (1998) 7 SCC 379 : 1998 CrLJ 4606 (SC) : 1998 All LJ 2531.

[10189] ● Notice requiring party to be personally present in Court.—Even at that stage the Court directed that if the appellant "evades his presence in Court on that date, he shall be brought into police custody with the assistance of Superintendent of Police of the area where he has been serving. "The Court also directed the order to be sent by Fax as well as personal messenger to the Engineer-in-Chief besides by Fax to the Chief Secretary of the State and simultaneously to the Principal Secretary of the Irrigation Department. Above all, the Court directed the Additional Chief Standing Counsel to take appropriate steps for execution of that order. There was no circumstances warranting the over-anxiety displayed by the Court in that order. There is no presumption that a responsible officer of the Government would disobey an order of the Court requiring his presence in Court on a particular date. What was the occasion for the Court to direct the officer to be taken into police custody even when it was only issuing a notice calling upon him to the present? Significantly, the order did not indicate anywhere that it was issuing a notice of contempt. State of Uttar Pradesh v. Ashok Kumar Saxena, AIR 1998 SC 925 : (1998) 3 SCC 303 : 1998 CrLJ 1205 (1206, 1207) (SC) : JT 1998 (1) SC 499 : 1998 (1) Scale 387 : 1998 (3) SLT 65 : 1998 (1) Supreme 474 : 1998 (1) SCR 767.

[10190] ● Non-implementation of judgment of Supreme Court.—The complaint of the petitioners is that despite specific directions given and positive observations made in the judgment in State Bank of India v. Kashinath Kher, (1996) 8 SCC 762 : AIR 1996 SCW 1478, the respondents have not implemented the judgment in its true spirit and purport. On the other hand, they have put up the same interpretation of the provisions set up prior to the judgment as an excuse in promoting the officers, violating the judgment. Kashinath Kher v. Dinesh Kumar Bhagat, AIR 1998 SC 374 : (1997) 6 SCC 141 : 1998 CrLJ 666 (SC).

[10191] ● News item incorrect and misleading.—Heading of the news item was absolutely incorrect and misleading. The contents of the news item were misleading and published at a time while the matter was pending. It Prima facie amounted to contempt of Court for which notice was issued. Chandigarh News Line (Indian Express Group), AIR 1999 SC 144 : (1998) 6 SCC 378 : 1999 CrLJ 27 : JT 1998 (5) SC 243.

[10192] ● Additional affidavit—Filing of.—The prayer to file an additional affidavit for classifying the entire position regarding allegations made in report may be allowed. In re, V.L. Das, AIR 1999 SC 99 : 1999 CrLJ 25.

[10193] ● Interference with administration of justice.—The present case, deals with acts which lower the authority of a Court and tend to interfere with the administration of justice. Section 3 has no application in the present case. The letters of the first respondent insinuate a dishonest conduct on the part of the two members, presumably because the view expressed by the Judicial Member in the first alleged order is changed by him in favour of the revenue when he concurs with the order which was actually pronounced. This kind of an attack based on access to a confidential draft exchanged between the Members of the Bench is bound to affect free exchange or ideas between the two Members who have to judicially decide a case. It is a clear obstruction to proper decision-making and to proper administration of justice. The public have a major stake in effective and orderly administration of justice. A letter from a high officer such as the Law Secretary which questions the bona fides of the Members of the Tribunal in deciding a case and asks them to explain the judicial order which they have passed, unfairly tampers with the judicial process and interferes with judicial decision-making.

In our view this kind of conduct and that too on the part of the Law Secretary, who is expected to maintain the independence of the Income Tax Appellate Tribunal and not (to) interfere with its judicial functioning, amounts to gross contempt of Court. It is deliberate attempt on his part to question the judicial functioning of the Tribunal coming as it does from a person of his rank. It is rightly perceived by the President as well as the two concerned Members of the Tribunal as a threat to their independent functioning in the course of deciding appeals coming up before them. Income Tax Appellate Tribunal through President v. V.K. Agarwal, AIR 1999 SC 453 : 1999 (1) SCC 16 : 1999 CrLJ 441 : 1999 Mad LJ (Cri) 196.

[10194] ● Allegation against Judge that he had thwarted justice, flouted law—Denigrated face of judiciary and ridiculed sanctity of mandatory provisions and established dictates of law.—The offending statements made in paragraph 3 of his counter and the implications thereof have the effect of conveying that the learned Judge had acted with bias and was partial to the other side. By alleging that the learned judge had "thwarted justice, flouted law, denigrated the face of the Judiciary and ridiculed the sanctity of the mandatory provisions and established dictates of law," the respondent has by implication attributed ulterior motive to the learned Judge. Fair criticism is that which while criticizing the act of a Judge does not impute any ulterior motive to him. The respondent by alleging that for extraneous considerations and by misusing the power and authority of a Judge, the learned Judge had made the aforesaid remarks against him and also made an uncalled for clarification with respect to the "main O.P.", has gone beyond the permissible limits of fair criticism and committed contempt of this Court. In paragraph 9 of the above quoted offending statements he has further stated by implication that the Supreme Court has not dealt with his case impartially and in accordance with law. This remark has the tendency to scandalise the Court and, therefore, by making that statement he has committed contempt of this Court. It is, therefore, not possible for us to accept his explanation or the submissions made by him. He has to be held guilty for having committed contempt of this Court. Though we have found the respondent guilty of having committed the contempt of this Court, we do not think that this is a fit case in which a strict view should be taken for imposing punishment. Considering the disturbed state of mind of the respondent, the background in which he made the offending statements and the long lapse of time after initiation of this contempt proceeding and also the changed circumstances disclosed by the respondent, we are of the opinion that ends of justice would be met if only a fine of Rs. 250 is imposed upon the respondent. Padmahasini v. C.R. Srinivas, AIR 2000 SC 68 (69, 70) : (1999) 8 SCC 711 : 2000 CrLJ 187.

[10195] ● Litigative spirit of complainant party.—The Court itself recognized the litigations spirit of the parties and attempt to score over each other and obviously the contempt application is no exception to that-but that by itself would not prompt this Court to come to a conclusion as regards the merits of the contentions raised in the matter. Murray & Co. v. Ashok Kr. Newatia, AIR 2000 SC 833 (835) : (2000) 2 SCC 455 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 4730 : 2000 CrLJ 1394 : JT 2000 (1) SC 337.

[10196] ● Bona fide difficulties in implementing decision.—Departmental authorities entertaining bona fide difficulties in implementing the decision as it was of the opinion that the decision runs contrary to another Supreme Court decision. Contempt proceedings against authorities held liable to be dropped. Satpal v. State of Haryana, AIR 2000 SC 1702 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 2900 : 2000 CrLJ 2297.

[10197] ● Two explanations of order—One adopted by contemnors not unwarranted—No contempt.—If two explanations are available and out of which one stands adopted by the alleged contemnors which cannot, by any stretch, be termed to be wholly unwarranted, question of returning a verdict of guilty in an application for contempt does not and cannot arise. Held, The doubt persists and as such in any event the respondents being the alleged contemnors are entitled to have the benefit or advantage of such a doubt having regard to the nature of the proceeding.

This contempt petition fails. Mrityunjoy Das v. Sayed Hasibur Rahman, AIR 2001 SC 1293 : (2001) 3 SCC 739 : 2001 CrLJ 1702.

[10198] ● Scandalising or tending to scandalising authority of any Court.—The contempt of Court jurisdiction is not to protect an individual Judge, it is to protect the administration of justice from being maligned. Hence, when his (contemnor) expectation that the Chief Justice of India himself would have personally filed a petition against the contemnor did not fructify, he cannot question the maintainability of the action which was initiated suo motu by the Court.

Criminal contempt is vivisected into two categories. One is publication of any matter which scandalises or tends to scandalise the authority of any Court, etc., etc. Second is the doing of any act whatsoever which scandalises or tends to scandalise the authority of any Court, etc., etc. If an act is not a criminal contempt merely because there was no publication, such act would automatically fall within the purview of the other category because the latter consists of "the doing of any other act whatsoever". The latter category is thus a residuary category so wide enough from which no act of criminal contempt can possibly escape. The common denominator for both is that it scandalises or tends to scandalise, etc., etc., of any Court.

The impugned action of the contemnor is a case of the gross criminal contempt of Court. It is a serious matter for the Supreme Court because vilification of the high personage of Chief Justice of India would undermine the majesty of the Court and dignity of this institution. The sentence of imprisonment for six months will stand suspended for a period of one month from today. If the contemnor would give an undertaking in the Supreme Court, in the form of an affidavit, to the effect that he would not commit or even attempt to commit any act of criminal contempt, then the sentence now imposed would remain suspended for a further period of five years. But if the contemnor commits any act of criminal contempt during the said period of five years, the suspension of the sentence will stand revoked and then he will have to undergo the sentence of imprisonment for six months. Otherwise, the question of revival of the sentence would depend upon the order which the Supreme Court would pass on the expiry of five years. In re S.K. Sundaram, AIR 2001 SC 2374 : (2001) 2 SCC 171 : 2001 SCC (Cri) 304.

[10199] ● Doing of act which scandalises or tends to scandalise authority of Court.—Criminal contempt is vivisected into two categories. One is publication of any matter which scandalises or tends to scandalise the authority of any Court, etc., etc. Second is the doing of any act whatsoever which scandalises or tends to scandalise the authority of any Court, etc., If an act is not a criminal contempt merely because there was no publication, such act would automatically fall within the purview of the other category because the latter consists of the "doing of any other act whatsoever". The latter category is thus a residuary category so wide enough from which no act of criminal contempt can possibly escape. The common denominator for both is that it scandalises tends to scandalise etc., of any Court.

We have therefore, not a speck of doubt in our mind that the impugned action of the contemner is a case of the gross criminal contempt of Court. It is a serious matter for this Court because viiification of the high personage of Chief Justice of India would undermine the majesty of the Court and dignity of this institution. We therefore hold him guilty of criminal contempt and convict him thereunder. The contemnor sand that he is a heart patient we, therefore order that the sentence of imprisonment for six months will stand suspended for a period of one month from today. If the contemner would give an undertaking in this Court, in the form of an affidavit, to the effect that he would not commit or even attempt to commit any act of criminal contempt, then the sentence now imposed by us would remain suspended for a further period of five years. But if the contemner commits any act of criminal contempt during the said period of five years, the suspension of the sentence will stand revoked and then he will have to undergo the sentence of imprisonment for six months. Otherwise, the question of revival of the sentence would depend upon the order which the Supreme Court would pass on the expiry of five years. In re, S.K. Sundaram, AIR 2001 SC 2374 (2383) : (2001) 2 SCC 171 : 2001 SCC (Cri) 304 : JT 2001 (1) SC 81.

[10200] ● Burden and standard of proof in contempt proceedings.—As regards the burden and standard of proof, the common legal phraseology "he who asserts must prove" has its due application in the matter of proof of the allegations said to be constituting the act of contempt. As regards the standard of proof, be it noted that a proceeding under the extraordinary jurisdiction of the Court in terms of the provisions of the Contempt of Courts Act is quasi-criminal, and as such, the standard of proof required is that of a criminal proceeding and the breach shall have to be established beyond all reasonable doubt. Chhotu Ram v. Urvashi Gulati, AIR 2001 SC 3468 (3469) : (2001) 7 SCC 530.

[10201] ● Deponent committing contempt—Notice in prescribed form directed to be issued.—The respondent No. 3 appears, prima facie, to have committed contempt. She has imputed motives to specific Courts for entertaining litigation or passing orders against her. She has accused Courts of "harassing" her (of which the present proceeding has been cited as an instance) as if the judiciary were carrying out a personal vendetta against her. She has brought in matters which were not only pertinent to the issues to be decided but has drawn uninformed comparisons to make statements about this Court which do not appear to be protected by the law relating to fair criticism. We are conscious that the respondent No. 3 has said before us that she stood by the comments made even if they were held to be contumacious. At the same time we are also aware that when the statement was made the respondent had not been called on formally to defend herself. The presented procedure will have to be followed. We direct that notice in the prescribed form be issued to the respondent No. 3 as to why the respondent No. 3 should not be proceeded against for contempt for the statements in the three paragraphs of her affidavit. J.R. Parashar v. Prashant Bhushan, AIR 2001 SC 3395 (3403) : (2001) 6 SCC 735 : 2001 SCC (Cri) 1242 : 2001 CrLJ 4207.

[10202] ● Holding dharna by itself not contempt.—Holding a dharna by itself may not amount to contempt. But if by holding a dharna, access to the Courts is hindered and the officers of Court and members of the public are not allowed free ingress and egress, or the proceedings in Court are otherwise disrupted, disturbed or hampered, the dharna may amount to contempt because the administration of justice would be obstructed. There is no allegation in the petition that the participants in the dharna had picketed the gates of this Court and prevented lawyers or litigants from entering and leaving the Court premises. Nor is it the petitioners' case that the "dharna" disturbed or prevented the Courts from functioning. While holding that a dharna held to protest a decision of a Court may not per se amount to contempt, we must not be understood as approving the holding of a "dharna" before the Court. On the other hand, it is deprecated and must be discouraged otherwise every disgruntled litigant could adopt this method of ventilating this grievance. It is, in any case, an inappropriate form of protest since the object of holding a dharna is either to raise public opinion or to exhibit the extent of public opinion against a decision of a Court. Neither of these objects weigh with Courts when deciding a case. Judges are required to decide what they think is right according to the law applicable and on the material placed before them and not be swayed by public opinion on any particular issue. J.R. Parashar v. Prashant Bhushan, AIR 2001 SC 3395 (3402) : (2001) 6 SCC 735 : 2001 SCC (Cri) 1242 : 2001 CrLJ 4207.

[10203] ● Purpose of introducing Contempt of Courts Act, 1971.—The introduction of the Contempt of Courts Act, 1971 in the statute Book has been for the purpose of securing a feeling of confidence of the people in general for due and proper administration of justice in the country. It is a powerful weapon in the hands of law Courts by reason wherefor it must thus be exercised with due case and caution and for larger interest. Mrityunjoy Das v. Syed Hasibur Rahman, AIR 2001 SC 1293 : (2001) 3 SCC 739 : (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 296 (297-298) : 2001 CrLJ 1702.

[10204] ● Person trying to scandalise Court or undermining dignity of Supreme Court or High Court attempts Article 129 or Article 215.—Any expression of opinion would, therefore, be not immune from the liability for exceeding the limit. either under the law of defamation or contempt of Court or the other constitutional limitations under Article 19(2). If a citizen, therefore, in the garb of exercising right of free expression under Article 19(1), tries to scandalise the Court or undermines the dignity of the Court, then the Court would be entitled to exercise power under Article 129 or Article 215, as the case may be. In relation to a pending proceeding before the Court, while showing cause to the notices issued, when it is stated the Court displays a disturbing willingness to issue notice on an absurd despicable, entirely unsubstantiated petition, it amounts to a destructive attack on the reputation and the credibility of the institution and it undermines the public confidence in the judiciary as a whole and by no stretch of imagination, can be held to be a fair criticism of the Court's proceeding. When a scurrilous attack is made in relation to a pending proceeding and the notice states that the issuance of notice to show cause was intended to silence criticism and muzzle dissent, to harass and intimidate those who disagree with it, is a direct attack on the institution itself, rather than the conduct of an individual Judge. The meaning of the expressions used cannot come within the extended concept of fair criticism or expression of opinion, particularly to the case of the contemner in the present case, who on her own right is an acclaimed writer in English. In re, Arundhati Ray, AIR 2002 SC 1375 : (2002) 3 SCC 343 : 2002 CrLJ 1792 : JT 2002 (2) SC 508.

[10205] ● Judiciary guardian of rule of law.—The rule of law is the foundation of the democratic society. The judiciary is the guardian of the rule of law. If the orders of the Court are disobeyed with impurity by those who owe an obligation to the society to preserve the rule of law, not only would individual litigants suffer, the whole administration of justice would be brought into disrepute. Bijoy Kumar Mahanty v. Jadu, AIR 2003 SC 657 : (2003) 1 SCC 644 : 2003 CrLJ 841 : JT 2002 (10) SC 349.

[10206] ● Assault on Judge in Courtroom.—In the present case, a judicial officer of the rank of District Judge was attacked in a pre-planned and calculated manner in his Courtroom and when he tried to protect himself from physical harm by retiring to his chambers, by chasing him there and causing injuries to him. The raising of slogans and demanding unconditional bail for Jokhu Singh further compounded the offence. The Courts cannot be compelled to give "command orders". The act committed amounts to deliberate interference with the discharge of duty of a judicial officer by intimidation apart from scandalising and lowering the dignity of the Court and interference with the administration of justice. The effect of such an act is not confined to a particular Court or a district, or the State, it has the tendency to affect the entire judiciary in the country. It is a dangerous trend. Such a trend has to be curbed. If for passing judicial orders to the annoyance of the police the presiding officers of the Courts are to be assaulted and humiliated the judicial system in the country would collapse. Daroga Singh v. B.K. Pandey, AIR 2004 SC 2579 : (2004) 5 SCC 26 : 2004 SCC (Cri) 1521 (1535).

[10207] ● Nature of offence under Section 228, IPC.—What is made punishable under Section 228, IPC is the offence of intentional insult to a Judge or interruption of Court proceedings but not as a contempt of Court. The definition of criminal contempt is wide enough to include any act by a person which would either scandalise the Court or which would tend to interfere with the administration of justice. It would also include any act which lowers the authority of the Court or prejudices or interferes with the due course of any judicial proceeding. It is not limited to the offering of intentional insult to the Judge or interruption of the judicial proceedings. Daroga Singh v

[10208] ● In application for contempt, the Court is concerned with question whether earlier decision which has become final has been complied with.—While dealing with an application for contempt, the Court is really concerned with the question whether the earlier decision, which has received its finality, had been complied with or not. It would not be permissible for a Court to examine the correctness of the earlier decision which had not been assailed and to take the different view than what was taken in the earlier decision. State of Bihar v. Rajendra Singh, AIR 2004 SC 4419 : (2007) 15 SCC 688 : 2004 CrLJ 4187 (4188).

[10209] ● Assault on Judge in courtroom in pre-planned and calculated manner.—In the instant case, a judicial officer of the rank of District Judge was attacked in a preplanned and calculated manner in his courtroom and when tried to protect himself from physical harm by retiring to his chamber, by chasing him there and causing injuries to him. The raising of slogans and demanding unconditional bail for Jokhu Singh further compounded the offence. The Courts cannot be compelled to give a command orders". It has to be curbed. If for passing judicial orders to the annoyance of the police the presiding officers of the Courts are to be assaulted and humiliated the judicial system in the Country would collapse. Daroga Singh v. B.K. Pandey, AIR 2004 SC 2579 : (2004) 5 SCC 26 : 2004 SCC (Cri) 1521 (1535) : JT 2004 CrLJ 2084.

[10210] ● Vacation of interim order in main proceedings.—If ultimately the interim order is vacated or relief in the main proceedings is not granted to a party, the other side cannot take that as a ground for disobedience of interim order passed by the Court. Prithawi Nath Ram v. State of Jharkhand, AIR 2004 SC 4277 : (2004) 7 SCC 261 : 2004 CrLJ 4848 (4850).

[10211] ● Two versions.—The present case is of two versions, one as published in the newspaper Bartaman on the basis of which the appellant has been found guilty of contempt and the other version that appeared in other newspapers. Without a clear finding based on material on record that the version as appeared in the newspaper Bartaman is correct, it is not possible to uphold the conclusion that the appellant is guilty of contempt of Court. The contempt proceedings are quasi-criminal. The charge is required to be proved beyond reasonable doubt and not on probabilities. Biman Bose v. State of W.B., (2004) 13 SCC 95 : (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 291 (294).

[10212] ● Publication of article in magazine on issue sub-judice—Interference with administration of justice.—In the instant case the death of Chandni took place on 28.10.2003 and the complaint in this regard was registered and the investigation was in progress. The application for grant of anticipatory bail was disposed of by the High Court of Calcutta on 13.2.2004 and special leave petition was pending before the Supreme Court. Even then an article has appeared in a magazine called "Saga" titled "Doomed by Dowry" written by one Kakoli Poddar based on her interview of the family of the deceased, giving version of the tragedy and extensively quoting the father of the deceased as to his version of the case. The facts narrated therein were all materials that may be used in the forthcoming trial in this case Held : "We these type of articles appearing in the media would certainly interfere with the administration of justice. Deprecate this practice and caution the publisher, editor and the journalist who were responsible for the said article against indulging in such trial by media when the issue is subjudice. However, to prevent any further issue being raised in this regard, we treat this matter as closed and hope that the others concerned in journalism would take note of this displeasure expressed by us for interfering with the administration of justice" M.P. Lohia v. State of West Bengal, AIR 2005 SC 790 : (2005) 2 SCC 686 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 556 : 2005 CrLJ 1416 : 2005 (1) Crimes 283.

[10213] ● Civil contempt—High Court directing Municipal corporation and Development authority to initiate action in regard to matters of removing unauthorised encroachments—Mayor requesting authorities to give some time for vacating.—Contempt proceedings were initiated against the appellant who was an elected Mayor of Indore Municipal Corporation, on the ground that he had created hindrance in executing the order passed by the High Court in public interest litigation. After passing the order, by the High Court to initiate action for demolition of unauthorised construction.

The authorities of the Municipal Corporation started demolishing the unauthorised construction. However, on 29.10.1996, one of the corporators Smt. Ravindra Kaur Saluja who was one of the tenants of the house under demolition requested the appellant on telephone that some time be given to the residents whose houses, shops were being demolished so that they can remove their belongings and household articles. In this view of the matter, on 30.10.1996, the appellant requested the authorities concerned to grant some time on humanitarian ground to the occupants whose houses were to be demolished. This aspect was reported in the newspaper under the caption "MAYOR PROVES TO BE A STUMBLING BLOCK IN ANTI-ENCROACHMENT DRIVE—GIVE ENCROACHERS MORE TIME, SAYS MAYOR." Held, Prima facie there was no question of initiating any contempt proceedings in a case where the Mayor of the city requests the authorities to give some time for vacating the premises and for removing the household articles of the occupants whose houses were being demolished. In any set of circumstances, it could not be said that he committed any breach of the order passed by the High Court, because as quoted above the High Court only directed Indore Municipal Corporation and Indore Development Authority that they may initiate action in regard to matters of removing unathorised encroachment. Madhukar Varma v. State of M.P., (2005) 9 SCC 629 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 1267 (1268).

[10214] ● Falsee statement that ban on withdrawal of GPF.—Where the contemnor, Commissioner-cum-Secretary to Government Finance Department, Government of Nagaland did not lift ban on the withdrawal of GPF imposed by his order, inspite of the directions issued by the High Court, gave false statement in contempt proceedings that ban had been lifted, the contemnor was sentenced to simple imprisonment for a period of one month and fine of Rs. 5000/-, the Supreme Court considering the long career of the contemnor, set aside the sentence of simple imprisonment however maintained the sentence of fine. Their Lordships of the Supreme Court however observed that—

"It has become tendency with the Government Officer to somehow or the other to circumvent the orders of Court and try to take recourse to one justification or other. This shows complete lack of grace in accepting the orders of the Court. This tendency of undermining the Court's order cannot be countenanced. This Court time and again has emphasised that in democracy the role of the Court cannot be subservient to the administrative fiat. The executive and legislature had to work within Constitutional frame work and the judiciary has been given a role of watch dog to keep the legislature and executive within check. In the present case, we fail to understand the counter filed by the appellant before the Court. On one hand they say that all the cases of GPF have been processed and on the other hand they are not prepared to revoke the administrative order. This only shows a deliberate attempt on the part of the bureaucracy to circumvent the order of the Court and stick to their stand. This is clear violation of Courts Order and appellant is guilty of flouting the Court's Order." E.T. Surup v. CANSS Employees Association, AIR 2005 SC 115 : (2004) 8 SCC 683 : 2005 CrLJ 131 (134).

[10215] ● Rule of law foundation of democratic society.—It has been repeatedly held that the rule of law is the foundation of democratic society. The judiciary is the guardian of the rule of law. The confidence, which the people repose in the Courts of justice, cannot be allowed to be tarnished, diminished or wiped out by the contemptuous behaviour of any person. If the judiciary is to perform its duties and functions effectively and true to the spirit with which they are sacredly entrusted, the dignity and authority of the Courts have to be respected and protected at all costs. The foundation of the judiciary is the trust and the confidence of the people in its ability to deliver fearless and impartial justice. When the foundation itself is shaken by acts which tend to create disaffection and disrespect for the authority of the Court by creating distrust in its working, the edifice of the judicial system gets eroded. It is for this purpose that the Courts are entrusted with extraordinary powers of punishing for contempt of Court those, who indulge in acts, which tend to undermine the authority of law and bring it in disrepute and disrespect by scandalising it. When the Court exercises this power, it does not do so to vindicate the dignity and honour of the individual judge who is personally attacked or scandalised, but to uphold the majesty of the law and of the administration of justice. Rajendra Sail v. M.P. High Court Bar Association, AIR 2005 SC 2473 : (2005) 6 SCC 109 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 1401 (1409) : 2005 CrLJ 2585 : 2005 (2) Crimes 230.

[10216] ● Scandalising Court—Not fair criticism.—The issue as to whether the alleged statements amount to contempt or not does not present any difficulty in the present case. If the conclusions reached by the High Court are correct, there can be little doubt that it is serious case of scandalising the Court and not a case of fair criticism of a judgment. Undoubtedly, judgments are open to criticism. No criticism of a judgment, however vigorous, can amount to contempt of Court, provided it is kept within the limits of reasonable courtesy and good faith. Fair and reasonable criticism of a judgment which is a public document or which is a public act of a judge concerned with administration of justice would not constitute contempt. Such a criticism may fairly assert that the judgment is incorrect or an error has been committed both with regard to law or established facts. Rajendra Sail v. M.P. High Court Bar Association, AIR 2005 SC 2473 : (2005) 6 SCC 109 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 1401 (1418) : 2005 CrLJ 2585 : 2005 (2) Crimes 230.

[10217] ● Scandalising Courts and interfere with administration of Justice.—When there is danger of grave mischief being done in the matter of administration of justice, the animal version cannot be ignored and viewed with placid equanimity. If the criticism is likely to interfere with due administration of justice or undermine the confidence which the public reposes in the Courts of law as Courts of justice, the criticism would cease to be fair and reasonable criticism but would scandalise Courts and substantially interfere with administration of justice. Having perused the record, the contention urged on behalf of Mr. Rajendra Sail that on facts the conclusions arrived at by the High Court was not sustainable. Once this conclusion is reached, clearly the publication amounts to a gross contempt of Court. It has serious tendency to undermine the confidence of the society in the administration.

It is one thing to say that a judgment on facts as disclosed is not in consonance with evidence or the law has not been correctly applied. But when it is said that the judge had a predisposition to acquit the accused because he had already resolved to acquit them or has a bias or has been bribed or attributing such motives, lack of dispassionate and objective approach and analysis and prejudging of the issues, the comments that a judge about to retire is available for sale, that an enquiry will be conducted as regards the conduct of the judge who delivered the judgment as he is to retire within a month and a wild allegation that judiciary has no guts, no honesty and is not powerful enough to punish wealthy people, would bring administration of justice into ridicule and disrepute. The speech that the judgment is rubbish and deserves to be thrown in a dustbin cannot be said to be a fair criticism of judgment. These comments have transgressed the limits of fair and bona fide criticism and have a clear tendency to affect the dignity and prestige of the judiciary. It has a tendency to create an apprehension in the minds of the people regarding the integrity, ability or fairness of the judge and to deter actual and prospective litigants from placing complete reliance upon the Court's administration of justice, it is also likely to cause embarrassment in the mind of the judge himself in the discharge of his judicial duties. Rajendra Sail v. M.P. High Court Bar Association, AIR 2005 SC 2473 : (2005) 6 SCC 109 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 1401 (1418) : 2005 CrLJ 2585 : 2005 (2) Crimes 230.

[10218] ● Contempt of Court serious matter—Court to act with great circumspection.—A question whether there is contempt of Court or not is a serious one. The Court is both the accuser as well as the judge of the accusation. The Court has to act with a great circumspection. It is only with a clear case of contemptuous conduct not explainable otherwise, arises that the contemnor must be punished. Rajendra Sail v. M.P. High Court Bar Association, 2005 SCC (Cri) 1401 (1414).

[10219] ● Civil contempt—Scope of proceedings for.—While dealing with an application for contempt, the Court is really concerned with the question whether the earlier decision which has received its finality had been complied with or not. It would not be permissible for a Court to examine the correctness of the earlier decision which had not been assailed and to take a view different than what was taken in the earlier decision. The Court exercising contempt jurisdiction is primarily concerned with the question of contumacious conduct of the party who is alleged to have committed default in complying with the directions in the judgment or order. If there was no ambiguity or indefiniteness in the order, it is for the party concerned to approach the higher Court if according to him the same is not legally tenable. Such a question has necessarily to be agitated before the higher Court. The Court exercising contempt jurisdiction cannot take upon itself power to decide the original proceedings in a manner not dealt with by the Court passing the judgment or order. Right or wrong the order has to be obeyed. Flouting an order of the Court would render the party liable for contempt. While dealing with an application for contempt, the Court cannot traverse beyond the order, non-compliance of which is alleged. In other words, it cannot say what should not have been done or what should have been done. It cannot traverse beyond the order. It cannot test correctness or otherwise of the order or give additional directions or delete any direction. That would be exercising review jurisdiction while dealing with an application for initiation of contempt proceedings. The same would be impermissible and indefensible. In that view of the matter, the order of the High Court is set aside. Director of Education, Uttaranchal v. Ved Prakash Joshi, AIR 2005 SC 3200 : (2005) 6 SCC 98 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 1357 : 2005 CrLJ 3731.

> "The High Court, has in a very detailed order summarised the evidence and the material on record. The High Court has correctly come to the conclusion that the appellant was guilty of criminal contempt. We see no substance in the submission that the principles of natural justice were not followed as the appellant was not allowed by the enquiry officer to be represented by a lawyer. In an enquiry of this nature, it is not necessary that parties be allowed to be represented by advocates. We also see no substance in this submission that documents were not looked into by the enquiry officer. The appellant was allowed to cross-examine the witnesses. He tendered documents and even led evidence in support of his case. He had been accorded full opportunity. He could have personally given to the enquiry officer the documents, if he fled they were important. If he failed to do so he had only himself to blame. We, therefore, see no reason to interfere. In fact, the nature of the contempt is such that, in our view, the sentence is too lenient. However, as no notice for enhancement of sentence has been issued, we do not propose to now enhance the sentence." Babu Singh v. State of U.P., (2005) 9 SCC 741 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 1472.

[10221] ● Violation of orders of Supreme Court regarding unlicensed saw mills.—Where the Supreme Court had ordered closure of all unlicensed saw mills and plywood industries, but the contemnors granted license to six mills in the State by orders of Minister Forest Department and Principal Secretary, it is a case of deliberate disobedience of Supreme Court orders in brazen manner, the contemnors would be severely punished. Sentence of one month simple imprisonment was awarded. T.N. Govindaraman Thirummulpad, AIR 2006 SC 2007 : (2006) 5 SCC 1 : 2006 CrLJ 2773.

[10222] ● Government servants are liable to be punished under Act.—The proceedings under the contempt of Court Act are penal and punitive in nature. But that does not mean that a Government official cannot be punished for contempt of Court. T.N. Govindaraman Thirummulapad, AIR 2006 SC 2007 : (2006) 1 SCC 1 : 2006 CrLJ 2773.

[10223] ● Unconditional apology not tendered—Punishment.—All the respondents had deliberately and with mala fide motive committed contempt of Supreme Courts order. When they were advised to comply with the order of this Court during the pendency of the contempt proceedings, the act of the respondents in not complying was not only wilful but also deliberate and contumacious. The respondents had not even tendered unqualified apology before the Court. All the respondents were senior and experienced officers and were presumed to know that under the constitutional scheme of this country, orders of the Supreme Court had to be punctually obeyed and not to be trifled with. The Court found that they had acted deliberately to subvert the orders of the Court and held them guilty of contempt of Court and censured severely their conduct. The Court refrained from sending a copy of the order to form part of the annual confidential record of service of each of the said officers. The Court directed that the officers would not indulge in any adventurous act and strictly obey the orders passed by the Courts of law. Palitana Sugar Mills (Pvt.) Ltd. v. Vilasinaben Ramachandran, AIR 2007 SC 1701 : 2007 (4) SCR 221 : JT 2007 (5) SC 221.

[10224] ● Recording statement during course of preliminary inquiry against an official.—Recording statements of persons during the course of preliminary inquiry against an official, if these statements are contrary to the report of the incident contained in the order sheet of the Court dated 1.11.1999 does not amount to contempt of Court, unless there is material to show that the officer holding preliminary inquiry is part of conspiracy to create false evidence. Rajesh Kumar Singh v. High Court of Judicature of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 2007 SC 2725 : (2007) 14 SCC 126 : 2007 CrLJ 3753 (3757) : 2007 (7) SCR 869.

[10225] ● Deliberate and wilful disobedience of undertaking given to Court.—In the instant case, the parties gave an undertaking with the object of having a joint management and control of the company the object of joint management and control can be accomplished if every major decisions of the company are taken jointly with the express consent of the petitioner and the respondents. The petitioner in an application for contempt enlisted series of instances where the respondent were keeping the petitioners totally out of management and control of the company. Held, the respondents were clearly guilty of committing contempt of Court by deliberate and wilful disobedience of the undertaking given by them to the Court. The respondent were liable to be convicted under Section 2(c) of the Contempt of Courts Act. Rama Narang v. Ramesh Narang, AIR 2007 SC 2029 : (2009) 16 SCC 126 : 2007 (3) SCR 1099 : JT 2007 (4) SC 407.

[10226] ● Bona fide act in the course of discharge of duties.—An authority holding an inquiry in good faith in exercise of the powers vested in it by a statute is not guilty of contempt of Court, merely because a parallel enquiry is imminent or pending before a Court. This Court pointed out that to constitute the offence of Contempt of Court, there must be involved some act calculated to bring a Court or a Judge of the Court into contempt or to lower his authority or something calculated to obstruct or interfere with the due course of justice on the lawful process of the Court. Applying the said principle, the act of appellant holding the preliminary inquiry, cannot be considered to be contempt of Court. Rajesh Kumar Singh v. High Court of Judicature of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 2007 SC 2725 : (2007) 14 SCC 126 : 2007 CrLJ 3753 (3757) : 2007 (7) SCR 869.

[10227] ● Bona fide act in discharge of duties.—When appellant held the preliminary inquiry, no contempt proceedings had been initiated by the High Court in regard to the incident of 1.11.1999. There was also no other proceedings pending before the learned Magistrate or any other Court in regard to the incident dated 1.11.1999. Therefore, the question of seeking or obtaining the permission of High Court or other Court, for holding such inquiry, did not arise. Unless the inquiry by the appellant was a parallel proceeding with reference to a matter pending in Court and unless such parallel proceeding interfered with or, intended to interfere with the pending Court proceeding, there is no interference with administration of justice. Rajesh Kumar Singh v. High Court of Judicature of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 2007 SC 2725 : 2007 CrLJ 3753 (3757) : 2007 (7) SCR 869 : JT 2007 (9) SC) 92.

[10228] ● Bona fide act in the course of discharge of duty.—When a police official misbehaved in the Court, the Magistrate sent a complaint to the I.G. of Police itself requiring action against him. The Inspector General of Police, acting on the said request, directed, the Superintendent of Police to hold an inquiry and take disciplinary action against Raghuvanshi. The Superintendent of Police, in turn, forwarded the complaint dated 1.11.1999 of the Magistrate and the directive of the I.G. of Police dated 10.11.1999 to the appellant, with an instruction to look into the matter and send a detailed report. It is only in pursuance of such directive from his superiors, the appellant held a preliminary inquiry in respect of the conduct of Raghuvanshi. The inquiry was not in regard to the conduct of the Judge. As the inquiry was against Raghuvanshi, the appellant had to give an opportunity to him, to make his statement. He also had to record the statements of persons, whom Raghuvanshi stated were present at the time of the incident. The inquiry by the appellant was a prelude to the disciplinary action against Raghuvanshi. In fact, after the recording of the statements of several witnesses, the appellant submitted a report holding Raghuvanshi guilty of having used unwarranted language in Court and recommending punishment. It cannot, therefore, be said, that recording the statements of Raghuvanshi, and several other persons the request of Raghuvanshi, in the course of the preliminary inquiry, amounts to holding an inquiry in regard to the conduct of a Judge. Rajesh Kumar Singh v. High Court of Judicature of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 2007 SC 2725 : (2007) 14 SCC 126 : 2007 CrLJ 3753.

[10230] ● Criticism of Court on good faith.—The right of free speech is one of the greatest guarantee to liberty on a free country like ours, even though that right in frequently and in many instances outrageously abused. If any considerable portion of a community is led to believe that either because of gross ignorance of the law or because of a wrong reason it cannot rely upon the Courts to administer justice that portion of the community, upon some occasion, is very likely to come to the conclusion that it is better not to take any chances on the Courts failing to do their duty. Haridas v. Usha Rani Banike, AIR 2007 SC 2688 (2693) : (2007) 14 SCC 1 : 2007 (8) SCR 365.

[10231] ● Fair and temperate criticism of Court.—No Court can claim to be always right although it does not spare any effort to be right according to the best of the ability, knowledge and judgment of the Judges. They do not think themselves to be in possession of truth to hold that wherever others differ from them are in error. No one is more conscious of his limitations and fallibility than a Judge. But because of his training and the assistance he gets from counsel he is apt to avoid mistakes more than others. While fair and temperate criticism of the Court, even if strong, may not be actionable, but attributing improper motives or tending to bring judges or courts into hatred and another's contempt or obstructing directly or indirectly with the functioning of Courts is serious contempt of which notice must be and will be taken.

Respect is expected not from those to whom the judgment of the Court is acceptable but also from those to whom is repugnant. Those who in their criticism by indulging in vilification of the institution of the Court, administration of justice and the instruments through which the administration act, should take heed for they will act at their own peril. Haridas v. Asha Ram Banik, AIR 2007 SC 2688 (2690-2691) : (2007) 14 SCC 1 : 2007 (8) SCR 365.

[10232] ● Normally Courts should not be oversensitive.—Normally the Courts should not be oversensitive and should not take very serious note of any loose expressions in the application. Contempt jurisdiction is to be sparingly exercised in very exceptional cases. However, the appellant should use proper language and state corrects facts in his application. Although it is not contempt, proper decorum maintained. In this case SSP had sworn affidavit but the Counsel who had prepared the application should have been more careful while drafting the application. As certain incorrect facts were stated, the High Court issued notice of Contempt. The Supreme Court held the High Court should not have issued contempt notice in the matter. The SSP had sworn the affidavit but the counsel who has prepared the application should have been more careful while drafting such an application. They should not make incorrect statements. The language used by them should be in consonance with the dignity of the Court. The order of the High Court issuing contempt notice was set aside. State of Punjab v. Raninder Singh, AIR 2008 SC 609 : (2008) 1 SCC 564 : 2008 CrLJ 801 (802) (SC) : (2007) 4 Crimes 321.

[10233] ● Wilful disobedience of Court's order—Duty of Court.—For a proper administration of justice and to ensure due compliance with the order passed by a Court, the Court should not hesitate in wielding the potent weapon of contempt. It is the duty of Court to uphold and maintain dignity of Courts and majesty of law. C. Elumalai v. A.G.L. Irudayaraj, AIR 2009 SC 2214 : (2009) 4 SCC 213 : 2009 (4) SCR 774 : JT 2009 (4) SC 241.

[10234] ● Wilful disobedience of order of Supreme Court—Allegations against Chief Minister and Officers.—In the instant case while issuing notice in Special Leave Petition the Court restrained the political parties from proceeding with the call for band. The language of the restraint order was unambiguous. The said order was explicitly directed against the political parties and not against respondent Nos. 1 and 3. The Court did not direct respondent Nos. 1 and 3 to act in any particular manner or take certain specific steps to meet the challenge likely to be posed by implementation of the call given by Democratic Progressive alliance. The Supreme Court observed and held that the bald statement contained in the contempt petitions that violence and coercion was resorted to by members of the party headed by respondent No. 4 has remained unsubstantiated because except the newspaper reports no material has been produced before the Court giving the names and other relevant particulars of the persons who are said to have indulged in forced closure of shops and business establishments on 1.10.2007 and no other evidence has been produced to show that respondent No. 4 had, directly or indirectly, encouraged the members of his party to enforce the call for cessation of work which has been prima facie treated by the Courts as call for bandh. Therefore, respondent No. 4 cannot be accused of having engineered violation of the Court's order. All India Anna Dravida Munnetra Kazhagam v. R.K. Tripathi, AIR 2009 SC 1314 : (2009) 5 SCC 417 : 2009 (6) SCR 583.

[10235] ● Power of Supreme Court to punish person term "wilful disobedience".—The word "wilful" has not been defined in the Act. Therefore it will be useful to notice dictionary meaning of the term. On analysing Section 2(b) of the contempt Courts Act, it has been found that wilful disobedience to any judgment, decree, direction, order, writ or other process of a Court or wilful breach of an undertaking given to Court constitutes Civil Contempt. If this definition is read with Article 129 of the Constitution of India, it becomes clear that the Supreme Court being a Court of record can punish a person for Civil Contempt if it is found that he has wilfully disobeyed any judgment etc or violated undertaking given to the Court. All India Anna Dravida Munnetra Kazhagam v. R.K. Tripathi, AIR 2009 SC 1314 : (2009) 5 SCC 417 : 2009 (6) SCR 583.

[10236] ● Contempt petition against person who is not party to lis and no direction issued against him—Not maintainable ordinarily.—A contempt petition would not be against a person who is not a party to the lis and no direction has been issued against him. Parents Association of Students v. M.A. Khan, (2009) 2 SCC 641 : JT 2009 (1) SC 128.

[10237] ● Foot-wear thrown at the presiding officer in a Court proceeding.—Held, when an object, such as footwear is thrown at the Presiding officer in a Court proceeding, the object is not merely to scandalise or humiliate the Judge, but to scandalise the institution itself and thereby to lower its dignity in the eyes of public. Leila David v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 10 SCC 337 : 2009 (4) SCR 1171 : JT 2009 (13) SC 520.

[10238] ● Apology—An act of contrition—Proper stage of tendering apology.—Apology is an act of contrition. Unless apology is offered at the earliest opportunity and in good grace, the apology is shorn of penitence and hence it is liable to be rejected. If the apology is offered at the time when the contemnor finds that the Court is going to impose punishment it ceases to be an apology and becomes an act of a cringing coward.

Apology is not a weapon of defence to purge the guilty of their offence nor is it intended to operate as universal panacea, but it is intended to be evidence of real contriteness. C. Elumalai v. A.G.L. Irudayaraj, AIR 2009 SC 2214 : (2009) 4 SCC 213 : 2009 (4) SCR 774 : 2009 (4) Scale 73 : 2009 (2) Supreme 587.

[10239] ● Imposition of punishment—Validity.—Punishing a person for contempt of Court is indeed a drastic step and normally such action should not be taken. At the same time, however, it is not only the power but the duty of the Court to uphold and maintain the dignity of Courts and majesty of law which may call for such extreme step. If for proper administration of justice and to ensure due compliance with the orders passed by a Court, it is required to take strict view; it should not hesitate in wielding the potent weapon of contempt. C. Elumalai v. A.G.L. Irudayaraj, AIR 2009 SC 2214 (2216, 2217) : (2009) 4 SCC 213 : 2009 (4) SCR 774.

[10240] ● Sting operation fully knowing that BMW trial was going on.—The NDTV did the sting, prepared a programme on the basis of the sting materials and telecast at a time when of fully knew that the BMW trial was going on. Held, the programme cannot be accused of interfering or tending to interfere with, or obstructing a tending to obstruct the due course of the BMW case. The programme may have any other faults or weaknesses but it certainly did not interfere with or obstruct the due course of the BMW trial. The programme telecast by NDTV showed to the people that the conspiracy was afoot to undermine the BMW trial. What was shown by proved to be substantially true and accurate. The programme was thus clearly intended to prevent the attempt to interfere with or obstruct the due course of the BMW trial. R.K. Anand v. Registrar, Delhi High Court, (2009) 8 SCC 106 : 2009 (1) SCR 1026 : JT 2009 (10) SC 1.

[10241] ● Proceedings under contempt of Court Act—Nature.—It is one thing to say that the standard of proof in a contempt proceeding is no less rigorous than a criminal trial but it is something entirely different to insist that the manner of proof for the two proceedings must also be the same. It is now well settled and so also the High Court has held that the proceeding of contempt of Court is sui generis. In other words, it is not strictly controlled by the provisions of the CrPC and the Indian Evidence Act. What, however, applies to a proceeding of contempt of Court are the principles of natural justice and those principles apply to the contempt proceeding with greater rigour than any other proceeding. This means that the Court must follow a procedure that is fair and objective; that should cause no prejudice to the person facing the charge of contempt of Court and that should allow him/her the fullest opportunity to defend himself/herself. R.K. Anand v. Registrar, Delhi High Court, (2009) 8 SCC 106 : 2009 (11) SCR 1026 : JT 2009 (10) SC 1.

[10242] ● Contempt in face of Supreme Court.—The expression "contempt in the face of the Supreme Court" means an incident taking place within the sight of the Judges and others present at the time of incidence. Leila David v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 2010 SC 862 : (2009) 10 SCC 337 : 2010 CrLJ 455 : 2009 (4) SCR 1171 : JT 2009 (13) SC 520.

[10243] ● Contempt in the face of the Supreme Court.—There is no doubt that Section 14 of the Contempt Courts Act. contemplate issuance of notice and an opportunity to the contemnors to answer charges in notice to satisfy the principles of natural justice. But where an incident of instant nature takes place within the presence and sight of learned Judges, same amounts to contempt in the face of Court and is required to be dealt with at the time of incident itself. This is necessary for the dignity and majesty of Courts to be maintained. Leila David v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 2010 SC 862 : (2009) 10 SCC 337 : 2010 CrLJ 455 : 2009 (4) SCR 1171 : 2009 (13) Scale 351 : 2009 (7) Supreme 154 : JT 2009 (13) SC 520.

[10244] ● Civil contempt—Section 2 of Act—CPC, 1908, Order 21, Rule 2.—In this case the awarded arbitrator directed the appellant to pay principal amount with interest having regard to the interest of the department concerned the appellant had addressed letters to the respondent to adjust the award. Held, the letters for adjustment of award cannot be treated as contempt of Court within the meaning of the provisions of the contempt of Courts Act, 1971. The tenor of the letters do not indicate that there was any willful disobedience on the part of the appellant in not complying with the judgment of the High Court. P.K. Singh v. S.N. Kanungo, 2010 CrLJ 2049 (2051) : (2010) 2 JT 455.

[10245] ● Sections 2(c), 12, Contempt of Court Act—Appellant playing main role.—The counsel for the appellant argued that in the show cause notice which was given to the appellant, no different role had been attributed to him, so he could not be treated differently by the High Court in the matter of awarding punishment. The Hon'ble Apex Court did not appreciate the said contention and observed. "In the facts of the case and on the materials on record it is clear that the case of the appellant stands on a different foot. In fact the appellant took the main role in causing disruption and there was not lack of opportunity on his part in a answering the charges against him….. All the constituents of charges were stated in the show cause notice and the appellant has understood the charges and has given the reply. Nowhere in the reply the appellant has raised any difficulty in understanding the charges. It does not appear that any contention was raised by the appellant before the High Court about any vagueness in the charges or about furnishing inadequate particulars in the charges. This argument of the learned counsel for the appellant only before this Court and that too without a proper factual basis cannot be entertained. Ranveer Yadav v. State of Bihar, 2010 CrLJ 3431 (3433) : (2010) 5 JT 335 (SC).

[10246] ● Section 2(c)(ii), Contempt of Courts Act—Interference with due course of justice—Word "due".—Due conduct of any judicial proceeding is a matter of high public importance as it is inextricably connected with rule of law on which is based the constitutional mode of governance in this country. That is why the framers of the Act preceded the expression interfere with the words "tends to" and it has been further emphasized by addition of word 'due' before "course of any judicial proceedings".

We must remember that legislature does not waste words. Therefore, every word used in Section 2(c)(ii) must be given its proper and natural meaning. Thus read, Section 2(c)(ii) must be given a broad sweep so as to include within it even any attempt to interfere with the due course of a judicial proceeding. The word 'due' is very crucial in this context and must mean a natural and proper course of judicial proceeding. Ranveer Yadav v. State of Bihar, 2010 CrLJ 3431 (3434) (SC) : (2010) 5 JT 335 (SC).

[10247] ● Contempt power—How to be exercised.—Contempt power has to be exercised with utmost caution and in an appropriate case and that is why High Court has been entrusted with it. Ranveer Yadav v. State of Bihar, 2010 CrLJ 3431.

[10248] ● Section 2—Disobedience of orders of Court—Standard of proof.—High Court has a power to initiate the contempt proceedings suo motu for ensuring the compliance of the orders passed by the Court. However, contempt proceedings being quasi-criminal in nature, the same standard of proof is required in the same manner as in other criminal cases. The alleged contemnor is entitled to the protection of all safeguards/rights which are provided in the Criminal Jurisprudence, including the benefit of doubt. There must be a clear-cut case of obstruction of administration of justice by a party intentionally to bring the matter within the ambit of the said provision. The alleged contemnor is to be informed as what is the charge, he has to meet. Thus, specific charge has to be framed in precision. The alleged contemnor may ask the Court to permit him to cross-examine the witnesses i.e. deponents of affidavits, who have deposed against him. In spite of the fact that contempt proceedings are quasi-criminal in nature, provisions of Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 (hereinafter called, "CrPC") and Evidence Act are not attracted for the reason that proceedings have to be concluded expeditiously. Thus, the trial has to be concluded as early as possible. The case should not rest only on surmises and conjectures. There must be clear and reliable evidence to substantiate the allegations against the alleged contemnor. The proceedings must be concluded giving strict adherence to the statutory Rules framed for the purpose. Sahdeo v. State of U.P., (2010) 3 SCC 705 : 2010 CrLJ 2034 (2040) : (2010) 1 Crimes 195.

[10249] ● Contempt of Courts Act, 1971, Sections 2(c), 15, 23—Suo motu proceedings by Supreme Court—Maintainability.—The Amicus Curiae, Mr. Harish Salve, filed an application to bring to the knowledge of the Hon'ble Chief Justice of India certain statements made by a senior advocate (Respondent No. 2) in an interview given to the Tehelka magazine deliberately aimed at transiting the image of the judiciary as a whole, and, in particular a sitting Judge of the Supreme Court in the eyes of general public, without any foundation therefore. Prima facie, a case for issuance of notice having been made out, the Hon'ble Chief Justice of India directed issuance of notice to respondent to show cause in regard to the allegations, contained in the application filed by Amicus Curiae. Held, the contempt proceedings was initiated by the Court on its own motion and it was not covered by Clauses (a), (b) and (c) of sub-section (1) of Section 15 of the Contempt of Courts Act, 1971 or Clauses (b) and (c) of Rule 3 of the Rule to regulate proceedings for contempt of the Supreme Court, 1975, on the other hand the present proceeding is covered by Clause (a) of Rule 3 of the said Rules. Merely because the information regarding the alleged contemptuous statements made by respondent No. 1 and published by Respondent No. 2 was furnished by the Amicus curiae, the proceeding cannot lose its nature or character as a suo motu proceeding.... Hence the objections raised by the respondents against the maintainability of the present proceedings are without any basis. Amicus Curiae v. Prashant Bhushan, (2010) 7 SCC 592 : 2010 CrLJ 4466 (4469, 4470) (SC).

[10250] ● Setting law in motion on its own accord—Issue of Rule Nisi.—The message examined the evils prevailing in the judicial system and was written with an object to achieve maintenance of purity in the administration of justice. The message was exposition of Mr. Sibal's ideology and he had shown the corrective measures to be adopted to get the institution rid of the shortcomings mentioned by him. On the facts of the case, the message sent by Mr. Sibal to be published in the souvenir of the Mehfil will have to be regarded as fair criticism of his senior colleagues for their failure to bring up the Junior Bar and of those members of the Bar who were shouting at each other and threatening the Judges. The message is nothing but concerns of a senior advocate who has practiced long in this Court who noticed that the public image of the legal community was at its nadir. The article nowhere targets a particular judge. This is not a case of an attack on a Judge which is scurrilous, offensive, intimidatory or malicious beyond condonable limits, in respect of a judgment or his conduct. The article is an expression of opinion about an institutional pattern. The article by itself does not affect the administration of justice. Resultantly, the message contributed by Mr. Sibal, read in its proper prospective, did not bring the administration of justice into disrepute or impair. Therefore, it must be held that no criminal contempt was committed or attempted to be committed by the respondent No. 1.

In view of the unconditional apology tendered, it is not necessary for this Court to delve into details about the conduct of the respondent No. 3 any further. There is nothing on the record to show that the souvenir of the Mehfil in which the message was printed was sold to the public. This was a kind of internal pamphlet/brochure which was distributed to its members. Therefore, no case is made out against respondent Nos. 4 and 5 who were subsequently impleaded in the petition.

On the facts and in the circumstances of the case, this Court is of the opinion that this is not a fit case where a formal proceedings for contempt should be drawn up and, therefore, notices issued to them will have to be discharged and the petition will have to be dismissed. Hari Singh Nagra v. Kapil Sibal, (2010) 7 SCC 502 : JT 2010 (8) 56.

[10251] ● Criticism of Judiciary in National interest—Permissibility.—National interest requires that all criticisms of the judiciary must be strictly rational and sober and proceed from the highest motives without being coloured by any partisan spirit or tactics. There is no manner of doubt that freedom of expression as contemplated by Article 19(1)(a) of the Constitution is available to the Press and to criticize a judgment fairly albeit fiercely is no crime but necessary right. Hari Singh Nagra v. Kapil Sibal, (2010) 7 SCC 502 : JT 2010 (8) 56.

[10252] ● Criticism of judgment—When not, contempt.—A fair and reasonable criticism of a judgment which is a public document or which is public act of a Judge with administration of justice cannot be held contempt, rather the same must be encouraged. Hari Singh Nagra v. Kapil Sibal, (2010) 7 SCC 502.

[10253] ● Fair criticism of CESTAT regarding its functioning.—"By writing the editorial which must have caused embarrassment to functionaries of the Central Government and CESTAT and even some members of the petitioner-association but that cannot be dubbed as an attempt to scandalize CESTAT as a body or interfere with the administration of justice. What the respondent projected was nothing but true state of the functioning of CESTAT on administrative side and to some extent on judicial side. By doing so, he had merely discharged the constitutional duty of a citizen enshrined in Article 51A(h). it is not the petitioner's case that the facts narrated in the editorial regarding transfer and posting of the members of CESTAT are incorrect or that the respondent had highlighted the same with an oblique motive.

"In our view, a person like the respondent can appropriately be described as a whistleblower for the system who has tried to highlight the malfunctioning of an important institution established for dealing with cases involving revenue of the State and there is no reason to silence such person by invoking Articles 129 or 215 of the Constitution or the provisions of the Act." Indirect Tax Practitioners Association v. R.K. Jain, (2010) 8 SCC 281.

[10254] ● Undertaking given before the Court—Violation of.—In this case the Hon'ble Allahabad High Court in writ petition directed the State Government to maintain status quo and not to raise any construction at any place which had been notified. The High Court passed the above order recording the undertaking on behalf of the State of U.P. that no further construction over the interim properties concerned would be made. In SLP against the High Court's order the interlocutory order was stayed. Subsequently on the basis of news paper report a suo motu contempt petition was registered against the State of U.P. for deliberate and conscious violation of undertaking and interim order. The Supreme Court perused the reply filed by the Chief Secretary. State of U.P. to the suo motu notice of contempt and found that there had been no construction of any kind after 11.09.2009 and accordingly the suo motu notice of contempt was discharged. State of U.P. v. Gomti Nagar Jan Kalyan Maha Samiti, AIR 2010 SC 963.

[10255] ● Proceedings before the High Court initiated by filing contempt petition under S. 15—Issuance of rule nisi—Effect of.—In the present case, the petitioner No. 1 before the High Court is a practicing advocate and argued his case in person. So far as petitioner No. 2 is concerned, he was represented by more than one lawyer. We have meticulously examined the contempt petition in which there was no prayer for taking suo motu action against the appellants. The proceedings before the High Court were initiated by the respondents by filing contempt petition under Section 15. The petition was vigorously pursued and argued as private petition. From the material available on record including the impugned judgment, it is impossible to accept the view taken by the High Court that the Court had taken sou motu action. Even in this Court, the respondents entered their appearance through their counsel who did not turn up but elaborate written submissions were submitted by the first respondent.

For all the aforesaid reasons, we hold that the petition to take action against the appellant under Section 15 without the written consent of the learned Advocate General was not maintainable in law". Biman Basu v. Kollol Guha Thakurta, AIR 2010 SC 3328 : (2010) 8 SCC 673 : JT 2010 (9) 1 : 2010 (8) Scale 490.

[10256] ● Attachment of contemner property.—We are of opinion that the Chief Court had no right to make over the attached property to Government. The right of the Government to have any control over the attached property flows from the provisions of Section 88 of the Criminal Procedure Code. As no attachment could legally be made under Section 88, Criminal Procedure Code, in any proceeding for contempt, the provisions of Section 88(7) of the Code of Criminal Procedure, under which the property under attachment shall be at the disposal of the State Government, if the proclaimed person does not appear within the time prescribed in the proclamation cannot come into operation.

We have assumed that the Court had the power to attach the properties of the alleged contemnor; but have held that it had no power in law to make these over to the government. The attachment however could only subsist so long as the contemner was alive. On the contemner's death the attachment could not in law or equity continue. For, the purpose for which the attachment was made, viz., to secure the presence of the alleged contemner could no longer be achieved. Obviously, in such a case, the rightful owner of the property would be entitled to restoration of the property on the contemner's death. V.G. Peterson v. O.V. Forbes, AIR 1963 SC 692 : 1963 (1) CrLJ 633 : 1963 Supp (1) SCR 40 : 1963 All LJ 428.

[10257] ● Criminal contempt.—Section 3 is in the nature of an exception to those categories of "criminal contempt" which fall under sub-clauses (ii) and to certain categories of "criminal contempt" which come under sub-clause (iii) of Section 2(c), but not to that category of contempt which falls under sub-clause (i) of Section 2(c). But there are no words is Section 3 which may be referable to that species of "criminal contempt" which would fall within sub-clause (i) of the definition given in Section 2(c) sub-section (2) of Section 3 expressly confines its operation to those categories of contempt which are referred to in sub-section (1). Section 3(2) therefore, is not applicable to that category of contempt which falls under sub-clause (i) of Section 2(c), or which is otherwise of a kind different from those mentioned in Section 3(1). Unfounded imputation of mala fides, bias, prejudice or ridiculing the performance of a Judge or casting aspersions on his integrity—as has been done by the appellant in the notice in question—are always considered to mean scandalising the Court, and lowering the authority of his Court by bringing him and his office into disrespect and disrepute. Villification of the Judge, even in administrative matters or decided judicial matters, may amount to "criminal contempt" under sub-clause (i) of Section 2(c) as it lowers or tends to lower the authority or dignity of the Court by undermining public confidence in the capacity of the judge to meet out even-handed and impartial justice. Rachapudi Subba Rao v. The Advocate-General, Andhra Pradesh, AIR 1981 SC 755 : (1981) SCC 577 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 556 : 1981 CrLJ 315 : 1981 CrLR (SC) 87.

[10258] ● Contempt proceedings against officials of State.—The High Court seems to have proceeded on the basis that it is for the state to prosecute contemnors. Therefore, counsel for the state cannot appear for the "accused" contemnor. This foundation of the High Courts reasoning is unfortunately not sound. A contempt proceeding is often described as a quasi-criminal proceeding because it results in punishment for the contemnor. The prosecution, however cannot be equated with the prosecution of a criminal by the State. Contempt proceedings are essentially a matter between the Court and the contemnor. Our attention was also drawn to Rule 6 of the Allahabad High Court Rules framed under Section 23 of the contempt of Courts Act which provides for a notice of criminal contempt being served on the Government Advocate. This, however, does not make the Government Advocate an interested party in the contempt proceedings. Moreover, the present case deals not with criminal contempt but with civil contempt. The state is therefore, entitled to outhouse a law officer to appear in case where the contempt consists of disobedience of an order of the Court by an official or employee of the State. The further directions given by the High Court that in all such cases the legal expenses should be borne personally by the alleged contemnor except when he is honourable acquitted also appear to be unwarranted.

Where the conduct of the concerned official is contumacious, the Court can direct him to pay costs personally, if the facts and circumstances of the case so warrant. But a general direction of the kind given by the High Court cannot be sustained. Commissioner, Agra v. Rohtas Singh, AIR 1998 SC 685 : (1998) 1 SCC 349 : 1998 CrLJ 838.

[10259] ● Sections 3, 12—Allahabad High Court Rules, 1952, Rules 5 and 6—Non-compliance of mandatory provisions of Rules of 1952.—The Rules 1952 mandatorily require the framing of charges and furnishing the copy of the documents to the alleged contemnor on the basis of which the charges were framed. In the absence of the charges, a delinquent accused/ accused/ alleged contemnor may not be able to furnish any defence. Therefore, the impugned judgment suffered from non-observance of the principles of natural justice and non-ensuring the compliance of Statutory Rules, 1952. Thus the trial suffered from material procedural defect and stood vitiated. Sahdeo v. State of U.P., (2010) 3 SCC 705 : 2010 CrLJ 2034 (2042, 2043) : (2010) 1 Crimes 195.

[10260] ● Contempt—Apology.—There cannot be both justification and an apology. The two things are incompatible. Again an apology is not a weapon of defence to purge the guilty of their offence; nor is it intended to operate as a universal panacea, but it is intended to be evidence of real contriteness. In border line cases where a question of principle about the rights of counsel and their duties has to be settled, an alternative plea of apology merits consideration; for it is possible for a judge who hears the case to hold that there is no contempt in which case a defence of unqualified apology is meaningless, because that would amount to the admission of the commission of an offence. As soon as we indicated to the learned counsel that they were in error, they and their counsel immediately tendered an unqualified apology which as already indicated was repeated again in absolute terms at the second hearing. We have not been able to appreciate why the learned Judges of the High Court should have doubted this genuineness of this apology. M.Y. Shareef v.

Hon'ble Judges of the Nagpur High Court, AIR 1955 SC 19 : 1955 CrLJ 133 : (1955) 1 SCR 757 : 1955 All LJ 90.

[10261] ● Punishment—Apology.—In the matter relating to contempt of Court there cannot be both justification and apology. Hoshiar Singh v. Gurbachan Singh, AIR 1962 SC 1089 : 1962 (2) CrLJ 236.

[10262] ● Contemner to offer apology and that too clearly.—Contemner must offer an apology and that too clearly and at earliest opportunity. Person offering belated apology sum the risk that it may not be accepted, for such an apology hardly shows contrition which in the essence of purging of contempt. Debabrates Bandopadhyay v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1969 SC 189 : 1969 CrLJ 401 : (1969) 1 SCJ 533 : 1969 (1) SCR 304.

[10263] ● Employing subterfuge to avoid compliance of Court order.—Contempt proceeding against a person who has failed to comply with the Court's order serves a dual purpose : (1) vindication of the public interest by punishment of contemptuous conduct and (2) coercion to compel the contemnor to do what the law requires of him. The sentence imposed should effectuate both these purposes. It must also be clearly understood in this correction that to employ a subterfuge to avoid compliance of a Courts order about which there could be no reasonable doubt may in certain circumstances aggravate the contempt. Aligarh Municipal Board v. Ekka Tonga Mazdoor Union, AIR 1970 SC 1767 : (1970) 3 SCC 98 : 1970 CrLJ 1520.

[10264] ● Contemnor—Acquittal.—In appeal the Apex Court will not acquit the contemnor unless he makes out a case for complete exoneration by accepting an unconditional apology tendered by him for the first time in appeal. Marthi Venkata Subbarao v. Kruthis Vents Kntumba Rao, (1971) 3 SCC 896.

[10265] ● Apology tendering of.—The apology tendered was not merely an apology but was something more than an apology because what was asked of the Court out of its generosity was forgiveness; that this was sincerely meant is amply demonstrated by its being repeated again before us. We think that the contempt if any has been certainly purged in the manner in which the apology was given and the matter should have been set at rest there. It is no part of the judicial personal or other consideration to enter in the discharge of its functions. Dinabandhu Sahu v. State of Orissa, 1972 AIR (SC) 180 : (1972) 4 SCC 761 : 1972 CrLJ 39.

[10266] ● Contempt—Apology when to be tendered.—Apology is an act of contrition. Unless apology is offered at the earliest opportunity and in good grace apology is short of penitence. If apology is offered at a time when the contemnor finds that the Court is going to impose punishment it ceases to be an apology and it becomes an act of a cringing coward. The High Court was right in not taking any notice of the appellants expression of apology "without any further words". The High Court correctly said that acceptance of apology in the case would amount to allow the offender to go away with impunity after having committed gross contempt. Mulkh Raj v. State of Punjab, AIR 1972 SC 1197 : (1972) 3 SCC 839 : 1972 CrLJ 754.

[10267] ● Apology—Acceptance of.—Apology goes to sentence and may be accepted only upon a finding that contempt has been committed. K.T. Chandy v. Mausa Ram Zadi, AIR 1974 SC 642 : (1974) 1 SCC 414 : 1974 SCC (Cri) 210 : 1974 CrLJ 594 : (1974) 1 SCWR 552.

[10268] ● Acceptance of apology only for remitting punishment.—The appellant tendered apology with grace and not as a coward. The appellant produced the detenu. The appellant at no stage interfered with any order of the High Court. The appellant never showed any disobedience. On the contrary the appellant acted in obedience to the order of the High Court.

The High Court accepted the apology for the limited purpose or remitting the punishment. The order of the High Court cannot be sustained in view of the tender of apology by the appellant as well as the production of the detenu. The appeal is accepted. The judgment and order of the High Court are set aside. Arun Kshetrapal v. Registrar, High Court, Jabalpur, AIR 1976 SC 1967 : 1976 CrLJ 1539 : 1976 CrLR (SC) 354 : 1976 Jab LJ 813.

[10269] ● Apology—Acceptance of.—The elementary basis of acceptance of apology is that there is to be a finding of committal of contempt. The deponents stated that if the Court is of the view that the letter of the deponents constitute for any reason contempt of Court, the deponents tender apology. It is a conditional apology. The condition is that if there is contempt the deponents tender apology. In the absence of any finding by the High Court that the appellants committed any contempt of Court there was never any occasion for acceptance of apology. Ram Pratap Sharma v. Daya Nand, AIR 1977 SC 809 : (1977) 1 SCC 150 : 1977 SCC (Cri) 44 : 1977 CrLJ 579 : 1976 CrLR (SC) 383.

[10270] ● Letter written by appellant containing scurrilous allegation against judicial officers.—In the instant case there is an allegation of writing letter containing scurrilous allegation against judicial officers. The contemnor was acting under stress of litigation. which lasted for about 8 years in disposal of appeal against conviction of contempt. In the circumstance of the case. The apology is accepted. Ram Chandra Mahapatra v. State of Orissa, AIR 1983 SC 508 : 1983 SCC (Cri) 403 : 1983 CrLJ 857 : 1983 CrLR (SC) 218 : (1983) 2 Crimes 213.

[10271] ● Serious allegations by contemner against chief justice of High Court.—We approach the question not from the point of view of the judge whose honour and dignity require to be vindicated, but from the point of view of the public who have entrusted to us the task of due administration of justice. Having given our utmost consideration, we have come to the conclusion that it is not open to us to accept the easy and ready solution of accepting the apology and imposing a fine. We think that a contumacious disregard of all decencies, such as, that exhibited by the contemner in this case can only lead to a serious disturbance of the system of administration of justice, unless duly repaired at once by inflicting an appropriate punishment on the contemner which must be to send him to jail to atone for his misconduct and thereafter to come out of prison a chastened but a better citizen. We accordingly sentence him to suffer simple imprisonment for a period of two months. Asharam M. Jain v. A.T. Gupta, AIR 1983 (SC) 1151 : (1983) 4 SCC 125 : 1983 SCC (Cri) 771 : 1983 CrLJ 1499 : 1983 CrLR (SC) 659.

[10272] ● Contemner charging High Court Judges with corruption.—The contemner seems to think that he can deter the Judges from discharging their duty by maligning them before the public by alleging that their judgments are influenced by corrupt motives. The fact that the contemner has made allegations of corruption against the four Judges is not denied by him and indeed, he stated before us that he wanted an opportunity to establish those allegations. If we were to grant him such an opportunity, that would have aggravated the contempt. A reckless and malicious person like the contemner could have borrowed the support of some disgruntled litigants of his own feather to aid and abet him. Even then, in order to test the bona fides of the contemner, we asked him to furnish to us a list of the names of persons, particularly advocates, whose affidavits he proposed to file in support of the charges of corruption levelled by him against the High Court Judges. He did scribble a few names in our presence but that was the end of the matter. He conveniently forgot all about his tall claim that he will be able to get the affidavits of even practicing lawyers in supports of his case.

It is clear that the contemner was only trying to trick that Court into believing that he is not a lone fighter in his demand for justice against the four dispensers of justice. No one came forward to support him. No one possibly could. He is not fighting in the cause of justice.

The conduct and writings of the contemner constitute serious interference with the administration of justice, since his sole object in giving publicity to the defamatory allegations against the High Court Judges is to deter them from deciding cases against him or against those in whom he is apparently interested. The apology tendered by him is an eye-wash, a make-belief, and cannot be accepted. In fact, there is no apology to accept because he has resiled from it. He is penitent for having apologised to the High Court Judges whose character he has assailed without the semblance of sincerity of purpose or purity of means. He is not penitent for his conduct.

Very often, contemners are so contemptible that it is useless to take any serious notice of their conduct. We are compelled to take action in this case because nothing else will stop this systematic campaign of vilification against the defenceless Judges of the High Court. National Textile Workers' Union, v. P.R. Ramakrishnan, AIR 1983 SC 759 : (1983) 3 SCC 105 : 1983 SCC (Cri) 572 : 1983 CrLJ 1102 : 1983 CrLR (SC) 314 : 1983 CAR 448 : 1983 (1) Crimes 1161.

[10273] ● Appellant not to escape with impunity on more tendering apology.—Merely because the Contemner Advocate tendered his apology, interference with conviction is not proper to maintain independence of judiciary.

We do not think that we can adopt an attitude of unmerited leniency at the cost of principle and at the expense of the Judge who has been scandalized. We are fully aware that it is not very difficult to show magnanimity when some one else is the victim rather than when oneself is the victim. To pursue a populist line of showing indulgence is not very difficult in fact it is more difficult to resist the temptation to do so rather than to adhere to the nail-studded path of duty. Institutional perspective demands that considerations of populism are not allowed to obstruct the path of duty. We, therefore, cannot take a lenient or indulgent view of this matter. We dread the day when a Judge cannot work with independence by reason of the fear that a disgruntled member of the Bar can publicly humiliate him and heap disgrace on him with impunity, if any of his orders, or the decision rendered by him, displeases any of the Advocates appearing in the matter. Considerations regarding maintenance of the independence of the judiciary and the morale of the Judges demand that we do not allow the appellant to escape with impunity on the mere tendering of an apology which in any case does not wipe out the mischief. L.D. Jaikwal v. State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1984 SC 1374 : (1984) 3 SCC 405 : 1984 SCC (Cri) 421 : 1984 CrLJ 993 : 1984 CrLR (SC) 277.

[10274] ● Attorney General/Solicitor General when refused to give consent.—There are difficulties in the Court making frequent use of the suo motu power for punishing persons guilty of contempt. The Attorney General offers his aid and assistance in two way. On the one hand, he moves the Court for action when he comes across cases where he thinks there is necessity to vindicate the dignity and reputation of the Court. On the other he helps in screening complaints from the public to safeguard the valuable time of the Court.

Secondly, if we analyse the types of action which the Attorney General/Solicitor General may take on a application made to him, the position will be this. Firstly, he may grant permission in which case no further question will arise. I do not think it will be open to any other person to come to the Court with a prayer that the Attorney General/Solicitor General ought not to have given his consent. For, it would always be open to the Court, in case they find no reason to initiate action, to dismiss the petition. Secondly, it is possible that the Attorney General/Solicitor General may not be able to discharge his statutory function in particular case for one reason or other. There might be cases in which both the Attorney General and the Solicitor General are not in a position to take a decision on the application made to them by a private party. Thirdly, both of them may refuse their consent. In the latter two cases, I am unable to see what purpose would be served by the Court spending its time to find out whether the Attorney General/Solicitor General should have been given a decision one way or the other. For, the petitioner is not without remedy. It is open to him always to place the information in his possession before the Court and request the Court to take action. In case, the Attorney-General/Solicitor-General refuse consent or decline to act, their decision is not judicially renewable and petitioners remedy is to approach the Court for action. Under R. 3 (a). P.N. Duda v. P. Shiv Shanker, AIR 1988 SC 1208 : (1988) 3 SCC 167 : 1988 SCC (Cri) 589 : 1988 CrLJ 1745 : 1988 CrLR (SC) 641.

[10275] ● Supreme Court not hypersensitive in matters relating to contempt of Court.—The Supreme Court is not hypersensitive in matters relating to contempt of Courts and has always shown magnanimity in accepting the apology on being satisfied that the error made in the publication was without any malice or without any intention of disrespect towards the Courts or towards any member of the Judiciary. The Supreme Court has always entertained fair criticism of the judgments and orders or about the person of a Judge. Fair criticism within the parameters of law is always welcome in a democratic system. But the news items in the instant case could neither be said to be fair or made in good faith but wholly false and the explanation given was far from satisfactory. The stand by the Editors and Publishers that the news items were taken to be correct on the basis of the information supplied by a very senior journalist of long standing could not be accepted as a valid excuse. They cannot escape the responsibility for being careless in publishing it with out caring to verify the correctness. However, since they have not only expressed repentance on the incident but have expressed their sincere written unconditional apology, the same was accepted with the warning that they should be very careful in future. As regards the case of the concerned reporter, he acted in gross carelessness. Being a very experienced journalist of long standing it was his duty while publishing the news item relating to the members of the Apex Court, to have taken extra care to verify the correctness and if he had done so, there would not have been any difficulty in coming to know that the information supplied to him had absolutely no legs to stand and was patently false and the publication would have been avoided which not only caused great embarrassment to Supreme Court but conveyed a wrong message to the public at large jeopardizing the faith of the illiterate masses in our judiciary. He has no doubt committed a serious mistake but he has realised his mistake and expressed sincere repentance and has tendered unconditional apology for the same. He was present in the Court and virtually looked to be gloomy and felt repentant of what he had done. This sufferance in itself is sufficient punishment for him. He being a senior journalist and an aged person and, therefore, taking a lenient view of the matter his apology was also accepted, it was directed that the contemnors will publish in the front page of their respective newspapers within a box their respective apologies specifically mentioning that the said news items were absolutely incorrect and false. In Re : Harijai Singh, AIR 1997 SC 73 : (1996) 6 SCC 466 : 1997 CrLJ 58 : AIR 1996 SCW 4227 : JT 1996 (8) SC 332 : 1997 SC Cri R 354.

5. SECTION 5

[10277] ● Recovery of fines—Period of limitation.—So far as contempt of the High Court itself is concerned, as distinguished from that of a Court subordinate to it, the Constitution vests these rights in every High Court, and so no Act of a legislature could take away that jurisdiction and confer it afresh by virtue of its own authority.

Section 25 in the General Clauses Act, 1897 cannot apply. The result is that Section 70 of the Penal Code is no impediment by way of limitation in the way of the recovery of the fine.

It is true that the deposit was made for a particular purpose, that is, to secure the presence of the appellant at the time of the hearing of the said contempt proceedings. But the High Court, as a Court of record, being clothed with a special jurisdiction, has also all incidental and necessary powers to effectuate that jurisdiction. Consequently, it had the power to order satisfaction of fine imposed by it from out of an available fund deposited by or on behalf of or for the benefit of the appellant. R.L. Kapur v. State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 1972 (SC) 858 : 1972 SCC (Cri) 380 : 1972 CrLJ 643 : 1972 (3) SCR 417.

[10278] ● Fair and reasonable criticism of judgment—Public document.—Fair and reasonable criticism of a judgment which is a public document or which is a public act of a Judge concerned with administration of justice would not constitute contempt. In fact, such fair and reasonable criticism must be encouraged because after all no one, much less Judges, can claim infallibility. A fair and reasonable comment would even be helpful to the judge concerned because he will be able to see his own shortcomings, limitations or imperfection in his work. The society at large is interested in the administration of public justice. Such a criticism may fairly assert that the judgment is incorrect or an error has been committed both with regard to law or established facts. It is one thing to say that a judgment on facts as disclosed is not in consonance with evidence of the law has not been correctly applied. Ordinarily, the judgment itself will be the subject-matter of criticism and not the judge. But when it is said that the judge had a predisposition to convict or deliberately took a turn in discussion of evidence because he had already resolved to convict the accused, or he has a wayward bend of mind, is attributing motives, lack of dispassionate and objective approach and analysis and prejudging of the issues which would bring infamy. When there is danger of grave mischief being done in the matter of administration of justice, the animadversion cannot be ignored and viewed with placid equanimity. If the criticism is likely to interfere with due administration of justice or undermine the confidence which the public rightly repose in the Court of law as Courts of justice, the criticism would cease to be fair and reasonable criticism as contemplated by Section 5 but would scandalise Courts and substantially interfere with administration of justice. It is also to be borne in mind the setting in which the Court is functioning and the attack on the administration of justice. In this country justice at grass-root level is administered by Courts set up in rural backward areas largely inhabited by illiterate persons. It is they who bring their problems to the Court for resolution and they are the litigants, or consumers of justice service. Their susceptibility is of a different type than the urban elite reading newspapers and exposed to wind of change or even wind of criticism. The people in rural backward areas unfortunately illiterate have different kinds of susceptibilities. A slight suspicion that the judge is pre-disposed or approaches the case with a closed mind or has no judicial disposition would immediately affect their susceptibilities administration of justice. There is no greater harm than infusing or instilling in the minds of such people a lack of confidence in the character and integrity of the judge. Conversely, it makes the task of the judge extremely difficult when operating in such area. The contemnor is a lawyer belonging to the fraternity of noble and liberal profession. A criticism by him would attract greater attention than by others because of his day-today concern with the administration of justice in that area and his belief about the judge's judicial disposition would adversely affect a large number of persons. Therefore, when in such a back ground it is said that the judge has a wayward pen and that he took a deliberate turn in the discussion of evidence because he had resolved to convict the accused would indicate that the judge has no judicial disposition and that he pre-judges the issues and thee cannot be a greater infamy and calumny apart for the judge of the Court. People around would lose all confidence in him and in the ultimate analysis the administration of justice would considerably suffer, and, therefore, would constitute contempt. Rama Dayal Markarha v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1978 SC 921 : (1978) 2 SCC 630 : 1978 SCC (Cri) 327 : 1978 CrLJ 917 : 1978 CrLR (SC) 167.

[10279] ● Petition filed without complying with requirement of obtaining written consent of Attorney General or Solicitor General.—The petitioner filed contempt petition in public interest against statement made by contemnor against Supreme Court Judges who decided National Anthem case. The petition was filed without complying with the requirement of obtaining written consent of Attorney-General or Solicitor-General. This Court permitted withdrawal of petition with liberty to review petition on obtaining consent or in case refusal of consent was on relevant ground. The Solicitor General has declined to grant consent to institution of contempt proceedings in question. Elaborate reasons have been given by the learned Solicitor General in support of his conclusion that it would not be in the public interest to give his consent to the initiation of the contempt proceedings. After scrutinising the reasons given by the learned Solicitor-General for declining to grant consent cannot be said to be irrelevant on the eye of law; nor can view the expressed by the Solicitor-General be characterised as arbitrary, illegal and unreasonable. In the circumstances it has to be held that the petitioner is not entitled to succeed in his prayer for revival of the contempt petition. Conscientious Group v. Mohammed Yunus, AIR 1987 SC 1451 : (1987) 3 SCC 89 : 1987 SCC (Cri) 465 : 1987 CrLJ 1182 : 1987 CrLR (SC) 321 : JT 1987 (2) SC 377.

[10280] ● Fair criticism of judgment—Not amount to criminal contempt.—The operative words is "fair". In other words, in the guise of criticising a judgment, personal criticism of the judge is impermissible. To ascribe motives to a judge is to sow the seed of distrust in the minds of the public about the administration of justice as a whole and nothing is more pernicious in its consequence than to prejudice the mind of the public against Judges of the Court who are responsible for implementing the law. Judges do not defend their decisions in public and if citizens disrespect the persons laying down the law, they cannot be expected to respect the law laid down by them. The only way the Judge can defend a decision is by the reasoning in the decision itself and it is certainly open to being criticised by anyone who thinks that it is erroneous. J.R. Parashar v. Prasant Bhushan, AIR 2001 SC 3395 : (2001) 6 SCC 735 : 2001 SCC (Cri) 1242 : 2001 CrLJ 4207.

[10281] ● Filing of—Affidavit publication.—There can be no doubt that the filing of an affidavit is publication within the definition of criminal contempt. An affidavit is not a secret document. It forms part of the Court records and is available to and accessible by the public. J.R. Parashar v. Prasant Bhushan, AIR 2001 SC 3395 (3403) : (2001) 6 SCC 735 : 2001 SCC (Cri) 1242 : 2001 CrLJ 4207.

6. SECTION 8

[10282] ● Statements made in affidavit—Not protected by second exception to Section 491, IPC.—Even a person claiming the benefit of second exception to Section 499 of the Indian Penal Code, is required to show that the opinion expressed by him was in good faith which related to the conduct of a public servant in the discharge of his public functions or respecting his character so far as his character appears in that conduct. Under the law of contempt statements made in pleadings, petitions and affidavits of the parties, in a number of cases, have been held defamatory statements amounting to offences under the section unless it is shown that they fall within any of the exceptions. The statements made in an affidavit filed in the Court was held to amount to a criminal contempt by this Court. In re, Arundhati Roy, AIR 2002 SC 1375 : (2002) 3 SCC 343 : 2002 CrLJ 1792 : JT 2002 (5) SC 508.

[10283] ● Fair criticism of Judge or its functioning.—Fair criticism of the conduct of a Judge, the institution of the judiciary and its functioning may not amount to contempt if it is made in good faith and in public interest. To ascertain the good faith and the public interest, the Courts have to see all the surrounding circumstances including the person responsible for comments, his knowledge in the field regarding which the comments are made and the intended purpose sought to be achieved. All citizens cannot be permitted to comment upon the conduct of the Courts in the name of fair criticism which, if not checked, would destroy the institution itself. Litigant losing in the Court would be the first to impute motives to the judges and the institution in the name of fair criticism which cannot be allowed for preserving the public faith in an important pillar of democratic set up, i.e. judiciary. In re, Arundhati Roy, AIR 2002 SC 1375 : (2002) 3 SCC 343 : 2002 CrLJ 1792 : 2002 (2) SCR 213 : 2002 (2) SCJ 218.

7. SECTION 10

[10284] ● Expression "Court subordinate to it" used in Section 10 of contempt of Courts Act—Meaning.—The expression "Court subordinate to it" as used in Section 10 is wide enough to include all Courts which are judicially subordinate to High Court, although not subordinate administratively under Article 227, Constitution of India. High Court has power of superintendence over all Courts and tribunals within its area. So High Court can take cognizance of contempt of the Court of Revenue Board. S.K. Sarkar v. Vinay Chandra Mishra, AIR 1981 SC 723 : (1981)1 SCC 436 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 175 : 1981 CrLJ 283.

[10285] ● Contempt of subordinate Court—Power of Supreme Court.—Article 129 declares the Supreme Court a Court of record and it further provides that the Supreme Court shall have all the powers of such a Court including the power to punish for contempt of itself. The expression used in Article 129 is not restrictive instead it is extensive in nature. If the Framers of the Constitution intended that the Supreme Court shall have power to punish for contempt of itself only, there was no necessity for inserting the expression "including the power to punish for contempt itself". The Article confers power on the Supreme Court to punish for contempt of itself and in addition, it confers some additional power relating to contempt as would appear from the expression "including". The expression "including" has been interpreted by Courts to extend and widen the scope of power. The plain language of Article clearly indicates that the Supreme Court as a Court of record has power to punish for contempt of itself and also something else which could fall within the inherent jurisdiction of a Court of record. In interpreting the Constitution, it is not permissible to adopt a construction which would render any expression superfluous or redundant. The Courts ought not accept any such construction. While construing Article 129, it is not permissible to ignore the significance and impact of the inclusive power conferred on the Supreme Court. Since, the Supreme Court is designed by the Constitution as a Court of record and as the founding fathers were aware that a superior Court of record had inherent power to indict a person for the contempt of itself as well as of Courts inferior to it, the expression "including" was deliberately inserted in Article. Article 129 recognised the existing inherent power of a Court of record in its full plenitude including the power to punish for the contempt of inferior Courts. If Article 129 is susceptible to two interpretations, the interpretation which would preserve the inherent jurisdiction of the Supreme Court being the superior Court of record can be accepted to safeguard and protect the subordinate judiciary, which forms the very backbone of administration of justice. The subordinate Courts administer justice at the grass root level, their protection is necessary to preserve the confidence of people in the efficacy of Courts and to ensure unsullied flow of justice at its base level. Delhi Judicial Service Association v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1991 SC 2176 : AIR 1991 SCW 2419 : (1991) 4 SCC 406 : 1991 CrLJ 3086 (SC) : 1991 CrLR (SC) 753 : JT 1991 (3) SC 617 : 1991(3) SCR 936 : 1992(1) CCR 23 : 1991(3) Crimes 232 : 1991 (2) Scale 501 : 1992 CAR 17.

[10286] ● Section 15(2) of contempt of Courts Act does not restrict power of High Court to take cognizance of contempt.—Entry 77 of List I, Sch. 7 read with Article 246 confers power on the Parliament to enact law with respect to the Constitution, organisation, jurisdiction and powers of the Supreme Court including the contempt of the Supreme Court. The Parliament is thus competent to enact a law relating to the powers of Supreme Court with regard to 'contempt of itself' such a law may prescribe procedure to be followed and it may also prescribe the maximum punishment which could be awarded and it may provide for appeal and for other matters. But the Central Legislature has no legislative competence to abridge or extinguish the jurisdiction or power conferred on the Supreme Court under Article 129 of the Constitution. The Parliament's power to legislate in relation to law of contempt relating to Supreme Court is limited, therefore, the contempt of Courts Act does not impinge upon the Supreme Court's power with regard to the contempt of subordinate Courts under Article 129. There is no provision in Contempt of Courts Act, 1971 curtailing the Supreme Court's power with regard to contempt of subordinate Courts, Section 15 on the other hand expressly refers to the Supreme Court's power for taking action for contempt of subordinate Courts. Section 15 prescribes modes for taking cognizance of criminal contempt by the High Court and Supreme Court, it is not a substantive provision conferring power or jurisdiction on the High Court or on the Supreme Court for taking action for the contempt of its subordinate Courts. The whole object of prescribing procedural mode of taking cognizance in Section 15 is to safeguard the valuable time of the High Court and the Supreme Court being wasted by frivolous complaints of contempt of Court Section 15(2) does not restrict the power of the High Court to take cognizance of the contempt of itself or of a subordinate Court on its own motion although apparently the Section does not say so. Delhi Judicial Service Association v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1991 SC 2176 : AIR 1991 SCW 2419 : (1991) 4 SCC 406 : 1991 CrLJ 3086 (SC) : 1991 CrLR (SC) 753 : JT 1991 (3) SC 617 : 1991(3) SCR 936 : 1992 (1) CCR 23 : 1991(3) Crimes 232 : 1991 (2) Scale 501 : 1992 CAR 17.

8. SECTION 12

[10287] ● Apology—Alternative plea of.—In borderline cases where a question of principle about the rights of counsel and their duties has to be settled an alternative plea of apology merits consideration. M.Y. Shareef v. Judges of Nagpur High Court, AIR 1955 SC 19 : 1955 CrLJ 133 : 1955 SCR 757 : 1955 SCA 205 : 1955 SCJ 54 : 1955 BLJR 112 : 1955 All WR 6 : 1955 All LJ 90 : (1955) 1 Mad LJ 13 : 57 Punj LR 198 : 1955 Andh LT (Cri) 72.

[10288] ● Contempt—Apology.—Under Expl. to Section 12 now there can be both justification and apology under the new law of 1971, there could not be both justification and apology under the old law. Shareef v. Judges of Nagpur High Court, AIR 1955 SC 19 : 1955 SCJ 54 : 1955 SCA 205 : 1955 SCR 757.

[10289] ● Imputing dishonesty to Supreme Court Judges.—Imputing dishonesty to Supreme Court Judge in deciding a case and suggesting that he influenced the other Judge sitting with him, is a gross contempt calling for heavy punishment. C.K. Daphtary v. O.P. Gupta, AIR 1971 SC 1132 : (1971) 1 SCC 626 : 1971 CrLJ 844 : (1971) 1 SCWR 581.

[10290] ● Making scandalising allegation against Supreme Court Judge.—When a person indulges in making scandalising allegation against a Supreme Court Judge and despite opportunities does not apologise and instead he is given to intimidating Judges, magistrates, officer of the Court he is guilty of gross contempt calling for heavy punishment. Amrik Singh v. Delhi Administration, (1971) 3 SCC 215 : 1971 SCC (Cri) 423 : 1971 UJ (SC) 515 : (1971) SCWR 581.

[10291] ● Sentence of imprisonment exception.—A close and careful interpretation of the extracted section leaves no room for doubt that the Legislature intended that a sentence of fine alone should be imposed in normal circumstances. The statute, however, confers special power on the Court to pass a sentence of imprisonment if it thinks that ends of justice so require. Thus before a Court passes the extreme sentence of imprisonment, it must give special reasons after a proper application of mind that a sentence of imprisonment alone is called for in a particular situation. Thus, the sentence of imprisonment is an exception while sentence of fine is the rule. Pushpaben v. Narandas V. Badiani, AIR 1979 SC 1536 : (1979) 2 SCC 394 : 1979 SCC (Cri) 511 : 1979 CrLJ 960 : 1979 CrLR (SC) 421.

[10292] ● Written submissions not private communication to Judge.—Written submissions filed on the directions of Court is not a private communication to the judge which may said to be interference in the due cause of justice. R.R. Murgai (Major) v. Major P.N. Kaushik, AIR 1980 SC 107 : (1980) 1 SCC 10 : 1980 SCC (Cri) 181 : 1980 CrLJ 191 : 1980 CrLR (SC) 7.

[10293] ● Disobedience of Court's order by Govt.—In a proceeding against Government and its officers on ground of disobedience by them of a Court's injunction order directing reinstatement of an employee and to pay his back wages, it was ordered to send the respondent to civil prison (though the particular officer who was to be imprisoned was not specified) and to attach the Government property (though no particulars of the property to be attached were given). The constitutional sanctity of liberty and the protection of property will become chimerical and the processual law will hang limp if the substantive order is silent and identifying the offender is left over as a ministerial measure. Nameless humans can not be whisked off to prison even in the name of contempt by insertion of the name after the Judgment is delivered. Natural justice is a pervasive doctrine integral to processual fairplay in Indian jurisprudence. Union of India v. Satish Chandra Sharma, AIR 1980 SC 600 : (1980) 2 SCC 144 : (1980) 2 SCR 298 : 1980 BLJR 95 : 1980 UJ (SC) 241 : 1980 Lab LN 23 : 1980 Lab IC 384 : 40 Fac LR 61 : 1980 Serv LJ 61.

[10295] ● Flagrant violation of orders of University.—An employee of college was asked to be reinstated board of Trustee of the college violated the orders of Gujarat High Court, orders of Vice Chancellor, Syndicate and to forestall the order of Court filed a criminal miscellaneous petition in Supreme Court against a person knowing that he had died 11 days prior to filing of petition. Belated apology cannot be accepted. Contempt being a civil contempt contemner is ordered to pay Rs. 2000 to Legal Aid Committee plus Rs. 3000 to the dismissed employee. Principal, Rajni Parekh Arts College v. Mahendra Ambalal, AIR 1986 SC 1074 : (1986) 2 SCC 560 : 1986 SCC (Cri) 183 : 1986 CrLJ 869 : 1986 CrLR (SC) 237 : 1986 Cr AppR (SC) 237 : (1986) 1 SCWR 272.

[10296] ● Judgment of Court can be criticised.—One is entitled to criticise the judgment but one should not attack the judges who deliver judgments. It derogates the judicial institution and the democratic process in the long run. Consciente Group v. Union of India, 1987 Supp SCC 170 : 1987 SCC (Cri) 777.

[10297] ● Wilful disobedience by Government official.—Government official when wilfully disobeys the order of Court, no leniency in Court's attitude should be expected from Court as a matter of course merely on the ground that an order of conviction would damage the service career of concerned officer—Tapan Kumar Mukherjee v. Heromoni Mondal, AIR 1991 SC 281 : (1991) 1 SCC 397 : 1991 SCC (Cri) 198 : 1991 CrLJ 390 (SC) : 1991 CrLR (SC) 13 : JT 1990 (4) SC 399 : 1990 Supp (3) SCR 55 : 1991 (1) UJ 144 : 1990 (2) Scale 1000.

[10298] ● Reduction of sentence.—In view of the old age of accused who has undergone imprisonment for some time, sentence is reduced to the period already undergone. Khushi Ram v. Hon'ble High Court, Punjab and Haryana, AIR 1992 SC 2203 : (1992) 4 SCC 8 : 1992 CrLJ 3783.

[10299] ● Criminal contempt of Court.—Accept the plea of guilt of the contemner for the offence of criminal contempt of Court and convict him accordingly. So far as the sentence is concerned, we must note that his acts were absolutely unprovoked and unjustifiable. But, there are certain human aspects to the case. It is submitted before us that the contemner is a singled bird of misfortune as he had lost all his possessions in this mining misadventure Further submitted that the contemner had lost his father recently due to cancer; and that contemner himself is seriously afflicted by tuberculosis. Shri Iyengar showed us certain medical documents which bear this out. Shri Inyengar said that the out-burst of the contemner at the spot must have been due to some exasperation and his own personal frustrations and desperation at his misfortunes in life. Having regard to the physical condition and the unfortunate personal circumstances of the contemner we take a sympathetic view and sentence him to simple imprisonment for seven days and a fine of Rs. 500/- Tarun Bharat Sangh, Alwar v. Union of India, AIR 1993 SC 293 : 1992 Supp (2) SCC 750 : 1993 CrLJ 50.

[10300] ● Petition to be drafted in dignified manner.—In the present case, the petitioner, an advocate claiming to be motivated by a desire to clause the judiciary, moved a petition by way of PIL for certain reliefs. The petition was not drafted in dignified language and abounded in the use of unwarranted adjectives. With a view to giving the petitioner an opportunity to present a properly drafted revised petition, we directed the Registry that if a revised petition is filed, the same may be annexed to this petition. Thereafter the petitioner instead of presenting a revised petition replaced a couple of words in the original petition itself. On 27th February, 1992 this Court observed that the action was not consistent with the order of 11th February, 1992 by which only a revised petition was permitted and amendments in the original petition had not been allowed. We accept his apology even though we are not satisfied with his explanation. We, however, hope that the petitioner will be more careful in future in the choice of his language and in his dealings with the Registry. Having regard to his age and his physical condition we have accepted his apology notwithstanding the fact that his petition abounds in language which is far from dignified. The petitioner in his zeal to project himself as a saviour of the judiciary has made allegations against one and sundry and sought reliefs which betray confused thinking. We are not required to deal with them as we do not consider suo motu action necessary on such allegations. Captain Virender Kumar v. Union of India, AIR 1994 SC 1711 (1711-1712) : (1993) 4 (Supp) SCC 24.

[10301] ● Contumacious or objectionable publishing in newspaper.—A very objectionable article was published in a journal describing a High Court Judge as a depraved individual. High Court of Rajasthan convicted and sentenced its editor to imprisonment for two months. The High Court in its Judgement commented upon the article in the following terms. "The article in question makes its start in a very sarcastic manner by pin-pointing Justice VINOD SHANKAR DAVE against whose impartiality and judicial integrity fingers are said to being raised. Even the company of a Judge with Justice DAVE is stated to be a starting point of degradation of that Judge. What can be more contemptuous and outrageous than mentioning in the article that 'company of Justice DAVE' can convert even a godly man into a "devil" within a short span of time. Anand Sharma further wrote that on account of Justice S. C. AGRAWAL acting on the indications of Justice DAVE, the Judgeship of Supreme Court which was at the door-step of Justice Agrawal has now become only a dream. It has next been said that Justice DAVE became ready to accept the interim bail application of Mohan Lal accused because his junior Shri Biri Singh, Advocate, was conducting the case on behalf of Mohan Lal. There is further the allegation in the article that as Justice GUMAN MAL LODHA was acquiring fame on account of his various steps to make available cheap and quick justice, a Full Bench of Justice AGRAWAL, Justice KASLIWAL and Justice DAVE issued a restraint order against the treating of a letter as writ petition by any Judge. It is said that there was politics in the High Court and its polarisation". In view of the fact that the said editor was 70 year old gentlemen who had undergone bypass surgery of heart, conviction was maintained by High Court but sentence of imprisonment was modified to fine only. Vishwa Deu Sharma v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1994 (SC) 949 : (1993) 4 SCC 75 : 1994 CrLJ 1223 (SC) : 1993 CrLR (SC) 515 : JT 1993 (4) SC 358 : 1993(2) UJ 303 : 1993 (3) Scale 241 : 1993 (2) Crimes 1173 : 1993(3) CCR 282 (SC).

[10302] ● Power of Supreme Court plenary to punish any person for contempt of Court.—The power of the Supreme Court is not confined merely to the provisions of the Contempt of Courts Act, 1971 and the Rules framed thereunder but is plenary to punish any person for contempt of Court, and for that purpose to require his presence in person in Court in the matter considered appropriate in the facts of the case. The contention of the contemnors immunity from the process of this Court even in a contempt proceeding, when a prima facie case of criminal contempt is made out against him, requiring his personal hinted by the contemnor in his officiates is totally misconceived presence to answer that charge and to be present at the hearing the immunity given by Article 361 of the Constitution is not to a Speaker. The Government of India is therefore directed to produce the contemner, in person in this Court on the next day of hearing. Manilal Singh v. Dr. H. Borobabu Singh, AIR 1994 SC 505 : (1994) 1 SCC 718.

[10303] ● Contempt—Contemner ordered to give bond for observing good conduct for two years.—Since the appellant was ordered to execute a bond for observing good conduct for two years, the operation of which order was stayed by this Court on admission of appeal, one of the points which arises for consideration is whether the operation of the order be now revived on giving it a fresh lease of time. Almost six years have gone by. The appellant has not attracted any complaint of any untoward behavior on misconduct. The observance of good conduct expected of him would now, if at all, have to be in future. That apart, on merit we find no ground to interfere insofar as the establishment of contempt is concerned. Therefore, without any meaningful relief due to the appellant, the appeals stand disposed of. It is made clear that the appellant need not execute the bond as required of him earlier. No costs. Brij Gopal Chaturvedi v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1994 SC 1436 : (1999) 1 SCC 471 : 1995 CrLJ 2117.

[10304] ● Advocate found guilty of contempt of Court.—In the instant case an advocate was found guilty of criminal contempt of Court. The plea by him was that in the exercise of power of Supreme Court under Articles 129 and 142 the license of an advocate was not liable either to be cancelled or suspended. Reference in this was made to the provision of Sections 35 and 36 of the Advocates Act under which the power to punish the advocate is vested in the disciplinary committees of the State Bar Council and the Bar Council of India. Held the plea was not be tenable for the simple reason that the disciplinary jurisdiction of the State Bar Council and the Bar Council of India to take action for professional misconduct is different from the jurisdiction of the Courts to take action against the advocates for the contempt of Court. The said jurisdiction co-exist independently of each other. The action taken under one jurisdiction does not bar an action under the other jurisdiction. Vinay Mishra In re, AIR 1995 SC 2348 : (1995) 2 SCC 584 : 1995 CrLJ 3994 : (1995) 2 Crimes 381.

[10305] ● Wilful disobedience of Supreme Court's order.—While awarding sentence on a contemnor, the Court does so to uphold the majesty of law and not with any idea of vindicating the prestige of the Court or to uphold its dignity. It is really to see that unflinching faith of the people in the Courts remain intact. But, if the order of even the highest Court of the land is allowed to be wilfully disobeyed and a person found guilty of contempt is let off by remitting sentence on plea of mercy, that would send wrong signals to everybody in the country. It has been a sad experience that due regard is not always shown even to the order of the highest Court of the country. Now, if such orders are disobeyed, the effect would be that people would lose faith in the system of administration of justice and would desist from approaching the Court, by spending time, money and energy to fight their legal battle. If in such a situation mercy is shown, the effect would be people would not knock the door of the Courts to seek justice, but would settle score on the streets, where muscle power and money power would win, and the weak and the meek would suffer. That would be a death knell to the rule of law and social justice would received a fatal blow. Supreme Court cannot be a party to it and, harsh though it may look, it is duty bound to award proper punishment to uphold the rule to law, how so high a person may be. J. Vasudevan v. T.R. Dhananjaya, AIR 1996 SC 137 : (1995) 6 SCC 249 : 1995 CrLJ 4192 (SC) : JT 1995 (7) SC 484 : 1995 (5) Scale 245 : 1995 (7) SLR 228 : (1996) SLJ 185.

[10306] ● Conditional apology.—The apology of the respondent was only conditional and not an unconditional one. Public interest, therefore, demands that the judicial decision should not be pre-empted or circumvented by mere statement of conditional apology or as a fact even unconditional apology. The unconditional apology should be contrite for the acts committed by him. Therefore, the conditional apology would not be a premium to avoid conviction. Though it is open to the Court in an appropriate case to accept an unconditional apology based on factual scenario but accepting the apology and dropping the proceeding of contumacious acts deliberately done to overreach the due process of the law without compunction would amount to a premium to fabricate the Court order with impunity. Therefore, the conditional apology of the respondent has to be rejected. It is a grave and contumacious act and conduct on the part of the respondent which cannot be lightly brushed aside. Therefore, it is a fit case that this respondent should be convicted under Article 129 of the Constitution and sentenced to undergo rigorous imprisonment for a period of three months. The suo motu contempt petition is accordingly ordered. Ram Autar Shukla v. Arvind Shukla, (1995) 2 Supp SCC 130.

[10307] ● Govt. Officer meeting Judge of Supreme Court at his residence to seek mercy for his friend.—An I.A.S. officer met a Supreme Court Judge in respect of a matter when his friend had been found guilty of Contempt of Court. The I.A.S. officer stated he met Hon'ble Mr. Justice K. RAMASWAMY at his residence and the object of this visit was to seek his Lordship's blessings and good wishes and also "to beg some mercy for Shri J. VASUDEVAN". No sooner did he realise that Hon'ble Mr. Justice K. RAMASWAMY resented the prayer for mercy, than he sincerely apologised and left the place and left for Bangalore in the afternoon. It is a most reprehensible conduct on the part of the officer meeting the Judge. However, it was not shown that he met at the behest of the contemnor. The Apex Court closed the matter by ordering that an entry would be made in his CCR about gross impropriety committed by him in meeting Supreme Court Judge. J. Vasudevan. v. T.R. Dhananjaya, AIR 1996 (SC) 137 : (1995) 6 SCC 249 : 1995 CrLJ 4192 (SC) : JT 1995 (7) SC 484 : 1995 (5) Scale 245 : 1995 (7) SLR 228 : 1996 (l) SLJ 185.

[10308] ● Non-implementation of order of Supreme Court.—Supreme Court passed certain order in relation to supply of water from Jamuna to Delhi. The contemnors admitted that the order was not implemented in view of a memo of understanding between the concerned States. The contempt proceeding was dropped when the persons moving for contempt on certain assurance given by the concerned State as to supply of water did not desire to pursue the matter. Delhi Water Supply v. State of Haryana, AIR 1996 SC 2992 : (1996) 2 SCC 572 : 1996 CrLJ 1887 (SC) : JT 1996 (6) SC 107 : 1996 (2) Scale (SP) 75 (2) : 1996 (2) Supreme 529 : 1996 (2) AD (SC).

[10309] ● Contemner publishing news without knowing implication of High Court judgment.—The appellant had made an attack on the learned Subordinate Judge which was disparaging in character and derogatory to his controversy without being influenced by any of the findings and observations made by the High Court including of this Court. Thus, M.P. Mishra has deliberately done the act of misleading the public by making mis-statement of the contents of the order and, thereby, committed contempt of this Court. We do not think that he has done so deliberately with a view to undermine the order of this Court. We accept his unconditional apology and close this matter as against him. Equally, M. Gopal Reddy, being the Director, it is his duty to see that the Directorate functions properly, particularly when it relates to the issuance of the public information of contents of an order of this Court; unfortunately, he has not done it. It is not clear from the record whether it was brought to his notice before publishing or matters are passing without his knowledge from his Directorate side-tracking him. Even then Director himself as Director ultimately bears responsibility for the acts done by the Directorate. Under these circumstances, we accept his unconditional apology and close the matter. Sadhvi Ritumbhara v. Digvijay

Singh, AIR 1997 SC 1387 : (1997) 3 SCC 662 : 1997 CrLJ 1905 : 1997 (1) Crimes 248 (SC).

[10310] ● Tendering unconditional apologies by contemners.—Where the contemners tendered their unconditional apologies for the mistake committed by them then the contemners are now truly repentant and their apologies are sincere and bonafide, therefore, warning them to be careful in future, proceedings dropped. In Re., Chandigarh News Line (Indian Express Group), AIR 1999 SC 144 : (1988) 6 SCC 378 : 1999 CrLJ 27 (SC).

[10311] ● Criminal contempt on face of Court.—The action of the contemnor, both by his words and deeds, in the presence of the Court amounts to gross criminal contempt of Court. His action was aimed at intimidating the Court and causing interference in judicial proceedings. It is unfortunate and we feel rather concerned that a person belonging to the Bar should have behaved in this manner. Law does not give a lawyer, unsatisfied with the result of any litigation, licence to permit himself the liberty of causing disrespect to the Court or attempting, in any manner, to lower the dignity of the Court. A lawyer does not enjoy any special immunity under the Contempt of Courts Act where he is found to have committed a gross Contempt of Court. Courts cannot be intimidated to seek favourable orders. The action of the respondent is most reprehensible and has the tendency to interfere with the administration of justice and undermine the dignity of the Court and the majesty of law. From the manner in which the contemnor has behaved a deliberate, motivated and calculated attempt to impair the administration of justice is discernible.

From the affidavit, filed by the contemnor, he appears to be aggrieved of alleged suffering at "the hands of all police agencies". This was, however, no way to ventilate his grievances against the police agencies. As a lawyer, he should have known better. It is most unbefitting for an Advocate to act in the manner in which the contemnor acted. No system of justice can tolerate such type of behaviour. In the established facts and circumstances of the case, the contemnor has committed gross criminal contempt and we hold him guilty as such. The apology tendered by the contemnor does not appear to us to be at all bona fide and genuine in view of his attitude exhibited in Court during his questioning and seems to have been made only to escape punishment. He does not appear to be repentant at all. We, therefore, do not accept the apology. Keeping in view the seriousness of the offence committed by the contemnor it is necessary to impose deterrent punishment on him so that it serves as an example to others and no one indulges in repetition of such acts. We, therefore, sentence him to suffer simple imprisonment for four months and to pay a fine of Rs. 2,000/-and in default of payment of fine, to further undergo simple imprisonment for two months. In Re, Nand Lal Balwani, AIR 1999 (SC) 1300 : (1999) 2 SCC 743 : 1999 CrLJ 2032 : 1999 (3) Raj LW 465 : 1999 (1) Andh LT (Cr) 186 : 1999 (2) Mad LW 703.

[10312] ● Publication of incorrect and misleading matter pending before Supreme Court.—News item published in the Chandigarh Newsline published by the Indian Express Group was not only absolutely incorrect and misleading but even the contents were misleading and the news item has been published while the matter was pending in this Court. The contemnors published apology after realising mistake even before service of contempt notice. Both the respondents were truly repentant and has bana fide tendered their unconditional apology for the mistake committed by them. Both the contemnors have placed themselves at the mercy of the Court submitting that their lapse, though grave, was unintentional. Under the circumstances, while warning them to be careful in future we do not consider it necessary to proceed any further with the contempt proceedings. Chandrgarh News Line (Indian Express Group) In re, AIR 1999 SC 144 (145) : (1998) 6 SCC 378 : 1999 CrLJ 27.

[10313] ● Refusal to initiate proceedings for contempt.—A private party or a litigant may also invite the attention of the Court to such facts as may persuade the Court in initiating proceedings for contempt. However, such person filing an application or petition before the Court does not become a complainant or petitioner in the proceedings. He is just an informer or relator. His duty ends with the facts being brought to the notice of the Court. It is thereafter for the Court to act on such information or not to act though the private party or litigant moving the Court may at the discretion of the Court continue to render its assistance during the course of proceedings. That is why it has been held that an informant does not have a right of filing an appeal under Section 19 of the Contempt of Courts Act against an order refusing to initiate the contempt proceedings or disposing the application or petition filed for initiation such proceedings. He cannot be called an aggrieved party. Om Prakash Jaiswal v. D.K. Mittal, AIR 2000 SC 1136 (1140, 1141) : (2000) 3 SCC 171 : 2000 CrLJ 1700 : JT 2000 (2) SC 293.

[10314] ● Jurisdiction to punish contempt summary but consequences serious.—The jurisdiction to punish for contempt is summary but the consequences are serious. That is way the jurisdiction to initiate proceedings in contempt as also the jurisdiction to punish for contempt inspite of a case of contempt having been made out are both discretionary with the Court. Contempt generally and criminal contempt certainly is a matter between the Court and the alleged contemner. No one can compel or demand as of right initiation of proceedings for contempt. Om Prakash Jaiswal v. D.K. Mittal, AIR 2000 SC 1136 (1140) : (2000) 3 SCC 171 : 2000 CrLJ 1700 : JT 2000 (2) SC 293.

[10315] ● Handcuffing of under-trial.—Apart from the fact that under Article 141 of the constitution the law laid down by the Supreme Court is the law of the land, Article 141 mandates that all authorities, civil and judicial, in the territory of India shall act in aid of the Supreme Court. Hand-cuffing of an under-trial or a prisoner, in spite of the law laid down by this Court, is a serious matter. According to the report of the superintendent of Police, the respondents had resorted to hand-cuffing Shri Kelwa. Their action may invite an action under the Contempt of Courts Act against them but we refrain from passing any order under the Contempt of Courts Act in view of the fact the respondents have been charge-sheeted and changes under Section 220, IPC have already been framed against them by the learned Chief Judicial Magistrate. The learned Chief Judicial Magistrate shall expeditiously try the case and pass appropriate orders keeping in view the law laid down by the this Court on the subject. G.L. Gupta v. R.K. Sharma, AIR 2000 SC 3632 (3633) : 1999 SCC (Cri) 1150.

[10316] ● Advocate convicted and sentenced cannot practice in Courts in respect of which he committed contempt.—The respondent-Advocate who was convicted and sentenced in one case cannot practise in the Courts in respect of which he committed contempt until he purges himself. We do not want to be vindictive and, therefore we do not think it worth while to take any further action against the respondents. State of Madhya Pradesh through Distt. Judge, Ujjain v. Shiv Mohan Singh, JT 2000 (10) SC 491 : (2001) 10 SCC 443 : (2001) 2 Crimes 48 (SC).

[10317] ● Exercise of power to be cautious.—The exercise of powers under the Contempt of Courts Act shall have to be rather cautious and use of it rather sparingly after addressing itself to the true effect of the contemptuous conduct. The Court must otherwise come to a conclusion that the conduct complained of tantamounts to obstruction of justice which if allowed, would even permeate in our society (vide Murray). This is a special jurisdiction conferred on to the law Courts to punish an offender for his contemptuous conduct or obstruction to the majesty of law. Mrityunjoy Das v. Syed Hasibur Rahman, AIR 2001 SC 1293 : (2001) 3 SCC 739 : (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 296 (302) : 2001 CrLJ 1702.

[10318] ● Scandalisation of Court.—Proceedings in contempt are always with reference to the administration of justice. The scandalisation within the meaning of sub-section (i) must be in respect of the Court or the judge with reference to administration of justice. This Court concluded that the Courts of justice are, by their constitution, entrusted with functions directly connected with the administration of justice, and it is the expectation and confidence of all those who have or likely to have business therein that the Court perform all their functions on a high level of rectitude without fear or favour, affection or ill-will. It is this traditional confidence in Courts of justice that the justice will be administered to the people which is sought to be protected by proceedings in contempt. The object obviously is not to vindicate the judge personally but to protect the public against any undermining of their accustomed confidence in the institution of the judiciary. Scandalisation of the Court was held to be a species of contempt which may take several forms. In re, Arundhati Roy, AIR 2002 SC 1375 : (2002) 3 SCC 343 : 2002 CrLJ 1792 : JT 2002 (2) SC 508 : 2002 (2) SCR 213.

[10319] ● Discharge of contemner tendering apology.—Section 12 of the Contempt of Courts Act, 1971 has indicated a caution that while dealing with the powers of contempt, the Court should be generous in discharging the contemner if he tenders an apology to the satisfaction of the Court. In the present case the apology tendered was found to be not genuine by the Tribunal. We are dismayed, if not distressed, that despite delineating on all the steps adopted by the appellant for challenging the order of the Tribunal before the High Court and despite the fact that the appellant had implemented the order even though there was no time schedule to do so, the Tribunal has chosen to depict the apology tendered by the appellant as one without contrition. Suresh Chandra Poddar v. Dhani Ram, AIR 2002 SC 439 : (2002) 1 SCC 766 : JT 2001 (10) SC 365.

[10320] ● Scandalising authority of Court.—The respondent, who is stated to be an author of name and fame, has landed herself in the dock of the Court, apparently by drifting away from the path on which she was traversing by contributing to the art and literature. During whole of the proceeding she has not shown any repentance or remorse and persistently and consistently tried to justify her action which, prima facie, was found to be contemptuous. To frustrate the present proceedings, the respondent has resorted to all legal tactics and pretences. In view of this we have no option but to deal with the case on its merits, not being influenced by any other factor or circumstance except our commitment to protect the dignity and respect of the institution of judiciary so that the confidence of the common man is not shaken in the institution. In re : Arundhati Roy, AIR 2002 SC 1375 : (2002) 3 SCC 343 : 2002 CrLJ 1792 : JT 2002 (2) SC 508 : 2002 (2) SCJ 281 : 2002 (2) SCR 213.

[10321] ● Deliberately and wilfully violating order of status quo.—The inference drawn by the High Court, we are constrained to observe, is not based on any discussion of material on record nor has any such material been placed before us. The further assumption of the High Court in paragraph-6 of the order that the time being the essence of the matter, the petitioner must have brought this Court's order to the notice of the opposite party as early as possible to protect his interest, does not, in our view, lend support to the case of the respondent herein. Indeed the respondent brought the order of the High Court to the notice of the party concerned at the earliest inasmuch as the certified copy of the order was obtained on 18.5.90 and by the time it could have been sent to Bhubneshwar the usual office hour was over. On 19.5.90 the communication was placed on the office table of appellant no. 2, as fairly stated by Sri Patta. In the circumstances, we have no hesitation to hold that on the facts and the circumstances of the case emerging from the records the finding of the High Court that appellant no. 2 committed contempt of Court by deliberately and wilfully violating the order of status quo passed on 17.5.90 is clearly insupportable. Steel Authority of India Ltd. v. R.K. Enterprises, JT 2002 Supp (1) SC 130 : (2003) 1 Crimes 74 (SC).

[10322] ● Tendering of apology after lapse of 12 years.—The respondent was deprived of his personal liberty despite grant of bail by the Sessions Judge. The appellant has tendered the apology only now after lapse of nearly 12 years. This appeal was admitted in the year 1993. The case has been on board for quite some time. The apology has been tendered only on 30th November, 2002. The apology has to be sincere and not merely to escape the punishment. In our view, it is not a fit case where the apology tendered at this belated stage ought to be accepted. In a matter of this nature, where a Police Officer, disregarding the bail order, arrests a person because case against him is of alleged assault on one of a police official, we do not think that mere sentence of fine would meet the ends of justice. No inference is called for in the judgment and order of the High Court. Bijay Kumar Mahanty v. Jadu, (2003) 1 SCC 644 : JT 2002 (10) SC 349.

[10323] ● Criminal contempt—Statements in question made spontaneously due to emotional outburst—Apology not accepted.—The news report was based on the speech delivered by Rajendra Sail and the subsequent interview given to the correspondent. The correspondent has asserted that the news report was based on the speech delivered by Rajendra Sail and the subsequent interview. Rajendra Sail has, however, denied having made the statement or having given interview to the correspondent. There are preponderant circumstances, which objectively compel us to conclude that the said statements were in fact made by Rajendra Sail and the news report has reported the same. Whether Rajendra Sail gave interview to the correspondent or not, the speech itself, seen in the light of the audio and video recording of the speech and the transcript of the speech, speaks for itself and has the effect of lowering the dignity and authority of the Court and is an affront to the majesty of justice.

The contention that no opportunity was given to rebut the contents of the audio and video recording of the speech cannot be accepted because the High Court had, in fact, directed supply of copies of transcript of the speech prepared from the audio and video recording and had given opportunity to file objections to it, which has not been availed by Rajendra Sail.

Having regard to the aforesaid facts of the case, the High Court has refused to accept the apology tendered by Rajendra Sail. The contention that statements should be understood in the context in which they have been made as he was emotionally disturbed because of the judgment of the High Court cannot be accepted. It is borne out from the record that Rajendra Sail is a law graduate and has been in public life for considerable time and has in fact approached the Court on several occasions by filing public interest litigations in different matters. With this background, he should have been cautious and moderate and should have known the limits up to which he could go while criticising the judgment of the High Court. The contemptuous statements cannot be regarded as an ill-tempered or emotional outburst of an uninformed person. Having given the serious and anxious consideration to the facts of the case and submissions made, we feel that the acceptance of apology and sympathy in a case like this would be uncalled for. Rajendra Sail v. M.P High Court Bar Association, AIR 2005 SC 2473 :

(2005) 6 SCC 109 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 1401 (1419) : 2005 CrLJ 2585 : 2005 (2) Crimes 230.

[10324] ● Apology rejected.—Where the contemnors tender apology finding that the Court is going to be punished for contempt, such apology would be rejected. T.N. Govindaraman Thirunmulpad, AIR 2006 SC 2007 : (2006) 5 SCC 1 : 2006 CrLJ 2773.

[10325] ● Taking undue advantage.—Taking undue advantage of the observations made by the Supreme Court also amounts to interference with the order passed by the Court in imparting justice. Ram Preeti Yadav v. Mahendra Pratap Yadav, AIR 2007 SC 3156 : (2007) 12 SCC 385 : 2007 CrLJ 4685 (8687).

[10326] ● Apology by contemnor.—By an order dated 04.01.2005, a learned Single Judge passed an interim order to the effect that the respondent-authorities will be at liberty to process the applications in respect of grant of licenses for excise shops but no final selection in respect of such shops shall be made without obtaining specific leave of the Court. The High Court made it clear that the respondent-authorities will not hold any lottery for the purpose of final selection of the excise shops in question without obtaining further orders from the High Court. The said order dated 04.01.2005 was passed after hearing and in the presence of the learned advocate for the respondents. The said interim order dated 04.01.2005 was extended by the order dated 19.01.2005 until further orders by the High Court. Thereafter, on 28.01.2005 a learned Single Judge gave direction for filing the affidavit and the said interim order was further extended until further orders and the said interim order is still continuing.

It is not in dispute that an injunction order was passed on 04.01.2005 and on subsequent extension is still subsisting. Respondent Nos. 1-4 admittedly are highly qualified and highly placed Government officials. Admittedly, by advocate's letter dated 15.03.2005, it was pointed out to them that the injunction order dated 04.01.2005 and its subsequent extensions are still subsisting. They have also acknowledged the receipt of the communication dated 15.03.2005. Under such circumstances, the High Court is not justified in holding that the highly qualified and well placed Government officials did not understand the implication and/or consequence of prohibitory order in an independent proceedings and by sheer misconception though that there is no bar to issue excise licenses as was held by the learned Judge in the impugned order. A party to the litigation cannot be allowed to take an unfair advantage by committing breach of an interim order and escape the consequences thereof. By pleading misunderstanding and thereafter retaining the said advantage gained in breach of the order of the Court and the wrong perpetrated by the respondent-contemnors in contumacious disregard of the order of the High Court. The High Court has committed a grievous error of law in holding that failure to understand the implication and consequences of the order passed by the High Court by highly placed Government officers cannot be construed as an act of contempt. The High Court has failed to understand that the highly educated and highly placed Government officials have competent legal advisors and it was not open to them to allege and contend that the respondent-contemnors did not understand the implication of the order dated 04.01.2005. In our opinion, such officers are required to be dealt with effectively to uphold the dignity of the High Court and the efficiency of the system itself. The High Court committed a grave error of law by not taking into consideration the most important fact that in the course of the hearing of the contempt application the matter was adjourned in order to enable the contemnor to consider whether they were prepared to cancel the lottery held on 20, 21 and 22.03.2005 and on the adjourned date, the respondents did not agree to cancel the lottery. In such view of the matter, the significant stand being the plea of mistake of understanding cannot, in our opinion, prevail in the instant case, instead of cancelling the lottery, the respondents have justified their conduct from which the determined declination of obeying the order is clearly proved. In other words, if there was a doubt about the implication of the order of the Court, the respondents should have approached the Court and should have clarified their alleged confusion. But in the instant case, the respondents have not only violated the order but when the contempt application was moved and opportunity was given by the Court to cancel the lottery they refused to cancel the said lottery from which it is proved that they deliberately held the lottery in clear violation of the order dated 04.01.2005 having regard to the admissions made on behalf of the contemnors that there is violation of the order dated 04.01.2005 and also having regard to the learned Single Judge's own finding that "there is no doubt that the alleged contemnor disobeyed the specific directions passed earlier by this Bench". The High Court should have directed the contemnor to cancel the lottery held on these dates. The High Court also failed to consider the effect of the appellant's learned advocate's letter dated 15.03.2005 whereby it was clearly pointed out about the subsistence of the order dated 04.01. 2005 and its subsequent extension. The judgment and order passed by the High Court are bad in law and is liable to be set aside. All Bengal Excise Licensees Association v. Raghavendra Singh, AIR 2007 SC 1386 : (2007) 11 SCC 374 : 2007 CrLJ 2147 (2149, 2150, 2154, 2155) : 2007 (3) SCR 816.

[10327] ● Section 12, Contempt of Courts Act—Apology.—Under Explanation to Section 12(1) of the Act, the Court may reject an apology if the Court finds that it was not made bona fide. Under Section 12 it has been made very clear that the apology must be to the satisfaction of the Court. Therefore, it is not incumbent upon the Court to accept the apology as soon as it is offered. Before an apology can be accepted, the Court must find that it is bona fide and is to the satisfaction of the Court. However, Court cannot reject an apology just because it is qualified and conditional provided the Court finds it bona fide. Ranveer Yadav v. State of Bihar, 2010 CrLJ 3431 (3434, 3435) (SC).

[10329] ● Contempt of Court—Punishment.—Section 13 of the Contempt of Courts Act, 1971 postulates no punishment for contemptuous conduct in certain cases and the language used therein seems to be with utmost care and caution when it records that unless the Court is satisfied that contempt is of such a nature that the act complained of substantially interferes with the due course of justice, question of any punishment would not arise. The statement cannot be termed to be a mere denial though reflected in the affidavit as such positive assertion of a fact in an affidavit known to be false cannot just be ignored. It is a deliberate act. By mere tendering of unconditional apology to this Court would not exonerate the contemner in the contextual facts but having regard to the nature of the act of contempt we deem it fit of to impose a fine Rs. 2,500 each so as to subserve the ends of justice against the respondent-contemnors in default of payment of which they (each of them) will suffer simple imprisonment for one month. Murray & Co. v. Ashok Kr. Newatia, AIR 2000 SC 833 (838, 839) : (2000) 2 SCC 367 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 4730 : 2000 CrLJ 1394.

[10330] ● Contempt petition—Procedural flaws in.—It is mandatory that the places of residence of both the petitioners and the respondent are given. Yet each of the five persons named as petitioners has given the Bar Library or the Lawyers Chamber as his address. The non-compliance with R. 4(a) of the Contempt of Courts Rules, is more shocking when it comes to the respondents. The respondent No. 1's address has been given as his chamber. The respondent No. 2 has been described as "Leader Narmada Bachao Andolan" and the respondent No. 3 as "the Booker Prize Winner". Both, their addresses have been given as C/o the respondent No. 1 at his legal chamber in the premises of this Court. A more serious flaw is the verification of the petition. R. 49 (b) requires that the petition shall be supported by an affidavit. There are five named petitioners, yet except for the petitioner No. 1, no one else has either signed the petition or affirmed it. The procedural flaws in the petition are not mere technicalities. They are as vital to the acceptability of the petition and its contents. Where there is no other legally admissible evidence before the Court and the only material which the Court can take into account are the statements contained in the petition, the petition assumes a particular importance. Apart from the defective nature of the petition, the unexplained reluctance on the part of the four petitioners to affirm an affidavit verifying the facts contained in the petition, the failure to even attempt to obtain the consent of the Solicitor-General and most importantly the refusal of the Police Station to record an FIR on the basis of the complaint lodged by the petitioner No. 1, are telling circumstances against the case in the petition. J.R. Parashar v. Prashant Bhushan, AIR 2001 SC 3395 : (3401, 3402) : (2001) 6 SCC 735 : 2001 SCC (Cri) 1242 : 2001 CrLJ 4207.

[10331] ● Contempt in face of Court—Need of issuing notice to contemnors.—In the instant case the contemnors started shouting and used every offensive, intemperate and abusive language and even one had gone to the extent of saying that the Judges should be jailed for having initiated proceedings against them and not interfering with orders by various Judges of the Bombay High Court. Even one of them threw a chappal at the Judges. This happened in the presence of the Solicitor General of India, two Additional Solicitor Generals and a large number of counsels including the President of the Supreme Court Advocate-on-Records Association. Held (Per ARIJIT PASAYAT J.). This conduct was contemptuous. There was no need for issuing notice as the contemnor stated in open Court that they stood by what they did and said in the Court.

(Per ASHOK KUMAR GANGULY J.) It is clear from a perusal of Section 14(1) of the Contempt of Courts Act that in initiating a contempt proceedings and when contempt is already committed in the face of the Court, the Court has to inform the alleged contemnors in writing the charge of contempt and then afford them an opportunity to make their defence to the charge and thereafter on taking such evidence as may be necessary or as may be offered by the persons and, after hearing them, proceed either henceforth or after adjournment to determine the matter of the charge. Under Section 14(4) of the Contempt of Courts Act may temporarily take the alleged contemnor in custody but it cannot imprison him/her by way of punishment without following the safeguards under sub-section 14(1) of the Act.

The safeguards statutorily engrafted under Section 14 of the Act are basically reiterating the fundamental guarantee given under Article 21 of the Constitution. [Three Judge Bench in L.P. Mishra v. State of Uttar Pradesh, 1998 AIR SCW 3278 : (1998) 7 SCC 379 ref. to] Leila David v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 2009 SC 3272.

[10332] ● Criminal Contempt in face of Court.—Although, Section 14 of the Contempt of Courts Act, 1971, lays down the procedure to be followed in cases of criminal contempt in the face of the Court, it does not preclude the Court from taking recourse to summary proceedings when a deliberate and willful contumacious incident takes place in front of their eyes and the public at large, including Senior Law Officers, such as the Attorney-General for India who was then the Solicitor-General of India. While, as pointed out by Mr. Justice Ganguly, it is a statutory requirement and a salutary principle that a person should not be condemned unheard, particularly in a case relating to contempt of Court involving a summary procedure, and should be given an opportunity of showing cause against the action proposed to be taken against him/her, there are exceptional circumstances in which such a procedure may be discarded as being redundant. The incident which took place in the Court room presided over by Dr. Justice Pasayat was within the confines of the Court room and was witnessed by a large number of people and the throwing of the footwear was also admitted by Dr. Sarita Parikh, who without expressing any regret for her conduct stood by what she had done and was supported by the other contemnors. In the light of such admission, the summary procedure followed by Dr. Justice Pasayat cannot be faulted. Leela David v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 2010 SC 862 : (2009) 10 SCC 337 : 2010 CrLJ 455 (459, 460).

[10333] ● Criminal Contempt Shoe thrown on presiding officer in Court.—When an object, such as a footwear, is thrown at the Presiding Officer in a Court proceeding, the object is not to merely scandalize or humiliate the Judge, but to scandalize the institution itself and thereby lower its dignity in the eyes of the public. In the instant case, after being given an opportunity to explain their conduct, not only have the contemnors shown no remorse for their unseemly behaviour, but they have gone even further by filing a fresh writ petition in which apart from repeating the scandalous remarks made earlier, certain new dimensions in the use of unseemly and intemperate language have been resorted to further denigrate and scandalize and over-awe the Court. This is one of such case where no leniency can be shown as the contemnors have taken the liberal attitude shown to them by the Court as licence for indulging in indecorous behivour and making scandalous allegations not only against the judiciary, but those holding the highest positions in the country. The writ proceedings have been taken in gross abuse of the process of Court, with the deliberate and willful intention of lowering the image and dignity not only of the Court and the judiciary, but to vilify the highest constitutional functionaries. Leela David v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 2010 SC 862 : (2009) 10 SCC 337 : 2010 CrLJ 455 (460, 461).

[10334] ● High Court competent to take action for contempt.—Under Section 15(1) it is competent for the High Court to take action for contempt of Court not only on a motion being made by Advocate-General but also on a motion being made by any other person with the consent in writing of Advocate-General. U.N. Rao v. Shanmugavel, AIR 1977 SC 639 : 1977 (1) SCC 741 : 1977 SCC (Cri) 172 : 1977 CrLJ 382 : 1977 CrLR (SC) 17.

[10335] ● Criminal contempt of subordinate Court—Suo-motu cognizance of.—If the High Court is directly moved by petition by a private person feeling aggrieved, (not being the Advocate-General), the High Court, has, in such a situation, a discretion to refuse to entertain the petition, or to take cognizance on its own motion on the basis of the information supplied to it in that petition. If the petitioner is a responsible member, of the legal profession, it may act suo-motu, mere so, if the petitioner responsible advocate prays at the Court should act suo motu. This mode of taking suo motu cognizance of contempt of a subordinate Court, should resorted to sparingly where the contempt concerned is of a grave and serious nature. Harmoniously construed, Section 15(2) does not restrict the power of the High Court take cognizance of and punish contempt of a subordinate Court, on its own motion. S.K. Sarkar member, Board of Revenue v. Vinay Mishra, AIR 1981 SC 723 : (1981) 1 SCC 436 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 175 : 1981 CrLJ 283 : 1981 CrLR (SC) 72 : 1981 CurLJ (Cri) 73 : 1981 Cr App R (SC) 86 : (1981) 1 SCJ 415.

[10336] ● Contempt petition motivated.—The filing of this contempt petition appears to be motivated. Besides, the learned Solicitor General on being approached by the petitioner, to seek consent to file this contempt petition as required by Rule 3(c) of the Rules to regulate proceedings for contempt of the Supreme Court declined to give his consent on 7th April 1998 on the ground that is was not a fit case for initiating contempt proceedings. The petitioner despite the opinion of the Solicitor-General filed this petition undeterred by the order of this Court. Even when the petitioner was told so, he persisted and did not even maintain proper discipline in the Court. Recourse to such contempt proceedings is an abuse of the process of the Court when the Apex Court finds that the petitioner appears to be an advocate. The registry is directed not to entertain any other petition concerning the same cause from the petitioner in future. Vishal Jeet v. Union of India, AIR 1998 SC 2366 : (1998) 5 SCC 400 : 1998 CrLJ 3638 (SC) : JT 1998 (4) SC 232 : 1998 (5) SLT 269 : 1998 (3) Scale 662 : 1998 (5) Supreme 201.

[10337] ● Written consent of Advocate General/ Attorney General/Solicitor General mandatory.—Requirement that motion should be accompanied by written consent of Advocate-General/Attorney–General/ Solicitor General is mandatory obtaining consent subsequent to making of motion does not care the initial defect. The said law appears are expected to examine whether the averments in the proposed motion of a criminal contempt are made vindicating public interest or personal vendetta and accused to decline consent postulated in the said provision. If a motion of criminal contempt in the High Court/ Supreme Court is not accompanied by the written consent of Advocate General/ Attorney General/ Solicitor General, the very purpose of the requirement of prior consent will be frustrated. For a valid motion, compliance with the requirements of Section 15 of the Contempt of Courts Act is mandatory. A motion under Section 15 of the Contempt of Courts Act not in conformity with the provisions of Section 15 of the Contempt of Court Act, is not maintainable. State of Kerala v. M.S. Mani, AIR 2001 SC 3315 : (2001) 8 SCC 82 : 2001 SCC (Cri) 1412 : 2001 CrLJ 4284.

[10338] ● Slap on face of Judicial Officer slap on face of—Justice delivery system.—The slap on the face of the Judicial Officer is in fact a slap on the face of the justice delivery system in the country and as such question of acceptance of any apology or an undertaking does not and cannot arise, neither there can be any question of any leniency as regards the sentence. Prem Surana v. Additional Munsif and Judicial Magistrate, AIR 2002 SC 2956 : 2002 SCC 722 : (2002) 6 SCC (Cri) 1502 : 2002 CrLJ 4092.

[10339] ● Initiation of contempt proceedings by High Court on its own motion.—The High Court could initiate proceedings on its own motion under the contempt of Courts Act against the appellants. On the facts of this case apart from the report sent by the 5th Additional District and Sessions Judge of the incident, Young Lawyers' Association had also filed a writ petition. The Presidents of the three Bar Associations and the Advocate General were present and heard before initiating the proceedings for the criminal contempt.

It has been noted by the High Court that "all the three Presidents of the High Court Associations and the Advocate General arrived at the conclusion that a prima facie case of criminal contempt was made out against the condemners". This shows that the Advocate General of the State was also of the opinion that prima facie a case for initiation of proceeding for criminal contempt was made out and he was a consenting party to the initiation of the proceedings. Daroga Singh v. B.K. Pandey, (2004) 5 SCC 26 : 2004 SCC (Cri) 1521 (1537) : 2004 CrLJ 2084 : JT 2004 (4) SC 608 : (2004) 2 Crimes 423.

[10340] ● Contempt of Court special jurisdiction.—The contempt of Court is a special jurisdiction to be exercised sparingly and with caution whenever an act adversely affects the administration of justice or which tends to impede its course or tends to shake public confidence in the judicial institutions. This jurisdiction may also be exercised when the act complained of adversely affects the majesty of law or dignity of the Courts. The purpose of contempt jurisdiction is to uphold the majesty and dignity of the Courts of law. See Supreme Court Bar Asson. v. Union of India, (1998) 4 SCC 409. The contempt proceedings should not be initiated lightly. Prodip Kumar Biswas v. Subrata Das, (2004) 4 SCC 573 : 2004 SCC (Cri) 1341 (1347) : JT 2004 (4) SC 363 : (2004) 2 JCC 684.

[10341] ● Power of High Court to punish for contempt.—Every High Court besides powers under the Act has also the power to punish for contempt as provided in Article 215 of the Constitution. Repealing the Contempt of Courts Act, 1952, the Act was enacted, inter alia, providing definition of civil and criminal contempt and also providing for filtering of criminal contempt petitions. The act lays down "contempt of Court" to mean civil contempt or criminal contempt. We are concerned with criminal contempt. "Criminal contempt" is defined in Section 2(c) of the Act. It, inter alia, means the publication (whether by words, spoken or written, or by signs, or by visible representation, or otherwise) of any matter or the doing of any other act whatsoever which scandalises or tends to scandlise, or lowers to tends to lower the authority of any Court. The procedure for initiating a proceeding of contempt when it is committed in the face of the Supreme Court or High Courts has been prescribed in Section 14 the Act. In the case of criminal contempt, other than a contempt referred to in Section 14 the manner of taking cognizance has been provided for in Section 15 of the Act. Bal Thackrey v. Harish Pimpal Khute, AIR 2005 SC 396 : (2005) 1 SCC 254 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 307 (311) : 2005 CrLJ 659.

The contempt jurisdiction enables the Court to ensure proper administration of justice and maintenance of the rule of law. It is meant to ensure that the Courts are able to discharge their functions properly, unhampered and unsullied by wanton attacks on the system of administration of justice or on officials who administer it, and to prevent wilful defiance of orders of the Court or undertakings given to the Court. Bal Thackrey v. Harish Pimpal Khute, AIR 2005 SC 396 : (2005) 1 SCC 254 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 307 (311) : 2005 CrLJ 659.

[10342] ● Obtaining consent in writing of Advocate General for making motion mandatory.—The whole object of prescribing procedural mode of taking cognizance in Section 15 of the contempt of Courts Act, 1971 is to safeguard the valuable time of the Court from being wasted by frivolous contempt petitions underlying rationale of clauses (a), (b), and (c) of Section 15(1) appears to be that when the Court is not itself directly aware of the contumacious conduct, and the actions are alleged to have taken place outside its precincts, it is necessary to have the allegations screened by the prescribed authorities so that the Court is not troubled with frivolous matters. It is well settled that the requirement of obtaining consent in writing of the Advocate General for making motion by any person is mandatory. A motion under Section 15 is not in conformity with the requirements of that section is not maintainable. In these matters, the question is not about compliance or non-compliance with the principles of natural justice by granting adequate opportunity to the appellant but is about compliance with the mandatory requirements of Section 15 of the act. As already noticed the procedure of Section 15 is required to be followed even when petition is filed by a party under Article 215 of the Constitution, though in these matters petitions filed were under Section 15 of the act. From the material or record, it is not possible to accept the contention of the respondents that the Court had taken suo motu action. Of course, the Court had the proper and jurisdiction to initiate contempt proceedings suo motu and for that purpose consent of the Advocate General was not necessary. at the same time, it is also to be borne in mind that the Courts normally take suo motu action in rare cases. In the present case, it is evident that he proceedings before the High Court were initiated by the respondents by filing contempt petitions under Section 15. The petitions were vigorously pursued and strenuously argued ad private petitions. The same were never treated as suo motu petitions. In absence of compliance with the mandatory requirement of Section 15 the petitions were not maintainable. Bal Thackrey v. Harish Pimpal Khute, AIR 2005 SC 396 : (2005) 1 SCC 254 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 307 (315) : 2005 CrLJ 659.

[10343] ● Obtaining consent of Advocate General in writing for making motion mandatory.—It is well settled that the requirement of obtaining consent in writing of the Advocate. General for making motion by an person is mandatory. A motion under Section 15 is not in conformity with the requirements of that section is not maintainable. Bal Thackery v. Harish Pimpal Khunte, AIR 2005 SC 396 : (2005) 1 SCC 254 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 307 (315) : 2005 CrLJ 659.

[10344] ● Invocation of criminal contempt jurisdiction of Court by Private party.—Under the Contempt of Courts Act, the petition seeking the punishment for contempt can be invoked by a party only with the prior written consent of the Advocate General of the State under Section 15 of the said Act. This position in law is now well settled by judgments of this Court in the cases of State of Kerala v. M.S. Mani, (2001) 8 SCC 82 : 2001 SCC (Cri) 1412 and Bal Thackrey v. Harish Pimpalkhute, AIR 2005 SC 396 : (2005) 1 SCC 254 : 2005 CrLJ 659 : 2005 (1) Crimes 24 wherein it is held that prior written sanction of the Advocate General under Section 15 of the Contempt of Courts Act is a mandatory requirement for invoking the contempt jurisdiction of the Court by a private party.

In the instant appeals, it is not disputed that the complainants before the High Court did not obtain such prior permission from the Advocate General. It is also not disputed that contempt proceedings have not been initiated by the High Court suo motu either under the provisions of the Contempt of Courts Act or under Article 215 of the Constitution. This is clear from the following facts :

(a) The contempt petitions nowhere state that such a sanction has been obtained by the complainants.

(b) The show-cause notice issued by the High Court though contained an alternate clause as to invoking of suo motu contempt jurisdiction by the High Court, the same has been struck off indicating that the cognizance of contempt complaint was taken at the instance of a private party.

(c) Nowhere in the body of the impugned judgment the High Court has indicated that it was exercising suo motu jurisdiction in regard to the alleged contempt by the appellants.

In the said factual background, and there being no dispute raised from any side that the initiation of contempt was at the instance of the private party and there being no prior consent of the Advocate General, these appeals are liable to be allowed on that sole ground. Bijayini Dash v. Loknath Mishra, (2005) 9 SCC 194 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 1212 (1213).

12. SECTION 16

[10345] ● Magistrate making order under Section 144, CrPC restraining peon from executing warrant.—Where a First Class Magistrate, misconceiving his powers and exercising a jurisdiction not vested in him by law and without any justifying circumstances, made an order under Section 144 of the Criminal Procedure Code by which a civil Court peon was restrained from executing a warrant of arrest issued by an Additional Munsiff in connection with the execution of a money decree, but the Magistrate was not influenced by any extraneous consideration or dishonest motive in making the order. The Magistrate cannot be found guilty of contempt of the Court of the Additional Munsiff, because there is nothing to suggest any wilful culpability on his part. S.S. Ray v. State of Orissa, AIR 1960 SC 190 : 1960 CrLJ 282.

[10346] ● Contempt by subordinate Court.—Before the subordinate Court would be held guilty for contempt, it must be shown that the contempt was intentional. There is no room for inferring intention unless the subordinate Courts had knowledge of the order. B.K. Kar v. Chief Justice Orissa, AIR 1961 SC 1367 : 1961(2) CrLJ 438 : 1962 (1) SCR 319 : 1961(2) SCJ 6335. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) H.P. Singh v. Thakar Prasad Tewari, AIR 1953 SC 436 : 1953 CrLJ 1837.

[10347] ● Judge—His duty not to get involved in political issues.—It will not be proper for any Judge to accept the invitation and hospitality of any business or commercial organisation or of any political party or any club or organisation run on sectarian, communal or parochial lines. If a Judge addresses on a political problem or controversies he exposes himself to discussion by the public. If public criticises him for his views no offence of contempt of Court is committed. Ram Pratap v. Devanand, AIR 1977 SC 809 : (1977) 1 SCC 150 : 1977 SCC (Cri) 44 : 1977 CrLJ 579.

[10348] ● Judges power to make binding decision.—The Judge's Bench is a seat of power. Not only do Judges have power to make binding decision, their decisions legitimate the use of power by other officials. The Judges have the absolute and unchallengeable control of the Court domain. But they cannot misuse their authority by intemperate comments, undignified banter or scathing criticism of counsel, parties or witnesses. We concede that the Court has the inherent power to act freely upon its own conviction on any matter coming before it for adjudication, but it is a general principle of the highest importance to the proper administration of justice that derogatory remarks ought not to be made against persons or authorities whose conduct comes into consideration unless it is absolutely necessary for the decision of the case to animadvert on their conduct". A.M. Mathur v. Pramod Kr. Gupta, (1990) 2 SCC 533 at 539 : (1990) 2 SCC 533 : JT 1990 (1) SC 545 : 1990 (1) UJ 595 : 1990 (1) Scale 527 : 1990(2) SCR 110 (per K. JAGANNATHA SHETTY).

[10349] ● Issuance of notice misconceived as order of reference to Division Bench by Chief Justice his prerogative.—The issuance of a notice to show cause why contempt proceedings be not initiated against respondent No. 2, the Chief Justice of the High Court, in the facts and circumstances of this case is thus wholly illegal, unwarranted and without jurisdiction. Issuance of such a notice is also misconceived since by no stretch of imagination can it be said that there was any interference in the administration of justice by the Chief Justice in exercising his statutory powers to allocate work to puisne Judges and to the division benches. The order of reference of the part-heard writ petition to the Division Bench for its disposal, as already noticed, was legally sound and statutorily valid. Such an action on the part of a Chief Justice could never become a cause for issuance of contempt notice to him. To expect the Chief Justice to say so in response to the show cause notice before the single Judge would be adding insult to injury. The direction to issue show cause notice to the Chief Justice, respondent No. 2 being totally misconceived, illegal and without any jurisdiction and is wholly unsustainable. State of Rajasthan v. Prakash Chand, AIR 1998 SC 1344 : (1998) 1 SCC 1 : 1998 CrLJ 2012 (2026)(SC).

[10350] ● Criminal PC not applicable in procedure.—Criminal Procedure Code does not apply in the procedure. Sukhdev Singh v. Teja Singh, AIR 1954 SC 186 : 1954 SCR 454 : 1954 SCJ 67 : 9 DLR (SC) 120.

[10351] ● Contempt—Violation of order of Court.—In case of charge of contempt for violation of order of Court it is not necessary that the order should be officially served. But those assert the knowledge of contemnors are to prove the same. Aligarh Municipality Board v. Ekka Tonga Mazdoor Union, AIR 1970 SC 1767 : (1970) 3 SCC 98 : 1970 CrLJ 1520.

[10352] ● Standard of proof.—Standard of proof is like one in a criminal case. Particularly when the act complained of is done by one acting under the colour of his office as a judicial officer strict proof is necessary. Wrong order or even an act of usurpation of jurisdiction committed by a judicial officer owing to an error of Judgment or miscomprehension of correct legal position does not fall within the definition of criminal contempt. S. Abdul Karim v. M.K. Prakash, AIR 1976 SC 859 : (1976) 1 SCC 975 : 1976 SCC (Cri) 217 : 1976 CrLJ 641 : 1976 Cur LJ (Cri) 50 : 1976 KerLJ 184.

[10354] ● Summary procedure.—The special feature of the procedure to be followed in a contempt proceeding is the summary procedure which is recognized not only in India but also abroad. This has long been practiced in India also. Pritam Lal v. High Court of M.P., Jabalpur through Registrar, AIR 1992 SC 904 : 1992 CrLJ 1269 : 1992 CrLR (SC) 244 : 1992 (1) Crimes 1012.

[10355] ● Procedure under CrPC or Evidence Act not attracted.—It has repeatedly been held by this Court that the procedure prescribed either under the Code of Criminal Procedure or under the Evidence Act is not attracted to the proceedings initiated under Section 15 of the Contempt of Courts Act. The High Court can deal with such matters summarily and adopt its own procedure. The only caution that has to be observed by the Court in exercising this inherent power of summary procedure is that the procedure followed must be fair and the condemners are made aware of the charges levelled against them and given a fair and reasonable opportunity. Daroga Singh v. B.K. Pandey, AIR 2004 SC 2579 : (2004) 5 SCC 26 : 2004 SCC (Cri) 1521 (1538) : 2004 CrLJ 2084 : JT 2004 (4) SC 608 : (2004) 2 Crimes 423.

[10356] ● Impleading private party in contempt petition subject matter between Court and contemnor.—In the instant case the Supreme Court held : "The High Court was clearly in error in impleading a private party in a contempt petition which is subject-matter between the Court and the contemnor we are also of the view that the impugned order of directing demolition of the alleged unauthorised construction of the temple on the land could not have been passed by the High Court without deciding the question whether any contempt was committed by the contemnors, and was required to be purged. For the aforesaid reasons, we allow the appeals. Both the impugned orders are set aside. The contempt petition is pending before the High Court. We remit the matter to the High Court for taking a decision in the pending contempt petition in accordance with law and as expeditiously as possible." B.K. Savithri v. B.V.S. Anand, (2005) 10 SCC 207 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 1502.

14. SECTION 18

[10357] ● Contemnor entitled to notice and opportunity.—However gross the contemnor may be the contemnor is entitled to a notice and an opportunity of hearing before holding him guilty and passing an order of imprisonment. Deepak Kumar Prahladka v. Prabha Shankar Mishra, AIR 2004 SC 3227 : (2004) 5 SCC 217 : 2004 CrLJ 2847 (2849) : 2004 (3) Crimes 22.

[10358] ● Presiding Judge respondent in contempt petition not to hear petition.—Where the presiding Judge is respondent in the contempt petition, the contempt petition should not be heard and disposed of by there Judges. The Judges should not only be done but should also appear to have been done. Deepak Kumar Prahladka v. Prabha Shankar Mishra, AIR 2004 SC 3227 : (2004) 5 SCC 217 : 2004 CrLJ 2847 (2849) : 2004 (3) Crimes 22.

[10359] ● Section 18—Scope.—Under Section 15 of M.R.T.P. Act, the Act, action for criminal contempt, other than a contempt referred to in Section 14 of the Act, can be taken. Under Section 14, action can be taken if the contempt has been committed in the presence of or hearing of the Court. Section 18 lays down that every case of criminal contempt under Section 15 shall be heard and determined by a Bench of not less than two Judges which would obviously show that in the case of the Commission, a proceeding for criminal contempt has to be heard and determined by a Bench of not less than two members. Commission to be established under Section 5 of the M.R.T.P. Act shall comprise a Chairman and not less than two and not more than eight members to be appointed by the Central Government which shows that the Commission would consist of a Chairman and at least two members. Language of Section 18 of the Act that 'criminal contempt under Section 15 shall be heard and determined by a Bench of not less than two Judges' is very clear and unequivocal and in case of criminal contempt, the contempt proceedings has to be heard and determined by a Bench of not less than two Judges. As the Commission consists of Chairman and at least two members, the contempt proceeding for punishing the appellant for criminal contempt ought to have been heard by the Chairman along with another member or the Chairman could have assigned the matter for hearing to any two members of the Commission but he alone was not justified in hearing and determining the proceeding which was in violation of the provisions of Section 18 of the Act. Therefore, the impugned order passed by the Chairman is liable to be set aside on this ground alone and the matter has to be remitted to the Commission for disposal of the contempt proceeding in terms of Section 15 of the Act. J.K. Gupta v. D.G. Investigation and Registration, 2005 CrLJ 678 (681) : 2004 (4) Crimes 362.

[10360] ● Order refusing to initiate contempt proceeding.—Order of the High Court refusing to initiate proceedings on motion for contempt is not appealable even though the Supreme Court may interfere with the order by granting special leave to appeal against such order. Baradakanta Mishra v. Mr. Justice Gatikrushna Misra, C.J. of Orissa High Court, AIR 1974 SC 2255 : (1975) 3 SCC 535 : 1975 CrLJ 1 : 1975 (1) SCR 524.

[10361] ● No statutory or common law right entitling order for acquittal.—It is a settled law that no one has a statutory or common law right to say that he is entitled as a matter of course to an order for committal because the alleged contemnor is guilty of contempt. Baradakanta Mishra v. Mr. Justice Gatikrushna Misra, C.J. of Orissa High Court, AIR 1974 SC 2255 : (1975) 3 SCC 535 : 1975 SCC (Cri) 99 : 1975 CrLJ 1 : 1975 (1) SCR 524.

[10362] ● Appreciation of evidence—Inconsistent versions of occurrence.—The present is a case wherein the prosecution witnesses have come out with two inconsistent versions of the occurrence. One version is contained in the evidence of witnesses before the Court while the other is contained in their statements made before the police. In view of the contradictory versions, the conviction of the accused cannot be sustained. State of Haryana v. Gurdial Singh, AIR 1974 SC 1871 : (1974) 4 SCC 494 : 1974 SCC (Cri) 530 (536) : 1974 CrLJ 1286 : 1974 CrLR (SC) 417 : (1974) 3 SCR 657.

[10363] ● False evidence.—The fact that Karar Ahmad stated at one place in the course of his deposition that he did not know the appellants and stated at another place that he knew them for about two or three years, would not go to show that Karar Ahmad's evidence was false. Dharamvir v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1974 SC 1156 : (1974) 4 SCC 150 : 1974 SCC (Cri) 352 (353) : 1974 CrLJ 812.

[10364] ● Failure of defence to cross-examine eye witnesses about omission in statement before Police.—Section 145 of the evidence Act is not intended to exclude from evidence what is relevant and admitted, and, therefore, a proved omission having due effect in the assessment of probabilities. This section applies only to contradiction. If there are omissions in the previous statement which do not amount to contradictions but throw some doubt on the veracity of what was omitted, the uncertainty or doubt may be capable of removal by questions in re-examination. It is not possible to lay down a general rule as to what effect a particular omission from a previous statement should have on the probative value of what was so omitted by a witness. The effect will depend upon the totality of proved facts and circumstances in which the omission might have taken place. It will often be determined by the importance of what was omitted. Laxman v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1974 SC 308 : (1974) 3 SCC 704 : 1974 SCC (Cri) 228 : 1974 CrLJ 369.

[10365] ● Admission substantive evidence.—Admission is substantive evidence of the fact admitted while a previous statement used to contradict a witness does not become substantive evidence and merely serves the purpose of throwing doubt on the veracity of the witness. Biswanath Prasad v. Dwarka Prasad, AIR 1974 SC 117 : (1974) 1 SCC 78.

[10366] ● Failure of Court to confront witness with his previous statement.—Court when examined one witness as CW, but failed to confront him with his previous statement to police, it was held there is no irregularity because the language of Section 162 though wide is not explicit or specific enough to extend the prohibition to the use of wide and special powers of the Court to question a witness expressly and explicitly given by Section 165, Evidence Act. Raghunandan v. State of U.P., AIR 1974 SC 463 : (1974) 4 SCC 186 : 1974 CrLJ 453.

[10367] ● Prosecution witnesses can be contradicted by reference to their previous statement.—Court witnesses cannot be contradicted by reference to their previous statement to police under Section 161, Criminal Procedure Code; only prosecution witnesses can be contradicted.Shakila Khader v. Nauser Gama, AIR 1975 SC 1324 : (1975) 4 SCC 122 : 1975 SCC (Cri) 379 : 1975 CrLJ 1105 : (1975) 2 SCWR 130 : (1975) 2 Andh Pr LJ (SC) 9.

[10368] ● Appreciation of evidence.—Where the evidence of the witnesses for the prosecution is totally inconsistent with the medical evidence or the evidence of the ballistic expert, this is a most fundamental defect in the prosecution case and unless reasonably explained, it is sufficient to discredit the entire case. Ram Narain Jaggar Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1975 SC 1727 : (1975) 4 SCC 497 : 1975 SCC (Cri) 571 (581) : 1975 CrLJ 1500 : 1975 CrLR (SC) 447 : 1975 Cr App R (SC) 264 : (1976) 1 SCR 27.

[10369] ● Statement made under Section 161, CrPC during investigation not admissible.—In the first place the statement of witness is absolutely inadmissible because it was a statement made under Section 161 of the Code of Criminal Procedure during investigation of the cross-case which was not at all admissible in the present case. Secondly, before the attention of the Investigating Officer could be drawn to the statement it should have been put to the witness which was not done. In these circumstances, therefore, this statement must be excluded from consideration. Gajendra Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1975 SC 1703 : (1975) 4 SCC 241 : 1975 SCC (Cri) 499 (503, 504) : 1975 CrLJ 1494 : 1975 CrLR (SC) 388.

[10370] ● Statement recorded under Section 161, CrPC not admissible in evidence.—Statements recorded under Section 161 Criminal Procedure Code is not admissible in evidence. It can be used only to contradict the author thereof. The procedure used to contradict is to confront the witness with the contradiction and to ask the IO about the contradiction. Poddanarayan v. State of A.P., AIR 1975 SC 1252 : (1975) 4 SCC 153 : 1975 SCC (Cri) 427 : 1975 CrLJ 1062 : 1975 All Cr C 201.

[10371] ● Interlocutory order pertaining purely to procedure of Court—Not appealable.—An order which is not a decision punishing for contempt but pertaining purely to the procedure of the Court directing that all points arising would be heard together is an interlocutory order. Appeal against such an order is not maintainable. Baradakanta Mishra v. Mr. Justice Gatikrushna Misra, C.J. of Orissa High Court, AIR 1976 SC 1206 : (1977) 3 SCC 345 : 1976 SCC (Cri) 532 : 1976 CrLJ 944.

[10372] ● Order merely initiating contempt proceeding.—An order merely initiating the proceedings without anything further does not decide anything against the alleged contemnor and cannot be repealed against as a matter of right under Section 19. In a given case special leave may be granted under Article 136 of the Constitution from an order initiating the proceeding. But that is entirely a different matter. Purshottamn Das Goyal v. Mr. Justice B.S. Dhilon, AIR 1978 SC 1014 : 1978 CrLJ 772 : (1978) 3 SCR 510. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Union of India v. Marion Cabral, AIR 1982 SC 691 : (1982) 3 SCC 262 : (1978) 2 SCC 370 : 1982 CrLJ 187 : 1982 CrLR (SC) 51 : 1982 Cr App R (SC) 31.

[10373] ● Contempt—Conviction—Appeal against.—Ordinarily, it is true that this Court while hearing an appeal against a conviction for contempt of Court would confine its attention to the material which has received consideration of the High Court while adjudging the contemner guilty. However, there would be no lack of jurisdiction to take into consideration the passages in respect of which notice for contempt was issued and served upon the contemner. But the wider question of law apart, we propose to confine ourselves only to the material which has received the consideration of the High Court. Rama Dayal Markarha v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1978 SC 921 : (1978) 2 SCC 630 : 1978 SCC (Cri) 327 : 1978 CrLJ 917 : 1978 CrLR (SC) 167.

[10374] ● Appeal against order dropping proceedings.—Appeal against the order dropping the proceedings is not maintainable. The complainant may in appropriate cases invoke the jurisdiction of Supreme Court under Article 136 of the Constitution in the larger interest of administration of justice. State of Maharashtra v. Mahbood S. Allibhoy, AIR 1996 SC 2131 : (1996) 4 SCC 411 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 675 : 1996 CrLJ 2879.

[10375] ● Appeal against order dropping proceeding for contempt or refusing to initiate proceeding.—No appeal is maintainable against an order dropping proceeding for contempt or refusing to initiate a proceeding for contempt. But even if no appeal is maintainable on behalf of the person at whose instance a proceeding for contempt had been initiated and later dropped or whose petition for initiating contempt proceedings has been dismissed, is not without any remedy. In appropriate cases he can invoke the jurisdiction of this Court under Article 136 of the Constitution. State of Maharashtra v. Mahboob S. Allibhoy, AIR 1996 SC 2131 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 675 : 1996 CrLJ 2879 : (1996) 4 SCC 411 : JT 1996 (6) SC 151.

[10376] ● Appeal against order of Single Judge acquitting contemner—Maintainability.—Appeal to Division Bench against the order of Single Judge acquitting the alleged contemnor from the charge of contempt is not maintainable. J.S. Parihar v. Garpat Duggar, AIR 1997 SC 113 : (1996) 6 SCC 29 : JT 1996 (9) SC 608 : 1996 (7) AC (SC) 710 : 1996 (6) SLR 723.

[10377] ● Interference by Appellate Court when.—The Appellate Court will not interfere unless the order is totally perverse. The contempt jurisdiction is not to be invoked to enable the appellant to wreck personal vengeance against the alleged contemners. N.C. Das v. M.A. Mohsin, AIR 1997 SC 3805 : (1997) 7 SCC 438 : 1997 CrLJ 4410.

[10378] ● Jurisdiction and power of Supreme Court and High Court under Articles 129 and 215 of Constitution.—The jurisdiction contemplated by Articles 129 and 215 of the Constitution is inalienable. It cannot be taken away or whittled down by any legislative enactment subordinate to the Constitution. I. Sudhakar Prasad v. Government of A.P., (2001) 1 SCC 516. The provisions of the Contempt of Courts Act, 1971 are in addition to and not in derogation of Articles 129 and 215 of the Constitution. The provisions of Contempt of Courts Act, 1971 cannot be used for limiting or regulating the exercise of jurisdiction contemplated by the said two Articles.

[10379] ● Power of CATS to punish for contempt.—Administrative Tribunals set up under the provisions of Administrative Tribunals Act do have power to punish for the contempt. Any order or decision of the Tribunal punishing for contempt shall be appealable under Section 19 of the Act only to the Supreme Court. T. Sudhakar Prasad v. Government of Andhra Pradesh, 2000 Supp (5) SCR 610 : (2001) 1 SCC 516.

[10380] ● Rightness or wrongness of order cannot be urged in contempt proceedings.—If any part concerned is aggrieved by the order which in its opinion is wrong or against rules or its implementation is neither practicable nor feasible, it should always either approach to the Court that passed the order to invoke jurisdiction of the Appellate Court. Rightness or wrongness of the order cannot be urged in contempt proceedings. Right or wrong the order has to be obeyed. Flouting an order of the Court would render the party liable for contempt. While dealing with an application for contempt the Court cannot traverse beyond the order, non-compliance of which is alleged. In other words, it cannot say what should not have done or what should have been done. It cannot test correctness or otherwise of the order or give additional direction or delete any direction. That would be exercising review jurisdiction while dealing with an application for initiation of contempt proceedings. The same would be impermissible and indefensible. State of Bihar v. Rajendra Singh, AIR 2004 SC 4419 : (2007) 15 SCC 688 : 2004 CrLJ 4187 (4188, 4189).

[10381] ● Contempt proceeding against person not party in original writ proceedings.—The question as to whether a person although not a party in the original writ proceedings, could be proceeded against is a debatable. Such a question, therefore, was required to be determined at threshold. If prima facie two views are possible and unless its is firmly held that the respondent No. 1 not only was bound by the direction issued by the High Court but he had also defied it wilfully and deliberately he cannot be punished for commission of the contempt. Parents Association of Students v. M.A. Khan, (2009) 2 SCC 641 : 2008 (17) SCR 735 : JT 2009 (1) SC 128.

[10383] ● Limitation for initiating proceedings for contempt.—The heading of Section 20 of the Contempt of Courts Act, 1971 is "limitation for actions for contempt". Strictly speaking, this section does not provide limitation in the sense in which the term is understood in the Limitation Act. Section 5 of the Limitation Act also does not, therefore, apply. Section 20 strikes at the jurisdiction of the Court to initiate any proceedings for contempt. Om Prakash Jaiswal v. D.K. Mittal, AIR 2000 SC 1136 (1140) : (2000) 3 SCC 171 : 2000 CrLJ 1700 : JT 2000 (2) SC 293.

[10384] ● Filing of application for initiating proceedings for contempt.—Filing of an application or petition for initiating proceedings for contempt or a mere receipt of such reference by the Court does not amount to initiation of the proceedings by Court. On receiving any such document it is usual with the Courts to commence some proceedings by employing an expression such as "admit", "rule", "issue notice" or "issue notice to show cause why proceedings for contempt be not initiated." In all such cases the notice is issued either in routine or because the Court has not yet felt satisfied that a case for initiating any proceedings for contempt has been made out and, therefore, the Court calls upon the opposite party to admit or deny the allegations made or to collect more facts so as to satisfy itself if a case for initiating the proceedings for contempt was made out, such a notice is certainly anterior to initiation. The tenor of the notice is itself suggestive of the fact that in spite of having applied its mind to the allegations and the material placed before it, the Court was not satisfied of the need for initiating proceedings for contempt; it was still desirous of ascertaining facts or collecting further material whereon to formulate such opinion. It is only when the Court has formed an opinion that a prima facie case for initiating proceedings for contempt is made out and that the respondents or the alleged contemnors should be called upon to show cause why they should not be punished then the Court can be said to have initiated proceedings for contempt. Om Prakash Jaiswal v. D.K. Mittal, AIR 2000 SC 1136 (1139) : (2000) 3 SCC 171 : 2000 CrLJ 1700 : JT 2000 (2) SC 293.

17. SECTION 21

[10385] ● Contempt conviction—Appeal against.—Ordinarily, it is true that this Court while hearing an appeal against a conviction for contempt of Court would confine its attention to the material which has received consideration of the High Court while adjudging the contemner guilty. However, there would be no lack of jurisdiction to take into consideration the passages in respect of which notice for contempt was issued and served upon the contemner. But the wider question of law apart, we propose to confine ourselves only to the material which has received the consideration of the High Court. Rama Dayal Markarha v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1978 SC 921 : (1978) 2 SCC 630 : 1978 SCC (Cri) 327 : 1978 CrLJ 917 : 1978 CrLR (SC) 167.

[10386] ● Contempt—Punishment.—State Bank of India has intimated the 1st respondent on

7-9-1994 that the total sum of Rs. 24,41,821.74 has been credited to his Deposit Account. It was transferred to the Personal account of the 1st respondent on 8-9-1994. From 8-9-1994 till 14-9-1994 no step was taken to expedite the refund to be made. A casual statement is made that on 14-9-1994 the letter of the petitioner's advocate was endorsed to the Cash Department. On a perusal of the material on record and in particular the counter affidavit filed by the first respondent in this contempt petition itself, it is clear that the first respondent was absolutely careless and indifferent to give effect to the orders passed by this Court till the learned Single Judge of the Calcutta High Court made the order on September 2, 1994. The first respondent would appear to have thought that delay is a safe route to tide over the devil and deep sea forsaking constitutional duty cast on him under Article 142 of the Constitution, as an arm of the Court, to effectuate the order passed by this Court dated August 16, 1994. His reprehensible conduct and indifference to implement the order of this Court calls for strong condemnation and in our opinion, he is unworthy to hold any office of responsibility. The same need to be entered in his confidential character rolls. The Hon'ble Chief Justice of the High Court of Calcutta would look into his conduct to take action as is appropriate in this behalf. However, no one shall be left in lurking doubt that by maneuver or otherwise one would get over non-implementation of the order of the Court and was successful in its avoidance or seem to be defeated. The arm of the Court is long enough to reach injustice wherever it is found, which should be dealt with appropriately. The learned Single Judge passed final order or review application on December 23, 1994, setting aside the order of the Division Bench to which he was a member. Abhijit Tea Company Pvt. Ltd. v. Terai Tea Co. (P) Ltd., (1996) 1 SCC 589 : 1996 CrLJ 895.

[10387] ● Allahabad High Court Rules, Rr. 5, 6—Contempt proceedings—Procedure.—While initiating contempt proceeding, the Court has to frame the charges and serve the same alongwith other relevant material upon the alleged contemnor. This is a mandatory requirement under the Rules, 1952. Sahdeo v. State of U.P., (2010) 3 SCC 705 : 2010 CrLJ 2034 (2041) (SC) : (2010) 1 Crimes 195.

CONTEMPT OF SUPREME COURT AND HIGH COURT

[10388] ● Nature and extent of punishment.—Parliament by virtue of Entry 77 List I is competent to enact a law relating to the powers of the Supreme Court with regard to contempt of itself and such a law may prescribe the nature of punishment which may be imposed on a contemnor by virtue of the provisions of Article 129 read with Article 142(2) of the Constitution. Since, no such law has been enacted by Parliament, the nature of punishment prescribed under the Contempt of Courts Act, 1971 may act as a guide for the Supreme Court but the extent of punishment as prescribed under that Act can apply only to the High Courts, because the 1971 Act ipso facto does not deal with the contempt jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, except that Section 15 of the Act prescribes procedural mode for taking cognizance of criminal contempt by the Supreme Court also. Section 15, however, is not a substantive provision conferring contempt jurisdiction. The judgment in Sukhdev Singh Sodhi v. Chief Justice and Judges of the Pepsu High Court as regards the extent of "maximum punishment" which can be imposed upon a contemnor must, therefore, be construed as dealing with the powers of the High Courts only and not of this Court in that behalf. Zahira Habibullah v. State of Gujarat, AIR 2006 SC 1367 : (2006) 3 SCC 374 : (2006) 2 SCC (Cri) 8 (24 & 25) : 2006 CrLJ 1694 : 2006 (2) Crimes 36.

CONTINUING OFFENCE

[10389] ● Non-payment of employers contribution to PF before due date continuing offence.—The non-payment of employers contribution to the provident fund before the due date was a 'Continuing offence' and, therefore, the period of limitation prescribed by Section 468 of the Code could not have any application and it would be governed by Section 472 of the Code, according, to which a fresh period of limitation began to run at every moment of the time during which the offence continued. Each day the accused failed to comply with the obligation to pay their contribution to the fund, they committed fresh offence. State of Bihar v. Deokaran Nenshi, AIR 1973 SC 908 : (1972) 2 SCC 890 : 1973 SCC (Cri) 114 : 1973 CrLJ 347 : 1972 Cr App R (SC) 466. [10390] ● Distinction between offence which taken place when act or omission committed once and for all and continuing offence.— Continuing offence is one which is susceptible of continuance and is distinguishable from the one which is committed once and for all. It is one of those offences which arises out of a failure to obey or comply with a rule or its requirement and which involves a penalty, the liability for which continues until the rule or its requirement is obeyed or complied with. On every occasion that such disobedience or non-compliance occurs and reoccurs, there is the offence committed. In the case of continuing there is the ingredient of continuance of the offence which is absent in the case of an offence which takes place when act or commission is committed once and for all. Reg. 3 of the Indian Metalliferous Mines Regulation, 1926 read with S. 66 of the Mines Act makes failure to furnish annual returns for the preceding year by the January 21, of the succeeding year, an offence. The infringement, therefore, occurs on January 21 of the relevant year and is complete on the owner failing to furnish the annual returns by that day. The Regulation does not lay down that the owner, manager, etc. of the mine concerned would be guilty of an offence if he continues to carry on the mine without furnishing the returns or that the offence continues until the requirement of Regn. 3 is complied with. In other words Regn. 3 does not render a continued disobedience or non-compliance of it an offence. State of Bihar v. Deokaran Nenshi, AIR 1973 SC 908 : (1972) 2 SCC 890 : 1973 SCC (Cri) 114 : 1973 CrLJ 347 : (1973) 1 SCR 1004 : 1972 Cr AppR (SC) 466.

[10391] ● Distinctive feature of continuing wrong.—The distinctive nature of a continuing wrong is that the law that is violated makes the wrong-doer continuously liable for penalty. A wrong or default which is complete but whose effect may continue to be felt even after its completion is, however, not a continuing wrong or default. It is reasonable to take the view that the Court should not be eager to hold that an act or omission is continuing wrong or default unless there are words in the statute concerned which make out that such was the intention of the legislature. State of Bihar v. Deokinandan Nenshi, AIR 1973 SC 908 : (1972) 2 SCC 890 : 1973 CrLJ 347 : (1973) 1 SCWR 66.

[10392] ● Failure to pay employer's contribution to P.F. continuing offence.—The question whether a particular offence is a continuing offence must necessarily depend upon the language of the statute which creates that offences, the nature of the offence and, above all, the purpose which is intended to be achieved by constituting the particular act as an offence turning to the matters before use the offence of which the appellants are charged is the failure to pay the employer's contribution before the due date. Considering the object and purpose of this provision, which is to ensure the welfare of workers, it is impossible to hold that the offence is not of a continuing nature. The appellants were unquestionably liable to pay their contribution to the provident fund before the due date and it was within their power to pay it, as soon after the due date had expired as they willed. The late payment could not have absolved them of their original guilt but it would have snapped the recurrence. Each day that they failed to comply with the obligation to pay their contribution to his fund they committed a fresh offence. It is putting an incredible premium on lack of concern for the welfare of workers to hold that the employer who has not paid his contribution of the employees to the provident fund can successfully evade the penal consequences of his act by pleading the law of limitation. Such offences must be regarded as continuing offences to which the law of limitation cannot apply. Bhagirath Kanoria v. State of M.P. and Bahadur Singh v. Provident Fund Inspector and Raja Bahadur Singh v. Provident Fund Inspector, AIR 1984 SC 1688 : (1984) 4 SCC 222 : 1984 SCC (Cri) 590 (597) : 1984 CrLR (SC) 391 : (1985) 1 SCR 626.

[10393] ● Continuing offence—Meaning.— The continuing offence means "type of crime which is committed over span of time". The expression continuing offence has not been defined in the Code. The question whether a particular offence is a 'continuing offence' or not must, therefore, necessarily depend upon the language of the statute which creates the offence, the nature of the offence and the purpose intended to be achieved by constituting the particular act as an offence. The offence under Section 630 of the Companies Act is not such as can be said to have been consummated once for all.

Wrongful withholding, or wrongfully obtaining possession and wrongful application of the company's property, that is, for purposes other than those expressed or directed in the articles of the company and authorised by the Companies Act, cannot be said to be terminated by a single act or fact but would subsist for the period until the property in the offender's possession is delivered up or refunded. It is an offence committed over a span of time and the last act of the offence will control the commencement of the period of limitation and need be alleged. The offence consists of a course of conduct arising from a singleness of thought, purpose of refusal to deliver up or refund which may be deemed a single impulse. Considered from another angle, it consists of a continuous series of acts which endures after the period of consummation on refusal to deliver up or refund the property. It is not an instantaneous offence and limitation begins with the cessation of the criminal act, i.e. with the delivering up or refund of the propriety. It will be a recurring or continuing offence until the wrongful possession, wrongful withholding or wrongful application is vacated or put an end to. The offence continues until the property wrongfully obtained or wrongfully withheld or knowingly misapplied is delivered up or refunded to the company. For failure to do so sub-section (2) prescribes the punishment. This, in our view, is sufficient ground for holding that the offence under Section 630 of the Companies Act is not one time but a continuing offence and the period of limitation must be computed accordingly, and when so done, the instant complaints could not be said to have been barred by limitation. Gokal Patel Volkart Ltd. v. Dudayya Guru Shiddrat Hirenath, (1991) 2 SCC 141 : 1991 SCC (Cri) 315 (327, 328) : JT 1991 (1) SC 376.

[10394] ● Conspiracy—Continuing offence.—Conspiracy is a continuing offence and continues to subsist and committed wherever one of the conspirators does an act or sense of acts. So long as its performance continues it is a continuing offence. Ajay Agarwal v. Union of India, AIR 1993 SC 1637 (1647) : (1993) 3 SCC 609 : JT 1993 (3) SC 203.

[10395] ● Living in adultery—Continuing matrimonial offence.—Living in adultery on the part of the husband is a continuing matrimonial offence. The offence does not get frozen or wiped out merely on passing of a decree for judicial separation which merely suspends certain duties and obligations of the spouses in connection with their marriage and does not snap the matrimonial tie. Hirachand Srinivas Managaonkar v. Sunanda, AIR 2001 SC 1285 (1292) : (2001) 4 SCC 125.

[10396] ● Cruelty under Section 498A, IPC.—In a case for cruelty under Section 498A, IPC offence cannot be held to be continuing only because the complainant was forced to leave her matrimonial home. Manish Ratan v. State of Madhya Pradesh, (2007) 1 SCC 262 : 2007 (1) SCC (Cri) 336 : (2006) 4 Crimes 291.

CONTRACT

[10397] ● Wagering contract.—Section 23, 30, Contract Act, 1872.—Wagering Contracts cannot be said to be normal. Gherulal Parakh v. Mahadeodas Maiya, AIR 1959 SC 781 : 1959 SCJ 878 : (1959) 2 Mad LJ (SC) 81.

[10398] ● Doctrine of Public policy.—The doctrine of public policy is extended not only to harmful cases but also to harmful ten tendencies, this doctrine of public policy is only a branch of common law, and just like any other branch of common law, it is governed by precedents; the principles have been crystallized under different heads and though it is permissible for Courts to expound and apply them to different situations, it should only be invoked in clear and incontestable cases of harm to the public. Gherulal Parakh v. Mahadeodas Maiya, AIR 1959 SC 781 : 1959 SCJ 878 : (1959) 2 Mad LJ (SC) 81.

[10399] ● Wagering contracts not opposed to public policy.—Section 23, Indian Contract Act, 1872.—The common law of England and that of India have never struck down contract of wager on the ground of public policy; indeed they have always been held to be not illegal notwithstanding the fact that the statute declared them void. The moral prohibitions in Hindu Law texts against gambling were not only legally enforced but were allowed to fall into desuetude. In practice, though gambling is controlled in specific matters, if has not been declared illegal and there is no law declaring wagering illegal. There is no definite head or principle of public policy evolved by Courts or laid down by precedents which would directly apply to wagering contracts. Gherulal Parakh v. Mahadeodas Maiya, AIR 1959 SC 781 : 1959 SCJ 878 : 1959 Supp (2) SCR 406 : (1959) 2 Mad LJ (SC) 81.

[10400] ● Maxim—In part delicto potior est conditio defendantis—Applicability of.—The maxim In part delicto potior est conditio defendantis does not apply where the parties do not show that there was any conspiracy to defraud third person. Kedar Nath v. Prahlad Rai, AIR 1960 213 : (1960) 1 SCR 861 : 1960 SCJ 1072.

[10401] ● Defendants not to perpetrate new fraud.—Defendants should not be allowed to perpetrate new fraud. Kedar Nath v. Prahlad Rai, AIR 1960 SC 213 : (1960) 1 SCR 861 : 1960 SCJ 1072.

[10402] ● Contract law applicable.—Section 1, Indian Contract Act, 1872.—Whether the proper law is the lex loci contractus or lex loci solutionis, in the absence of any expressed intention is a matter of presumption. If Courts of a particular country are chosen, it is expected, unless there be either expressed intention or evidence, that they would apply their own law to the case. Where the arbitration clause indicated an arbitration in India, this leads to an inference that the parties have adopted the law of the country in which arbitration is to be made. This inference can be drawn even in a case where the arbitration clause is void according to the law of the country, where the contract is made and to be performed. Dhanrajmal Govindram v. Shamji Kalidas and Co., AIR 1961 SC 1285 : (1961) 3 SCR 1020.

[10403] ● Doctrine of undue influence.—The first sub-section of S. 16 of the Contract Act lays down the principle in general terms. By sub-s. (2) a presumption arises that a person shall be deemed to be in a position to dominate the will of another if the conditions set out therein are fulfilled. Sub-s (3) lays down the conditions for raising a rebuttable presumption that a transaction is procured by the exercise of undue influence. The reason for the rule in the third sub-section is that a person who has obtained an advantage over another by dominating his will, may also remain in a position to suppress the requisite evidence in support of the plea of undue influence. Ladli Prashad Jaiswal v. Karnal Distillery Co. Ltd., Karnal, AIR 1963 SC 1279 : (1964) 2 SCJ 12 : (1964) 1 SCR 270.

[10404] ● Undue influence shifting of burden of proof.—Section 16, Indian Contract Act, 1872.— A transaction may be vitiated on account of undue influence where the relations between the parties are such that one of them is in a position to dominate the will of the other and he uses his position to obtain an unfair advantage over the other. It is manifest that both the conditions have ordinarily to be established by the person seeking to avoid the transaction; he has to prove (a) that the other party to a transaction was in a position to dominate his will and (b) that the other party had obtained an unfair advantage by using that position. There may arise cases in which even though the burden lies on such a person to prove his case of undue influence he may establish it from admissions made by the other party or his witnesses or from other evidence, and without giving his own 'testimony'. Ladli Prashad Jaiswal v. Karnal Distillery Co. Ltd., Karnal, AIR 1963 SC 1279 : (1964) 2 SCJ 12 : (1964) 1 SCR 270.

[10405] ● Arbitration agreement between parties in consideration of withdrawal of prosecution.—Section 23, Indian Contract Act, 1872.— Arbitration agreement between parties in consideration of withdrawal of prosecution regarding non-compoundable offence is invalid as being offered to public policy. V. Narasimharaju v. V. Gurumurthy Raju, AIR 1963 SC 107 : (1965) 2 SCJ 539.

[10406] ● Agreement of contract as one for stifling prosecution.—Section 23, Indian Contract Act, 1872.—The party challenging the validity of the impugned transaction must show that it was based upon an agreement to stifle prosecution. If it is shown that there was an agreement between the parties that a certain consideration should proceed from the accused person to the complainant in return for the promise of the complainant to discontinue the criminal proceedings that clearly is a transaction which is opposed to public policy. Ouseph Paulo v. Catholic Union Bank Ltd., AIR 1965 SC 166 : (1964) 7 SCR 745.

[10407] ● Validity of agreement opposed to public policy.—Where the validity of an agreement is impeached on the ground that it is opposed to public policy under S. 23 of the Act, the party setting up the plea must be called upon to prove that plea by clear and satisfactory evidence. Reliance on a mere sequence of events may tend to obliterate the real difference between the motive for the agreement and the consideration for it. Ouseph Paulo v. Catholic Union Bank Ltd., AIR 1965 SC 166 : (1964) 7 SCR 745.

[10408] ● Undue influence—Presumption as to.—Section 16, Indian Contract Act, 1872.—No presumption of undue influence can arise merely because parties were nearly related to each other or merely because donor was old or of weak character. The relations of solicitor and client, trustee and cestui que trust, spiritual adviser and devotee, medical attendant and patient, parent and child are those in which such a presumption arises. Subhas Chandra v. Ganga Prosad, AIR 1967 SC 878 : (1967) 2 SCJ 159 : (1967) 1 SCR 331.

[10409] ● Maxim "in pari delicto potior est conditio defendantis"—Applicability of.—Section 23, 24, Indian Contract Act, 1872.—The maxim "in pari delicto potior est conditio defendantis" does not apply (a) where the illegal purpose has not yet been substantially carried into effect before it sought to recover money paid or goods delivered in furtherance of it; (b) where the plaintiff is not in pari delicto with the defendant; (c) where the plaintiff does not have to rely on the illegality to make out his claim. Where the parties are not in pari delicto, the less guilty party may be able to recover money paid, or property transferred, under the contract. Sita Ram v. Radha Bai, AIR 1968 SC 534 : (1968) 2 SCJ 231 : (1968) 1 SCR 805.

[10410] ● Document executed by mentally infirm person—Burden to prove.—Where in a case it was set up as a defence to the plaintiffs claim that the document was executed by mentally infirm person, burden to prove that the document was obtained voluntarily lies heavily on the defendant. Nilambar Thakur v. Singheswar Thakur, (1969) 2 SCWR 654 : (1970) UJ (SC) 51.

[10411] ● Contract to withdraw prosecution or to give no evidence.—Section 23, Indian Contract Act, 1872.—It is well settled rule on the soundness of which there can be no doubt that a contract to withdraw a prosecution or to give no evidence against an accused charged with an offence of a public nature is one founded on an unlawful consideration and, therefore, void. State of U.P. v. Kapil Deo Shukla, AIR 1973 SC 494 : (1972) 3 SCC 504 : 1972 SCC (Cri) 597 (602) : 1972 CrLJ 1214.

[10412] ● Agreement collateral to void or prohibited contracts.—Section 23, Indian Contract Act, 1872.—Agreements collateral to void or prohibited contracts are not enforceable. Firm of Pratapchand Napaji v. Firm of Kartike Venkata Setty and Sons, AIR 1975 SC 1223 : (1975) 2 SCC 208.

[10413] ● Agreement to commit criminal acts.— Section 224, Indian Contract Act, 1872.—Agreement to commit criminal acts are expressly and specifically excluded by s. 224 from the scope of any to any indemnity-Agent authorised to enter into forward contracts for dealing in oil seeds-Entering into such contracts made a criminal offence under Bombay Forward Contracts Control Act (64 of 1947) and the Oil Seeds (Forward Contracts Prohibition) Order, 1943-Agent incurring losses on such contracts cannot claim indemnification from principal under S. 222. Firm of Pratapchand Nopaji v. Firm of Kotrike Venkata Setty and Sons, AIR 1975 SC 1223 : (1975) 2 SCC 208.

[10414] ● Separate pleading about undue influence necessary.—Section 16, Indian Contract Act, 1872.—Separate pleading about undue influence is necessary. General allegation that plaintiff is simple old man and imposed confidence in defendant cannot spell out undue influence. Afsar Shaikh v. Suleman Bibi, AIR 1976 SC 163 : (1976) 2 SCC 142 : (1976) 2 SCR 327.

[10415] ● One who approbates cannot reprobate.—If person of his own accord, accepts a contract on certain terms and works out the contract, he cannot be allowed to adhere to and abide by some of the terms of the contract which proved advantageous to him and repudiate the other terms of the same contract which might be disadvantageous to him. The maxim is qui approbate non reprobate, (one who approbates cannot reprobate). This principle, though originally borrowed from Scots Law is now firmly embodied in English common Law. According to it, a party to an instrument or transaction cannot take advantage of one part of a document or transaction and reject the rest. That is to say, no party can accept and reject the same instrument or transaction. The aforesaid inhibitory principle squarely applied to the cases of those petitioner who had by offering highest bids at public auctions or by tenders, accepted and worked out the contracts in the past but are now resisting the demands or other action, arising out of the impugned condition 13 on the ground that this condition is violative of Arts. 19(1)(g) and 14 of the Constitution. In this connection it will bear repetition here that the impugned conditions though bear a statutory complexions, retain their basic contractual character also. It is true that a person cannot be debarred from enforcing his fundamental rights on the ground of estoppel or waiver. But the aforesaid principle which prohibits a party to a transaction from approbating a part of its conditions and reprobating the rest is different from the doctrine of estoppel or waiver. New Bihar Biri Leaves Co. v. State of Bihar, AIR 1981 SC 679 (692, 693) : (1981) 1 SCC 537 : (1981) 2 SCR 417.

[10416] ● Doctrine of stifling of prosecution.—Section 23, 24 Indian Contract Act, 1872.—The essence of the doctrine of stifling of prosecution is that no private person should be allowed to take the administration of criminal justice out of the hands of the Judges and place it in his own hands. In the instant case private party is not taking administration of law in its own hands. It is the Union of India, as the Dominus Litis, that consented to the quashing of the proceedings. What was purported to be done was not a compounding of the offences. The arrangement which purported to terminate the criminal case was one of a purported withdrawal not forbidden by any law but one which was clearly enabled. More importantly, the distinction between the "motive" for entering into agreement and the "consideration" for the agreement must be kept clearly distinguished. Where dropping of the criminal proceedings is a motive for entering into the agreement - And not its consideration—The doctrine of stifling of prosecution is not attracted. Where there is also a pre-existing civil liability, the dropping of criminal proceedings need not necessarily be a consideration for the agreement to satisfy that liability The contention that a part of the consideration for the payment of 470 million U.S. Dollars was the stifling of the criminal prosecution which is opposed to public policy and it vitiates the agreement on which the settlement is based cannot be conceded to. The settlement is not hit by Section 23 or 24 of the Indian Contract Act. Union Carbide Corpn. v. Union of India, AIR 1992 SC 248 : (1991) 4 SCC 584 : JT 1991 (6) SC 8 : 1992 (1) UJ (SC) 360.

[10417] ● Suit for cancellation of sale deed.—Plaintiff claiming herself to be illiterate Harijan childless widow employed in Railway on compassionate ground on death of her husband cannot be compared to be a pardanashin lady, as there is nothing on record to show that she was suffering from ignorance or illiteracy or mental deficiency. Hans Raji v. Yasodana, AIR 1996 SC 761 : (1996) 7 SCC 122 : JT 1995 (8) SC 515.

CONTRADICTION

[10418] ● Evidence before committing Court—Use of.—The evidence before Committing Court not to be used in Court of sessions unless confronted with prior statement. Tara Singh v. State, AIR 1951 SC 441 : 1952 CrLJ 1491 : 1951 SCR 729 : 1951 SCJ 518.

[10419] ● Witness to be questioned about each separate fact point by point and passage by passage.—The witness should be questioned about each separate fact point by point and passage by passage. When the pervious statement is long one and the only one or two small passages in it are used for contradiction, a mere reading out of the whole statement may confuse a witness and may not be a fair method. Bhagwan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1952 SC 214 : 1952 CrLJ 1131 : 1952 SCR 812 : 1952 SCJ 284.

[10421] ● Resort to Section 145 of Evidence Act when necessary.—Resort to Section 145 of the Evidence Act is necessary only if a witness denies that he made the former statement. When the witness admits the former statement all that is necessary is to look to the former statement on which no further proof in necessary because of the admission that it was made. Bhagwan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1952 SC 214 : 1952 CrLJ 1131 : 1952 SCR 812.

[10422] ● FIR not to be used against maker at trial.—FIR cannot be used as evidence against the maker at the trial, if he himself becomes an accused, not to contradict or corroborate other witnesses. It may be put in evidence under Section 157, Evidence Act, and corroborate only the testimony of the person who gave the information incorporated the General Diary of the FIR and not for corroborating the evidence of any one else. Nisar Ali v. State of U.P., AIR 1957 SC 366 : 1957 CrLJ 550 : 1957 SCJ 392.

[10423] ● Statements made in enquiry— Admissibility of.—As held in Ram Kishna Dalmia v. Justice Tendulkar, AIR 1958 SC 538, the statements made in enquiry under the said Act are wholly inadmissible when they are sought to be proved in any civil or criminal proceeding against the maker. But where such a person appears as witness, Section 6 of the Commission of Enquiry Act does not rule out the applicability of Section 145, Evidence Act. R.K. Dalmia v. Justice Tendulkar, AIR 1958 SC 538 : 1959 SCR 279.

[10424] ● Contradicting witness by confronting him with his previous statement.—To contradict with the statement under Section 162, CrPC, the attention of the witness can be drawn to that part of the statement made before the police officer which contradicts his statement in the witness box. If he admits his previous statement, no further proof is necessary, if he does not admit, the practice generally followed is to admit it subject to proof by the investigating officer. Tahsildar Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1959 SC 1012 : 1959 CrLJ 1231.

[10425] ● Defence witness not to be contradicted under Section 145 Evidence Act.—A defence witness cannot be contradicted under Section 145 with his statement before the investigation officer. Tahsildar Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1959 SC 1012 : 1959 CrLJ 1231.

[10426] ● Contradicting witness by confronting him with his previous statement.—Section 145, Evidence Act is in two parts : the first part enables the accused to cross-examine a witness as to previous statement made by him in writing or reduced to writing without such writing being shown to him; the second part deals with a situation where the cross-examination assumes the shape of contradiction; in other words, both parts deal with cross-examination; the first part with cross-examination other than by way of contradiction, and the second with cross-examination by way of contradiction only. The procedure prescribed is that, if it is intended to contradict a witness by the writing, his attention must, before the writing can be proved, be called to those parts of it which are to be used for the purpose of contradicting him. The proviso to Section 152 of the Code of Criminal Procedure only enables the accused to make use of such statement to contradict a witness in the manner provided by Section 145 of the Evidence Act. It would be doing violence to the language of the proviso if the said statement be allowed to be used for the purpose of cross-examining a witness within the meaning of the first part of Section 145 of the Evidence Act. Nor one can be impressed by the argument that it would not be possible to invoke the second part of Section 145 of the Evidence Act without putting relevant question under the first part thereof. The difficulty is more imaginary than real. The second part of Section 145 of the Evidence Act clearly indicates the simple procedure to be followed. To illustrate : A says in the witness-box that B stabbed C; before the police he had stated that D stabbed C. His attention can be drawn to that part of the statement made before the police which contradicts his statement in the witness-box. If he admits his previous statement, no further proof is necessary; if he does not admit, the practice generally followed is to admit it subject to proof by the police officer. Tahsildar Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1959 SC 1012 : 1959 CrLJ 1231 : 1959 Mad LJ (Cri) 759 : 1959 SCJ 1042 : (1959) 2 Mad LJ (SC) 201 : (1959) 2 Andh WR (SC) 201 : 1959 All Cr R 447 : 1959 All WR (HC) 532.

[10427] ● Omission when not treated as contradiction.—An omission unless by necessary implication can be deemed to be part of an express statement cannot be treated as contradiction. There are three possible situations on which an omission could by fiction amount to contradiction. These are as follows :

(a) Where a recital is necessarily implied from the recital or recitals found in the statement. Illustration : On the recorded statement before the police the witness states that he saw A stabbing B at a particular point of time, but in the witness-box he says that he saw A and C stabbing B at the same point of time; in the statement to police the word 'only' can be implied i.e. witness said he only saw A stabbing B.

(b) A negative aspect of a positive recital in a judgment. Illustration : In the recorded statement before the police when witness says that a dark man stabbed A : The earlier statement must be deemed to contain the recital not only that the culprit was of dark complexion but also that he was not of fair complexion.

(c) When the statement before the police and the Magistrate cannot stand together. Illustration : The witness says in the recorded statement before the police that A after stabbing B ran away by a northern lane but in the witness-box he says the accused immediately after stabbing ran away through southern lane. Tahsildar Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1959 SC 1012 : 1959 CrLJ 1231.

[10428] ● Statement reduced into writing—Meaning.—Only those omissions which by necessary implication must be deemed to be part of the express statement which has been reduced to writing by a police officer can be used for the purpose of contradicting the evidence given in Court, because they alone are included within the meaning of the expression "statement reduced into writing" in Section 162.

No other omission in the previous police statement of a witness can be permitted to be used for the purpose of contradicting the evidence given by a witness in Court, however important it may be in the eyes of the Court, and even though in the opinion of the Court, the fact omitted to be stated is such, as in the normal course, a witness is expected to state, or a police officer is expected to record. To hold otherwise is not in accord with the plain meaning of the word "statement" in Section 162, and would stretch its meaning beyond what is clearly justified. Tahsildar Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1959 SC 1012 : 1959 CrLJ 1231 : 1959 SCJ 1042 : 1959 MLJ (Cri) 759.

[10429] ● Evidence given at preliminary enquiry.—Where in a criminal trial a previous statement is put to a witness in cross-examination under Section 145 Evidence Act, its primary purpose is to contradict the witness by reference to the evidence he gives at the trial. Hence in a trial with jury it cannot be said that the Sessions Judge is wrong in law in telling the jury that the pervious statement on which the defence relied may help the defence to contend that the girl prosecutrix, in the trial for an offence under Section 376, Penal Code, is not a straight forward witness and is changing her story from time to time, but the said previous statement cannot be treated as substantive evidence at the trial. Chittaranjan Dass v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1963 SC 1696 : (1963) 2 CrLJ 534.

[10430] ● Omission in earlier statement when to be relied upon to contradict subsequent state- ment.—Witnesses in their statements before the police attributed a clear intention to the accused to commit murder, but before the Court they stated that the accused was insane and therefore, he committed the murder. In the circumstances it was necessarily implied in the previous statements of the witnesses before the police that the accused was not insane at the time he committed the murder. In this view the previous statement of the witnesses before the police can be used to contradict their version in the Court. Dahyabhai Chhaganbhai Thakkar v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1964 SC 1563 (1569) : 1964 (2) CrLJ 472 : (1964) 7 SCR 361.

[10431] ● Court to permit party calling witness to put questions in the nature of cross-examination.—The Court can permit a person who calls a witness, to put questions to him which might be put in the cross-examination at any stage of the examination of the witness, provided it takes care to give an opportunity to the accused to cross-examine him on the answers elicited which do not find place in the examination-in-chief. In the present case, what happened was that some of the witnesses faithfully repeated what they had stated before the Police in the examination-in-chief, but in the cross-examination they came out with the story of insanity of the accused. The Court, at the request of the Advocate for the prosecution, permitted him to cross-examine the said witnesses. It is not suggested that the Advocate appearing for the accused asked for a further opportunity to cross-examine the witnesses and was denied of it by the Court. The procedure followed by the learned Judge does not conflict with the express provisions of Section 154 of the Evidence Act. Dahyabhai Chhaganbhai Thakkar v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1964 SC 1563 : 1964 (2) CrLJ 472 : (1964) 7 SCR 361.

[10432] ● Admission to be clear if used against person making them.—Admissions must be clear if they are to be used against the person making them. They are substantive evidence by themselves in view of Sections 17 and 21 of the Evidence Act, though they are not conclusive proof of the matters admitted. The admissions duly proved are admissible evidence irrespective of whether the party making them appeared in the witness-box or not and whether such party when appearing as witness was confronted with those statements in case it has made a statement contrary to those admissions. Bharat Singh v. Bhagirathi, AIR 1966 SC 405 : 1966 SCD 153 : (1996) 1 SCR 606 : (1996) 2 SCJ 53.

[10433] ● Previous inconsistent statement when amounts to admission.—When the previous inconsistent statement amounts to an admission duly proved, it can be used without being put to the witness for explanation. Bharat Singh v. Bhagirathi, AIR 1966 SC 405 : (1966) 1 SCR 606.

[10434] ● Previous statement used to contradict witness not substantive evidence.—A previous statement used to contradict a witness does not become substantive evidence and merely serves the purpose of throwing doubt on the veracity of the witness. Bhagat Singh v. Bhagirathi, AIR 1966 SC 405 : (1996) 2 SCJ 53.

[10435] ● Previous statement not to be used either to contradict by corroborate.—When a person is not examined as a witness in the case, his previous statement cannot be used either to contradict his evidence or corroborate it even if it is to be held that it is a statement coming under Section 154, CrPC. Mohar Rai v. State of Bihar, AIR 1968 SC 1281 : 1968 CrLJ 1479 : 1968 SCD 584 : 1968 SCJ 1 : (1968) 3 SCR 525.

[10436] ● No cross-examination permissible of previous witness.—No cross-examination is permissible under Indian law of a defence witness in respect of his previous statement to the police under Section 162, CrPC. Laiman Kalu v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1968 SC 1390 : 1968 CrLJ 1647 : 1969 SCD 364 : (1968) 3 SCR 634.

[10437] ● Person when subsequent by accused of offence.—Where a person who made statement during investigation of a complaint is subsequently accused of the offence his statement cannot be used either to contradict or corroborate him or other accused. Mohar Rai v. State of Bihar, AIR 1968 SC 1281 : 1968 CrLJ 1479.

[10438] ● Approver testimony and its corroboration.—When the approver gave his police statement he did not know that he would be granted pardon and possibly for that reason had not come out with all the facts known to him and he did so while he was making his statement before the Magistrate as he knew by then that he would be tendered pardon on condition that he would disclose all the facts known to him. The omission in the police statement, therefore, by itself would not necessarily have rendered his evidence unreliable. In considering whether the approver's evidence passed the test of reliability, the Court would have to consider whether taken as a whole and in the light of the facts and circumstances of the case, it was a credible version or not. Madan Mohan Lal v. State of Punjab, AIR 1970 SC 1006 : (1970) 2 SCC 733 : 1970 SCC (Cri) 509 : 1970 CrLJ 898.

[10439] ● Witness admitting record true but statement false given under Police pressure.—The witness denied her statement before the committal Court when she came to the Court of Session she was declared hostile and was allowed to be cross-examined by the Public Prosecutor. The Public Prosecutor read to her the whole of her statement before the committal Court and asked her whether it was her statement. She admitted that it was true record of what she had stated before the committal Court, but she said that it was a false statement given under "Police pressure". The objection taken to the admissibility of the statement was that every single passage which differed from her testimony in the Court of Session was not put to her with a view to affording her an opportunity of explaining why she had made a contrary statement. No doubt, if there were some passages here and there which differed from her later version, that procedure would have been necessary. Here the witness admitted that her statement was truly recorded in the committal Court. She only denied that it was a true statement because she was made to depose that way by the Police. It would have been useless to point out the discrepancies between the two statements because her explanation would have been the same. In these circumstances, the requirements of Section 145 of the Indian Evidence Act were fully complied with and the earlier statement could be read as evidence in the Sessions trial. State of Rajasthan v. Kartar Singh, AIR 1970 SC 1305 : (1970) 2 SCC 61 : 1970 SCC (Cri) 297 (301) : 1970 CrLJ 1144 : (1970) 1 SCR 56.

[10440] ● Tape recorded statement neither statement in writing nor reduced in writing.—A tape recorded statement is neither a statement in writing nor reduced to writing. In Supreme Court it was contended that such statement can be utilized only for corroboration and not for contradiction. Rejecting the contention the Supreme Court held that tape recording of a former statement of a witness can be admitted in evidence to shake the credit of the witness under Section 155 (3) of the Evidence Act. It is clear that a previous statement made by a person and recorded on tape, can be used not only to corroborate the evidence given by the witness in Court but also to contradict the evidence given before the Court as well as to test the veracity of the witness and also to impeach his impartiality. Apart from being used for corroboration, the evidence is admissible in respect of the other three matters mentioned under Section 146(1), Exception 2 to Section 153 and Section 155(3) of the Evidence Act. Therefore it is not possible to accept the contention that the previous statement can be used only for the purpose of corroboration but not for the purpose of contradicting the evidence before the Court. If a previous statement made by a person can be used to corroborate his evidence given before the Court, on principle there is no reason why such previous statement cannot be used to contradict and also for the other purpose referred to above. And to contradict the witness with reference to earlier tape-recorded statement, resort should be taken to Section 145, Evidence Act. N. Rama Reddi v. V.V. Giri, AIR 1971 SC 1162 : (1970) 2 SCC 340 : (1971) 1 SCR 399 : (1971) 1 SCA 394 : (1971) 1 SCJ 483 : 1970 SCD 546 : 1971 Law Week (Cri) 75 : 1970 Ker LT 390.

[10441] ● Previous statement to contradict present one.—The previous statement can be used only to contradict the present one. Somnath v. Union of India, AIR 1971 SC 1910 : (1971) 2 SCC 387 : 1971 CrLJ 1422.

[10442] ● Statement in panchnama not substantive evidence.—Similarly statement made in panchnama too is not substantive evidence. It can be used for contradiction only. Kanu Ambu Vish v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1971 SC 2256 : (1971) 1 SCC 503 : 1971 SCC (Cri) 211.

[10443] ● Witness whom confronted by previous statement.—The witness confronted by previous statement should be afforded an opportunity to explain that part of statement. K.A. Vaish v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1971 SC 2256 : (1971) 1 SCC 503 : 1971 SCC (Cri) 211 : 1971 CrLJ 1547.

[10444] ● Witness when admitted having signed previous statement.—When a witness has admitted having signed his previous statement that is enough to prove that some statement of his was recorded and he has appended his signature. Even to this his attention has to be drawn. Major Som Nath v. Union of India, AIR 1971 SC 1910 : (1971) 2 SCC 387 : 1971 SCC (Cri) 559 : 1971 CrLJ 1422 : 1971 SCD 1126.

[10445] ● FIR not substantive evidence.—First information report being not a substantive evidence the attention of the author thereof is to be drawn to the contents of FIR to discredit him with respect to the statement in FIR. Hasib v. State of Bihar, AIR 1972 SC 283 : 1972 CrLJ 233 : (1972) 1 SCWR 926.

[10446] ● Prosecution witness not allowed to be cross-examined by defence.—Where a prosecution witness was not allowed to be cross-examination by the defence on a material point with reference to his earlier statement made before the police, his evidence stands untested by cross-examination and cannot be accepted as corroborating the evidence of other witness. AIR 1976 SC 560 : (1976) 1 SCC 442 : 1976 CrLJ 496 : 1976 CrLR (SC) 678 : 1976 UJ (SC) 940.

[10447] ● Notes on site plan use of.—The notes on the site plan prepared by the investigating officer in accordance with the various situations pointed out to him by the witnesses are statements recorded by the police officer in the course of investigation and are hit by Section 162. These notes can be used only for the purpose of contradicting the concerned prosecution witness in accordance with the provisions of Section 145 and for no other purposes. Jit Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1976 SC 1421 : 1976 CrLJ 1162 : 1976 2 SCC 836.

[10448] ● Previous contradictory statement of wittiness—Use of.—A previous contradictory statement of witness can be used only to contradict and discredit him. It cannot be used to impeach or undermine the credit of other witnesses. The trial Court was, therefore, in error in using the previous inconsistent statement of such a witness as a circumstance against the credit of these witnesses. Where the previous statement of such a witness made in the committal Court had not been transferred to the Sessions record, under Section 288, CrPC (1898), it could not be used as substantive evidence in the case. Jit Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1976 SC 1421 : (1976) 2 SCC 836 : (1976) SCC (Cri) 341 : 1976 CrLJ 1162.

[10449] ● Evidence of eye-witnesses falsification of.—The evidence of the witnesses shows that the deceased had received 4 to 5 lathi blows at the hands of his assailants but the medical evidence of Dr. Jaiswal shows that he had only one lacerated wound on the scalp, a swelling and a few scratches. In view of the ocular evidence we should have expected many more lathi injuries on the person of deceased rather than just one swelling and a few scratches apart from the lacerated wound. Thus, this is also a very important suspicious circumstance which negatives the truth of the prosecution. Lakshmi Singh v. State of Bihar, AIR 1976 SC 2263 : (1976) 4 SCC 394 : 1976 SCC (Cri) 671 (680) : 1976 CrLJ 1736 : 1977 CrLR (SC) 76 : 1977 Cr App R (SC) 28.

[10450] ● Contradictions—Illiterate and ignorant women eye-witnesses.—No doubt some minor contradictions here and there have been pointed out, but such contradictions are bound to appear when ignorant and illiterate women are giving evidence. Even in case of trained and educated persons, memory sometimes plays false and this would be much more so in case of ignorant and rustic women. It must also be remembered that the evidence given by a witness would very much depend upon his power of observation and it is possible that some aspects of an incident may be observed by one witness while they may not be witnessed by another though both are present at the scene of offence. Boya Ganganna v. State of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 1976 SC 1541 : (1976) 1 SCC 584 : 1976 SCC (Cri) 102 (105) : 1976 CrLJ 1158 : 1976 CrLR (SC) 3.

[10451] ● Medical evidence contradictory of ocular evidence.—The Medical Officer (PW 1) found that there were two incised wounds on the person of the deceased. One of them was a cut of the frontal and left parietal bones and the other was a cut of the left parietal bone. The ocular evidence on the record was to the effect that accused were all armed with axes and inflicted injuries on the head of the deceased with them. The presence of only two incised injuries was, therefore, a fact which did not corroborate the evidence of the witnesses. Medical evidence being contradictory of the ocular version, the finding cannot be recorded beyond all reasonable doubts. Kasturi Lal v. State of Haryana, AIR 1976 SC 2042 : (1976) 3 SCC 570 : 1976 SCC (Cri) 467 (469) : 1976 CrLJ 1574 : 1976 CrLR (SC) 275.

[10452] ● Prosecution evidence manifestly unbelievable and contradictory.—Both the eye-witnesses radically changed the story that they had originally stated to the Police during investigation. Before the Police PW had denounced three persons as assailants. At the trial he has named two more persons. The eye-witnesses sharply contradict each other with regard to the identity of the person who dealt the fatal blow on the abdomen of the deceased with a bhalla. According to PW 1, it was the appellant who had caused, this injury. Directly contradicting PW 1, the other eye-witness PW 2 stated that this injury was caused by Rajeshwar who was assaulting with a bhalla, while his brothers were causing injuries to the deceased with farsas. From the above it is clear that these witnesses, have unscrupulously spoken the untruth on all vital points, which has polluted their testimony to the core. Ramasray Pandey v. State of Bihar, AIR 1976 SC 2147 : 1977 SCC (Cri) 374 (376-377) : 1976 CrLJ 1704 : 1976 CrLR (SC) 414.

[10453] ● Admission if proved in accordance with provision of Evidence Act.—Even if the admission is proved in accordance with the provisions of the Evidence Act and if it is to be used against the party who has made it, it is sound that if a witness is under cross-examination on oath, he should be given an opportunity, if the documents are to be used against him, to tender his explanation and to clear up the point of ambiguity or dispute. Sita Ram v. Ram Chandra, AIR 1977 SC 1712 : (1977) 2 SCC 49.

[10454] ● Statement of witness—Contradiction or omission in.—One curious practice not known to law adopted by him was that whenever a witness was asked about an omission with reference to the statement of the witness recorded by the investigating officer under Section 161, CrPC, the learned Public Prosecutor would make a statement whether the statement referred to in evidence was to be found or was not to be found in the statement under Section 161, CrPC and no attempt was made to prove the omission. Such concession for proof of contradiction or omission lacks support of law and is likely to be unfair to the witness in that when the investigating officer is questioned with regard to the contradiction or omission, a further opportunity will be available to him to explain the contradiction or omission. Muthu Naicker v. State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 1978 SC 1647 : (1978) 4 SCC 385 : 1979 SCC (Cri) 14 : 1978 CrLJ 1713 : 1978 CrLR (SC) 378.

[10455] ● Omission to state important fact in FIR contradiction.—Omission to state an important fact in FIR is contradiction. It is also relevant under Section 11, Evidence Act. It is, however, worthy of notice that FIR is not an encyclopedia which is expected to contain all the details of the prosecution case; it may often be sufficient if broad facts constituting the prosecution case alone appear. State of Haryana v. Harpal Singh, AIR 1978 SC 1530 : (1978) 4 SCC 465 : 1979 SCC (Cri) 86 (90) : 1978 CrLJ 1603.

[10456] ● Statement to Police to be brief—Omission amounts to contradiction.—Statement to police are meant to be brief. Omission amounts to contradiction when it is in respect of a vital point. Matadin v. State of U.P., AIR 1979 SC 1234 : 1980 Supp SCC 157 : 1979 SCC (Cri) 627 : 1979 CrLJ 1027 : 1979 CrLR (SC) 452.

[10457] ● Statement of witness—Omission in as his mind not working properly.—In his statement to the Police PW 9 did not mention what he stated before the Court that appellant Yaqoob assaulted him with a knife and appellant Bhagwan assaulted with as "tami". The reason for the omission according to him was that at that time his mind was not working properly. However, he does not say when his mind started functioning properly and when exactly the memory of the incident came flooding back to him to enable him to narrate the story in such detail before the Court. The explanation that the mind was not working properly does not also seem to be correct. Bhagwan v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1980 SC 1750 : 1980 Supp SCC 336 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 253 (254, 255) : 1980 CrLJ 1269.

[10458] ● Previous statement contradiction in.—"Be that as it may, Mahabir's earlier statement which he had made before the committing Magistrate could be used to contradict him when he appeared as a witness at the trial. In fact it was so used to show that the witnesses had deliberately resiled from a part of his previous statement to favour Tej Ram. Mahabir was confronted with that portion of his previous statement in which he had deposed to the participation of Tej Ram in the assault on the deceased. He did not give any satisfactory explanation, but at the same time, in a casual fashion, admitted having made that statement before the committing Magistrate. This contradiction shows that the subsequent statement in which he had tried to exculpate Tej Ram, was not true. There were other reliable evidence on the record, also confirming this conclusion." State of Haryana v. Tej Ram, AIR 1980 SC 1496 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 257 (262) : 1980 CrLJ 1057 : 1980 CrLR (SC) 514 : 1980 Cr App R (SC) 375.

[10459] ● FIR—Not to contain all details stated in Court.—FIR may not contain all the details stated in Court. Nawratan v. State of Bihar, AIR 1980 (NOC) 1 (SC) : (1979) 2 SCC 488 : 1979 SCC (Cri) 665 : 1979 CrLJ 1295 : 1979 CrLR (SC) 605. TO THE SAME EFFECT : State of Haryana v. Harpal Singh, AIR 1978 SC 1530 : (1978) 4 SCC 465 : 1979 SCC (Cri) 86 (90) : 1978 CrLJ 1603.

[10460] ● Statements by witnesses made during investigation not to be used as substantive evidence.—Section 162 bars use of any statement made by any person to a police officer in the course of investigation at any enquiry or trial in respect of any offence under investigation at the time when such statement was made, except for contradicting the witness in the manner provided by Section 145, Evidence Act. Any part thereof may also be used in re-examination to explain any matter referred to in cross-examination. Exceptions to this embargo relate to statements falling within the provisions of Section 32(1) and Section 27, Evidence Act. Otherwise statements falling under Section 162 cannot be used as substantive evidence. Definition of 'proved' in Section 3 does not enable a Court to take into consideration matters, including statements, whose use is statutorily barred. Hazari Lal v. State (Delhi Admn.), AIR 1980 SC 873 : (1980) 2 SCC 390 : 1980 CrLJ 564.

[10461] ● Statements of witnesses read in extenso to then.—The requirements of Section 288, CrPC would be fully complied with if statements of witnesses are read in extenso to them and they admit that they have made those statements in the committal Court. Dhanabal v. State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 1980 SC 439 : (1980) 2 SCC 465 : 1980 SCC (Cri) 340 (345) : 1980 CrLJ 368 : 1980 CrLR (SC) 90 : (1980) 2 SCR 491.

[10462] ● Witness making two inconsistent statements.—It is true that PW 2 tried to give a go by to his previous statement in the committing Court but at the same time he admitted most of the statements made by him before the committing Court to be correct. The witness has not alleged that his statement before the committing Court was given under pressure of the Police. Normally, a witness who makes two inconsistent statements is not reliable but where the Court is satisfied that the earlier statement was true that would not debar the Court from acting on such evidence. Moreover both the Courts had been impressed by the evidence of PW 20 before the committing Court and have held that the said statement was true. Zile Singh v. State (Delhi Administration), 1980 Supp SCC 690 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 622 (623) : 1979 CrLR (SC) 703 : 1979 UJ (SC) 891.

[10463] ● Statements of witness omission in.—Shrinarayan, a 45 years old school teacher has made a categorical admission in his evidence that he had no talk with the appellant at all. In fact the claim of Shrinarayan Sharma that he called out the appellant and that the appellant said that he would not open the door, seems to us a clear improvement over what he narrated to the Police immediately after the incident. He did not tell the Police anything of the kind. When his attention was drawn to this significant omission, his explanation was that he could not say why the Police did not record that part of his statement. We have no doubt that Shrinarayan Sharma did not tell the Police during the course of his statement, which was recorded immediately after the incident that he called out for the appellant and that the appellant stated that he would not open the door. This was far too important a happening which the witness would have failed to disclose to the Police. Shankarlal Gyarasilal Dixit v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1981 SC 765 : (1981) 2 SCC 35 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 315 (320) : 1981 CrLJ 325 : 1981 CrLR (SC) 616 : (1981 2 SCR 384.

[10464] ● Omission to mention incidental facts.—Regarding the failure of PW 2 to mention in her statement to police about her clothes becoming stained with blood when they were protecting the deceased is only an omission and cannot be said as contradiction. Gurnam Kaur v. Bakshish Singh, AIR 1981 SC 631 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 496 (500) : 1981 CrLJ 34 : 1980 CrLR (SC) 686 : 1981 Cr App R (SC) 328.

[10466] ● Statement made by one contradicted by another.—If the maker of a statement is sought to be contradicted, his attention should be drawn to his previous statement under Section 145. In other words, where the statement made by a person or witness is contradicted not by his own statement, but by the statement of another prosecution witness, the question of the application of Section 145 does not arise. If it is assumed that when a statement of a witness is contradicted by another the former witness should be cross-examined to explain the contradiction then it will be extremely difficult for an accused or a party to rely on the inter se contradiction of various witnesses and every time when the contradiction is made, the previous witness will have to be recalled for the purpose of contradiction. This is neither the purport nor the object of Section 145, Evidence Act. Mohanlal Gangaram Gehone v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1982 SC 839 : (1982) 1 SCC 700 : 1982 SCC (Cri) 334 : 1982 (2) CrLJ 630 : 1982 Mad LJ (Cri) 431.

[10467] ● Trap witnesses—Absence of contradiction.—It was urged that both the witnesses in their respective statements in the course of investigation have not refused that they pointed out that the currency notes were kept under the pillow. A further omission was pointed out that while Mahavir Prasad has stated that accused started quarrelling with him which necessitated summoning additional police help, both the witnesses while refusing to the quarrel picked up by the appellant so as to support the evidence of Mahabir Prasad have failed to refer to this aspect in their statements in the course of investigation. These are omissions of trivial details and have hardly any bearing on the main part of the prosecution case. The so-called inner variations between the evidence of these two witnesses and omissions of trivial details would not cause any dent in the testimony of these two witnesses. Kishan Chand Mangal v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1982 SC 1511 : (1982) 3 SCC 466 : 1983 SCC (Cri) 92 (101) : 1982 CrLJ 1 : 1983 CrLR (SC) 477 : (1983) 1 SCR 569 : 1982 UJ (SC) 885 : (1983) 1 Crimes 20.

[10468] ● Appreciation of evidence.—The infirmities referred to by the High Court consisted in according to the High Court, improvements made by the witnesses and variations in their earlier and latter statements. On that ground alone, the testimony of PWs 1, 2, 3 and CW 1 cannot be held to be infirm. It is the duty of the Court to remove the grain from the chaff.

There four witnesses are the injured witnesses having received the injuries during the course of the incident. Their presence at the time and place of the occurrence cannot be doubted, in fact it has not been challenged by defence.

As both the parties were inimical for a long time, it will be prudent to convict only those persons whose presence and participation in the occurrence have been proved by the prosecution beyond reasonable doubt. Maqsoodan v. State of U.P., AIR 1983 SC 126 : (1983) 1 SCC 218 : 1983 SCC (Cri) 176 (180) : 1983 CrLJ 218 : (1983) 2 SCR 45 : 1983 UJ (SC) 175.

[10469] ● Material omissions in statement.—PW 1 did depose at the trial that it was accused 2 and 3 who had held the deceased and thereafter accused 1 gave a blow with weapon MO-3 on the neck of the deceased. He did not mention these details either in Ex P-1 or in the statement recorded under Section 164, CrPC. In view of material omissions the High Court can be said to have rightly acquitted the accused. Rajagopal v. Sadaya Gounder, 1984 Supp SCC 619 : 1983 SCC (Cri) 128 (129) : 1983 CrLR (SC) 116.

[10470] ● Evidence in Court when inconsistent with earlier statements made before Police.—Even the statements made before the Police were recorded four months after the occurrence. Copies of these statements were not made available to the defence on the spacious plea that the prosecution did not seek to rely on these statements. The Trial Court was wholly wrong in taking the view that it was not necessary to make available these statements to the defence for the purposes of cross-examination in as much as the prosecution did not wish to rely on these statements. The defence cannot be deprived of or denied the right to avail of these statements in order to test the evidence of the concerned witness or confront him with his earlier version in case the evidence in Court is inconsistent with the earlier statements made before the Police. Lalchand v. State of Haryana, AIR 1984 SC 226 : (1984) 1 SCC 686 : 1984 SCC (Cri) 355 (358) : 1984 CrLJ 164 : (1984) 1 Crimes 337.

[10471] ● Statement made to Police after during investigation—Proper procedure to confront witness with contradictions.—A statement recorded by the Police Officer during investigation is inadmissible in evidence and the proper procedure is to confront the witness with the contradictions when they are examined and then ask the Investigating Officer regarding the contradictions. Statement made to a police officer during the investigation can be used only for the purpose of contradicting the prosecution witness under Section 145 Evidence Act. It cannot be used for the purpose of cross-examination. It may be pointed out that the trial Court has marked large portions of the statements recorded by the police without confirming to the actual contradiction. If attention had been bestowed at the appropriate stage, this situation would not have arisen. State (Delhi Administration) v. Laxman Kumar and Indian Federation of Women Lawyers v. Shakuntala, AIR 1986 SC 250 : (1985) 4 SCC 476 : 1986 SCC (Cri) 2 (26) : 1986 CrLJ 155 : 1985 CrLR (SC) 501.

[10472] ● Benefit of doubt.—The injured witness PW 6 sustained 21 incised wounds. This cannot be disputed. However, his subsequent conduct and various statements made by him during investigation and trial render the entire prosecution story suspect. He is only eye-witness to the incident. He made a statement on June 3, 1976, which is marked as Ex D-3. In this he gives a version different from the one given to the Police. As per this statement, he has said that he went alongwith Prahlad and Jiwan from Delhi in order to recover the girl, in relation to whom the offence took place. At the time of cross-examination, he gave an affidavit (Ex D-4) dated June 29, 1976, which purports to bear his thumb-impression according to which he is reported to have said that the Police were getting statements by him recorded at their pleasure and were trying to protect the real culprits, namely, Jiwan and Prahlad. He is alleged to have put his thumb-impression upon an application of the same date addressed to the Judicial Magistrate offering to give statement before the Court. This application is Ex D-5 which was also produced when he was cross-examined. Ex D-6, dated July 1, 1976 in another affidavit to the same effect. He engaged a lawyer examined as DW-3 who filed a complaint against Jiwan & Prahlad which is Ex D-7. This complaint was ultimately dismissed for default on August 4, 1976. We find that the prosecution has not come to the Court with the true story and the conduct of PW-6 leaves considerable doubt in our minds as to what really happened. The appellants are entitled to the benefit of doubt. Chhita v. State of Rajasthan, 1987 Supp SCC 639 : 1988 SCC (Cri) 133 (134) : 1988 CrLR (SC) 254.

[10473] ● Contradiction in evidence of witness.—It is true that there are many contradictions in the evidence of witness. He has not attributed overt acts to individual accused in his statement before the Police whereas he has attributed such overt acts in his evidence before the Court. But that is no ground to reject his entire testimony. It must not be forgotten that he was a victim of the assault. Fortunately, he has survived. He must, therefore, be considered as the best eye-witness. The Court must not attach undue importance to minor discrepancies. The version of the prosecution case may be discarded. Appabhai v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1988 SC 696 : 1988 SCC (Cri) 559 (565) : 1988 CrLJ 848 : 1988 CrLR (SC) 178 : JT 1988 (1) SC 247 : 1988 UJ (SC) 27.

[10474] ● Statement made by witness before commission—Use of, to contradict him or impeach his credit—Not permissible.—A perusal of Sections 145, 155 and 151 of the Evidence Act clearly indicates that there are two purposes for which a previous statement can be used. One is for cross-examination and contradiction and the other is for corroboration. The first purpose is to discredit the witness by putting to him the earlier statement and contradicting him on that basis. So far as corroboration is concerned, it could not be disputed that it is none of the purposes of the defence to corroborate the evidence on the basis of the previous statement. Section 145, therefore, is the main section under which relief was sought by the accused. The use for which the previous statement was asked for was to contradict him if necessary and if it was a contradiction then the earlier statement was necessary so that the contradiction be put to the witness and that part of the statement can be proved. These purposes for which the precious statements are required could not be said to be purposes which were not against the witness. The two aspects of the restrictions which Section 6 of the Commission of Inquiry Act contemplates are the only two aspects which could be the result of the use of these statements. It is, therefore, clear that without going into the wider questions even a plain reading of Section 6 will prohibit the use of the previous statements at the trial either for the purposes of cross-examination to contradict the witness or to impeach his credit. Kehar Singh v. State (Delhi Admn.), AIR 1988 SC 1883 : (1988) 3 SCC 609 : 1988 SCC (Cri) 711 (748, 749) : 1989 CrLJ 1 : 1988 CrLR (SC) 536 : JT 1988 (3) SC 191 : (1988) 3 Crimes 209.

[10475] ● Dowry death—Contradiction in evidence.—The evidence of the Investigating Officer, Sub-Inspector Bansi Dhar undoubtedly is to the effect that when he went to the residence of Wazir Chand for the first time for investigation, the stove was lying on the slab. However, the evidence of the photographer who went to the residence of Wazir Chand alongwith the Investigating Officer is to the effect that when he went there, said stove was lying on the kitchen floor. In view of this contradiction, it is not impossible to hold that the stove was placed on the slab when Veena was preparing tea for the family and, hence, an accident was highly unlikely. Wazir Chand v. State of Harayana, AIR 1989 SC 378 : (1989) 1 SCC 244 : 1989 SCC (Cri) 105 : 1989 CrLJ 809 : 1989 CrLR (SC) 124 : JT 1988 (4) SC 558 : (1988) 1 Crimes 173.

[10476] ● Evidence of prosecution witnesses unacceptable and untrustworthy.—In the instant case, according to PW-12, he recorded the statement of PWs-7 and 10 only on December 13, 198[illegible], i.e., to say nearly 21 days after the occurrence. But it is surprising to note that PW-7 swears that PW-12 met him on the second or third day of the offence and recorded his statement and thereafter PW-12 did not contact him at all. PW-10 has deposed that the Police recorded her statement on the very next day of the occurrence and thereafter she did not meet any Police. Thus we find that the evidence of PW-12 on the one hand and the evidence of PW-7 and PW-10 on the other hand are irreconcilably in conflict even with reference to the dates of examination of PWs-7 and 10. If the evidence of PW- 7 and PW-10 is to be accepted with regard to the dates of their examination we have to hold that even earlier to the registration of the case, these two witnesses were contacted by the Police and not afterwards. Kewal Krishan v. State of Punjab, AIR 1989 SC 950 : 1989 SCC (Cri) 698 (700) : 1989 CrLJ 1248 : 1989 CrLR (SC) 250 : JT 1989 (1) SC 155 : (1989) 1 Crimes 389.

[10477] ● Illegal gratification proof.—In the instant case, from PW 10 it is elicited that she during the investigation stated to the Police that her husband with appellant came to her house even at 8 p.m. while the case of the prosecution is that the appellant came to the house of PW 10 only at about 10.30 p.m. or 11 p.m. DW 1 who was then the writer in the Police Station (M.H.C.) states that the appellant was at the Police Station at 10.05 p.m. If it is so as rightly pointed out by the learned defence Counsel, the appellant could not have accompanied PW 7 at 10.30 or 11.00 p.m. to his house to get the illegal gratification. Thus, a scrutiny of the evidence of PW 7 and 10 reveals that their version is nothing but a conglomeration of contradiction. Kewal Krishan v. State of Punjab, AIR 1989 SC 950 : 1989 SCC (Cri) 698 (701) : 1989 CrLJ 1248 : 1989 CrLR (SC) 250 : JT 1989 (1) SC 155 : (1989) 1 Crimes 389.

[10478] ● Police resorting to violence while pouring investigation.—Immediately after the incident the earliest version is the report (application given by Indal) on 16-30-1967. But during the cross-examination this witness stated that in the report he has mentioned certain facts which were noticed by him, certain facts about which he had heard and certain facts he omitted to mention. He said that incident of inserting chilies in the private part of Ramdei was seen by him but then admitted that in this report made by him it has not been mentioned. It is correct to say that I got written on the application some facts which I saw myself, some of them which I heard. The insertion of chillies in the vagina of Ramdei was seen by my own eyes. I have not stated that I have seen the insertion of chillies in the vagina. This statement by Indal who is alleged to have made the application which is the foundation of the prosecution makes it clear that he had not stated in that application what he personally saw. This part of omission is an important aspect of the prosecution version……

As regards the incident of Ramdei, neither the Sub-Inspector nor any of the Constables was alleged to have been responsible for the alleged story of introduction of powdered chillies in her private part. According to her, Maiku Chowkidar took the chillies in powder form and Mullu put the chillies in the Vagina. In her cross-examination she herself admitted that she did not tell about the incident to anyone. She told about it to the CID Inspector after 1½ years or 2 years after the incident. She also said that she had no injury mark and that she was not medically examined. On the basis of this evidence coupled with what Indal stated in his application, no one could be convicted for the alleged offence against the appellants. Maiku v. State of U.P., AIR 1989 SC 67 : 1989 Supp (1) SCC 25 : 1989 SCC (Cri) 117 (122) : 1989 CrLJ 860 : 1989 CrLR (SC) 10 : JT 1988 (4) SC 73 : (1988) 3 Crimes 638.

[10479] ● Evidence of witness tainted with interestedness and unsafe to act upon.—"After careful reading of evidence of PW-1, we are not much impressed. Firstly, PW 1 admittedly was not well disposed towards the respondents on account of various criminal proceedings which he has admitted in his cross-examination and so his evidence is highly interested and biased. Secondly, PW-1 who claims to have been standing at the scene throughout and witnessing the entire occurrence has not been attacked by any of the respondents and there was not even a scratch on his body. Thirdly, though he claims to be a full occurrence witness, his evidence before the Court is an exaggeration over his earlier version made in his first report in which he has not stated that the respondent 4 was armed with a gun. Fourthly, in the first information report PW 1 has stated that all the respondents barring respondents 1 and 6 also fired and indulged in attacking the prosecution party with spears, pharsas and lathis. Fifthly, though PW 4, the Investigating Officer, has categorically stated that PW 1 assisted him in the investigation and pointed out the places from where various material objects were seized, PW 1 emphatically denies of PW 4 visiting the place of occurrence in his presence and also his helping PW 4 in preparing the site plan. Sixthly, in the first information report he has mentioned that the incident was witnessed by Khacheru Singh, Shailendra Singh, Niranjan Singh etc. residents of Badarakha, but none of the witnesses mentioned in the report has been examined by the prosecution before the Court. Seventhly, he pleads totally ignorant of any of the respondents sustaining injuries. Lastly, he denies knowledge of the vendees filing a declaratory suit and obtaining a decree. All the above points which are in the nature of omissions, contradictions and exaggerations compel this Court to arrive to a conclusion that the evidence of PW 1 tainted with interestedness and that it is unsafe to act upon his evidence and that he is not coming forward with the entire truth." Biri Singh v. State of Uttar Pradesh, 1992 SCC (Cri) 915 (931-932) : 1992 Supp (2) SCC 264 : 1992 CrLJ 1510 : JT 1992 (2) SC 229.

[10480] ● Contradiction on non-material point.—We are at a loss to understand how the High Court has found contradiction in the statement of PW 26 and FIR when none exists. Even if there is any contradiction on a non-material point that is no ground to reject the whole of the testimony of the witnesses.

Appeal against acquittal was allowed. State of Karnataka v. Lakshmanaiah, AIR 1993 SC 100 : 1993 Supp (20 SCC 420 : 1992 SCC (Cri) 755 (758) : 1992 CrLJ 3997 : JT 1992 (4) SC 326 : (1992) 2 UJ (SC) 565 : (1992) 2 Crimes 1130.

[10481] ● Benefit of doubt given to accused because of contradiction relating to his complicity.—The High Court noted that one of the eye-witnesses stated that Devi Dutt was armed with the spear and participated in the act of assault but another witness Ram Prasad, stated that Devi Dutt had no weapon in his hand. Since Ram Prasad was not declared as a hostile witness and as there was no reason to reject his evidence, so far as Devi Dutt was concerned, the High Court was of the view that it was quite probable that Devi Dutt did not take part in the act of assault but he arrived at the time of occurrence only out of anxiety, particularly when he had no weapon in his hand an he could not have participated in the assault. It appears that the High Court has taken into consideration the facts and circumstances of the case quite dispassionately and has given the benefit of doubt to the accused Devi Dutt because of the contradiction relating to his complicity. The High Court has taken a very reasonable view. Annaporna Dutt v. State of U.P., AIR 1993 SC 1207 : 1993 Supp (2) SCC 246 : 1993 SCC (Cri) 502 (508, 509) : 1993 CrLJ 490 : JT 1992 (5) SC 614 : (1992) 3 Crimes 793.

[10482] ● No conflict between direct evidence and medical evidence.—"Now coming to the head injury, which resulted in death, all the eye-witnesses have stated that Babu Lal (A 1) gave a blow with the blunt portion of axe on the head, which caused only a depression. It is quite possible that first two Doctors, who examined the deceased, did not notice this depression. Only after X-ray examination was taken, the head injury was found and after death during the post-mortem examination, the Doctor clearly found that there was a fracture of the parietal bone and there was haemotoma. Therefore, it cannot be said that there is any conflict between the direct evidence and the medical evidence." Babu Lal v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1993 SC 1941 : 1993 SCC (Cri) 1026 (1028) : 1993 CrLJ 2667.

[10483] ● Contradiction in two statements—No explanation as to.—In the chief examination PW 2, the mother of the deceased stated that there were domestic quarrels between her daughter, the deceased and the accused and coming to know of the occurrence she and her husband went and questioned the deceased who told them that the accused beat her, poured Kerosene and set her on fire. Having stated so in the Chief Examination, in the cross-examination she introduced a different version that her daughter was conscious and on being questioned by them she told them that she got annoyed with her husband and she herself poured Kerosene on her person and that if she survived, she would be held responsible for the act and therefore, she falsely gave the name of her husband as the person who poured Kerosene and set fire. Then in the re-examination the witness was asked as to why she gave two statements for which she gave an evasive answer by stating that she did not want to offer any explanation concerning the contradiction involved in the two statements. This aspect has been considered by the Courts below and it has been rightly held that in view of her evasive answer in the re-examination, the only inference is that certain circumstances like her affection for the grand-children must have compelled her to give such a version. In any event the version given by her in cross-examination is not entitled to any weight. Ganpat Mahadeo Mane v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1993 SC 1180 : 1993 Supp (2) SCC 242 : 1993 SCC (Cri) 491 (495) : 1993 CrLJ 298 : JT 1992 (6) SC 177 : (1993) 1 UJ (SC) 213 : (1992) 3 Crimes 633.

[10484] ● Contradiction by prosecutrix when naming only one person.—When the prosecutrix laid claim in the FIR and to which she stuck to at the trial, that Somanna and Venkataswamy had committed rape on her, the High Court viewed that there was a contradiction made by the prosecutrix when naming only one person as her ravisher to Dr. Reeta, PW 3. Surprisingly the prosecutrix's statement to Dr. Reeta about her naming one person to have committed rape on her was not put to the prosecutrix during cross-examination. In the absence of the same being put to her it cannot be said that their was a contradiction for there might have been an omission which the prosecutrix could supply and render a plausible acceptable explanation. Narayanamma v. State of Karnataka, (1994) 5 SCC 728 : 1994 SCC (Cri) 1573 (1576).

[10485] ● Witness not confronted with alleged inconsistent statement.—In the instant case PW 1 was not confronted with the alleged inconsistent statements contained in the FIR or in his case diary statement under Section 161, CrPC, yet the High Court relied on these statements which is not permissible under the law, unless inconsistent statements were put to the witnesses. State of U.P. v. Babul Nath, (1994) 6 SCC 29 : 1994 SCC (Cri) 1585 (1590).

[10486] ● Witness not confronted with his case diary statement.—The witness was not confronted with his case diary statement at all nor there is any material before the Court to accept the contention that the witness had not disclosed this fact to the Police particularly when the witnesses with an emphatic denial stated that it is not a fact that he did not disclose to the Police that he had seen the appellant and the deceased moving towards their village. Laxman Naik v. State of Orissa, AIR 1995 SC 1387 : (1994) 3 SCC 381 : 1995 CrLJ 2692.

[10487] ● Vital contradictions in evidence of eye-witnesses.—The evidence of the eye-witnesses shows that not only the appellants but others also inflicted injuries on the head with lathis. The Doctor, who examined the deceased found three lacerated injuries on the head of the deceased and he opined that those could have been caused by a hard and blunt object like an iron rod, shovel or lathi, etc. The case of the appellants was singled out only on the ground that they used the iron rod and shovel. In their earlier statements, the alleged eye-witnesses stated that all the accused including the two appellants inflicted blows with their respective weapons on different parts of the body, as can be seen from the cross-examination of the Investigating Officer. These are all vital contradictions in the evidence of the alleged eye-witnesses and it cannot definitely be said that these two appellants alone are responsible for causing the death. Phani Bhushan Das v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1995 SC 70 (72) : 1995 CrLJ 551.

[10488] ● Statement to be used to contradict maker.—A statement made to a Police Officer, when he is investigating into an offence in accordance with Chap. XII of the CrPC cannot be used to even corroborate the maker thereof in view of the embargo in Section 162(1), CrPC appearing in that Chapter and can be used only to contradict him (the maker) in accordance with the proviso thereof, except in those cases where subsection (2) of the section applies. Jagdish Narain v. State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1996 SC 3136 : (1996) 8 SCC 199 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 565 (569) : JT 1996 (3) SC 89.

[10489] ● No contradiction or variation in deposition of witness from what she stated in FIR.—It was argued that PW 5 was categoric in the first information report that Sham Singh fired from his pistol at Balbir Singh which struck his chest on the left side and he fell down. Thereafter, the other accused attacked the deceased with Barchha and inflicted injuries which resulted in the death of Balbir Singh instantaneously. At the trial, PW 5, however, deposed that Sham Singh fired from the pistol at Balbir Singh, but Balbir Singh was not hit. Balbir Singh fell down and bundles of wheat fell on his head and the other accused inflicted various injuries on other parts of the body of Balbir Singh like thigh, chest, back, etc. There is no discrepancy between FIR and the deposition of PW 5 in Court. We should remember that FIR was given within two hours of the incident and PW 5, a lady, would have been in an agitated mind then. In FIR, PW 5 only stated that Sham Singh fired from his pistol at her husband which struck his chest. That could only be what she inferred. She did not state that her husband died as a result of the above pistol shot. It is because of the various injuries inflicted by the other accused, Balbir Singh, died. And as PW 5, she stated that Balbir Singh was not hit when the accused-Sham Singh fired from the pistol at Balbir Singh, but Balbir Singh fell down. Bundles of hay fell on his hand and the other accused inflicted various injuries on other parts of the body. Really, there is no contradiction or variation in the deposition of PW 5 from what she stated in FIR. Baldev Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1996 SC 372 (375) : (1995) 6 SCC 593 : 1995 SCC (Cri) 1132 : JT 1995 (7) SC 286.

[10490] ● Statement of witness to be used at trial only for contradictions omissions.—The Court should not come to the conclusion on the basis of Section 161 statements which are not evidence. It can be used at the trial only for contradictions or omissions when the witness was examined. Omkar Namdeo Jadhao v. Second Additional Sessions Judge, Buldana, AIR 1997 SC 331 : (1996) 7 SCC 498 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 488 (489) : JT 1996 (1) SC 247.

[10491] ● Impeachment of credit of witness.—The credit of a witness can be impeached by proof of any statement which is inconsistent with any part of his evidence in Court. This principle is delineated in Section 155(3) of the Evidence Act and it must be borne in mind when reading Section 145 which consists of two limbs. It is provided in the first limb of Section 145 that a witness may be cross-examined as to the previous statement made by him without such writing being shown to him. But the second limb provides that if it is intended to contradict him by writing his attention must before the writing can be proved be called to those parts of it which are to be used for the purpose of contradicting him there is thus a distinction between the two vivid limbs though subtle it may be. The first limb does not envisage impeaching the credit of a witness but it merely enables the opposite party to cross-examine the witness with reference to the previous statements made by him. He may at that stage succeed in eliciting materials to his benefit through such cross-examination even without resorting to the procedure laid down in the second limb. But if the witness disowns having made any statement which is inconsistent with his present stand his testimony in Court on the score would not be vitiated until the cross-examiner proceeds to comply with the procedure prescribed in the second limb of Section 145. Binay Kumar Singh v. State of Bihar, AIR 1997 SC 322 : (1997) 1

SCC 283 : 1997 SCC (Cri) 333 : 1997 CrLJ 363 (SC).

[10492] ● Contradictions in deposition of witness.—According to the learned Sessions Judge both the said eye-witnesses have deposed that the deceased was on foot when he was shot at but Munshi Ram a panch witness to inquest report has stated that the deceased had stated in the hospital that he was sitting on a rickshaw when he was fired at the back side. The other witness to the inquest report Sohan Ram has also supported Munshi Ram, who is stated to be brother of the deceased. The learned Sessions Judge has indicated that although the incident had taken place in the main bazaar at 2 p.m. but no shopkeeper or disinterested witness has been examined. PW 19 is a relation of the deceased and is inimical to the accused and he is a resident of a place which is about 14 miles away from the place of occurrence. The learned Sessions Judge has rightly indicated that there are contradictions in the depositions of PW 19 and PW 20 but such contradictions are not very material for which their depositions are to be discarded. Both the said witnesses have clearly stated that the accused had fired a shot from the pistol from a close range. Such deposition gets corroboration from the medical evidence as to the nature of the injuries suffered by the deceased and also from the dying declaration given by the deceased. Bhagirath v. State of Haryana, AIR 1997 SC 234 (243) : (1997) 1 SCC 481 : 1997 SCC (Cri) 345 : 1997 CrLJ 81 : JT 1996 (9) SC 654.

[10493] ● Contradiction in earlier statements to be considered when.—The previous statement cannot be treated as substantive evidence. The contradiction with earlier statement should be considered only if these have been brought on record by confronting the witnesses. Chinnamal v. State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 1997 SC 145 : (1996) 7 SCC 489 : 1997 (4) Crimes 211 (SC).

[10494] ● Attention of witness not drawn to statement attributed to him.—Attention of the witness was not drawn to the statement attributed to him as recorded by a member of the Board of Revenue of the State of Bihar who conducted an official enquiry into the administrative lapses involved in the incident. The evidence of the witness that he gave statement at the venue of occurrence and that he had not given any other statement earlier thereto, cannot be rejected. Binay Kumar Singh v. State of Bihar, AIR 1997 SC 322 : (1997) 1 SCC 283 : 1997 CrLJ 362 : 1997 (100) Bom LR 159.

[10495] ● Witness contradicted with his previous statement.—PW 5 was sought to be contradicted with his previous statement recorded by the Police by generally putting to him that there was no mention in that statement of his having seen accused-Ayub inside the House. He denied that he was telling for the first time in the Court that the accused was seen inside the room. It is true that this witness had not specifically stated that accused-Ayub was seen in the room. PW 11, PSI Ved Pathak, has proved that omission. In fact, the witness had stated in his police statement that when the door was broken open and when he and Aslam had seen inside they had noticed that Ayub had killed his wife by strangulation and his children by axe blows. Instead of saying the two things what he had seen and what he had inferred separately, he had stated that Ayub had killed his wife and children. It is therefore, not correct to say that this witness had for the first time stated before the Court that Ayub was seen inside the room when the door was broken open and he had gone inside that room. Both the Courts below had rightly appreciated the evidence of PW 4 and PW 5. Shaikh Ayub v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1998 SC 1285 (1288) : (1998) 9 SCC 521 : 1998 CrLJ 1656 : JT 1998 (7) SC 115.

[10496] ● Evidence of eye-witnesses not believed as they contradicted by their Police statement.—It was contended by the learned Counsel for the appellant that the evidence of eye-witnesses ought not to have been believed as all of them stood contradicted by their Police statements wherein they had stated that both the shots were fired by the appellant whereas before the Court they deposed that the first shot was fired by Thambi and second shot was fired by the appellant. They had changed their version in view of the report of the Ballistic Expert which shows that the two shots were fired from two different guns. It is true that the witnesses had stated like that before the Police and even the Investigating Officer had carried on investigation on that basis till the report of the Ballistic Expert was received. What the Sessions Court had failed to consider and what the High Court has accepted is the explanation given by the witnesses that when the first shot was fired, it was dark and the witnesses had not seen who had fired it but when PW 2 flashed his torch light, the appellant was seen pointing his gun towards them and, therefore, they had believed that the previous shot was also fired by him. In view of this explanation, it was not proper for the Trial Court to discard their evidence on the ground that their evidence stood contradicted by their previous statements and that indicated that they were trying to implicate falsely both those accused. Neither before the Trial Court nor before the High Court identity of the accused including the appellant was challenged. PWs 1 to 4 being the inmates of the house were bound to be present in the house at the time of the incident. PWs 1, 3 and 4 were also injured by the second shot which was fired by the appellant. Therefore, there was no good reason for discarding their evidence. Chacko v. State of Kerala, AIR 1998 SC 2250 (2251) : (1998) 5 SCC 602 : 1998 SCC (Cri) 1363 : 1998 CrLJ 3281 : 1998 CrLR (SC) 426 : JT 1998 (4) SC 220 : (1998) 2 Crimes 336.

[10497] ● Omission in FIR.—The evidence of PW 1, so far as it relates to identification of A 1, cannot also be relied upon for even though he claimed to have known A 2 from before, in the FIR he did not mention the name of A 2. When he was confronted with his such material omission, he asserted that he mentioned the name of A 2 but he could not assign any reason why it did not find place in his report. The evidence of PW 1, therefore, does not come in aid of the prosecution to prove that A 2 was the other miscreant. Raju alias Rajendra v. State of Maharashtra and Rajya alias Raju v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1998 SC 275 : (1998) 1 SCC 169 : 1998 SCC (Cri) 296 (299) : 1998 CrLJ 493.

[10498] ● Contradictions and improvements.—The witness in his statement under Section 161, CrPC unequivocally stated that the three persons came on the scooter and one got down and took out a box and picked up a bomb and threw it to the office of the PW 1 which exploded loudly and it further stated that of three persons who ran away one among whom was Sayeed but in Court gave a totally different picture and on being confronted with his earlier version makes a clean denial. In this state of unsatisfactory prosecution evidence, it is difficult for us to sustain the conviction of the appellant of a serious charge of murder and we have no hesitation to hold that the learned Sessions Judge as well as the High Court committed serious error by relying upon such untrustworthy witnesses. Ahmed Bin Salam v. State of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 1999 SC 1617 : (1999) 4 SCC 111 : 1999 SCC (Cri) 493 (498) : 1999 CrLJ 2281 : JT 1999 (3) SC 107.

[10499] ● Omission in statements under Section 161, CrPC whether amounted to contradiction.—Seeing the statement under Section 161, CrPC we are of the view that the omission cannot be regarded as being a contradiction. According to the Explanation to Section 162, CrPC, an omission to state a fact or circumstance in the statement referred to in sub-section (1) may amount to contradiction if the same appears to be significant and otherwise relevant having regard to the context in which such omission occurs and whether any omission amounts to a contradiction in the particular context shall be a question of fact. S. Kaur v. Baldev Singh, AIR 1999 SC 1581 (1583) : (1997) 11 SCC 292.

[10500] ● Inconsistent statement when amount to contradiction.—A former statement though seemingly inconsistent with the evidence need not necessarily be sufficient to amount to contradiction. Only such of the inconsistent statement which is liable to be "contradicted" would affect the credit of the witness. Section 145 of the Evidence Act also enables the cross-examiner to use any former statement of the witness, but it cautions that if it is intended to "contradict" the witness the cross-examiner is enjoined to comply with the formality prescribed therein. Section 162 of the Code also permits the cross-examiner to use the previous statement of the witness (recorded under Section 161 of the CrPC) for the only limited purpose, i.e., to "contradict" the witness. Rammi alias Rameshwar v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1999 SC 3544 : (1999) 8 SCC 649 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 26 (33) : 1999 CrLJ 4561 : JT 1999 (7) SC 247.

[10501] ● Cross-examination of witness with reference to his previous statement to establish contradiction.—A perusal of Section 145 Evidence Act shows that this section permits the cross-examination of the witness in any level with reference to his previous statement to establish a contradiction and the manner is which such contradiction can be established, Section 155 of the Evidence Act provides that the previous statement of a witness can be made use of during the cross-examination of that witness for the purpose of impeaching the credit of the witness. Thus, it is seen it is the right of a party in a trial to use the previous statements of a witness either for the purpose of establishing a contradiction in his evidence or for the purpose of impeaching the credit of the witness. This right given to a party in a trial under Section 145 is somewhat controlled in criminal trials by the provisions made in the Code. The statement recorded by a police officer under Section 161, CrPC even though is a previous statement for the purpose of Section 145, Evidence Act, such statement can be used for the purpose of establishing a contradiction or impeaching the credit of the witness only in the manner provided for in Section 162 of the Code. State of Kerala v. Babu, AIR 1999 SC 2161 : (1999) 4 SCC 621 : 1999 SCC (Cri) 611 : 1999 CrLJ 3491 : 1999 (3) Crimes 27.

[10502] ● Discrepancy to be distinguished from contradiction.—Discrepancy has to be distinguished from contradiction. Whereas contradiction in the statement of the witness is fatal for the case, minor discrepancy or variance in evidence will not make the prosecution's case doubtful. The normal course of the human conduct would be that while narrating a particular incidence, there may occur minor discrepancies, such discrepancies in law may render credential to the depositions. Parrot like statements are disfavoured by the Courts. In order to ascertain as to whether the discrepancy pointed out was minor or not or the same amounted to contradiction, regard is required to be had to the circumstances of the case by keeping in view the social status of the witnesses and environment in which such witness was making the statement. State of Himachal Pradesh v. Lekh Raj, AIR 1999 SC 3916 : (2000) 1 SCC 247 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 147 (157) : 2000 CrLJ 44 : 2000 CrLR (SC) 7 : JT 1999 (9) SC 43.

[10503] ● No witness to be contradicted by citing another witness.—The general rule of evidence is that no witness shall be cited to contradict another witness if the evidence is intended only to shake the credit of another witness. The said rule has been incorporated in Section 153 of the Evidence Act.

Illustration (d) cited in Section 153 is to amplify the aforesaid exception No. 2.

The basic requirement for adducing such contradictory evidence is that the witness, whose impartiality is sought to be contradicted with the help of such evidence, should have been asked about it and he should have denied it. Without adopting such a preliminary recourse, it would be meaningless, if not unfair, to bring in a new witness to speak something fresh about a witness already examined. State of Karnataka v. K. Yarappa Reddy, AIR 2000 SC 185 (189-190) : (1999) 8 SCC 715 : 2000 CrLJ 400 : 1999 CrLR (SC) 723.

[10504] ● Testimony of eye-witness not to be rejected on strength of wrong information.—Learned Counsel for the appellants made an unsuccessful attempt to create a dent on the concurrent findings regarding culpability of the appellants. He mainly relied on an affidavit signed by PW 1. The endeavour was to show that PW-1 had gone to the extent of saying that the murderers killed even Shantibai, her daughter-in-law (wife of Darshan Singh) by burning her. True, such a version is found in the affidavit prepared in English. It is also stated in the affidavit that she recognized Mannu and Jagga among the killers who dragged her sons out and set them ablaze. In fact Shantibai was not attacked by the killers. She is alive even now. Evidently that part of the affidavit is wrong. Incorporation of such a wrong information in the affidavit is hardly sufficient to throw the testimony of PW 1 overboard. Even in the Court she was not able to vouchsafe to the truth of what all things inscribed in the affidavit because apart from the fact that she affixed her signature in the affidavit, she did not know what all were written therein. Neither the person who drafted the affidavit nor the typist who typed it, has been examined as witness. We are therefore, not persuaded to reject the testimony of PW 1 mother merely on the strength of the aforesaid wrong information crept in the affidavit. Manohar Lal v. State (N.C.T. of Delhi), AIR 2000 SC 420 (422) : (2000) 2 SCC 92 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 333 : 2000 CrLJ 581 : 2000 Cr App R (SC) 91.

[10505] ● Omissions and contradictions between statement made by prosecution witnesses.—In the absence of any explanation as to how three persons belonging to the accused party died, the testimony of four eye-witnesses became vulnerable. The omissions and contradictions between the statement made under Section 161, CrPC and the statement made in Court makes the witnesses unreliable. Padam Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 2000 SC 361 : (2000) 1 SCC 621 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 285 (290) : 2000 CrLJ 489 : 2000 CrLR (SC) 133.

[10506] ● Evidence of two other witnesses PWs 6 and 8 found to be unreliable.—According to his evidence in Court, PW 8 mentioned the name of Satnam Singh as the person driving the truck but in his statement recorded by the Police under Section 161, CrPC, the same does not find place. He admits that he disclosed this fact to any person in hospital that Satnam Singh was driving the truck. He also admits that he did not disclose any information to the Police even on the next day. On going through the evidence of these two witnesses, we have no hesitation to hold that the learned Sessions Judge rightly did not rely upon PWs 6 and 8. Satnam Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 2000 SC 423 (425, 426) : (2000) 1 SCC 662 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 296 : 2000 CrLJ 584.

[10507] ● Testimony of PW-5 in Court contradicted by prosecution.—It is true that all those witnesses have said that the deceased told her that she herself committed the act of lighting the match-stick but all those witnesses were confronted with their earlier version recorded by the Investigating Officer under Section 161 of the CrPC. The version of those witnesses in Court stands discredited by such earlier statements and the two Courts below have rightly declined to place any reliance on the testimony of those witnesses out of these witnesses.

In this case, PW 5, was not declared hostile formally. But that does not matter because she too was confronted with her first version recorded by the Police and thereby her testimony in Court was contradicted by the prosecution. Kalu Ram v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 2000 SC 3630 : (2000) 10 SCC 324 : 2000 CrLR (SC) 18.

[10508] ● Contradiction when elicited in course of cross-examination.—If any contradiction is elicited in the course of the cross-examination, it cannot be stated that it is the duty of the Court to get the same clarified. Jagdish v. State of M.P., AIR 2000 SC 2059 : (2000) 9 SCC 155 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 1188 : 2000 CrLJ 2955 : JT 2000 (6) SC 247 : 2000 Cr App R (SC) 338.

[10509] ● Omissions and contradictions by PW-7 from his earlier version.—The witness PW-7 also made several omissions and contradictions from his earliest version under Section 161, CrPC and has been duly confronted also while in the cross-examination. Only explanation is that the earliest version is wrong. In the aforesaid premises, we have no hesitation to come to the conclusion that the evidence of this witness is tainted one and no reliance can be placed on the same. When the evidence of PW 7, the sole eye-witness, is excluded from consideration, on the residue of evidence no conclusion in a charge of murder can be based and it must be held that the prosecution has failed to establish the charge beyond reasonable doubt. Mohan Lal v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 2000 SC 3441 (3442).

[10510] ● Contradictions in testimony of witnesses.—The portion of the earlier statements put to the witnesses, do not, in fact show any contradiction much less in material particulars. Most of the alleged improvements are in fact the details and description of the facts already stated by PW 2 in his confessional statements or before the Police during investigation. The witness is stated to have improved by using the words "due to that" for the reason to his coming to Pune for further education and employment. Omission of the aforesaid words in the earlier statement cannot, in any way, be termed as material on facts. Some alleged omissions in relation to his statement before the Court, during the trial, are referred to his statement before the Police. It may be kept in mind that what was stated by him on 15-10-1994 was not the statement of PW 2 in terms of Section 161, CrPC but was only the substance of the interrogation recorded by the Investigating Officer. The aforesaid statement cannot, in any way, be termed to be a statement recorded under Section 161 which could be used for the purpose of contradiction of the witness under Section 162, CrPC. Similarly, the alleged contradiction of not mentioning the "eyes" and instead mentioning the "mouth" of the victims for the purposes of sprinkling of the chilly powder cannot be termed to be a major contradiction or improvement particularly when the witness himself says that by "mouth" he meant "eyes" as well. It may be worthwhile to notice that wherever any alleged contradiction or improvement was confronted to the witness, the learned Trial Court has made a note of it in the statement, at the time of recording of the deposition of the witness. The notes unambiguously indicate that the alleged improvement made by PW 2 in his deposition at the trial, are no way in material particulars. Narayan Chetanram Chaudhary v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 2000 SC 3352 : (2000) 8 SCC 457 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 1546 (1569, 1570) : 2000 CrLJ 4640 : 2000 CrLR (SC) 700.

[10511] ● Omissions in earlier statement.—It is no doubt true that there have been certain omissions in her earlier statement given to the Police, but those omissions cannot be held to be material omissions amounting to contradiction so as to impeach her version in any matter. Laljit Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 2000 SC 3594 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 1501 (1503).

[10512] ● Non-compliance of Section 145—Evidence Act.—If the witness disowns to have made any statement which is inconsistent with his present stand, his testimony in Court on that score would not be vitiated until the cross-examiner proceeds to comply with the procedure prescribed in the second limb of Section 145 of the Evidence Act. Bearing in mind the proposition and on scrutinizing the evidence the Magistrate who is supposed to have exhibited the document in his cross-examination categorically admitted that neither any signature nor seal of either of the Chief Judicial Magistrate or of his office on the statement. If according to the Magistrate on recording the statement of Satyanarain he had sent the same to the Chief Judicial Magistrate, it is inconceivable to how the document would not bear the signature nor seal of either of the Chief Judicial Magistrate or of his office. The Magistrate in his examination-in-chief also does not state as to who identified Satyanarain in the hospital before recording his statement. It is under these circumstances it is difficult to hold that has been legally proved to be the former statement of Satyanarain who has been examined. Then again on scrutiny of the evidence it is crystal clear that the witness has not been confronted with that part of his alleged former statement which the defence want him to be contradicted. The witness has merely been asked is to whether he stated before the Magistrate that accused Surendra has as saluted Kameshwar to which he had replied he does not recall as to what he stated before the Magistrate. In this State of affairs it is difficult to hold that the provisions of Section 145 has been complied with in the case in hand. Then again, so far as accused Rajendra is concerned, there has been no variance in his so-called former statement and his statement in Court when he was examined clearly asserting that Rajendra assaulted the deceased by means of Bhala. Rajendra Singh v. State of Bihar, AIR 2000 SC 1779 (1783) : AIR 2000 SCW 1314 : (2000) 4 SCC 298 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 796 : 2000 CrLJ 2199 : 2000 (3) Scale 137 : 2000 (4) Supreme 435 : 2000 (3) Crimes 21.

[10513] ● Witness during trial if intended to be contradicted by his previous statement.—It is no doubt true that on 4-7-1977, Satyanarain who has been examined as PW 8 in course of trial had been examined by a Magistrate as he had been seriously injured and that statement has been exhibited as Ex B and in fact the Magistrate who had recorded the statement has been examined by the defence as DW 1. This statement of Satyanarain recorded by the Magistrate may be a former statement by Satynarain relating to the same fact at about a time when the fight took place and when Satyanarain was examined as PW 8 during trial it would be open for a party to make use of the former statement for such purpose as the law provides. But if the witness during trial is intended to be contradicted by his former statement then his attention has to be drawn to those parts of the statement which are required to be used for the purpose of contradicting him before the said statement in question can be proved as provided under Section 145 of the Evidence Act. Rajendra Singh v. State of Bihar, AIR 2000 SC 1779 : (2000) 4 SCC 298 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 796 (802) : 2000 CrLJ 2199 : JT 2001 (4) SC 293.

[10514] ● Appreciation of evidence—Omission regarding making of dying declaration.—In the instant case witness was confronted by her complaint wherein she had not stated that Chandrakanta was telling the persons present there that her husband had burnt her by pouring kerosene oil. She has admitted in her cross-examination that Asha Kumari was present when she reached there. She admitted that she had not stated in her complaint that her sister Asha Kumari had gone to Ranchi alongwith her sister Chandrakanta. She admitted that the appellant's both hands and nose had received burns and his moustache and some hair on the front side of the head were also burnt. She further stated that she did not know where the things which were removed from the Puja room were kept. This witness had not gone to the Police Station as, according to her, a threat was given to her by the appellant. It is proved that she had not stated in her complaint given at about 5 p.m. that Chandrakanta had made any dying declaration before her. She had also not stated so in her statement subsequently recorded under Section 161, CrPC. The Trial Court and the High Court have brushed aside the omission on the ground that the complaint/FIR is not expected to be a complete document and certain every minor details of occurrence. It is difficult to appreciate how this omission can be said to be a minor one. It was not a cryptic complaint. She has referred to various other details in her complaint and, therefore, this omission regarding Chandrakanta having made a dying declaration could not have been brushed aside as an omission on a minor point. Ramesh Prasad v. State of Bihar, AIR 2000 SC 398 (399) : (1999) 9 SCC 433 : 1999 CrLR (SC) 694.

[10515] ● No serious contradiction between statement of eye-witness and evidence of doctor.—The question whether the ocular evidence of PWs 1 and 2 is against the medical evidence in the case has been answered by the High Court in affirmative going by the statement of the two eye-witnesses that Hanuman gave three blows on the head of the deceased-Panchu with the axe but the Doctor, PW 5, found only one injury on the head of the deceased. From the evidence of PW 5, it is clear that the injury found on the head of the deceased was possible if the blow was struck with the blunt side of the axe and the said injury was sufficient in ordinary course to cause death. The learned Sessions Judge adverting to the contention of the defence regarding improbability of the version of the eye-witnesses observed that their statement to the effect that three blows with the axe dealt on the head of the deceased cannot be correct and it appears that only a single blow was given on the head. It is relevant to note here that other injuries have also been found by the Doctor on the face and shoulder of the deceased. Reading the statement of the eye-witnesses and the evidence of the Doctor, we do not find any serious contradiction between the two which may form the basis for discarding the testimony of the eye-witnesses. State of Rajasthan v. Hanuman, AIR 2001 SC 282 : (2001) 1 SCC 337 : 2001 SCC (Cri) 143 (145) : 2001 CrLJ 485 : 2001 CrLR (SC) 1.

[10516] ● Evidence led by prosecution contradictory and unreliable.—In all material particulars, PW 4 stands contradicted by PWs 1 and 2 who are admittedly the Panch witnesses. The prosecution also failed to associate three Constables who accompanied S.N. Tripathi (PW 4) as the witnesses. The Trial Court appears to have omitted to note the glaring contradictions in the testimony of prosecution witnesses. PW 4 in his testimony in the Court submitted that : "........ he received the information that accused-Bholaram Kushwaha was having brown sugar in the pocket of his trouser. He recorded that information in the Sanha. That is Ex P 13".

However, a perusal of Ex P 13 showed that no entry was made therein regarding the appellant having brown sugar in his pocket. We feel that the appellant cannot be convicted on the basis of evidence led which is contradictory and not reliable. Bhola Ram Kushwaha v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 2001 SC 229 (230) : (2001) 1 SCC 35 : 2001 CrLJ 116 : 2001 CrLR (SC) 52.

[10517] ● Contradiction on material aspect pertaining to complicity of other co-accused.—In the present case, there is a contradiction on a material aspect pertaining to the complicity of other co-accused persons, and therefore the evidence of eye witnesses cannot be held sufficient to convict accused under Section 302, IPC with the aid of Section 34, IPC. Mahabir Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 2001 SC 2503 : (2001) 7 SCC 148 : 2001 SCC (Cri) 1262 : 2001 CrLJ 3945.

[10518] ● Entries in Police diary not to be used to explain contradiction.—A reading of the sub-sections (2) and (3) of Section 172, CrPC makes the position clear that the discretion given to the Court to use such diaries is only for aiding the Court to decide on a point. It is made abundantly clear in sub-section (2) itself that the Court is forbidden from using the entries of such diaries as evidence. What cannot be used as evidence against the accused cannot be used in any other manner against him. If the Court uses the entries in a case diary for contradicting a Police Officer, it should be done only in the manner provided in Section 145 of the Evidence Act, i.e., by giving the author of the statement an opportunity to explain the contradiction, after his attention is called to that part of the statement which is intended to be so used for contradiction. In other words, the power conferred on the Court for perusal of the diary under Section 172 of the Code is not intended for explaining a contradiction which the defence has winched to the fore through the channel permitted by law. The interdict contained in Section 162 of the Code, debars the Court from using the power under Section 172 of the Code for the purpose of explaining the contradiction. Mahabir Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 2001 SC 2503 : (2001) 7 SCC 148 : 2001 SCC (Cri) 1262 (1270).

[10519] ● Variation between FIR and deposition made in Court.—The incident stated in FIR, being the first version of the occurrence has to be given due weight. The trial Court does not appear to have committed any glaring irregularity in disbelieving the alleged eye-witnesses whose testimony was concededly contrary to the case of the prosecution as projected in the FIR. It is true that the statements of PWs-1, 4, 5 and 6 cannot be thrown out merely on the ground that they are partisan witnesses or have any enmity with some of the accused persons. However, the testimony of such witnesses require to be judged with more circumspection. The case of prosecution, as sought to be proved at the trial, appears to be different than the one as narrated in the FIR. When the testimony of eye-witnesses is totally different from the story set out in the FIR, the trial Court cannot be held to have taken a view which was not at all possible. The view taken by the trial Court could have been disturbed only if there were compelling reasons. Kalyan v. State of U.P., AIR 2001 SC 3976 : (2001) 9 SCC 632 : 2002 SCC (Cri) 780 : 2001 CrLJ 4677 : JT 2001 (8) SC 200 : (2001) 4 Crimes 57 (SC).

[10520] ● Mere improvements and omissions not contradictions.—Mere some improvements and omissions cannot be held to be the contradictions. The omissions and improvements pointed out by the learned Counsel for the appellant are of very minor nature and do not affect the merits of the case in any manner. Kalpesh Kumar @ Bhajiyu Gunvantlal Seni v. State of Gujarat, AIR 2002 SC 1089 : (2002) 3 SCC 388 : JT 2002 (1) (Supp) SC 101 : (2002) 3 Crimes 197 (SC).

[10521] ● Contradictions and improvements in deposition of eye-witnesses.—Keeping in view the facts and circumstances of the case, particularly the variance between the FIR and the depositions made in the Court, the mention of gun shot injuries in the panchanama and their absence in the FIR, the conflict between the statements of eye-witnesses and the medical evidence and major contradictions and improvements in the depositions of the eye-witnesses, we are of the view that the prosecution failed to prove their case against the appellants beyond all shadows of doubt. The appellants are, therefore, held entitled to the benefit of reasonable doubt. To form an opinion giving the appellants-accused the benefit of doubt we have kept in mind the defence as projected and suggested by them to the witnesses during their cross-examination. Kalyan v. State of U.P., AIR

2002 SC 3976 : (2001) 9 SCC 632 : 2001 CrLJ 4677 : JT 2001 (8) SC 200 : (2001) 4 Crimes 57 (SC).

[10522] ● Witness disowning to have made statement inconsistent with his present stand.—If the witness disowns to have made any statement which is inconsistent with his present stand, his testimony in Court on that score would not be vitiated until the cross-examiner proceeds to comply with the procedure prescribed in the second limb of Section 145 of the Evidence Act. Raj Kishore Jha v. State of Bihar, AIR 2003 SC 4664 : (2003) 11 SCC 519 : 2004 SCC (Cri) 212 (219) : 2003 CrLJ 5040 : (2003) 4 Crimes 248.

[10523] ● Section 145 Evidence Act not applicable where witness sought to be contradicted.—Section 145 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872 (in short "the Evidence Act") applies when the same person makes two contradictory statements. It is not permissible in law to draw adverse inference because of alleged contradictions between one prosecution witness vis-a-vis statement of other witnesses. It is not open to the Court to completely demolish the evidence of one witness by referring to the evidence of other witnesses. Witness can only be contradicted in terms of Section 145 of the Evidence Act by his own previous statement and not with the statement of any other witness. As was held in the said case, Section 145 applies only to cases where the same person makes two contradictory statements either in different proceedings or in two different stages of a proceeding. If the maker of a statement is sought to be contradicted, his attention should be drawn to his previous statement under Section 145 of the Evidence Act only. Section 145 has no application where a witness is sought to be contradicted not by his own statement but by the statement of another witness. Choudhari Ramjibhai Narasangbhai v. State of Gujarat, 2004 SCC (Cri) 269 (275).

[10524] ● Mere inconsistencies not contradictions or omissions.—Mere seemingly inconsistencies which are not contradictions or omissions or are of trivial nature do not affect substratum of the prosecution version. Bikau Pandey v. State of Bihar, AIR 2004 SC 997 : (2003) 12 SCC 616 : JT 2004 (6) SC 47 : (2004) 1 Crimes 36.

[10525] ● Contradiction.—Of course during the course of his cross-examination he has elaborated the nature of enmity that his father had with these accused persons but then that cold hardly be a reason to contend that what is stated in the complaint is either different from what is stated in the evidence in regard to the motive or the witness has made improvement in regard to the motive of the accused to commit the crime. Apart from the above challenge to the evidence of this witness, counsel for the accused pointed out certain contradictions, omissions and improvements found in his cross-examination but then this again will have to be considered as considered by the Courts below, in the background of the fact that the cross-examination of this witness was also spread over a period of nearly 6 months and he was subjected to nearly 480 questions. In this background for the reasons already stated above, as held by the two Courts below, these contradictions, improvements and omissions would affect the credibility of this witness either. Jaishree Yadav v. State of U.P., AIR 2004 SC 4443 : (2005) 9 SCC 788 : (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 160 (171) : 2004 CrLJ 4826 : 2004 (3) Crimes 286.

[10526] ● Minor variations in medical evidence and ocular version irrelevant.—Unless medical evidence in its term goes so far as to completely rule out all possibilities whatsoever of injuries taking place in the manner stated by the eyewitnesses the testimony of eye-witness cannot be thrown out. Minor variations in medical evidence and ocular version are irrelevant. Kamaljit Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 2004 SC 69 : 2004 CrLJ 28.

[10527] ● Every omission not contradiction.—Every omission is not a contradiction. Merely because of the fact that there were some minor omissions, which are but natural, considering the fact that the examination in Court took place years after the occurrence, the evidence does not become suspect. Necessarily there cannot be exact and precise reproduction in any mathematical manner. What needs to be seen is whether the version presented in the Court was substantially similar to what was stated during investigation. It is only when exaggerations fundamentally change the nature of the case, the Court has to consider whether the witness was telling the truth or not. Sunil Kumar v. State Govt. of NCT of Delhi, AIR 2004 SC 552 : (2003) 11 SCC 369 : 2004 SCC (Cri) 1055 (1059) : 2004 CrLJ 819.

[10528] ● Medical evidence where totally improbabilities ocular version.—Though ocular evidence has to be given importance over medical evidence, where the medical evidence totally improbabilises the ocular version that can be taken to be a factor to effect credibility of the prosecution version. State of Rajasthan v. Bhanwar Singh, AIR 2004 SC 4660 : (2004) 13 SCC 147 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 73 (75) : 2004 CrLJ 4886.

[10529] ● Dying declaration recording of supported by Judicial Magistrate.—"Learned Senior Counsel further submitted that dying declaration was recorded by the Judicial Magistrate on the date of occurrence itself at 3.35 p.m. wherein names of all the four accused persons who were sent up for trial in the present case were enumerated, whereas in the first information report which was lodged on the next day at 9.30 a.m., names of the two appellants were mentioned and names of other accused persons were not disclosed. In our view, this was a point which could have been relevant for considering conviction of the other accused persons but since they have been already acquitted, it is not necessary for us to go into the same. The appellants cannot take advantage of the fact that the names of other accused were not enumerated in the first information report. So far as they are concerned, their names were very much there in the dying declaration as well as in the first information report and recording of dying declaration has been supported by the Judicial Magistrate, PW-11 in the presence of the doctor, PW-7" Ravi v. State of T.N., 2005 SCC (Cri) 576.

[10530] ● Omission to mention in seizure memo—Whether cartridges wet or dry not ground to doubt veracity of prosecution case.—The High Court was not right in drawing adverse inference against the prosecution from the fact that though it was raining but the fact, whether the cartridges seized by the investigation officer from the place of occurrence were wet or dry, was not mentioned in the seizure memo. In our view, it was not necessary for the investigating officer to mention in the seizure memo about the same. Moreover, omission to mention this fact in the seizure memo cannot in any manner affect the veracity of the prosecution case. The other ground taken by the High Court for doubting the prosecution case was that though PW-2 had stated that during the night he and PW-3 had covered the dead body with a cloth but in the inquest report, the investigating officer had nowhere mentioned that he found that the dead body was covered with a cloth. Held, it was a mere omission and could not be a ground for throwing out the prosecution case. State of Punjab v. Mela Singh, AIR 2004 SC 257 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 625 : 2004 CrLJ 368 : 2003 (4) Crimes 412.

[10531] ● Deliberate charge by all witnesses to suit medical evidence.—There was no dispute that their deposition in Court was consistent, but what was observed by the trial Court was that their version as to the manner of occurrence as deposed to by them was at variance with what was stated in the first information report by PW-5, and in the statements of PWs-6 and 7 recorded under Section 161, CrPC. When confronted with their earlier statements, they could not give a satisfactory explanation, with the result that their credibility was sufficiently impeached. The change of version by each one of them, and to the same effect, was deliberate and not merely accidental or on account of lapse of memory. It cannot be disputed that this was a very significant change. It cannot also be disputed that the change was deliberately made by all the witnesses, so that the prosecution case became consistent with the medical evidence on record. Shingara Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 2004 SC 124 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 870 : 2004 CrLJ 828 : 2003 (4) Crimes 446.

[10532] ● Discrepancies between ocular and medical evidence.—"……Learned counsel for the respondents strenuously urged that PW-6 opined that injuries 7 to 11 could not have been caused if the deceased was lying on the ground with his face upwards, and since PW-1 testified that his father fell down with his face upwards, his presence at the place of incident is doubtful. According to the learned counsel, these injuries could not have been caused while Hari Singh was lying on the ground with his face upwards. The learned counsel, therefore, submits that these discrepancies in the ocular and medical evidence make the presence of Billu Singh doubtful. We are unable to accept this submission. PW-1 categorically stated in examination-in-chief that these injuries were caused by the assailants when Hari Singh was running or standing. He further stated that rest of the injuries were given to Hari singh by the three accused on his face and neck while he was lying on the ground. The witness was not put to cross-examination on this part of the evidence. This witness also stated in the cross-examination that Hari Singh kept his face upwards, but he was moving about on sides. PW-6 opined that all the injuries were ante-mortem. It is quite natural that he must be tossing around trying to evade the strike blows dealt by the accused with their weapons and in this process he must have received various injuries which had not been witnessed by PW-1 as he hurriedly ran away on his bicycle after seeing the first incident. It must be remembered that PW-1 was following his father on a bicycle and witnessed the incident at a distance of about 10-12 karams. Having seen the accused armed with weapons and dealing blows to his father, being unarmed it could have been the sudden reaction of PW-1 to run for safety and lodge a report to the police. PW-6 in his cross-examination had stated that Injuries 2 to 11 were individually sufficient to cause the death in the ordinary course of nature. He also stated that if Injuries 1 to 11 were caused when the victim was in the standing posture, he was likely to fall. PW-6 further opined that if any of injuries 1 to 11 was inflicted when the victim was lying on the ground he was likely to lose his senses. We have already held that Injuries 9, 10 and 11 were inflicted while in the standing posture. We do not see any discrepancies between ocular and medical evidence, which would make the presence of PW-1 at the place of incident doubtful." State of Punjab v. Hardam Singh, AIR 2003 SC 4343 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 834 : 2003 CrLJ 5048 : 2003 (4) Crimes 300.

[10534] ● Material contradiction in evidence of witness regarding time and date of incident.—The IO, in his evidence has stated that he recorded the statement of this witness on 17.3.1984 during the inquest proceedings but this witness in her evidence before the Court has stated that her evidence was recorded a day after the inquest proceedings were conducted. This is a material contradiction in regard to which the prosecution has not taken any step to clarify this part of her evidence when PW-3 was in the witness box by way of re-examination, therefore, if PW-3's evidence is to be accepted then the inquest proceedings must have taken place on 16.3.1984 itself but that is not the case of the prosecution. Since the time and date of the incident are very material fact in this case, the contradiction in the evidence of PW-3 in this regard cannot be brushed aside. State of Tamil Nadu v. Sundar, AIR 2004 SC 1216 : 2004 CrLJ 913 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 844 (848) : 2004 (1) Crimes 141.

[10535] ● Contradictions in evidence of eye-witnesses.—The original case of the eyewitnesses was that they were all sleeping together when the attack in question took place and the intention of the attackers was clear from what was stated during the attack which was to kill all. Thereafter, during the course of evidence these witnesses conveniently changed the said part of their evidence by stating that PWs-1 and 3 slept on the roof of the pump house while the deceased slept on a cot under a tree. Apart from this, these witnesses have stated that immediately on seeing the attack on the deceased they ran away and hid themselves until next day morning being afraid of the assailants. But then there is so much contradiction in regard to the direction and the place the witnesses ran away that it creates a suspicion as to their presence. This apart, assuming they did hide themselves, there is absolutely no explanation why these witnesses till about 8 o'clock in the morning did not try to seek any help from sources available to them. It has come in evidence that near about the thrashing yard of PW-4 where the incident took place, there were other thrashing yards where people were sleeping, therefore, they could have easily sought help from them which was not done. Then again we notice that the incident in question has taken place in the month of April, and being summer month, we can take judicial notice, of the fact which has been done by the Courts below that the sunrise would have been around 6 o'clock in the morning. If that be so, we find no explanation whatsoever why these witnesses did not go to their house or contact anybody up to 8 o'clock in the morning to inform them of the incident in question. This act of PWs-1 and 3 in informing the relatives and the villagers of the attack only at 8 o'clock in the morning was obviously to explain the delay in filing the Fir, which was lodged in the police station which was about 3 km away from the place of incident only at 8.15 o'clock in the morning. Here again, in regard to the lodging the complaint there is direct contradiction in evidence of PWs-1 and 3. While one of the witnesses states that they went straight from the place of incident to the police station, the other states, they went to the village first to inform the relatives and then went to the police station. If the evidence of these eyewitnesses was otherwise believable for good reasons, some of the contradictions referred to hereinabove might not have damaged the veracity of their evidence. But in the background of the defence as to the falsity of PWs' presence, the existence of these contradictions makes a lot of difference, more so when the prosecution has failed to explain the delay in filing the complaint. This is because of the fact that according to the defence the incident in question must have taken place without their being eye-witnesses, and when noticed in the morning a complaint was lodged after due deliberation involving these accused persons. State of M.P. v. Kriparam, 2005 SCC (Cri) 830 : 2003 (4) Crimes 232.

[10536] ● Minor variations not effect credibility of evidence.—The minor variations which do not have any effect on the credibility of the evidence cannot be the basis to discard intrinsic value of the evidence. Shamsuddin v. State of M.P., 2005 SCC (Cri) 842 (844) : 2004 (1) Crimes 158.

[10537] ● Two murders committed in state of shock minor variations probable.—Where before a young person two murders were committed, it is quite natural to create a sense of shock and minor variations in his evidence did not affect testimony which was otherwise credible. Jai Karan v. State of U.P., 2005 SCC (Cri) 812 (815, 816).

[10538] ● Some improvements or omissions in statements of eye-witnesses.—"The main argument in this is that in the cross-examination of the eye-witnesses PWs-3, 6 and 7 have made some improvements or there are omissions in the statements given by them to the investigating officer under Section 161, CrPC. We have noticed that the so-called omissions and improvements, all pertain to sequence of attack on the deceased. In a situation like the one in this case it will be humanly very difficult to remember each and every act of the accused persons, therefore, there will be some likelihood of variation in the evidence of different witnesses. Therefore, the Courts will have to consider these differences in the context of the case as a whole and in the instant case the Courts have done exactly the same. Having perused the evidence ourselves, we are satisfied that the two Courts below are justified in coming to the conclusion that the incident as projected by the prosecution had taken place and the accused are guilty of causing death of the deceased and injuries to others. Hence we find no reason to differ with the said findings of the two Courts below." State of Maharashtra v. Manjurrya, 2005 SCC (Cri) 857 (861).

[10539] ● Evidence of eye-witness when reliable—Omission on part of investigating agency ipso facto not affect genuineness of evidence.—Once the Court is satisfied that the evidence of the eye-witness is reliable and acceptable, some omission on the part of the investigating agency ipso facto would not affect the genuineness of the evidence of the said witness. Bishan Kumar v. State of Delhi, 2005 SCC (Cri) 850 (852, 853).

[10540] ● Minor discrepancies or contradictions in testimony of prosecution witnesses.—Minor contradictions or insignificant discrepancies in the statement of the prosecutrix should not be a ground for throwing out an otherwise reliable prosecution case. Kamalanantha v. State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 2005 SC 2132 : (2005) 5 SCC 194 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 1121 (1141) : 2005 (3) Crimes 240.

[10541] ● Witness not reliable on whom implicit reliance be pieced.—"From the deposition of this witness it appears that in the course of the investigation he had stated that his father had been assaulted only by Ishwar, and not by others. In the course of deposition he sought to involve all the accused persons. Having considered the evidence of this witness in its entirety, we are satisfied that he is also not a reliable witness on whom implicit reliance can be placed and his credibility has been sufficiently impeached in his cross-examination. In fact so far as this witness is concerned, he named Raj Kumar and Prem Singh for the first time in the course of his deposition, and it appears that he had not even mentioned their names in the course of the investigation."

"Learned counsel also drew our attention to the other material on record which, according to them, probabilises the defence of the appellants that the occurrence took place in a different manner and the appellants herein were not at all involved. In that occurrence, Ishwar (co-accused) had received injuries which the prosecution had failed to explain."

"Other witnesses named in the FIR who could have thrown some light on the occurrence as it took place, have not been examined. One of the injured persons, namely, Dharamvir has been kept out deliberately, and was not examined at the trial. There was a deliberate attempt on the part of the informant PW-2 to keep him out of the picture by not naming him in the FIR, though in her supplementary statement she mentioned that Prem Singh had assaulted her son Dharamvir inside her house. So far as PW-1 is concerned, his cross-examination reveals that he had a different story to tell in the course of the investigation involving only Ishwar. In these facts and circumstances, we hold that neither of the two eye-witnesses examined by the prosecution can be relied upon. If their evidence is discarded, there is no other evidence which can sustain the conviction of the appellants." Pahlu v. State of Haryana, 2005 SCC (Cri) 1496 (1501, 1502).

[10542] ● Minor contradictions or insignificant discrepancies not grounds for throwing out reliable prosecution case.—It is also noticed that minor contradictions or insignificant discrepancies should not be a ground for throwing out an otherwise reliable prosecution case. Non-examination of doctor and non-production of doctor's report would not be fatal to the prosecution case, if the statements of the prosecutrix and other prosecution witnesses inspire confidence. It is also noticed that the Court while acquitting the accused on benefit of doubt should be cautious to see that the doubt should be a reasonable doubt and it should not reverse the findings of the guilt on the basis of irrelevant circumstances or mere technicalities. State of M.P. v. Dayal Sahu, AIR 2005 SC 3576 : (2005) 8 SCC 122 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 1988 (1994) : 2005 CrLJ 4375 : 2005 (4) Crimes 92.

[10543] ●. Medical evidence and oral evidence, contradiction between.—Contradictions between medical evidence and oral evidence would not be of much consequence when the eye-witness could not be in a position to specifically say as to which portion of the weapon was used when there was a sudden attack by a group of persons. Balbir Singh v. State of Punjab, (2005) 9 SCC 299 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 1245 (1947-48).

CONTROL

[10544] ● Control.—The object of the Code seems to be that any property which is in the control of the Court either directly or indirectly should be disposed of by the Court and a just and proper order should be passed by the Court regarding its disposal in a criminal case, the Police always acts under the direct control of the Court and has to take orders from it at every stage of an inquiry or trial. In this broad sense, therefore, the Court exercises an overall control on the actions of the Police Officers in every case where it has taken cognizance. Basava Kom Dyamogouda Patil v. State of Mysore, AIR 1977 SC 1749 (1751) : (1977) 4 SCC 358 : 1977 SCC (Cri) 598 : 1977 CrLJ 1141 : 1977 CrLR (SC) 257.

CONTROL ORDER

[10545] ● Control order.—In this case the Haryana Milk and Milk Products Control Order, 1975 itself was for a short period and the prosecution could not be completed before expiry of the period.

The trial in respect of an offence committed when the control order is in force, cannot be expected to be completed within that short period. The offence committed has to be tried in spite of the expiry of the period. Mere expiry of the period does not make any difference. As Section 7 of the Essential Commodities Act stood, on the date of offence the minimum sentence of 3 months was, no doubt, there but there was a proviso under which the Court may for any adequate and special reasons to be mentioned in the judgment, impose a sentence for a terms less than 3 months. This proviso was omitted in the year 1981 for a period of 5 years. Isher Dass v. State of Haryana, AIR 1992 SC 1595 : 1993 Supp (1) SCC 644 : 1992 CrLJ 2327.

CONTROL ORDER, VIOLATION OF—CONFISCATION OF COMMODITY

[10546] ● Control order, violation of—Confiscation of commodity.—Sections 3, 6 A, Essential Commodities Act, 1955—In the facts and circumstances of the present case, it cannot be doubted for a moment that the Deputy Commissioner acted in the public interest to direct confiscation of the entire consignment of the ground-nut oil, as it was being transported from one place to another without furnishing the requisite declaration in Form II. Sub-section 2(a) and (b) of clause (3) of the Karnataka Edible Oil, Edible Oil Seeds and Oil Cakes (Declaration of Stocks) order, 1976 enjoin that the stock holder shall make a declaration in Form II in relation to movement of edible oil, edible oil seeds and oil cakes, to the Tahsildar incharge of the taluka of the place from where such edible oil, edible oil seeds or oil cakes, are transported before such edible oil, edible oil seeds or oil cakes leave the place. The whole purpose is to maintain a control over the stock of such essential commodities at a place with a view to secure their equitable distribution and availability at fair prices. The requirements of sub-sections(2)(a) and (b) of clause (3) of the said order are clearly mandatory. State of Karnataka v. Krishna Bhima Walvakar, AIR 1981 SC 1468 (1471) : (1981) 3 SCC 301 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 714 : 1981 CrLJ 867 : 1981 CrLR (SC) 468.

CONTROL, VIRES OF

[10547] ● Mustard Oil (Price Control) Order—Validity.—On a plain reading of Article 31-B the Protective umbrella of the Ninth Schedule takes in its ever-widening wings only the Acts and Regulations specified therein but not Orders and Notifications issued under those Acts and Regulations. The Article affords protection to Act and Regulations specified in the Ninth Schedule. Therefore, whenever a challenge to the constitutionality of a provision of law on the ground that it violates any of the fundamental rights conferred by Part 11 C is sought to be repelled by the State on the plea that the law is placed in the Ninth Schedule, the narrow question to which one must address oneself is whether the impugned law is specified in that schedule. It is no answer to say that though the particular law, as for example a Control Order, is not specified in the Ninth Schedule, the parent Act under which the Order is issued is specified in that Schedule. Since the Essential commodities Act of 1955 has been placed in the Ninth Schedule none of its provisions, including Section 3 (1), is open to attack on the ground that it ever was or is inconsistent with or takes away or a bridges any of the rights conferred by any provision of Part 111 of the Constitution. But there is no justification for extending the protection of that immunity to an Order passed under Section 3 of the Act like the Mustard Oil (Price Control) Order. The upholding of laws by the application of the theory of derivative immunity is foreign to the scheme of our Constitution and accordingly Orders and Notifications issued under Acts and Regulations which are specified in the North Schedule must meet the challenge that they offend against the provisions of Part 111 of the Constitution. It is therefore open to the petitioners to invoke the writ jurisdiction of the Supreme Court for determination of the question whether the provisions of the Price Control Order violate Articles 14, 19(1)(f) and 19(1)(9) of the Constitution. Prag Ice Oil Mills v. Union of India, AIR 1978 SC 1296 : (1978) 3 SCC 459 : 1978 CrLJ 1281.

CONVERSATION

[10548] ● Conversation.—Tape recorded conversation is admissible provided first the conversation is relevant to the matters in issue; secondly there is identification of the voice; and thirdly, the accuracy of the tape recorded conversation is proved by eliminating the possibility of erasing the tape record. A contemporaneous tape-record of a relevant conversation is a relevant fact and is admissible under Section 8 of the Evidence Act. It is res gestae. It is also comparable to a photograph of a relevant incident. The tape recorded conversation is therefore, a relevant fact and is admissible under Section 7 of the Evidence Act. R.M. Malkani v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1973 SC 157 : (1973) 1 SCC 471 : 1973 SCC (Cri) 399 (407) : 1973 CrLJ 228.

[10549] ● Tape-recorded conversation—Admissibility.—The tape-recorded conversation is contemporaneous relevant evidence and, therefore, it is admissible. It is not tainted by coercion a unfairness. There is no reason to exclude this evidence. R.M. Malkani v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1973 SC 157 : (1973) 1 SCC 471 : 1973 SCC (Cri) 399 (407) : 1973 CrLJ 228.

[10550] ● Telephonic conversation.—The telephonic conversation of an innocent citizen will be protected by Courts against wrongful or highhanded interference by tapping the conversation. The protection is not for the guilty citizen against the efforts of the Police to vindicate the law and prevent corruption of public servants. It must not be understood that the Courts will tolerate safeguards for the protection of the citizen to be imperilled by permitting the Police to proceed by unlawful or irregular methods. In the present case, there is no unlawful or irregular method in obtaining the tape recording of the conversation. R.M. Malkani v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1973 SC 157 : (1973) 1 SCC 471 : 1973 SCC (Cri) 399 (407) : 1973 CrLJ 228 : (1973) 2 SCR 417 : 1973 Cr App R (SC) 31.

[10551] ● Bribe—Amount offered near about equal to amount that complaint required to pay legally.—Taking the unsatisfactory character of the prosecution evidence in regard to the conversation preceding the passing of currency notes and the feature that for waiver of Rs. 102, the bribe of Rs. 100.00 was given, we are inclined to take the view that to prove its case beyond reasonable doubt. Bal Kishan Sayal v. State of Punjab, AIR 1987 SC 689 : (1987) 2 SCC 647 : 1987 SCC (Cri) 408 (409) : 1987 CrLJ 533 : 1987 CrLR (SC) 197 : (1987) 1 UJ (SC) 479.

[10552] ● Secret talks regarding planning of offence of murder.—As far as the incident on 17th, October is concerned, Bimla Khalsa in clear terms stated that Kehar Sing and Beant Singh had secret talks. She wanted to know it, but she was not given to understand. This kind of secret talk with Beant Singh which Kehar Singh had, is a very significant circumstance. Apparently Kehar Singh being an elderly person did not indicate to her about their plan. If the attempt of Kehar Singh was to dissuade Beant Singh, there was no occasion for him to keep the matter secret from his wife. On the contrary, he should have indicated to his wife also what Beant Singh was planning. These talks, therefore, as proved by Bimla Khalsa go a long way in establishing Kehar Singh being a party to the conspiracy. Kehar Singh v. State (Delhi Administration, AIR 1988 SC 1883 : 1988 SCC (Cri) 711 : 1989 CrLJ 1 : 1988 (3) Crimes 209 : JT 1988 (3) SC 191.

CONVICT

[10553] ● Term "life"—Meaning.—"By the term "life" as here used something more is meant than mere animal existence. The interaction against its deprivation extends to all those limbs and faculties by which life is enjoyed. The provision (Article 21) equally prohibits the mutilation of the body or amputation of an arm or leg or the putting out of an eye or the destruction of any other organ of the body through which the soul communicates with the outer world." Kharak

Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1963 SC 1295 : (1963) 2 CrLJ 329 : (1964) 1 SCR 232.

[10554] ● Convicts not denuded of all fundamental rights.—Convicts are not, by mere reason of the conviction, denuded of all the fundamental rights which they otherwise possess. A compulsion under the authority of law, following upon a conviction, to live in a prison. house entails by its own force the deprivation of fundamental freedoms like the right to move freely throughout the territory of India or the right to "practice" a profession. A man of profession would thus stand stripped of his right to hold consultations while serving out his sentence. But the Constitution guarantees other freedoms like the right to acquire, hold and dispose of property for the exercise of which incarceration can be no impediment. Likewise even a convict is entitled to the precious right guaranteed by Article 21 of the Constitution that he shall not be deprived of his life or personal liberty except according to procedure established by law. D.B. Mohan Patnaik v. State of A.P., AIR 1974 SC 2092 : (1975) 3 SCC 185 : 1975 SCC (Cri) 803 (804, 805) : 1975 CrLJ 556 : (1975) 2 SCR 24. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) State of Maharashtra v. Prabhakar Pandurang Sangzgiri, AIR 1964 SC 424 : 1964 CrLJ 311 : (1966) 1 SCR 702.

[10555] ● Convicts not wholly denuded of fundamental rights.—Convicts are not wholly denuded of their fundamental rights. The imposition of any major punishment within the prison system is conditional upon the observance of procedural safeguards. Sunil Batra v. Delhi Administration, AIR 1978 SC 1675 : (1978) 4 SCC 494 : 1978 CrLJ 1741.

[10556] ● Section 56—Prisons Act—Constitutional validity.—Article 21 of the Constitution forbids deprivation of personal liberty except in accordance with the procedure established by law and curtailment of personal liberty to such an extent as to be a negation of it would constitute deprivation bar fetters make a serious inroad on the limited personal liberty which a prisoner is left with and therefore, before such erosion can be justified it must have the authority of law. The provision in Para 399 of the Punjab Jail Manual of putting dangerous prisoners in bar fetters is neither referable to a statutory rule under Section 59 or Section 60, Prisons Act, nor can it be held to be statutory in the absence of sanction referred to in Section 56 and therefore has not the authority in law. Under Section 56, Prison Act the Superintendent may put a prisoner in bar fetters (i) when he considers it necessary; (ii) with reference either to the state of the prison or character of the prisoner; and (iii) for the safe custody of the prisoner. Two basic considerations in the context of prison discipline are the security of the prison and safety of the prisoner. These being the relevant consideration, the necessity of putting any particular prisoner in bar fetters must be relatable to them. Therefore, the power under Section 56 can be exercised only for reasons and considerations which are germane to the objective of the statute, viz., safe custody of the prisoner, which takes in considerations regarding the character and propensities of the prisoner. These and similar considerations bear direct nexus with the safe custody of prisoners as they are aimed primarily at preventing their escape. The determination of the necessity to put a prisoner in bar fetters has to be made after application of mind to the peculiar and special characteristics of each individual prisoner. The nature and length of sentence or the magnitude of the crime committed by the prisoner are not relevant for the purpose of determining that question. There are sufficient guidelines in the Prison Act and State Jail Rule (here Punjab Jail Manual). The legislative policy behind enacting Section 56 is clear and discernible and the guidelines prescribed by the section have the effect of limiting the application of the provision to a particular category of persons. In such a situation the discretion circumscribed by the requirement vested in the prison authority charged with the duty to manage the internal affairs of the prison for the selective application of Section 56 would certainly not infringe Article 24, Constitution of India. The treatment of a human being which offends human dignity, imposes avoidable torture and reduces the man to the level of a beast would certainly be arbitrary and can be questioned under Article 14. Now, putting bar fetters for an unusually long period without due regard for the safety of the prisoner and the security of the prison would certainly be not justified under Section 56, Prison Act. Sunil Batra v. Delhi Administration, AIR 1978 SC 1675 : (1978) 4 SCC 494 : 1979 SCC (Cri) 155 : 1978 CrLJ 1741 : (1979) 1 SCR 392.

[10557] ● Right of detainee to minimal—Freedom of movement.—It is implicit in Articles 14 and 19 that when there is no compulsive need to fetter a person's limbs, it is sadistic, capricious, despotic and demoralizing to humble a man by manacling him. Such arbitrary conduct surely slaps Article 14 on the face. The minimal freedom of movement which even a detainee is entitled to under Article 19 cannot be cut down cruelly by application of handcuffs or other hoops. It will be unreasonable so to do unless the State is able to make out that no other practical way of forbidding escape is available, the prisoner being so dangerous and desperate and the circumstances so hostile to safe keeping. There is implicit in Article 21 the right to protection against torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment which is enunciated in Article 5 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and guaranteed by Article 7 of the International convent on civil and Political Rights. This right to live which is comprehended within the broad connotation of the right to life can concededly be abridged, according to procedure established by law and, therefore, when a person is lawfully imprisoned, this right to live is bound to suffer attenuation to the extent to which it is incapable of enjoyment by reason of incarceration. The prisoner or detenue obviously cannot move about freely by going outside the prison wall nor can he socialise at his free-will with persons outside the jail. Francis Coralie Mullin v. Administrator, Union Territory of Delhi, AIR 1981 SC 746 : (1981) 1 SCC 608 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 212 (222) : 1981 CrLJ 306 : 1981 CrLR (SC) 437.

[10558] ● Right of defence to have interview with lawyer.—A prison regulation may regulate the right of a detenue to have interview with a legal adviser in a manner which is reasonable, fair and just but it cannot prescribe an arbitrary or unreasonable procedure for regulating such an interview and if it does so, it would be violative of Articles 14 and 21 of the Constitution. Frances Coralie Mullin v. Administrator, Union Territory of Delhi, AIR 1981 SC 746 : (1981) 1 SCC 608 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 212 : 1981 CrLJ 306 : (1981) 2 SCR 516.

[10559] ● Right of detenu to have interviews with members of family and friends.—As part of the right to live with human dignity and, therefore, as a necessary component of the right to life, he would be entitled to have interviews with the members of the family and friends and no prison regulation or procedure laid down by prison regulation, regulating the right to have interviews with the members of the family and friends can be upheld as Constitutionally valid under Articles 14, and 21 unless it is reasonable, fair and just. There can therefore, be no doubt that "personal liberty" would include the right to socialise with members of the family and friends subject, of course, to any valid prison regulations and under Articles 14 and 21, such prison regulations must be reasonable and non-arbitrary. Francis Coralie Mullin v. Administrator, Union Territory of Delhi, AIR 1981 SC 746 : (1981) 1 SCC 608 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 212 (222) : 1981 CrLJ 306 : 1981 CrLR (SC) 437.

[10560] ● Right of detenu to have interview with legal advisor of his choice.—Sub-clause (i) of clause 3 (b) of (Delhi) conditions of Detention Order, 1975 regulating the right of a detenue to have interview with a legal advisor of his choice is violative of Article 14 and 21 and must be held to be unconstitutional and void. It would be quite reasonable if a detenue were to be entitled to have interview with his legal advisor at any reasonable hour during the day after taking appointment from the Superintendent of the jail, which appointment should be given by the Superintendent without any avoidable delay. Interview need not necessarily take place in the presence of a nominated officer or Custom/Central Excise/Enforcement but in the presence of such officer can be conveniently secured at the time of interview without involving any postponement of the interview, then such officer and if his presence cannot be so secured, then any other jail official may if thought necessary watch the interview but not so as to be within hearing distance of the detenue and the legal adviser. Francis Coralie Mullin v. Administrator, Union Territory of Delhi, AIR 1981 SC 746 : (1981) 1 SCC 608 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 212 (224) : 1981 CrLJ 306 : 1981 CrLR (SC) 437.

[10561] ● Handcuffing of under-trial prisoners.—"We are satisfied that the petitioners are educated persons and selflessly devoting their service to the public cause. They are not the persons who have got tendency to escape from the jail custody. In fact, petitioners 1 and 2 even refused to come out on bail, but chose to continue in prison for a public cause. The offence for which they were tried and convicted under Section 186 of Indian Penal Code is only a bailable offence. Even assuming that they obstructed public servants in discharge of their public functions during the 'dharna' or raised any slogan inside or outside the Court, that would not be sufficient cause to handcuff them. Further, there was no reason for handcuffing them while taking them to Court from jail. One judicial order by a competent Court, that person comes within the judicial custody of the Court. Therefore, the taking of a person from a prison to the Court or back from Court to the prison by the escort party is only under the judicial orders of the Court. Therefore, even if extreme circumstances necessitate the escort party to bind the persons in fetters, the escort party should record the reasons for doing so in writing and the Court is to approve or disapprove the action of the escort party and issue necessary directions. It is most painful to note that the petitioners 1 and 2 who staged a 'dharna' for public cause and voluntarily submitted themselves for arrest and who had no tendency to escape had been subjected to humiliation by being handcuffed which act of the escort party is against all norms of decency and which is in utter violation of the principle underlying Article 21 of the Constitution of India." Sunil Gupta v. State of M.P., (1990) 3 SCC 119.

[10562] ● Handcuffing of under-trial prisoner.—The attitude of judicial Magistrate is not taking any action against handcuffing of under-trial prisoner who were fighting for unliftment of Adivasis is severely condemned. During the transit between prison house and Court house no under-trial prisoner can be put under handcuffs. The judicial officers before whom the prisoner is produced to interrogate the prisoner, as a rule, whether he has been subjected to handcuffs or other 'irons' treatment and if he has been, the official concerned shall be asked to explain the action forthwith in the light of this judgment. Citizens for Democracy v. State of Assam, AIR 1996 SC 2193 : (1995) 3 SCC 743 : 1996 CrLJ 3247. To the same effect : (1) Prem Shankar Shukla v. Delhi Administration, AIR 1980 SC 1535 : (1980) 3 SCC (Cri) 815 : 1980 CrLJ 930 : 1980 CrLR (SC) 740 (2) : (1980) 3 SCR 855 : (1980) 18 DLT 180.

[10563] ● No authority of Police and Jail authorities to direct hand cuffing.—As to hand cuffing a prisoner the Supreme Court : "We declare, direct and lay down as a rule that handcuffs or other fetters shall not be forced on a prisoner-convicted or undertrial-while lodged in a jail anywhere in the country or while transporting or in transit from one jail to another or from jail to Court and back. The police and the jail authorities, on their own, shall have no authority to direct the handcuffing of any inmate of a jail in the country or during transport from one jail to another or from jail to Court and back. Citizens for Democracy v. State of Assam, AIR 1996 SC 2193 : (1995) 3 SCC 743 : 1995 SCC (Cri) 600 : 1996 CrLJ 324.

[10564] ● Magistrate may grant permission to handcuff prisoner.—Where the police or the jail authorities have well-grounded basis for drawing a strong inference that a particular prisoner is likely to jump jail or break out of the custody then the said prisoner be produced before the Magistrate concerned and a prayer for permission to handcuff the prisoner be made before the said Magistrate. Save in rare cases of concrete proof regarding proneness of the prisoner to violence, his tendency to escape, he being so dangerous/desperate and the finding that no other practical way of forbidding escape is available, the Magistrate may grant permission to handcuff the prisoner. Citizens for Democracy v. State of Assam, AIR 1996 SC 2193 : (1995) 3 SCC 743 : 1995 SCC (Cri) 600 : 1996 CrLJ 324.

[10565] ● Person not to be handcuffed unless special orders obtained.—In all the cases where a person arrested by police is produced before the Magistrate and remanded to judicial or non-judicial custody-is given by the Magistrate the person concerned shall not be handcuffed unless special orders in that respect are obtained from the Magistrate at the time of the grant of the remand. Citizens for Democracy v. State of Assam, AIR 1996 SC 2193 : (1995) 3 SCC 743 : 1995 SCC (Cri) 600 : 1996 CrLJ 324.

[10566] ● Person arrested in execution of warrant not to be handcuffed.—When the police arrests a person in execution of a warrant of arrest obtained from a Magistrate, the person so arrested shall not be handcuffed unless the police has also obtained orders from the Magistrate for the handcuffing of the person to be so arrested. Citizens for Democracy v. State of Assam, AIR 1996 SC 2193 : (1995) 3 SCC 743 : 1995 SCC (Cri) 600 : 1996 CrLJ 324.

[10567] ● Person arrested without warrant—handcuffing of.—Where a person is arrested by the police without warrant the police officer concerned may if he is satisfied, on the basis of the guidelines given by us in para above, that it is necessary to handcuff such a person, he may do so till the time he is taken to the police station and thereafter his production before the Magistrate. Further use of fetters thereafter can only be under the orders of the Magistrate as already indicated by us. Citizens for Democracy v. State of Assam, AIR 1996 SC 2193 : (1995) 3 SCC 743 : 1995 SCC (Cri) 600 : 1996 CrLJ 324.

[10568] ● Violation of direction regarding handcuffing punishable under contempt of Court Act.—The apex Court direct all ranks of police and the prison authorities to meticulously obey the above mentioned directions. Any violation of any of the directions issued by us by any rank of police in the country or member of the jail establishment shall be summarily punishable under the Contempt of Courts Act apart from other penal consequences under law. Citizens for Democracy v. State of Assam, AIR 1996 SC 2193 : (1995) 3 SCC 743 : 1995 SCC (Cri) 600 : 1996 CrLJ 324 : JT 1995 (4) SC 475 : 1995 (3) CCR 7 (SC). To the same effect : (1) M.P. Dwivedi In Re, AIR 1996 SC 2299 : (1996) 4 SCC 152 : 1996 CrLJ 1670 (SC).

[10569] ● Right of executive to suspend, remit or commute sentence of convict.—The distinction of the convicts under the NDPS Act and under other statutes, in so far as it relates to the exercise of the executive powers under Sections 432 and 433 of the CrPC is concerned, cannot be termed to either arbitrary or discriminatory being violative of Article 14 of the Constitution. Such deprivation of the Executive can also not be stretched to hold that the right to life of a person has been taken away except, according to the procedure established by law. It is not contended on behalf of the petitioners that the procedure prescribed under the Act for holding the trial is not reasonable, fair and just. The offending section, in so far as it relates to the Executive in the matter of suspension, remission and commutation of sentence, after conviction, does not, in any way, encroach upon the personal liberty of the convict tried fairly and sentenced under the Act. The procedure prescribed for holding the trial under the Act cannot be termed to be arbitrary, whimsical or fanciful. There is, therefore, no vice of unconstitutionality in the section in so far as it takes away the powers of the Executive conferred upon it under Sections 432 and 433 of the Code, to suspend, remit or commute the sentence of a convict under the Act. Dadu v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 2000 SC 3203 : (2000) 8 SCC 437 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 1528 (1539) : 2001 CrLR (SC) 138.

[10570] ● Right to life available to prisoners.—Right to life is one of the basic human rights. It is guaranteed to every person by Article 21 of the Constitution and not even the State has the authority to violate that right. A prisoner, be he a convict or under-trial or a detenue, does not cease to be a human being. Even when lodged in the jail, he continues to enjoy all his Fundamental Rights including the right to life guaranteed to him under the Constitution. On being convicted of crime and deprived of their liberty in accordance with the procedure established by law, prisoners still retain the residue of Constitutional rights. State of Andhra Pradesh v. Challa Ramkrishna Reddy, AIR 2000 SC 2083 : (2000) 5 SCC 712.

[10571] ● Prisoners do not lose fundamental rights.—According to the definition under the Prisoners Act, there is a convict, there is an under-trial and there is a civil prisoner, who may be a detenue under Preventive Detention Law. None of the three categories of prisoners lose their Fundamental Rights on being placed inside a prison. The restriction placed on their right to movement is the result of their conviction or involvement in the crime. State of Andhra Pradesh v. Challa Ramkrishna Reddy, AIR 2000 SC 2083 (2089) : (2000) 5 SCC 712.

CONVICTION

[10572] ● Conviction for offence not charged.— In the present case, the facts proved against the accused were that he had inflicted on the person of another a large number of serious injuries, including fractures of the bones of several fingers. He was charged under Section 307, Penal Code, but the jury returned a verdict of guilty under Section 326, and accepting that verdict the Sessions Judge convicted him under that section. On appeal, the High Court upheld the conviction. The accused appealed to the Supreme Court. It was contended that inasmuch as there was no charge under Sections 263 and an offence under that section was not a minor offence with reference to an offence under Section 307, Section 238, CrPC did not apply and therefore conviction under Section 326 was illegal. This argument overlooked the provisions of Section 236 and 237, CrPC which clearly applied to a case like the present. On the facts of the case it was open to the Sessions Judge to charge the accused alternatively under Sections 307 and 326 of the Penal Code, and hence the case was covered by Section 237, CrPC, though it might not be covered by Section 238. That being so, conviction under Section 326 was proper even though there was no charge under that section. Bijoy Chand Patra v. State, AIR 1952 SC 105 : 1952 CrLJ 644 : 1952 SCR 202 : 1952 SCJ 17.

[10573] ● Charge of murder—Conviction for offence under Section 201, IPC.—In a case in which the accused is charged only of the offence of murder under Section 302, Penal Code, and no alternative charge under Section 201 for the disposal of the dead body of the murdered person has been framed, if the charge of murder fails, it is permissible under Section 237, CrPC to record a conviction against the accused under Section 201, provided that, on the facts of the case, it is proved that the death of the deceased was brought about by a crime and that the accused was associated in the disposal of the dead body. Similarly, if in such a case the Sessions Court has convicted the accused on the charge of murder under Section 302, and that conviction is set aside on appeal, it is open to the High Court or the Supreme Court to convict the accused under Section 201 if it finds that an offence under that section has been established by the evidence in the case, even though there is no charge against him under that section. Section 237, CrPC completely covers such a case. Kashmira Singh v. State of M.P., AIR 1952 SC 159 : 1952 CrLJ 839 : 1952 SCR 526.

[10574] ● Conviction under Section 302 read with Section 149, IPC.—If the facts of the case are such that the accused could have been alternatively charged with the aid of Section 34, then even though there may have been an omission to frame a charge under Section 302 read with Section 34, it is open to the Court to convict the accused on that charge, provided that it is satisfied that the offence was jointly committed by several accused in furtherance of the common intention of all of them. Further, if in such a case the Sessions Court has convicted the accused under Section 149/302 and the High Court acquits some of them after giving them the advantage of doubt, and the number of the accused whose guilt is accepted being less than five, their conviction under Section 149/302 cannot stand, it is open to the High Court to convict the remaining accused under Section 302 read with Section 34, provided the facts and circumstances of the case are such that they could have been originally charged under the section, and the omission to frame such a charge has not occasioned any prejudice to the accused in their defence. Lachman Singh v. State, AIR 1952 SC 167 : 1952 CrLJ 863 : 1952 SCJ 230 : 1952 SCA 491.

[10575] ● Proof of conspiracy.—In a case in which the only evidence against the accused is that they were present and standing together at the time when one of them fired a fatal shot at the deceased, the possibility remains that the one who fired did so without the others having shared with him the intention to cause death, and unless that possibility is eliminated by some evidence indicative of a meeting of the minds between them all, the mere presence of the other accused on the spot cannot be sufficient to hold them guilty with the aid of Section 34. Before conviction with the aid of Section 34 can be sustained there must be some evidence from which a reasonable inference can be drawn that the accused shared the intention of the one who fired the shot to kill the deceased, but such evidence may be either of a pre-arranged plan to murder, or may be of some act or circumstance on the spot which is indicative of the common intention. In the absence of any such evidence the mere fact all the accused were seen by witnesses at the place and at the time of the firing, is not sufficient to prove common intention. In such a case if it cannot be proved, who fired the fatal shot, none of the persons present can be convicted of murder and all of them would be entitled to the benefit of doubt and must be acquitted. In such a case if the evidence as to previous conspiracy between the accused has been rejected and the accused are acquitted under Section 120 B, that evidence must be held to be equally insufficient to establish the charge of common intention under Section 34. Ram Nath Madhoprasad v. State of M.P., AIR 1953 SC 420 : 1953 CrLJ 1772.

[10576] ● Conviction of accused not to be based on his own statement.—Conviction of an accused person cannot be based upon his own statement recorded under Section 342. In the absence of any other evidence on record which establishes the guilt of the accused, conviction cannot rest merely on the answers given by an accused when examined under that section, because such answers are not "evidence" and cannot take the place of evidence on which alone conviction can legally be based. An admission made by an accused person under Section 342 can be used and relied upon only for the purpose of lending corroboration to the prosecution evidence, when it exists. In the present case the accused was charged under Section 66 (b) of the Bombay Prohibition Act on the ground that he was found in possession of rectified spirit without a permit as required by law. The prosecution case rested on the evidence of witnesses that the goods were recovered from a particular godown and that the accused was in possession of that godown. When examined under Section 342, CrPC, the accused admitted that he was in charge of the godown but denied that the goods were found in the godown and said that they were found outside it. The Magistrate relied on the admission of the accused that the godown was in his possession and holding the evidence on record established that the goods were recovered from the godown, rejected his statement that the goods were not recovered from the godown as false. Under these circumstances it could not be said that the conviction of the accused was based solely on his statement recorded under Section 342. The Magistrate had only used that statement as supporting the prosecution evidence concerning the possession of the godown, which had not been challenged in the cross-examination of the prosecution witness, and the Magistrate was fully justified in doing this. If the conviction of the accused had been based solely on his statement recorded under Section 342, he would have been justified in his contention that the conviction was bad because in the absence of any evidence as to his possession of the godown, it would have been wrong to hold that the admission of the accused was "evidence" on which his possession of the godown was established. Conviction was confirmed and the appeal was dismissed. Vijendrajit Ayodhyaprasad

Goel v. State of Bombay, AIR 1953 SC 247 : 1953 CrLJ 1097 : 1953 SCJ 328.

[10577] ● Conviction under Section 302 read with Section 34, IPC validity.—Although there is substantial difference between Section 34 and Section 149, but they also to same extent overlap and if the common object which is the subject matter of charge under Section 149 does not necessarily involve a common intention, then substitution of Section 34 for Section 149 might result in prejudice to the accused and ought not to be permitted. But if facts to be proved the evidence to be adduced with reference to the charge under Section 149 would be the same, if the charge were under Section 34 then the failure to charge the accused under Section 34 could not result in any prejudice and is permissible. Karnail Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1954 SC 204 : 1954 CrLJ 580 : 1954 SCR 904.

[10578] ● Omission to frame charge.—Omission to frame a charge for a specific offence of which the accused is convicted is a clear breach of the mandatory requirements of Section 233 (now Section 218). The effect of such omission is that the conviction will be set aside if the omission has caused a prejudice to the accused by misleading him in his defence. Suraj Pal v. State of U.P., AIR 1955 SC 419 : 1955 CrLJ 1004 : 1954 SCJ 351 : 1955 SCR 1332.

[10579] ● Unlawful assembly—Accused if given benefit of doubt.—The constructive liability under Section 149 can arise only against a man proved to have been a member of an unlawful assembly, and if any accused is given the benefit of doubt, and is acquitted on the charge under Section 143 or 147, his conviction with the aid of Section 149 for an offence committed by another member of that assembly is illegal. It cannot be contended, that Section 149 does not create, a specific offence and does not provide any punishment for that offence. Merely because the section prescribes a punishment which is not uniform but is made dependant upon the punishment prescribed for the offence committed by another member of the assembly it cannot be said that the section does not prescribe any punishment. Nanakchand v. State of Punjab, AIR 1955 SC 274 : 1955 CrLJ 721 : 1955 SCJ 241.

[10580] ● Conviction of accused under Section 302 read with Section 34, IPC.—In the present case the accused was convicted under Section 302/34, and not under Section 302. The trial Court found that though the accused did not himself inflict any blow on the deceased, he had shared the common intention to kill him and had intentionally participated in the attack by being present on the spot armed with a lathi so as to keep guard and give support to his brother who attacked the deceased with a gandasa. The trial Judge convicted the accused under Section 302 read with Section 34 and sentenced him to death. In the eye of the law, the accused was as much guilty of the offence of murder as the co-accused who actually dealt the fatal blows, and on the facts of the case the sentence of death imposed on him could not be held to be improper and had to be maintained. Rishi Deo Pande v. State of U.P., AIR 1955 SC 331 : 1955 CrLJ 873.

[10581] ● Accused taking active part in murder.—In a case in which the charge framed against the accused was only under Section 302/34 or Section 302/149, and no substantive charge under Section 302 was framed, if the accused is convicted under Section 302 itself, the effect of the contravention of the requirements of Section 233, CrPC, is the same whether the charge framed against the accused which has failed was under Section 302/149 or was under Section 302/34. In either case, the question which arises is the same, namely, was the accused prejudiced in his defence as a result of the omission to frame the required charge, or was he not, and if the Court comes to the conclusion that such prejudice was in fact occasioned, conviction must be set aside, whether the charge framed was under Section 302/149 or Section 302/34.

However, there is one difference between a case in which the charge as framed is only under Section 149/302 and a case in which it is under Section 302/34. In the former case, the charge as framed tells the accused that it was not he who committed the murder and that he is only constructively liable for it, while in the latter case the accused is told that the murder was committed by several persons jointly and that he was one of them. Therefore, when the charge is only under Section 302/149, the likelihood of prejudice is very much higher. In such a case the Court may well take such prejudice as established from the fact that the cross-examination of eye-witnesses had not been as thorough as it might have been if the accused had known that the accusation against him was that it was his hand which caused the death. On the other hand, when the charge is under Section 302/34, the accused knows that it is alleged that he had participated in the commission of murder, and merely on the strength of the omission to frame a charge under Section 302 substantive, he cannot say that he did not know that the prosecution case was that he took an active part in the murder. In such a case, therefore, the burden of proof of prejudice is much heavier than what it is when the charge is only under Section 302/149. Wilhe (William) Slaney v. State of M.P., AIR 1956 SC 116 : 1956 CrLJ 291 : 1956 SCJ 182 : 1956 SCA 183.

[10582] ● Conviction of accused with aid of Section 34, IPC.—When, the whole gravamen of the charge and of the evidence is that an accused A committed an offence jointly with specified and known persons who are co-accused at the trial, and not with some others who are unknown, and all the other accused are acquitted, the element of sharing a common intention, which is of the very essence of a charge under Section 34, disappears, and the charge must fail.

On the other hand, when the other accused are acquitted, not because there is any doubt, as to their participation in the commission of the offence, but because there is no doubt as to their identity as the actual assailants, the conviction of even a single accused under Section 34 would be justified, because in such a case there is no doubt that he shared the common intention with other offenders, though it cannot be proved beyond doubt who they were. Prabhu Babaji Navle v. State of Bombay, AIR 1956 SC 51 : 1956 CrLJ 147.

[10583] ● Alteration of conviction.—The appellate Court can alter conviction under Section 302 read with Section 34, IPC to one under Section 326 read with Section 149, IPC. Tilakeswar Singh v. State of Bihar, AIR 1956 SC 238 : 1956 CrLJ 441.

[10584] ● Conviction of accused under Section 420, IPC.—When an accused person has been charged under Section 420 read with Section 34 and there is no substantive charge under Section 420, if the facts established in the case show that he had himself committed the whole offence with the aid of some companions, it is open to the Court to convict him under Section 420 substantive, because in such a case the omission to frame a charge under Section 420 could not cause to the accused any possible prejudice in his defence. Mobarik Ali Ahmad v. State of Bombay, AIR 1957 SC 857 : 1957 CrLJ 1346 : 1957 SCJ 209.

[10585] ● Conviction of accused under Section 409, IPC.—The combined effect of Section 423(1)(b), CrPC and Section 26, General Clauses Act provisions is that when an accused is charged before a trial Court for offences under two different Acts and is convicted of one of them, it is open to the High Court in appeal to acquit him on the charge of which he has been convicted, and to convict him on the charge of which he has been acquitted, provided the offence under that charge has been established by the evidence on record. In the present case, the accused, a public servant, was charged of offences under Section 409, Penal Code, and under Section 5 (2) of the Prevention of Corruption Act read with Section 5 (1) (c) thereof. The trial Court convicted him only under Section 5 (2) read with Section 5 (1) (c) of the Act. On appeal by the accused it was urged before the High Court that the trial was incompetent for want of the requisite sanction for prosecution under Section 6 of the Act. The High Court upheld the contention and accordingly acquitted him on that charge. However, the High Court found that on the evidence on record an offence under Section 409, Penal Code, had been established against the accused and that on the facts of the case the offence committed was not such as to require the sanction for prosecution under Section 197, CrPC. On these findings, the High Court convicted the accused under Section 409, Penal Code. Under these circumstances, there was nothing illegal in the order of the High Court because, on the findings arrived at, the High Court was competent to convict the accused as it had done. Conviction was upheld. State of M.P. v. Veereshwar Rao Agnihotri, AIR 1957 SC 592 : 1957 SCC 317 : 1957 CrLJ 892 : 1957 SCJ 519.

[10586] ● Conviction by application of Section 34, IPC.—Although there is a difference in common object and common intention, they both deal with combination of persons who become punishable as sharers in an offence, and a charge under Section 149, Penal Code, is no impediment to a conviction by the application of Section 34 if the evidence discloses the commission of the offence in furtherance of the common intention of all. B.N. Srikantiah v. Mysore State, AIR 1958 SC 672 : 1958 CrLJ 1251.

[10587] ● Omission to mention Section 34, IPC in charge.—An accused charged with the substantive offence can be convicted with that offence read with Section 34 even though there is no mention of Section 34 in the charge. The trial is not vitiated unless accused is shown to be prejudiced by such non-mention in the charge. B.N. Srikantiah v. State of Mysore, AIR 1958 SC 672 : 1958 CrLJ 1251.

[10588] ● Alternative of conviction from Section 299 to Section 300 of Calcutta Municipal Act.—If the Court is satisfied after scrutinizing the evidence on record that the substance of the accusation remains the same, and all that has occurred is an omission in the charge to state the appropriate section, Sections 236 and 237 of the Code apply, and the Court has the power to convict the accused under the appropriate section applicable to the facts proved. In the present case the accused was prosecuted for having erected a compound wall which encroached upon a public road, he was charged under Section 299 of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923, which applied only to offending structures which were part and parcel of the main building. The appropriate section applicable to unauthorized structures unattached to any building was Section 300. The accused was convicted by the trial Court under Section 299 but on appeal the High Court converted the conviction to one under Section 300 and the question was whether such conviction was valid. The case falls under Section 237 of the Code. Since the alteration is not in the substance of the charge, but only as to the section more properly applicable to the facts found, the conviction under Section 300 of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923 is perfectly justified, though, there is an omission to frame a charge under that section. Nani Gopal Biswas v. Municipality of Howrah, AIR 1958 SC 141 : 1958 CrLJ 271 : 1958 SCA 417 : 1958 SCR 774.

[10589] ● Appellate Court itself to dispose of appeal instead of ordering retrial.—In the present case, three accused of whom S and T were Supervisors in the Excise Department and O was a tobacco dealer, have charged and convicted in the Sessions Court as under : S and T under Section 467 and O under Section 467/471 of the Penal Code. The case against the accused was that with the intent to defraud the Government and evade the payment of excise duty, the accused S and T had prepared fictitious transport permits on which false entries of sale notes in favour of fictitious persons were recorded, and it was mentioned that excise duty had been paid by those persons. On the strength of these permits, accused O transported a large quantity of tobacco without paying the requisite excise duty. The High Court Judge is of the opinion that the offence committed by S and T might have fallen under Section 477A, and the one committed by O might have fallen under Section 477A read with Section 109, but without going into the merits of the evidence in the case the High Court directed a re-trial since no charge under these sections had been framed.

This is a case to be tried on the question whether the entries made in the permits are false and thereby contravened the latter part of Section 477A. The case clearly falls under Sections 236 and 237, CrPC, and hence the High Court has erred in ordering a re-trial and in not deciding for itself whether, on the evidence before it, any offence had been committed by the accused. The order of the High Court directing the re-trial is set aside, and the case is remanded to the High Court for rehearing the appeal and disposing it of on the evidence on record. G.D. Sharma v. State of U.P., AIR 1960 SC 400 : 1960 CrLJ 541.

[10590] ● Unlawful assembly—Constitution of.—In such a case, even if the accused cannot be convicted under Sections 302 and 307 read with Section 149 because of their number being less than five, the charge can be converted into one under Sections 302 and 307 read with Section 34, Penal Code. Kartar Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1961 SC 1787 : 1961 (2) CrLJ 857.

[10591] ● Undue emphasis on mere technicalities not desirable.—For deciding the question of prejudice the Court is not to be guided by technicalities but by a broad vision and must look to the substance and not from where the provisions prescribed by the law of procedure are intended to be mandatory, the legislature indicates its intention in that behalf clearly and contravention of such mandatory provisions may introduce a serious infirmity in the proceeding themselves, but where the provisions made by the law of procedure are not a vital importance but are nevertheless, intended to be observed their breach may not necessarily vitiate the trial unless it is shown that the contravention in question has caused prejudice to the accused. Chittaranjan Dass v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1963 SC 1696 : 1963 (2) CrLJ 534 (538) (SC) : 1964 (2) SCJ 311 : (1964) 1 SCA 654 : 1963 SCD 815. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Gurbachan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1952 SC 623 : 1952 CrLJ 1009.

[10592] ● Conviction under Section 302 read with Section 34, IPC—Pre-requisite.—In the present case, the High Court has given conflicting findings. While it acquitted accused 1, 3 and 4 under Section 302/34, it convicted accused 2 under Section 302/34 for having committed the offence jointly with the acquitted persons. This is a legally impossible position. Whether the other accused are acquitted on the ground, that the evidence was not acceptable, or whether they are acquitted by giving them the benefit of doubt, in law, the result is the same, namely, that they did not take part in the offence. The effect of the acquittal of the other accused is that they did not conjointly act with accused 2 in committing the murder, and that accused 2 had not acted conjointly with them. In the circumstances, the conviction of accused 2 under Section 302 read with Section 34 for having committed offence jointly with the acquitted accused persons was bad in law, and cannot stand the appeal is allowed, and the order of the High Court convicting the appellant under Section 302 read with Section 34 is set aside.

Krishna Govind Patel v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1963 SC 1413 : 1963 (2) CrLJ 351 : (1963) 2 SCJ 718.

[10593] ● Acquittal of person in one case.—In spite of the acquittal of a person in one case, it is open to the Court in another case to proceed on the basis, of course, if the evidence warrants it that the acquitted person was guilty of the offence of which he had been tried in the other case and to find in the latter case that the person tried in it was guilty of an offence under Section 34 by virtue of having committed offence along with the acquitted person. There is nothing in principle to prevent this being done. The principle of Sambasivam's case, 1950 AC 458 has no application here because the two cases we are concerned with, are against two different persons, though for the commission of the same offence. Furthermore, as we have already said each case has to be decided on the evidence laid in it and this irrespective of any view of the same act that might have been taken on different evidence led in another case. Karan Singh v. State of M.P., AIR 1965 SC 1037 : 1965 (2) CrLJ 142 : (1965) 2 SCJ 181.

[10594] ● Conviction under Section 420, IPC though charged for offence under Section 409, IPC.—It is permissible to convict a person under Section 420, IPC though he is charged for an offence under Section 409, IPC and not under Section 420, IPC. Sunil Kumar Paul v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1965 SC 706 : (1965) 1 CrLJ 630.

[10595] ● Order of conviction if challenged by convicted person.—If an order of conviction is challenged by the convicted person but the order of acquittal is not challenged by the State then it is only the order of conviction that falls to be considered by the Appellate Court and not the order of acquittal. In exercising the powers conferred by Section 423(1)(b) the High Court cannot therefore convert the order of acquittal into one of conviction and that result can be achieved only by adopting procedure prescribed under Section 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code. It must accordingly be held that the High Court acted without jurisdiction in altering the finding of acquittal of Lakhan on the charge under Section 302, Indian Penal Code and convicting him on the charge under Section 326, Indian Penal Code and imposing a sentence of imprisonment on that charge. Lakhan Mahto v. State of Bihar, AIR 1966 SC 1742 : 1966 CrLJ 1349.

[10596] ● Plea of guilty—Recording of.—Before the accused is convicted on his plea of guilt, the plea of guilt should be recorded as nearly as possible in the words used by him. Kaushalya v. State of Madras, AIR 1966 SC 22 : 1966 CrLJ 66 : (1966) 1 SCR 229.

[10597] ● Recording of plea of accused in his own words salutary rule.—The rule that the plea of the accused shall be recorded as nearly as possible in his words is very salutary rule being necessary for the protection of the accused and the proper administration of justice. Kaushalya v. State of Madras, AIR 1966 SC 22 : 1966 CrLJ 66 : (1966) 1 SCR 229.

[10598] ● Non-recording of plea of accused in his own words—Effect.—By not recording the plea of the accused as nearly as may be possible in his own words but merely recording the Magistrate's own conclusion from the statement deprives the superior Court of the opportunity of examining the validity of his conclusion. Kaushalya v. State of Madras, AIR 1966 SC 22 : 1966 CrLJ 66 : (1966) 1 SCR 229.

[10599] ● Provisions of Section 252, CrPC dealing with conviction mandatory.—The provisions of Section 252, CrPC dealing with conviction or plea of guilty pleaded by accused are mandatory and the record of the Court must show that they were complied with. Kaushalya v. State of Madras, AIR 1966 SC 22 : 1966 CrLJ 66 : (1966) 1 SCR 229.

[10600] ● No locus standi of private party to file revision.—Private party has no locus standi to move in revision against an order passed in case instituted on police report. Thakur Ram v. State of Bihar, AIR 1966 SC 911 : 1966 CrLJ 700.

[10601] ● Second conviction by virtue of Section 25 of—Suppression of Immoral Traffic in Women and Girls Act.—When the provisions of Suppression of Immoral Traffic in Woman and Girls came into force the corresponding provisions of the Madras Act (Suppression of Immoral Traffic Act, 1930) stood repealed. When Suppression of Immoral Traffic in Women and Girls Act, 1956 came into force provisions of the Madras Act Suppression of Immoral Traffic Act, 1930 stood repealed, by virtue of sub-section (7) of Section 25 of the Suppression of Immoral Traffic Women and Girls Act, 1956. By virtue of sub-section (2), the conviction of the appellant under Section 5(1) of the Madras Act, would be deemed to be conviction under Section 3(1) of the Act, an Act deemed to be in force at the time the conviction took place. It follows that the present conviction of the appellant will have to be taken as a second conviction, within the meaning of the express provision in sub-section (1) of Section 3 of the Act, and the appellant would be liable to suffer enhanced punishment under that sub-section. Krishnamurthy v. Public Prosecutor, Madras, AIR 1967 SC 567 : 1967 CrLJ 544 (545) : (1967) 1 SCR 586.

[10602] ● Charge under Section 302 read with Section 149, IPC—Conviction under Section 302 read with Section 34, IPC.—An accused charged with having committed an offence read with Section 149, IPC can be convicted for that offence read with Section 34, IPC without a charge under Section 34 being framed. Jagir Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1968 SC 43 : 1968 CrLJ 89 : (1967) 3 SCR 256 : (1968) 1 SCJ 244.

[10603] ● Prejudice to accused by framing alternative charge to be proved.—Where, though alternative charges were framed against the accused, evidence was led only in support of the charge for which he was convicted, and no prejudice was shown to have been caused to them by the alternative charge, the accused cannot succeed by merely showing that the charges framed were defective. A mere defect in the charge is no ground for setting aside a conviction. Kalian Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 1971 SC 983 : (1971) 3 SCC 226 : 1971 CrLJ 806 : 1971 UJ (SC) 422.

[10606] ● Charges under Section 148 and Section 302 read with Section 149, IPC—Conviction under Section 302 read with Section 34, IPC.—Where the accused were charged under Sections 148 & 302, read with Section 149, IPC, but they were convicted under Section 302, r/w. Section 34, IPC, though there was no specific charge under Section 34 against them, there was no irregularity vitiating the trial, as all the circumstances showing concert and participation in the joint criminal action by all the three appellants were duly put to them in their examination under Section 342, CrPC. (now Section 313). Thus they were fully aware of the matter with which they were charged and no question of prejudice arises. Bhorri Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1974 SC 1256 : 1974 SCC (Cri) 664 : 1974 CrLJ 1929.

[10607] ● Conviction and sentence before coming into force of new CrPC.—When accused has been convicted prior to enforcement of the new CrPC, and his sentence is still running, he would be entitled to set-off of the period of detention undergone by him during investigation, enquiry or trial of the case against the term of imprisonment imposed and he would be required to undergo only the remainder of the term. B.P. Andre v. Supdt. of Central Jail, AIR 1975 SC 164 : (1975) 1 SCC 192 : (1975) SCC (Cri) 70 : 1975 CrLJ 182 : 1975 Mah LJ 1 : 1975 MPLJ 110.

[10608] ● Benefit of set off pre-conviction detention period.—It matters little whether he was convicted under the old CrPC or not he is entitled to set-off under Section 428, CrPC. B.P. Andre v. Supdt. of Central Jail, AIR 1975 SC 164 (1975) 1 SCC 192 : 1975 CrLJ 182. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Hardev Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1975 SC 179 : (1975) 3 SCC 731 : 1975 CrLJ 243; (2) Suraj Bhan v. Om Prakash, AIR 1976 SC 648 : (1976) 1 SCC 886 : 1976 CrLJ 577; (3) Mer Dhana Sida v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1985 SC 386 : (1985) 1 SCC 200 : 1985 SCC (Cri) 54 : 1985 CrLJ 660 : 1985 CrLR (SC) 60 : 1985 All Cr R 489 : (1985) 1 Cr LC 242.

[10609] ● Witness convicted in murder case 43 years ago.—In the present case, it was suggested that no reliance should be placed on the evidence of PW-3 because he was an accused in a murder case and was convicted. It appears from the statement of PW-3 in re-examination that the murder case was tried as far back as 1932 about 43 years ago. In view of the huge lapse of time between his conviction and the present occurrence, it is difficult to discard the testimony of this witness on this ground alone. Arumuga Nadar

v. State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 1976 SC 2588 : (1977) 1 SCC 466 : 1976 SCC (Cri) 124 (127) : 1976 CrLJ 1998 : 1976 CrLR (SC) 463.

[10610] ● Charge disclosing only named person as co-accused.—Where the charge disclosed only the named persons as co-accused and the PWs confined their evidence to them, even then it will be permissible to come to the conclusion that others named or unnamed, besides those mentioned in the charge or the evidence of the PWs, acted conjointly with one of the charged accused if there was other evidence to lead to that conclusion, but not otherwise. State of A.P. v. K.V. Reddy, AIR 1976 SC 2207 : (1976) 3 SCC 454 : 1976 SCC (Cri) 448 : 1976 CrLJ 1723 : 1976 CrLR (SC) 210 : 1976 SCCrR 277 : 1976 Cr App R (SC) 298.

[10611] ● Participation of 12 named accused in commission of murder not established.—Excepting A7, the participation of the other 12 named accused in the commission of murder was not established. The effect of their acquittal was that, they would be deemed to have never participated in the criminal enterprise which resulted in the death of the deceased and there was nothing on record as to who out of them, dealt the fatal blows to the deceased. The question that fell to be determined was : could A7, in such circumstances, be held vicariously liable by invoking Section 149/34, IPC, for the murder in question. The evidence on record was sufficient to base a firm finding that apart from the accused named in the charge, there were at least one or more unidentified persons who participated in the criminal action against the deceased conjointly with A 7. It could safely be said that apart from the 13 named in the charge, there were some more confederates of A 7 in the crime. A 7 could, therefore, be safely convicted under Section 302/34, IPC. His acquittal is therefore, reversed and he is convicted accordingly. State of A.P. v. K.V. Reddy, AIR 1976 SC 2207 : (1976) 3 SCC 454 : 1976 SCC (Cri) 448 : 1976 CrLJ 1723.

[10612] ● Interpretation of—"Hear the accused on the question of sentence".—The hearing contemplated by Section 235(2) is not confined merely to hearing oral submissions but it is also intended to give an opportunity to the prosecution and the accused to place before the Court facts and material relating to various factors bearing on the question of sentence and if they are contested by either side, then to produce evidence for the purpose of establishing the same. Care should be taken by the Court to see that such hearing on the question of sentence is not abused and turned into an instrument for unduly protracting the proceedings. The claim of due and proper hearing would have to be harmonised with the requirement of expeditious disposal of proceedings. Noncompliance with the provision will ex-facie vitiate the order. Santa Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1976 SC 2386 : (1976) 4 SCC 190 : 1976 SCC (Cri) 546 : 1976 CrLJ 1875 : 1976 CrLR (SC) 375.

[10613] ● Testimony of previous convict.—It is true that PW-6 was once convicted in a criminal case, but there is nothing brought out in cross-examination to show when he was convicted or for what offence and in the absence of any such details we cannot reject his evidence merely on the ground that he was once convicted in the past. Varghese Thomas v. State of Kerala, AIR 1977 SC 701 : (1976) 4 SCC 348 : 1976 SCC (Cri) 643 (645) : 1977 CrLJ 343 : 1977 CrLR (SC) 86.

[10614] ● Co-accused convicted under Section 326/34, IPC.—In the present case, the main accused could have been convicted under Section 302 read with Section 34, but unfortunately the State has not been vigilant in enforcement of the criminal law and regrettably it has not preferred an appeal against the acquittal of main accused under Section 302 read with Section 34 with the result that his conviction under Section 326 read with Section 34 must stand. And if, that be so, consistency compels us to reach the conclusion that the other accused, appellant, also must, on the same basis, be convicted under section 326 read with Section 34 instead of Section 302 read with Section 34. Ashok Kumar v. State of Punjab, AIR 1977 SC 109 : (1977) 1 SCC 746 : 1977 SCC (Cri) 177 (180) : 1977 CrLJ 164 : 1976 CrLR (SC) 473.

[10615] ● Appeal against conviction.—The fact that a convicted person has already undergone the sentence or is otherwise entitled to be set at liberty because of the length of the period during which he has been under detention during the course of investigation, inquiry and trial cannot prevent the said person from challenging his conviction. Retti Deenbandhu v. State of A.P., AIR 1977 SC 1335 : (1977) 1 SCC 742 : 1977 SCC (Cri) 173 (174) : 1977 CrLJ 1004 : 1977 CrLR (SC) 93.

[10616] ● Object of Section 235(2), CrPC.—In a case of conviction under Section 302, if the minimum sentence is imposed, the question of giving opportunity under Section 235(2) would not arise. Where the accused was not given an opportunity in terms of Section 235 (2), the appellate Court may give an opportunity to the parties in terms of Section 235(2) to produce the materials they wish to adduce, instead of going through the exercise of sending back the case to the trial Court, to save time of and help produce prompt justice. The failure to give such an opportunity under Section 235(2) will not affect the conviction under any circumstances. When it is a case of conviction under Section 302, IPC, if the minimum sentence is imposed, the question of providing an opportunity under Section 235 would not arise. Tarlok Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1977 SC 1747 : 1977 SCC (Cri) 490 : 1977 CrLJ 1139 : 1977 CrLR (SC) 335.

[10617] ● Common intention.—After acquittal of Shingara Singh, the words said to have been spoken of by him could not be made use of and had not been used by the High Court for finding the element of common intention. The only fact then remained that Chain Singh gave a spear blow near the chest of the deceased, which according to the opinion of the doctor, was sufficient in the ordinary course of the nature to cause his death. Hence, he was guilty under Section 302 simpliciter. As regards Surat Singh he was guilty only under Section 324, IPC. The appeal was partly allowed. Surat Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1977 SC 1335 : (1976) 4 SCC 311 : 1976 SCC (Cri) 605 : 1977 CrLJ 347 : 1977 CrLR (SC) 53.

[10618] ● Furnishing of free manuscript of judgment while sentencing person to prison.—Court shall forthwith furnish a free manuscript of the judgment while sentencing a person to prison term. In the event of any such copy being sent to jail authorities for delivering to the prisoner, by the appellate, revisional or other Court, the official concerned shall, with quick despatch, get it delivered to the sentence and obtain written acknowledgement from him. Madhav v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1978 SC 1548 : (1978) 3 SCC 544 : 1978 SCC (Cri) 468 : 1978 CrLJ 1678 : 1978 CrLR (SC) 362 : 1978 UJ (SC) 847.

[10619] ● Appeal against acquittal.—As the previous conviction was 7 years' old and today it will about 15 years old, we do not think that we should take those facts into consideration while imposing the sentence on the respondent. Ramdas Bhikaji Chandhari v. Jadanand, AIR 1980 SC 126 : (1980) 1 SCC 550 : 1980 SCC (Cri) 268 (272) : 1980 CrLJ 111 : 1980 CrLR (SC) 41.

[10620] ● Conviction under Section 304, Part II—Propriety.—Trial Court convicted the appellants under Section 325 r/w Section 34, IPC. On appeal by the State, the High Court convicted the appellants under Section 304, Part II, r/w Section 34, IPC. The deceased received three contused lacerated wounds on the head, extensive subdural haematoma due to head injuries. Even accepting doctor's opinion, that injuries were not sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death, they were clearly of a nature likely to cause death. However, as there is no State appeal to the Supreme Court, acts of the appellants resulting in injuries to the deceased were done with knowledge that they would cause such bodily injury as was likely to cause death. High Court was correct in convicting the appellants under the above sections. Jayappa Dattu v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1982 SC 1183 : (1982) 2 SCC 453 : 1982 SCC (Cri) 476 : 1982 CrLJ 1394 : 1982 CrLR (SC) 282 : 1982 SCCrR 183 : 1982 ACrC 186 : 1982 Cr App R (SC) 182 : 1982 Mah LR (SC) 492 : 1982 UJ (SC) 482 : 1982 ACrR 387.

[10621] ● Life convicts not to claim benefit of set off.—Life convicts cannot claim benefit of set off contemplated by Section 428, CrPC. Kartar Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 1982 SC 1439 : (1982) 3 SCC 2 : 1982 CrLJ 1772 (SC) : 1982 CrLR (SC) 414 : 1982 UJ (SC) 621 : 1982 All Cr Cas 274 (SC).

[10622] ● Expression "Appropriate Government" in Section 432(7), CrPC.—"Appropriate Government" in Section 432(7) means Government of the State where the offender was sentenced and not where the offence was committed. Where a case was transferred from a Court within the territorial jurisdiction of the High Court of H.P. to a Court within the territorial jurisdiction of the High Court of Punjab, there was sufficient compliance of law if notice was given to the Public Prosecutor, viz., the Advocate-General of Punjab. Hanumant Dass v. Vinay Kumar, AIR 1982 SC 1052 : (1982) 2 SCC 177 : 1982 SCC (Cri) 379 : 1982 CrLJ 977 : 1982 CrLR (SC) 267 : (1982) 1 SCJ 372.

[10623] ● Offence under Section 307, IPC—Ingredients.—To justify a conviction under Section 307, IPC it is not essential that body injury capable of causing death should have been inflicted. Although, the nature of the injury actually caused might often give considerable assistance in coming to a finding, as to the intention of the accused, such intention might also be deduced from other circumstances, and might even, in some cases, be ascertained without any reference at all to actual wounds. The section made a distinction between an act of the accused and its result, if any. Such an act might not be attended by any result so far as the person assaulted was concerned, but still there might be cases in which the culprit would be liable under that section. It was not necessary, that injury actually caused to the victim of the assault should be sufficient under ordinary circumstances to cause the death of the person assaulted. What the Court had to see was whether the act, irrespective of its result, was done with the intention or knowledge and under circumstances mentioned in that section. An attempt in order to be criminal need not be penultimate act. It was sufficient in law, if there was present an intent coupled with some overt act in execution thereof. The High Court was, therefore, not correct in acquitting the accused of the charge under Section 307, IPC merely because the injuries inflicted on the victims were in the nature of a simple hurt. That portion of the judgment of the High Court was set aside. State of Maharashtra v. Balram Bama Patil, AIR 1983 SC 305 : (1983) 2 SCC 28 : 1983 SCC (Cri) 320 : 1983 CrLJ 331 : 1983 CrLR (SC) 151.

[10624] ● Conviction of accused—Dead body with latter purported to be written by deceased found after 13 years at another plea.—In this case a person by name Kunwar Bahadur was murdered on July 18th, 1971. The appellants were convicted for the murder and were sentenced to suffer imprisonment for life. On June 2, 1983 a dead body was found in a different place. A letter purported to have been written by one Kunwar Bahadur was recovered from the person of the deceased. On the next day, a Hindi daily carried a news item, that the said dead body was found in suspicious circumstances and that the letter which was recovered from the person of the deceased showed that he was repentant. The said news item was alleged to have come to the notice of the relatives of the appellants. The contention of the appellants was that Kunwar Bahadur, for whose murder they were convicted in 1971, was alive for 12 years thereafter and that his dead body was found on June 2, 1983. By the present appeal, they prayed for an order of acquittal, or rather, for an order setting aside their 12 year old conviction on the ground that they were convicted for a murder that never was. Since the above appeal raised a question of serious concern to the administration of justice, an order was passed by the Supreme Court directing the District Magistrate concerned to hold an inquiry into the allegation, as to whether the person called Kunwar Bahadur who was alleged to have been murdered in 1971, was found alive after the alleged murder and was thereafter murdered in some other incident which took place in 1983. The District Magistrate submitted a report leading to the conclusion that the person whose body was found on June 2, 1983 was not the person who was murdered in 1971 and for whose murder the appellants were sentenced to life imprisonment. The report revealed that the letter recovered from the person of the dead body on June 2, 1983 was a forged and fictitious one manufactured for the purpose of getting over the order convicting the appellants. The age of Kunwar Bahadur who was murdered in 1971 did not tally with the age of Kunwar Bahadur whose dead body was found on June 2, 1983. The close relatives of the real Kunwar Bahadur who was murdered in 1971 stated, that the hand writing of the letter was not that of the Kunwar Bahadur. The two photographs of Kunwar Bahadur who died in 1971 and that of Kunwar Bahadur's dead body found in 1983 differed and there was no resemblance between the two. In the result the appeal was dismissed. Lallu Ram v. State of U.P., AIR 1984 SC 1886 : 1984 Supp SCC 424 : 1985 CrLJ 354.

[10625] ● Gift of land by accused to victim's widow—Acquittal on that ground illegal.—In a murder case, the accused was convicted by Sessions Court. High Court acquitted him on the ground that the accused gifted land to victims widow. It can only be said that the judgment of the High Court has left the Court shocked and perplexed. This Court is at a total loss to understand it. The entire system of administration of criminal justice has been reduced to a mockery. If the judgment of the High Court is upheld, it is as if a person who can afford to make gifts of land or money to the heirs of the victim might get away even with a charge of murder. Courts are to dispense justice, not to dispense with justice. And, justice to be dispensed is not palm-tree justice or idiosyncratic justice. The judgment cannot stand a second's scrutiny. It is accordingly set aside and the matter is remanded to the High Court so that the criminal appeals and revision may be reheard. Ramesh Kumar v. Ram Kumar, AIR 1984 SC 1029 : (1984) 3 SCC 90 : 1984 CrLJ 832 (SC).

[10626] ● Notice to enhance sentence—Appeal.—In an appeal under Article 136 when a notice to enhance the sentence is issued, the case would be wide open and the appellants are entitled to challenge the correctness of the order of conviction. Sodha Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1985 SC 1130 : (1985) 3 SCC 225 : 1985 CrLJ 1361.

[10628] ● Conviction of accused prior to coming into force of new CrPC—Benefit of set off.— Where the accused was convicted prior to the coming into force of the new Code and appeal was filed after the Code came into force, the accused is entitled to the benefit of set off under Section 428. It was wrong for the High Court to hold that as the trial had ended in a conviction prior to the coming into force of the Code of 1973 the appeal would be governed by the repealed Code of 1898 and therefore in such an appeal the benefit of a provision introduced for the first time in the Code of 1973 cannot be extended to the accused because if such a thing is done it would not only give retrospective operation to the Code of 1973 but also it will introduce a dichotomy inasmuch as the appeal would be governed by the repealed statute and the sentence would be governed by the repealing statute. Decision of Gujarat High Court reversed. Mer Arjan Sida v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1985 SC 386 : (185) 1 SCC 200 : 1985 CrLJ 660 (SC).

[10629] ● No power of High Court to alter conviction to grave offence.—Where two incidents occurred on a particular day and in one of them the accused were convicted under Section 325, IPC, and acquitted of an offence under Section 307, IPC, and in a second case they were acquitted on the charge under Section 302/149, IPC, there was no appeal by the State against the acquittal of the accused under Section 307/149 and convicting them under Section 325/149, IPC. The State preferred an appeal to the High Court against the acquittal of the accused under Section 302/149, IPC, in respect of the second incident. But the High Court altered the conviction under Section 325/149, IPC into one under Section 307/149, IPC. The said alteration by the High Court is illegal and the original conviction under Section 325/149 was restored. Amar Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1987 SC 2023 : 1987 SCC (Cri) 670 : 1988 CrLJ 198 : 1987 CrLR (SC) 620.

[10630] ● Power of Court to award compensation to victim while passing judgment of conviction.—Section 357(3), CrPC empowers the Court to award compensation to victims while passing judgment of conviction. In addition to conviction, the Court may order the accused to pay compensation to victim who has suffered by the action of accused. It may be noted that this power of Courts to award compensation is not ancillary to other sentences but it is in addition thereto.

This power was intended to do something to re-assure the victim that he or she is not forgotten in the criminal justice system. It is a measure of responding appropriately to crime as well of reconciling the victim with the offender. It is, to some extent, a constructive approach to crimes. It is indeed a step forward in our criminal justice system. We, therefore, recommend to all Courts to exercise this power liberally as to meet the ends of justice in a better way." The payment by way of compensation must, however, be reasonable. What is reasonable, may depend upon the facts and circumstances of each case. The quantum of compensation may be determined by taking into account the nature of crime, the justness of claim by the victim and the ability of accused to pay. If there are more than one accused they may be asked to pay in equal terms unless their capacity to pay varies considerably. The payment may also vary depending upon the acts of each accused. Reasonable period for payment of compensation, if necessary by instalments, may also be given. The Court may enforce the order by imposing sentence in default. Hari Singh v. Sakhbir Singh, AIR 1988 SC 2127 : (1988) 4 SCC 551 : 1989 CrLJ 116.

[10631] ● Appeal against conviction by co-accused.—Co-accused not appealed—conviction of another accused set aside on appeal—finding interdependent and inextricably integrated—the non-appealing co-accused is also entitled to acquittal. Harinath v. State of U.P., AIR 1988 SC 345 : (1988) 1 SCC 14 : 1988 SCC (Cri) 14 : 1988 CrLJ 422 : (1987) 3 Crimes 667 : 1987 All Cr C 582 : 1988 BLJ 55.

[10632] ● Murder—Only one blow with knife.—In this case the accused started abusing certain organisers of a chit fund who had no connection with the deceased, in front of the house of the deceased. The deceased came out of his house and asked the accused to go away and cautioned him not to indulge in abusive language as the ladies were present. Both were remonstrating with each other when the accused took out knife from his waist and stabbed the deceased and pushed him to some distance and went away. He was convicted of an offence under Section 302, IPC, and sentenced to suffer imprisonment for life. In the circumstances of this case, no malice is alleged to have been entertained by the accused towards the deceased and the accused gave only one blow with a knife on the spur of the moment; the requisite intention to commit murder cannot be attributed to him. In such a situation he is guilty of committing an offence under Section 304, Part II, IPC. Thelan v. State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 1989 SC 759 : (1984) 2 SCC 133 : 1984 CrLJ 478.

[10633] ● Question of prejudice decision as to.—In order to arrive at a conclusion whether prejudice has been caused it is to be found out as to whether the accused had a fair trial whether he knew what he was being tried for whether the main facts sought to be established against him were explained to him fairly and clearly, and whether he was given a full and fair chance to defend himself. State of West Bengal v. Raisal Haque, AIR 1989 SC 129 : (1989) 3 SCC 166 : 1989 CrLJ 865.

[10634] ● Alteration of conviction by High Court.—Where there is an alternative charge under Section 302, IPC of which the accused has not been acquitted expressly or implicitly, it is competent for the appellate Court to alter the conviction from under Section 396 to 302, IPC. Ram Deo v. State of Bihar, AIR 1990 SC 1180 : (1990) 2 SCC 675 : 1993 CrLJ 37.

[10636] ● Third party stranger not to question correctness of conviction and sentence.—Ordinarily, the aggrieved party which is affected by any order has the right to seek redress by questioning the legality, validity or correctness of the order, unless such party is a minor, an insane person or is suffering from any other disability which the law recognises as sufficient to permit another person, e.g., next friend, to move the Court on his behalf. Unless an aggrieved party is under some disability recognised by law, it would be unsafe and hazardous to allow any third party to question the decision against him. Take for example a case, where a person accused under Section 302, IPC is convicted for a lesser offence under Section 324, IPC. The accused is quite satisfied with the decision but a third party questions if under Article 32 and succeeds. The conviction set aside and a fresh trial ends up in the conviction of the accused under Section 302, IPC. The person to suffer for the unilateral act of the third party would be the accused. We are therefore satisfied that neither under the provisions of the Code nor under any other statute is a third party stranger permitted to question the correctness of the conviction and sentence imposed by the Court. Simarnjit Singh Mann v. Union of India, AIR 1993 SC 280 : (1992) 4 SCC 653 : 1993 SCC (Cri) 22 (26, 27) : 1953 CrLJ 37.

[10638] ● Article 311(2) of constitution—Applicable on ground of conduct which led to his conviction.—Article 311(2)(a) second proviso speaks of the conduct which has led to his conviction on a criminal charge. Taking proceeding for and passing order of dismissal, removal and reduction in rank of a Govt. servant convicted by a criminal Court is not barred merely because the sentence or order is suspended by the Appellate Court or on the ground that the said government servant-accused has been released on bail pending the appeal. The order can always be raised and if the government servant is reinstated, he will be entitled to all benefits to which he would have been entitled to had he continued in service. The other course to wait till the appeal, revision and other remedies are over, would not be advisable since it would mean continuing in service a person who has been convicted of a serious offence by a criminal Court. Deputy Director of Collegiate Education (Administration) Madras v. S. Nagar Meena, AIR 1995 SC 1364 : (1995) 3 SCC 377 : JT 1995 (3) SC 32.

[10639] ● No locus standi of third party to challenge conviction and sentence.—A third party has no locus standi to challenge conviction and sentence awarded to certain convicts. Satvir Singh v. Baldev, AIR 1997 SC 169 : (1996) 8 SCC 593 : 1997 CrLJ 66 : (1996) 2 Crimes 138 (SC).

[10640] ● Basic constituents of two offences one of distinct and different categories.—Having acquitted the appellant of the charge under Section 302, IPC which was the only charge framed against him—the High Court could not have convicted him of the offence under Section 306, IPC. It is true that Section 222, CrPC entitles a Court to convict a person of an offence which is minor in comparison to the one for which he is tried but Section 306, IPC cannot be said to be a minor offence in relation to an offence under Section 302, IPC within the meaning of Section 222, CrPC for the two offences are of distinct and different categories. While the basic constituent of an offence under Section 302, IPC is homicidal death, those of Section 306, IPC are suicidal death and abetment thereof. Sangaraboina Sreenu v. State of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 1997 SC 3233 : (1997) 5 SCC 348 : 1997 SCC (Cri) 690 (691) : 1997 CrLJ 3955 : JT 1997 (5) SC 47 : (1997) 2 Crimes 55.

[10641] ● High Court in exercise of revisional power not to convert acquittal into conviction.—The High Court in exercise of its revisional power cannot convert an Order of acquittal into Order of conviction. Vimal Singh v. Khuman Singh, AIR 1998 SC 3380 : (1998) 7 SCC 223 : 1999 CrLJ 16.

[10642] ● Awarding sentence on conviction judicial function.—Awarding sentence upon conviction is concededly a judicial function to be discharged by the Courts of law established in the country. It is always a matter of judicial discretion, however, subject to any mandatory minimum sentence prescribed by the law. The award of sentence by a Criminal Court wherever made subject to the right of appeal cannot be interfered or intermeddled with in a way which amounts to not only interference but actually taking away the power of judicial review. Awarding the sentence and consideration of its legality or adequacy in appeal is essentially a judicial function embracing within its ambit the power to suspend the sentence under the peculiar circumstances of each case, pending the disposal of the appeal. Not providing atleast one right of appeal, would negate the due process of law in the matter of dispensation of criminal justice. There is no doubt that the right of appeal is the creature of a statute and when conferred, a substantive right. Providing a right of appeal but totally disarming the Court from granting interim relief in the form of suspension of sentence would be unjust, unfair and violative of Article 21 of the Constitution particularly when no mechanism is provided for early disposal of the appeal. Dadu v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 2000 SC 3203 : (2000) 8 SCC 437 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 1528 (1539) : 2001 CrLR (SC) 138.

[10643] ● Mentioning section in judgment not requirement of law.—Mention of section in the judgment is not the requirement of law to convict a person. If the ingredients of the offence are present, conviction can be made. It is not material to bring the case under Section 34, IPC as to who, in fact, inflicted the fatal blow. Narinder Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 2000 SC 2212 : (2000) 4 SCC 603 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 855 (865) : 2000 CrLJ 3462.

[10645] ● Juvenile accused splitted and tried separately.—One error has been committed by the High Court by converting the conviction from Section 396 read with Section 149, IPC to one under Section 396 in aid of Section 34, IPC. It is in the evidence of PW-16 that the juvenile accused—Majnunath had disclosed to him that all the five accused participated in the murder of deceased—Vittal Shetty and Paul. As already noticed the trial of juvenile accused—Majnunath has been splitted. The trial Court, therefore, was right in convicting the appellants under Section 396, IPC read with Section 149, IPC. Anthony D'Souza v. State of Karnataka, AIR 2003 SC 258 : (2003) 1 SCC 259 : 2003 SCC (Cri) 292 : 2003 CrLJ 434.

[10646] ● Charge under Section 304-B, IPC established—Conviction held proper.—Where the deceased married to the appellant died within one year and two months of the marriage, there was evidence of dowry demand and ill-treatment by the appellant, injuries found on the neck of the deceased remained unexplained, held the charge under Section 304-B against the appellant was found established. The conviction of the appellant was sustained. Kamesh Panjiyar v. State of Bihar, AIR 2005 SC 785 : (2005) 2 SCC 388 : 2005 CrLJ 1418 (1422) : (2005) 1 Crimes 277.

CONVICTION OF MORE THAN ONE : NEED

[10647] ● Conviction of more than one : need.— The second situation is where two or more persons (e.g. A and B or A, B and C) are charged in the same indictment with conspiracy together (but not with others), and all but one of them (e.g. A) are acquitted, as can happen for example where evidence is admissible against one conspirator but not against another. At common law, A could nevertheless be convicted if he was tried separately from B (or B and C) but not if he was tried together with them. However, Section 5 (8) of the English Criminal Law Act, 1977 does not provide that the fact that the person or persons who, so far as appears from the indictment on which any person has been convicted of conspiracy, were the only other parties to the agreement on which his conviction was based have been acquitted of that conspiracy (whether after being tried with the person convicted or separately) is not ground for quashing his conviction unless under all the circumstances of the case his conviction is inconsistent with the acquittal of the other person or persons. So, the Indian and English Law on the point is alike. It may be recalled as stated by Kenny : though there must be a plurality of conspirators, it is not necessary that all should be brought to trial together. On person may be indicted, alone for conspiring with other persons, who are not in custody, or who are even unknown to the indictors. Indeed some of the conspirators may be unknown to the rest, provided all be acting under the directors of one leader. Kenny on Outlines of Criminal Law, 9th edn. p. 428 para 450.

[10648] ● Conviction of single person on charge of criminal conspiracy under Section 120-B, IPC.—It is settled law that when several persons are charged of the offence of criminal conspiracy under Section 120-B of the Penal Code and all the accused except one are acquitted, the conviction of the remaining one accused on that charge is illegal. The reason is that the definition of conspiracy requires that there must be an agreement to commit the act complained of between two or more persons, and one person cannot conspire with himself. However, the principle laid down in Topandas's case will apply only when the prosecution case is that the conspiracy was committed between the accused before the Court and none else, and that no person other than the accused, known or unknown, was concerned in the offence. The Principle cannot apply when according to the prosecution, persons other than the accused before the Court were also concerned in the conspiracy which is the subject-matter of the charge under Section 120-B. In other words, conviction of two or more persons is not always necessary for a charge under Section 120-B, and the conviction of a single accused on that charge is perfectly legal when the Court is satisfied that two or more persons of whom the accused is one were actually concerned in the conspiracy. In the present case, accused A who was a Government servant was charged under Section 120-B read with Sections 409 and 177-A and also for substantive offences under Sections 409 and 477-A, along with four other accused who were his subordinates. The prosecution case was that they all, and one other overseer who was made an approver in the case, entered into a conspiracy to misappropriate Government funds placed at their disposal, and that in pursuance of that conspiracy they misappropriated the money and falsified official records to cover up their actions. The Sessions Judge acquitted those four subordinates, by giving them the benefit of doubt, but convicted A on all the charges. On appeal, the High Court acquitted him of the substantive charges but confirmed his conviction under Section 120-B. The present case was clearly distinguishable from the decisions in Topandas v. State of Bombay, and the cases cited in that judgement, because in this case besides the four accused who were acquitted, there was also one other person who was clearly implicated in the conspiracy, namely the approver, and his evidence had been accepted by the High Court. Under these circumstances, the conviction of A alone on the charge under Section 120-B was perfectly legal and justified, even when all the other co-accused had been acquitted. Bimbadhar Pradhan v. State of Orissa, AIR 1956 SC 469 : 1956 CrLJ 831 : 1956 SCA 857 : 1956 SCJ 441 : ILR (1956) Cut 409 : 1956 AWR (Sup) 89 : 1956 (2) MLJ (SC) 93.

[10649] ● Conviction of one person for conspiracy.—When all the accused except one are acquitted of the charge under Section 120-B and the prosecution case has been that the offence was committed by them alone, conviction of the remaining single accused on that charge is illegal even though he may have made a confession of conspiracy with the co-accused, or he may have pleaded guilty to the charge when questioned in Court. In the present case four accused were charged before a Magistrate under Section 120-B read with Sections 471 and 420 and also with substantive offences under those sections. The prosecution case was that they conspired to use forged documents and thereby induced the Controller of Imports to grant import licences. The Magistrate acquitted all the accused on all the charges. On appeal by the State, the High Court confirmed the acquittal of Accused Nos. 2, 3 and 4 but reversed the acquittal of Accused No. 1 and convicted him not only of the substantive offences of which he was charged, but also under Section 120-B. In view of the fact that the charge under Section 120-B as framed was levelled against four named individuals who were the four accused in the case, and was not a charge against them and other persons unknown, the conviction of Accused No.1 alone on that charge was clearly illegal. Conviction under Section 120-B was set aside, though his conviction for the substantive offences under Sections 471 and 420, Penal Code, was not interfered with. Topan Das v. State of Bombay, AIR 1956 SC 33 : 1956 CrLJ 138 : 1956 SCA 74 : 1956 SCJ 86.

[10650] ● Conviction of single accused—Evidence and proof.—It is not essential that more then one person should be convicted of the offence of criminal conspiracy. It is enough if the Court is in a position to find that two or more persons were actually concerned in the criminal conspiracy. If the Courts below had come to the distinct finding that the evidence led on behalf of the prosecution was unreliable, then certainly no conviction could have been based on such evidence and all the accused would have been equally entitled to acquittal. But it cannot be held that the accused having been acquitted by the trial Court, the particular accused should not have been convicted because the evidence against all them was the same, when the Court is not satisfied that the acquittal of the other accused persons was entirely correct.. Bimbadhar Pradhan v. State of Orissa, AIR 1956 SC 469 : 1956 CrLJ 831 : 1956 SCA 857 : 1956 SCJ 441 : 1956 (2) MLJ (SC) 93.

[10651] ● Nothing illegal in conviction of single person under Section 120-B-IPC.—The offence of criminal conspiracy consists in the agreement to commit an offence, irrespective of whether the offence in respect of which, the conspiracy is hatched, is in fact committed or not. The very fact of the agreement constitutes the offence and nothing more needs to be proved to have been done in pursuance of the criminal agreement. If an accused has been charged under Section 120-B and also with a substantive offence and he has been acquitted of the charge in respect of the substantive offence, he cannot contend merely on that account, that he should also be acquitted of the charge under Section 120-B. In the present case A and four others were jointly tried for offences under Section 120-B read with Sections 409 and 477-A, and also under Sections 409 and 477-A substantively. The trial Court gave the benefit of doubt to all the other co-accused and acquitted them on all the charges, but convicted A on the same charges. On appeal the High Court acquitted him of the charges under Sections 409 and 477-A on technical grounds, but confirmed his conviction under Section 120-B. There is nothing illegal in the conviction of the accused either because he alone has been convicted under Section 120-B or because the charges for the substantive offences have failed. Bimbadhar Pradhan v. State of Orissa, AIR 1956 SC 469 : 1956 CrLJ 831 : 1956 SCA 857 : 1956 SCJ 441 : ILR (1956) Cut 409 : 1956 AWR (Sup) 89 : 1956 (2) MLJ (SC) 93.

[10652] ● Offence of conspiracy can not survive acquittal of alleged co-conspirators.—The offence of conspiracy cannot survive the acquittal of the alleged co-conspirators. Fakhruddin cannot be convicted unless there be proof that he had conspired with person or persons other than his co-accused. If all the other accused have been acquitted of the charge of conspiracy, Fakhruddin alone cannot be held guilty. Fakhruddin v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1967 SC 1326 : 1967 CrLJ 1197 : 1967 SCD 495 : (1967) 1 SCWR 449 : (1967) 2 SCA 135 : (1967) 2 SCJ 885 : 1967 AWR (HC) 322 : 1967 ALJ 303 : 1967 ACrR 222 : (1967) 2 ALT 38 : 1967 BLJR 318 : 1967 JabL J 441 : 1967 MPLJ 473 : 1967 Mah LJ 571 : 1967 MLJ (Cri) 925.

1. PERSON NEED NOT PARTICIPATE IN CONSPIRACY FROM START TO FINISH

[10653] ● Person need not participate in conspiracy from start to finish.—It is not necessary that a person should be a participant in a conspiracy from start of finish. Conspirators may appear and disappear from stage to stage in the course of a conspiracy. Raghuvir Singh v. State of Bihar, AIR 1987 SC 149 (158) : 1987 CrLJ 157.

COPIES OF DOCUMENTS

[10655] ● Refusal to supply copies of statements—Effect.—The right of an accused person to copies of the statements by prosecution witnesses to the police is derived from Sections 173(4), 207-A(3) and 251-A(1) of the Code as amended by Act 26 of 1955 (old Section 162). The very language of Section 173(4) and its being linked to Sections 207-A(3) and 251-A(1), makes it clear that the right extends only to statements which have been recorded in the same case only, and that the accused has no statutory right to police statements recorded in the investigation of another case. However, even though the accused has no right to demand a copy of the police statement of a witness who is examined in the case against him if such a statement has been recorded in another case yet, if at the time of such examination the accused is in possession of such a statement, there is nothing in law to prevent him from using that statement for the purpose of contradicting that witness in the manner provided by Section 145 of the Evidence Act. In such a case it cannot be pleaded by the prosecution that Section 162 of the Code operates as a bar to such use. Section 162 bars every use of a recorded police statement of a witness other than the use which can be made of it for the purpose of contradiction, and if that is the use to which such statement is being put, it is immaterial whether such statement was furnished to the accused in the same or in a different case. All that is denied to the accused is to demand, while he is under-trial in one case, the police statements of prosecution witnesses which have been recorded in another case. In the present case the accused who was a Police Jamadar was being tried for an offence under Section 384, Penal Code, for extorting moneys from certain villagers whose passports he had been checking. Previously to that the accused had lodged a charge-sheet against certain persons in the same village in respect of a complaint of robbery, and during the investigation of that case, his superior had recorded statements of those very persons who were prosecution witnesses in the present case. During the trial of the present case the accused demanded copies of those statements but his demand was turned down, and the trial proceeded without the accused getting an opportunity to contradict those witnesses whose statements recorded in the other case he did not possess. The trial resulted in conviction. There was nothing in the trial involving any irregularity or contravention of the rules of procedure, in the refusal to furnish the accused the record of the statements taken in the other case, since the only statutory right which the accused had was to obtain copies of statements recorded only in very case under trial. However if he had possessed those statements, he would have been perfectly entitled to utilize them for the purpose of contradiction. Purshottam Jethanand v. State of Kutch, AIR 1954 SC 700 : 1954 CrLJ 1751.

[10656] ● Objection to furnish copier of Police statement of witnesses.—Though there is no statutory obligation to furnish the accused copies of police statements of witnesses recorded in another case even if it be a connected case, it is desirable to furnish to him such copies in the interest of justice. However, even assuming that the omission to do so is a material irregularity, the effect of such omission, at worst, could only be the same as the effect of a similar omission as to furnishing the statements recorded in the same case, and no more. Gurbachan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1957 SC 623 : (1957) SCC 359 : 1957 CrLJ 1009 : 1957 SCJ 539 : 1957 SCA 856 : (1957) 1 MLJ (Cri) 488 : 1957 AWR (HC) 651.

[10657] ● Copies of statement recorded by Police not furnished.—The language of the new Section 173(4), in contrast with the language of the old Section 162, clearly shows that now the accused is entitled to be furnished copies of statements recorded by the police as of right, and it is no longer necessary for him to request the Court to furnish him with these copies. The obvious object of the amendment is to put the accused on full notice at the very commencement of the inquiry or trial of the prosecution case which he has to meet in the proceeding against him, and with that in view, it is further provided in Sections 207-A(3) and 251-A(1) that the Magistrate before whom the accused is brought shall satisfy himself before commencing the proceeding that the provisions of Section 173(4) have been duly complied with and that the accused has been furnished with all the documents to which he is now entitled to as of right. The combined effect of these three provisions is that ample provision is now made in the Code to see that the accused is put in possession of all the relevant police record before the very commencement of the proceedings against him. Therefore when in a particular case, the appellate Court finds that during the trial the accused has not been furnished copies of the statements of the prosecution witnesses recorded by the police, that fact in itself cannot vitiate the trial. The Court must go into the further question as to whether the accused was in fact prejudiced in his defence as a result of the denial of his right to him. For that purpose the Court must look into all the facts and circumstances of the case, and must call for the police record and itself peruse the police statements of those witnesses. Thereafter, if the Court finds that there are discrepancies between those statements and the depositions of the witnesses at the trial and that these discrepancies are of a serious nature, prejudice must be held to have been established, because in such a case the accused has been denied the opportunity of discrediting those witnesses by bringing on record the contradictions which exist between their evidence in Court and their earlier statements recorded by the police. On the other hand, if on such perusal of the police record, it is found that there are no such contradictions between the two statements as would warrant an inference that the accused was prejudiced by the omission to furnish him copies of the police record, it must be held that though a grave irregularity occurred during the trial as a result of the non-observance of a mandatory rule of procedure, such irregularity has not occasioned any such failure of justice as would demand the setting aside of the conviction and an order for a re-trial. In such a case the irregularity, though grave, must be held to have been cured by Section 537 of the Code. As said above, in the ultimate end, the matter turns upon the question whether the accused did or did not have a fair trial. Applying these principles, and after perusing the police record, this Court refuses to interfere with conviction, because it is found that there were no such material contradictions between it and the evidence given at the trial as would warrant a finding that the accused had been prejudiced as a result of the omission to furnish him the copies of the police statements of the witnesses on whose evidence in Court the conviction is based. Gurbachan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1957 SC 623 : 1957 CrLJ 1009 : 1957 SCJ 539 : 1957 SCA 856 : (1957) 1 MLJ (Cri) 488 : 1957 AWR (HC) 651.

[10658] ● Propositions of Section 173(4) and Section 207A not mandatory.—Introduction of the new Section 207-A into the Code is meant to simplify committed proceedings so that the Magistrate can frame a charge straightaway after perusing the documents on which the prosecution relies and examining such witnesses as the prosecution may produce. As against this the accused is given the right to show that the documents produced by the police and on which they rely do not disclose any ground for an order of committal. It is for the purpose of enabling the accused to exercise this right adequately that new Sections 173(4) and 207-A(3) have been added to the Code so that the accused can now obtain possession of the whole police record on which the prosecution relies for its case against him, at the very commencement of the inquiry proceeding, and for this purpose a duty is cast upon the Magistrate himself to see to it that the provisions of these sections have been duly complied with by the prosecution and the accused is not denied any opportunity of contesting the case against him for want of the documents on which the prosecution relies. Therefore, even when it is found by the Court of Appeal in any case that the accused had not been furnished at his trial with the copies of the police statements of the prosecution witnesses to which he is entitled under the Code, it cannot be said straightaway that the entire trial was vitiated by such omission. It has further to be considered whether the omission to supply to the accused the copies to which he was entitled has in fact occasioned a prejudice to him in his defence. For that purpose, the Court must scrutinize the police record for itself, and if it is found that the contradictions of which the accused has lost advantage by reason of his ignorance of their existence were material, then it must be held that the omission has occasioned a failure of justice by denying to him the opportunity to bring those contradictions on the record. In such a case, conviction must be set aside, and a fair re-trial after furnishing to the accused all the copies to which he is entitled must be ordered. On the other hand, if the scrutiny of the police record does not reveal any such material as could have been of substantial use of the accused for the purpose of contradicting the prosecution witnesses, it must be held that the omission to supply the police statements to the accused at the trial has not occasioned any prejudice to him in his defence, and the irregularity must be treated as cured by Section 537 of the Code. Narayan Rao v. State of A.P., AIR 1957 SC 737 : 1957 CrLJ 1320 : 1957 SCA 932 : 1957 SCJ 727 : 1958 ALJ 121 : (1957) 2 MLJ (SC) 139 : (1957) 1 MLJ (Cri) 690 : 1957 AWR (Supp) 109 : 1958 ALT 100 : 1958 MPC 1 : 1957 (2) AWR (SC) 139.

[10659] ● Supply of copies of Police record to accused.—Sections 173(4), 207-A(3) and 251-A(1), are the only provisions in the Code which relate to the supply of copies of the police record to the accused. The right conferred on the accused is confined to the documents enlisted in Section 173(4), and his right to obtain copies does not extend to any other documents. By its very language Section 173(4) applies only to statements recorded in the same case, and not to statements recorded in another case, even though that case be a connected case. Therefore, if during his trial the accused has demanded copies of the statements of the prosecution witnesses recorded by the police in another case which is connected with the case under trial, and such copies have not been furnished to him, and then the trial results in conviction, it is not open to the accused to plead before the appellate Court that there has been any illegality or irregularity at the trial, and hence the question of prejudice does not at all arise. However, there is nothing in the Code which forbids the furnishing of such copies to the accused, and it is desirable in the interest of justice that he should be furnished, on demand by him, copies of statements of prosecution witnesses recorded even in another case if it is a case connected with the case under trial; this is particularly so, when the statements of those witnesses have not been recorded at all in the case under trial. But apart from a consideration of these statutory provisions, even on general principles, the same conclusion has to be reached. The filing of a certified copy has a definite purpose. The copy has to be considered by the appellate Court or the purpose of founding a judicial decision thereon, and it is obvious that any decision of a Court has to be based on authentic material only, and the only way in which the authenticity of a copy furnished to the appellate Court can be guaranteed is by requiring a copy carefully compared with the original and duly certified by a responsible officer of the Court. For all these reasons it must be held that the "copy" contemplated by Section 419 of the old Code is a "certified copy", and not merely a plain copy or transcript of the original, and that the requirements of Section 419 are not complied with if the copy attached to the petition of appeal is only a plain copy. State of U.P. v. C-Tobit, AIR 1958 SC 414 : 1958 CrLJ 809 : 1958 SCR 1275 : 1958 MLJ (Cri) 562.

[10661] ● Failure to supply copies of statements of witnesses to accused.—These provisions contained in Sections 161, 162, 173(4) and 207A(3) provide a valuable safeguard to the accused and denial thereof may be justified only in exceptional circumstances. The provisions relating to the recording of the statements of the witnesses and supply of their copies to the accused so that they may be utilized by him at the trial for effectively defending himself cannot normally be permitted to be whittled down. Where the circumstances are such that the Court may reasonably infer that a prejudice has resulted to the accused from the failure to comply with these provisions, the Court would be justified in directing that the conviction be set aside, and in a proper case to direct that the defect be rectified in such manner as the circumstance may warrant. Failure to supply copies will not by itself render the trial illegal. The Court must in each case consider the nature of the defect, and the circumstances which lead to an inference of prejudice, and the strength of the inference of prejudice must always be adjudged having regard to the circumstances of each case. Noor Khan v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1964 SC 286 : 1964 (1) CrLJ 167 : 1964 SCD 395.

[10662] ● Failure to furnish statements of witnesses recorded in course of investigation not to vitiate trial.—Failure to furnish statements of witnesses recorded in the course of investigation may not vitiate the trial on that account alone. The failure does not affect the jurisdiction of the Court to try the case put up before it, nor is the failure by itself a ground which affects the power of the Court to record a conviction, if the evidence before it warrants such a course. Noor Khan v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1964 SC 286 : 1964 (1) CrLJ 167.

[10664] ● Trial protracted for 20 years—Copies of statements recorded during investigation in 1946 not furnished.—Statements recorded during investigation in 1946 were not traceable and the copies thereof admittedly could not be furnished to the respondent. That meant that a statutory right, unquestionably the most valuable to an accused, was denied to the respondent, a right, the exercise of which alone, could have been given to him an effective opportunity to test the veracity of the evidence led by the prosecution. The denial of such a right gains considerable significance in view of the long lapse of time due to which the respondent would, if furnished with copies of the witnesses' police statements, have probably been in a position to establish that in some cases at least the witnesses' memory of the alleged events which took place as early as 1946 had failed, or in any event, was not such as could be relied upon for the success of the prosecution case. State of U.P. v. Kapil Deo Shukla, AIR 1973 SC 494 : (1972) 3 SCC 504 : 1972 SCC (Cri) 597 (602) : 1972 CrLJ 1214.

[10665] ● Omission to supply copies of statement of prosecution witnesses.—The trials were separate. It was open to Bajid accused to inspect the record of Rao's case (the other case) if necessary, with the permission of the Court, and copy out those statements or secure certified copies in accordance with law and use them, if necessary, in cross-examination of those witnesses who also appeared against him. There is no question of any violation of any provision of law or of any settled principle for not supplying the copies of other file, with the result that in our opinion the High Court was wrong in holding Bajid's defence to have been prejudiced by the omission on the part of the prosecution to supply him copies of statements of prosecution witnesses in the other case (Rao's case). State of Assam v. Krishna Rao, AIR 1973 SC 28 : (1973) 3 SCC 227 : 1973 SCC (Cri) 222 (235, 236) : 1973 CrLJ 169 : 1973 CrLR (SC) 304 : 1973 Cr App R (SC) 48 : (1973) 2 SCR 239.

[10666] ● No form prescribed for representation by detenu.—Under Article 22(5) no proforma for representation has been prescribed and a request for release of detenue, therefore, has to be deemed a representation, so also a request to supply copies of documents etc. Opportunity to make a representation comprehends a request for supply of translated copies. Shalini Soni v. Union of India, AIR 1981 SC 431 : (1980) 4 SCC 544 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 38 : 1980 CrLJ 1487. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Kubic Dureisz v. Union of India, AIR 1990 SC 605 : (1990) 1 SCC 568 : 1990 CrLJ 796.

[10667] ● Accused entitled to get copies of statements of witnesses.—An accused is undoubtedly entitled to have copies of the statements recorded by the Police. This is very valuable right because without having the statements recorded by the Police in possession, it would be difficult, if not impossible for an accused to defind himself effectively. If an accused is not supplied either the statements recorded by the Police or the statements of witnesses recorded at the inquiry or the trial, how can he possibly defend himself and instruct his lawyer to cross-examine the witnesses successfully and effectively so as to disprove the prosecution case. We, therefore, think that Section 14 of the Official, Secrets Act could never have intended to take away or deprive an accused of this valuable right which has been conferred on him by the criminal law of the land. The said Section 14 does not prohibit the giving of copies of statement as referred to above to the accused. The lawyer is not prohibited from taking the statements in extenso and has a duty to show the same to the Court. Superintendent and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs, West Bengal v. Satyen Bhowmick, AIR 1981 SC 917 : (1981) 2 SCC 109 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 342 (351, 352) : 1981 CrLJ 341 : 1981 CrLR (SC) 136.

[10668] ● Refusal to supply copies of documents forming basis of detention.—In the instant case, the person detained under Section 3(1) of COFEPOSA applied for the supply of copies of the documents forming the material on which the order of detention had been made but they were refused to be supplied to him. Nor were the grounds supplied to the detenue accompanied by the copies of documents forming the basis thereof. The detention is bad in law. Gurdeep Singh v. Union of India, (1981) 1 SCC 419 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 168 : 1981 CrLJ 2.

[10669] ● Failure to supply copies of documents vitiate detention.—This Court has repeatedly held in several decisions that the failure to supply copies of the documents referred to and relied upon in the grounds of detention for the purpose of detention under conservation of Foreign Exchange and Prevention of Smuggling Activities Act, 1974 vitiates the detention itself. Union of India v. Haji Mastan Mirza, AIR 1984 SC 681 : (1984) 2 SCC 427 : 1984 SCC (Cri) 271 (276, 277) : 1984 CrLJ 610 : 1984 CrLR (SC) 117 : (1984) 1 Crimes 651.

[10670] ● Non-supply of documents not substitute for copies of documents.—The explanation was the non-supply of the documents cannot be a substitute for the copies of the documents without which the respondents could not have made any effective representation against his detention. Union of India v. Haji Mastan Mirza, AIR 1984 SC 681 : (1984) 2 SCC 427 : 1984 SCC (Cri) 271 (276) : 1984 CrLJ 610 : 1984 CrLR (SC) 117 : (1984) 1 Crimes 651.

[10671] ● Non-supply of copies of statements made before Police.—"…….even the statements made before the Police were recorded four months after the occurrence. Copies of these statements were not made available to the defence on the spacious plea that the prosecution did not seek to rely on these statements. The Trial Court was wholly wrong in taking the view that it was not necessary to make available these statements to the defence for the purposes of cross-examination inasmuch as the prosecution did not wish to rely on these statements. The defence cannot be deprived of or denied the right to avail of these statements in order to test the evidence of the concerned witness or confront him with his earlier version in case the evidence in Court is inconsistent with the earlier statements made before the Police." Lalchand v. State of Haryana, AIR 1984 SC 226 : (1984) 1 SCC 686 : 1984 SCC (Cri) 355 (358) : 1984 CrLJ 164 : 1984 Cr App R (SC) 113 : (1984) 1 Crimes 337.

[10672] ● Failure to supply copies to defence.—In this case the High Court did not, realise that the defence has been wrongly deprived of a very valuable right, even though a grievance was made in this behalf. The High Court might well have directed the prosecution to make available the copies of the statement to the defence. Failing compliance, the High Court could have drawn an adverse inference. In case the copies were furnished, the High Court upon a request being made in this behalf could have directed the learned Sessions Judge to record additional evidence by recalling PW-5 for cross-examination in the light of the said statements if the High Court was satisfied that the ends of justice so demanded. Lalchand v. State of Haryana, AIR 1984 SC 226 : (1984) 1 SCC 686 : 1984 SCC (Cri) 355 (358) : 1984 CrLJ 164 : 1984 Cr App R (SC) 113 : (1984) 1 Crimes 337.

[10673] ● Asking for copies of documents amounted to representation.—"…….. the detenu's representation asking for copies of documents must be held to have amounted to a representation and it was mandatory on the part of the appropriate Government to consider and act upon it at the earliest opportunity and failure to do so would be fatal to the detention order." Kubic Dariusz v. Union of India, AIR 1990 SC 605 : (1990) 1 SCC 568 : 1990 SCC (Cri) 227 (238) : 1990 CrLJ 796 : 1990 CrLR (SC) 178 : JT 1990 (1) SC 38 : (1990) 1 SCR 98.

[10674] ● Detenues entitled to documents taken into consideration while formulating grounds of detention.—In the instant case, it is specifically mentioned that "these documents were not placed before the detaining authority nor the detaining authority has relied upon these documents while issuing the detention order. The detenues would have been entitled to any document which was taken into consideration while formulating the grounds of detention but mere mentioning the fact that certain searches were carried out in the course of investigation which have no relevance to the detention of the detenus, cannot cast an obligation on the detaining authority to supply copies of these documents. Much less can an obligation be cast on the detaining authority to supply copies of these documents in Tamil Language. Kamrunnissa v. Union of India, AIR 1991 SC 1640 : (1991) 1 SCC 128 : 1991 SCC (Cri) 88 (101, 102) : 1991 CrLJ 2058.

[10675] ● Detenus not supplied copies of documents in time on demand.—It is not sufficient to say that the detenus were not supplied the copies of the documents in time on demand but it must further be shown that the non-supply has impaired the detenu's right to make an effective and purposeful representation. Demand of any or every documents, however irrelevant it may be for the concerned detenu, merely on the ground that there is a reference thereto in the grounds of detention cannot vitiate an otherwise legal detention order. No hard and fast rule can be laid down in this behalf but what is essential is that the detenu must show that the failure to supply the documents before the meeting of the Advisory Board had impaired or prejudiced his right, however slight or insignificant it may be. In the present case, except stating that the documents were not supplied before the meeting of the Advisory Board, there is no pleading that it had resulted in the impairment of his right nor could Counsel for the petitioners point out any such prejudice. Kamarunnissa v. Union of India, AIR 1991 SC 1640 : (1991) 1 SCC 128 : 1991 SCC (Cri) 88 (102) : 1991 CrLJ 2058.

CORPUS DELICTI

[10676] ● Proof—Necessity.—Sometimes there may not be any distinction between proof of the fact of the crime and the proof of actor of it. The evidence of the corpus delicti and the guilt of the person charged of an offence many a time is so interconnected that one cannot be separated from the other. The same evidence often applies to both the fact of the crime and the individuality of the person who committed it. Prithi v. State of Haryana, (2010) 8 SCC 536 : 2010 (3) Crimes 225.

1. ACCOMPLICE'S EVIDENCE : RULE OF NON-ACCEPTANCE WITHOUT CORROBORATION

[10677] ● Accomplice's evidence : Rule of non-acceptance without corroboration.—Detailing the development the Supreme Court in a case Balwant Kaur v. Union Territory, AIR 1988 SC 139 (142) : 1988 CrLJ 398 (401) states : Historically, in the background of the political trials since the time of Henry VIII where 'King's Evidence was the main dependence of the crown in its prosecutions, the question of the very admissibility of the evidence of the accomplice loomed large. In the 17th and the 18th centuries, it was ruled repeatedly by the English Courts that an accomplice was a competent witness. His 'credit' of the sufficiency of his evidence as a quantitative conception, however, remained in the background. These were days when 'form' predominated over the 'substance' and the oath had a dead weight of its own. It was for this reason that struggle was made to keep out this evidence even at threshold. On the further development in the law which slowly began to recognise the distinction between 'competency' and 'credit', WIGMORE says on Evidence, 3rd Ed., Vol-VII, Para 2054 : As time went on, and the modern conception of testimony developed, the possibility of admitting a witness and yet discriminating as to the qualitative sufficiency of his testimony became more apparent; and the way was open for the consideration of this question. In a few instance, as the 1700s were on, and even before then, judicial suggestions are found as to feasibility of such a discrimination. But not until the end of that century does any Court seem to have acted upon such a suggestion in its directions to the jury. About that time there comes into acceptance a general practice to discourage a conviction founded solely upon the testimony of an accomplice uncorroborated. But was this practice founded on a rule of law? Never, in England, until modern times. It was recognised constantly that the judge's instruction upon this point was a mere exercise of his common law function of advising the jury upon the weight of the evidence, and was not a statement of a rule of law binding upon the jury. An accomplice, by long tradition, is a notoriously infamous witness, one who being particeps criminis, purchases his immunity by accepting to accuse others. Section 114, Illustration (b) of the Evidence Act envisages the presumptive uncreditworthiness of an accomplice. But then Section 133 provides that a conviction is not illegal merely because it rests upon an accomplice's uncorroborated testimony. Rameshwar Kalyan Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54 : 1952 CrLJ 547 : 1952 SCJ 46 : 1952 SCR 377 : 1952 SCA 40 (SC) : (1952) 1 Mad LJ 440 : 65 Mad LW 351 : 1952 Mad WN 150 : 1952 Mad WN (Cri) 26.

2. APPRECIATION OF EVIDENCE OF APPROVER

[10678] ● Appreciation of evidence of approver.—It is impossible, indeed it would be dangerous, to formulate the kind of evidence which should or would be regarded as corroboration. Its nature and extent must necessarily vary with the circumstances of each case and also according to the particular circumstances of the offence charged. Rameshwar v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54 : 1952 CrLJ 547.

[10679] ● Evidence of accomplice corroboration.—First, it is not necessary that there should be independent confirmation of every material circumstance in the sense that the independent evidence in the case, apart from the testimony of the complainant or the accomplice, should in itself be sufficient to sustain conviction. As Lord Reading says : "Indeed, if it were required that the accomplice should be confirmed in every detail of the crime, his evidence would not be essential to the case; it would be merely confirmatory of other and independent testimony." Rameshwar v. State of Rajasthan (Baskerville case), AIR 1952 SC 54 : 1952 CrLJ 547 : All ER p. 42 B-C.

[10680] ● Evidence of accomplice corroboration.—But, it is clear that—

(1) there need not be independent confirmation of every material circumstance in the sense that the independent evidence in the case, apart from the testimony of the complainant or the accomplice should in itself be sufficient to sustain conviction; all that is required is, that there must be some additional evidence rendering it probable that the story of the accomplice (or complainant) is true and that it is reasonably safe to act upon it;

(2) the independent evidence must not only make it safe to believe that the crime was committed, but must, in some way, reasonably connect, or tend to connect, the accused with it by confirming, in some material particular, the testimony of the accomplice or complainant that the accused committed the crime;

(3) the corroboration must come from independent sources; ordinarily the testimony of one accomplice would not be sufficient to corroborate that of another;

(4) the corroboration need not be made by direct evidence that the accused committed the crime, which is sufficient, if it is merely circumstantial, establishing his connection with the crime. Rameshwar v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54 : 1952 CrLJ 547. To the same effect : (1) State of Maharashtra v. Chandraprakash Kewalchand Jain, AIR 1990 SC 658 : (1990) 1 SCC 550 : 1990 CrLJ 889 (SC); (2) Abdul Sattar v. Union Territory, Chandigarh, AIR 1986 SC 1438 : 1985 Supp SCC 599 : 1986 CrLJ 1072; (3) Tribhuvan Nath v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1973 SC 450 : 1972 CrLJ 1277 : (1972) 3 SCC 511; (4) G.S. Bakshi v. State (Delhi Admn.), AIR 1979 SC 569 : (1978) 4 SCC 482 : 1979 CrLJ 476.

[10681] ● Approver—Testimony of—Tests of credibility.—"The problem posed by the evidence given by an approver has been considered by the Privy Council and Courts in India on several occasions. It is hardly necessary to deal at length with the true legal position in this matter. An accomplice is undoubtedly a competent witness under the Indian Evidence Act. There can be however, no doubt that the very fact that he has participated in the commission of the offence introduces a serious stain in his evidence and Courts are naturally reluctant to act on such tainted evidence unless it is corroborated in material particulars by other independent evidence. It would not be right to expect that such independent corroboration should cover the whole of the prosecution story or even all the material particulars. If such a view is adopted, it would render the evidence of the accomplice wholly superfluous. On the other hand, it would not be safe to act upon such evidence merely because it is corroborated the particulars or incidental details because, in such a case, corroboration does not afford the necessary assurance that the main story disclosed by the approver can be reasonably and safely accepted as true. But it must never be forgotten that before the Court reaches the stage of considering the question of corroboration and its adequacy or otherwise, the first initial and essential question to consider is, whether even as an accomplice, the approver is a reliable witness. If the answer to the question is against the approver, then there is an end of the matter, and no question, as to whether evidence is corroborated or not, falls to be considered. In other words, the appreciation of an approver's evidence has to satisfy a double test. His evidence must show that he is a reliable witness and that is a test which is common to all witnesses. If this test is satisfied, the second test which still remains to be applied is that the approver's evidence must receive sufficient corroboration. This test is special to the cases of weak or tainted evidence like that of an approver. Sarwan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1957 SC 637 : 1957 CrLJ 1014 : 1957 SCJ 699. To the same effect : (1) Lacchi Ram v. State of Punjab, AIR 1967 SC 792 : (1967) 1 SCR 243; (2) Sheshamma Bhumanna v.

State of Maharashtra, AIR 1970 SC 1330 (1333) : 1970 CrLJ 1158 : (1971) 2 SC Cr R 9 : (1971) 1 SCR 617 : 1971 SCD 115 : (1971) 1 SCJ 556 : 1971 MLJ (Cri) 274 : 73 Bom LR 806 : 1970 KLT 669; (3) Piara Singh v. State, AIR 1969 SC 961 (965) : (1969) 1 SCC 379 : 1970 SC Cr R 112 : (1969) 3 SCR 236 : (1969) 2 SCR 318 : 1969 SCD 919 : 1969 MLJ (Cri) 871.

[10682] ● Accomplice witnesses—Corroboration.—As regards corroboration of accomplice witnesses, it is not necessary that there should be independent corroboration of every material circumstance. All that is required is that there must be some additional evidence, rendering it probable that the story of the accomplice or the complainant is true, and that it is reasonably safe to act upon it. The corroboration need not be direct evidence. It is sufficient, if it is merely circumstantial evidence of the connection of the accused with the crime. Ramanlal v. State of Bombay, AIR 1960 SC 961 : 1960 CrLJ 1380.

[10683] ● Approver's evidence—Admissibility.—"This Court could not have intended to lay down that the evidence of an approver and the corroborating pieces of evidence should be treated in two different compartments, that is to say, the Courts shall have first to consider the evidence of the approver de hors the corroborated pieces of evidence and reject it if it comes to the conclusion that his evidence is unreliable, but if it comes to the conclusion that it is reliable then it will have to consider whether that evidence is corroborated by any other evidence. This Court did not lay down any such proposition. In that case, it happened that the evidence of the approver was so thoroughly discrepant that the Court thought that he has a wholly unreliable witness. But, in most of the cases, the said two aspects would be so interconnected that it would not be possible to give a separate treatment, for as often as not the reliability of an approver's evidence, though not exclusively, would mostly depend upon the corroborative support it derives from other unimpeachable pieces of evidence. We must also make it clear that we are not equating the evidence of Lawrence with that of an approver; nor did the Special Judge or the High Court put him exactly on that footing. The learned Special Judge in his judgment observed : "He (Lawrence) is obviously decoy or spy and agent provocateur and his evidence will have, therefore, to be approached with great caution and much weight cannot be attached to it unless it is corroborated by other independent evidence and circumstances in the case………. . Not being tainted evidence, it would not suffer from a disability of being unworthy of acceptance without independent corroboration. But being interested evidence, caution requires that there should be corroboration from an independent source before its acceptance. To convict an accused on the tainted evidence of an accomplice is not illegal but it is imprudent; to convict an accused person upon the partisan evidence of a person, at whose instance a trap is laid by the police, is neither illegal nor imprudent but inadvisable……… . Shri Lawrence's evidence can, therefore, be accepted and relied upon, only if it is corroborated by other independent evidence and circumstances in the case." The learned Judges of the High Court practically adopted the same attitude in the manner of their approach to the evidence of Lawrence. The learned Judges observed : "To convict an accused person upon the partisan evidence of a person at whose instance a trap is laid by the police is neither illegal nor imprudent, because it is just possible that in some cases an accomplice may give evidence because he may have a feeling in his own mind that it is a condition of his pardon to give that evidence, but no such consideration obtains in the case of the evidence of a person who is not a guilty associate in crime but who invites the police to lay a trap. All the same, as the person who lodges information with the police for the purpose of laying a trap for another, is a partisan witness interested in seeing that the trap succeeds, it would be necessary and advisable to look for corroboration to his evidence before accepting it. But the degree of corroboration in the case of a tainted evidence of an accomplice would be higher than that in the case of a partisan witness. In our opinion, all these decisions would clearly establish that it would not be safe to rely on the evidence of Lawrence who is admittedly a decoy or trap witness, without his testimony being corroborated from independent sources." Even Mr. Amin, learned Special Counsel, on behalf of the State, asked the Courts to proceed to examine the evidence of Lawrence on the basis that he was a decoy or trap witness. We are definitely of opinion that both the Courts had approached the evidence of Lawrence from a correct standpoint. Though Lawrence was not an approver, he was certainly as interested witness in the sense that he was interested to see that the trap laid by him succeeded. He could at least be equated with a partisan witness and it would not be admissible to rely upon such evidence without corroboration. It would be equally clear that the evidence was not a tainted one, but it would only make a difference in the degree of corroboration required rather than the necessity for it. Major E.G. Barsay v. State of Bombay, AIR 1961 SC 1762 (1780) : (1961) 2 CrLJ 828.

[10684] ● Accomplice's evidence—Court not to accept unless corroborated in material particulars.—Reading Section 133 and III(b) to Section 114 together, the Courts in India have held that, whilst it is not illegal to act upon the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice, it is a rule of prudence so universally followed as to amount almost to a rule of law that it is unsafe to act upon the evidence of an accomplice unless it is corroborated in material respect so as to implicate the accused : and further ordinarily that the evidence of one accomplice cannot be used to corroborate the evidence of another accomplice. But an exception can arise. The Supreme Court has held that if several accomplices, simultaneously and without previous concert, give a consistent account of the crime implicating the accused, the Court may accept the several statements as corroborating each other. Mohd. Hussain Umar v. K.S. Dalipsinghji, AIR 1970 SC 45 : (1969) 3 SCC 429 : 1970 CrLJ 9 : (1970) 1 SCJ 149 : (1970)) 1 SCR 130.

[10685] ● Approver's evidence—Reliability.—When the approver gave his police statement he did not know that he would be granted pardon and possibly for that reason had not come out with all the facts known to him and he did so while he was making his statement before the Magistrate as he knew by then that he would be tendered pardon on condition that he would disclose all the facts known to him. The omission in the police statement, therefore, by itself would not necessarily have rendered his evidence unreliable. In considering whether the approver's evidence passed the test of reliability, the Court would have to consider whether taken as a whole and in the light of the facts and circumstances of the case it was a credible version or not. Madan Mohan Lal v. State of Punjab, AIR 1970 SC 1006 : (1970) 2 SCC 733 : 1970 SCC (Cri) 509 : 1970 CrLJ 898.

[10686] ● Corroboration to connect accused with crime.—The nature of corroboration is that it is confirmatory evidence and it may consist of evidence of a second witness or of circumstances like the conduct of the person against whom it is required. Corroboration must connect the accused with the crime. It is not enough if a piece of evidence tends to confirm the truth of a part of the testimony to be corroborated. Bhumanna v. State, AIR 1970 SC 1330 : 1970 CrLJ 1158 : (1971) 1 SCJ 556 : (1971) 1 Mad LJ (Cri) 274 : (1971) 1 SCR 617 : 73 Bom LR 806.

[10687] ● Evidence of accused when hold to be as accomplice evidence.—Statement of approver that he did not disclose to anyone about his participation in offence before he was arrested is quite natural for he is not expected to make it public. No adverse inference from this conduct can be drawn. Approver making application for obtaining pardon three months after his arrest-no adverse inference can be drawn. Evidence of accomplice is required to be reliable and the Court should also see if it has been corroborated in material particulars by other independent evidence either direct or circumstantial. Tribhuban Nath v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1973 SC 450 : (1972) 3 SCC 511 : 1972 CrLJ 1277 : 1972 SCD 571 : 1972 Cr App R 257 (SC) : (1972) 38 Cut LT 683. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Abdul Sattar v. Union Territory, Chandigarh, 1985 Supp SCC 599 : (1985) SCC (Cri) 505 : 1986 CrLJ 1072 (SC) : (1986) 1 Supreme 214 : 1985 All Cr C 427 : 1985 All Cr R 522.

[10688] ● Court to seek corroboration of approver's is evidence.—Courts should seek corroboration of the testimony of accomplice as a rule of prudence. The corroborating evidence must connect the accused with the offence charged. Ram Narayan v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1973 SC 1188 : (1973) 3 SCC 805 : 1973 CrLJ 914 : 1973 CrLR (SC) 228 : 1973 SCR 463.

[10689] ● Approver unworthy friend.—An approver is a most unworthy friend and he having bargained for his immunity must pass two tests in proving his credibility in Court, namely, that the story he relates involves him in the crime and appears intrinsically to be a natural and probable catalogue of events that had taken place. Secondly, the story given by the approver so far as the accused on trial is concerned must implicate him in such a manner as to give rise to a conclusion of guilt beyond doubt. Ravinder Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1975 SC 856 : (1975) 3 SCC 742 : 1975 CrLJ 765.

[10690] ● Approver or accomplice evidence—Test of reliability.—The first test of reliability of approver or accomplice evidence is for the Court to be satisfied that there is nothing inherently impossible in the evidence after that corroboration becomes necessity. Sarwan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1975 SC 637 : 1975 CrLJ 1014. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Lachiram v. State of Punjab, AIR 1967 SC 792 : 1967 CrLJ 671.

[10691] ● Approver evidence when adequately corroborated.—When approver's evidence is adequately corroborated, conviction in murder case can be given. But so far as approver's evidence is concerned there is always a tendency to minimise one's own part and shift and assign the dominant role in the commission of the offence to accused. There death sentence may be reduced to life sentence. Subramaniam v. State of T.N., AIR 1975 SC 139 : (1975) 3 SCC 414 : 1974 SCC (Cri) 40 : 1975 CrLJ 226.

[10692] ● Approver evidence to be corroborated.—Ordinarily approver's evidence is to be corroborated in material particulars bridging closely the distance between the crime and criminal, yet in rare cases conviction is not illegal merely because it proceeds on uncorroborated testimony of accomplices. Ravinder v. State of Haryana, AIR 1975 SC 856 : (1975) 3 SCC 742 : 1975 CrLJ 765.

[10693] ● Approver evidence—Guidelines.—In regard to the evidence of an approver the guidelines are : (1) according to Section 133 of the Indian Evidence Act, an approver is a competent witness and conviction shall not be illegal if based upon an uncorroborated testimony of the approver; (2) according to the illustration (b) of Section 114, Evidence Act, the Court may presume that an approver is a man of untrustworthiness unless he is corroborated in material particulars; (3) Court should not ordinarily convict unless the evidence of the approver is corroborated in material particulars qua the accused, and if more than one, qua each accused; (4) such corroboration can be direct and circumstantial; (5) if the evidence of an approver is intrinsically or inherently impossible or is otherwise unreliable or unacceptable, it should be rejected straightway without caring to seek corroboration; (6) there are several circumstances by which the reliability of an approver has to be adjudged; one important test of reliability is that he is corroborated by other evidence in material particulars; and (7) the approver should be particeps criminis on his own admission or appear to be so by evidence. Data Ram v. State of Rajasthan, 1977 CrLJ 1428 (All Supreme Court cases upto the time reviewed.)

[10694] ● Approver evidence—Evidentiary value of.—Approver's evidence when is exculpatory and contains intrinsic infirmities, no conviction thereon can be sustained. Jaga Gola v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1982 SC 1227 : 1981 Supp SCC 66 : 1982 SCC (Cri) 141 : 1982 CrLJ 1579.

[10695] ● Accomplice turning an approver.—When an accomplice turns to be an approver about 20 months after the offence being committed and he is sought to be corroborated by the victim (here a lady involved in a cheating) who even in her FIR omitted to mention the names of the accused persons despite knowing their role in the conspiracy to cheat her, conviction cannot be sustained. Lalchand v. State of Haryana, AIR 1984 SC 226 : (1984) 1 SCC 686 : 1984 CrLJ 164 : (1984) 1 Crimes 337.

[10696] ● Approver competent witness.—An approver is a competent witness, but on his uncorroborated testimony it would be risky to base conviction particularly in respect of serious charge like murder. Abdul Sattar v. Union Territory of Chandigarh, AIR 1986 SC 1483 : (1986) 2 SCC 86 : 1986 SCC (Cri) 104 : 1986 CrLJ 1072 : 1986 CrLJ 180 (SC) : 1986 (2) Crimes 253.

[10697] ● Evidence of approver—Corroboration.—The approver's evidence must show that he is a reliable witness. This test is common to all the witnesses. If this test is fulfilled, his evidence should be corroborated in material particulars to connect each of the accused persons with the commission of the offence. If the testimony of the approver is itself uninspiring and unacceptable justifying its outright rejection, it would be futile and unnecessary to look for corroborative evidence. It is only when the approver's evidence is considered otherwise acceptable that the Court applies its mind to the rule that his testimony needs corroboration in material particulars connecting or tending to connect each one of the accused persons with the commission of the crime charged. An approver is a most unworthy friend, if at all and he having bargained for his immunity, must prove his worthiness for credibility in the Court. An approver's evidence is to be corroborated in material particulars bridging closely the distance between the crime and the criminal. Certain clinching features of involvement disclosed by the approver pertaining directly to an accused, if reliable, by the touchstone of other independent credible evidence, would give the needed assurance for acceptance of his testimony on which the conviction may be based. Every approver comes to give evidence seeking to purchase his immunity and that is why, to start with, he is an unreliable person and the rule of caution calling for material corroboration is constantly kept in mind by the Court by time-worn judicial practice. The approver is a person of low morals for the reasons that being a co-participator in the crime, he has let down his companions. It is for this reason that a rule of caution has grown whereby the Court has to see if his evidence is corroborated in material particular connecting the accused with the crime. The evidence of an approver must be corroborated in material particulars and qua each accused. Balwant Kaur v. Union Territory of Chandigarh, AIR 1988 SC 139 : (1988) 1 SCC 1 : 1988 SCC (Cri) 1 : 1988 CrLJ 398. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) State (Delhi Admn.) v. V.C. Shukla, AIR 1980 SC 1382 : 1980 CrLJ 965; (2) G.S. Bakshi v. State (Delhi Admn.), AIR 1979 SC 569 : 1977 CrLJ 476; (3) Ravinder Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 1975 SC 856 : 1975 CrLJ 765; (4) Ram Narain v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1973 SC 1188 : 1973 CrLJ 914; (5) Piara Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1969 SC 961 : 1969 CrLJ 1435; (6) Bhiva Doulu Patil v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1963 SC 599 : (1963) 1 CrLJ 489; (7) Janendra Nath Ghosh v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1959 SC 1199 : 1959 CrLJ 1492; (8) Sarwan Singh Rattan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1957 SC 637 : 1957 CrLJ 1014; (9) Suresh Chandra Bahri v. State of Bihar, 1995 SCC (Cri) 60.

[10698] ● Evidence of approver—Plenty of corroboration on record.—The weapon of offence was recovered at the instance of the accused, which lent reassurance by way of corroboration to the evidence of the approver. There was other plenty of evidence on the record which corroborated the testimony of the approver. The two accused were held guilty on charge of murder of eight persons and were sentenced to death. Ranjeet Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1988 SC 599 : (1988) 1 SCC 633 : 1988 CrLJ 845.

[10699] ● Approver evidence in regard to complicity of accused in conspiracy lacking corroboration.—Where the approver's evidence in regard to the complicity of the accused in the conspiracy lacks corroboration on certain material points necessary to connect the accused, the accused is entitled to the benefit of doubt. Balwant Kaur v. Union Territory of Chandigarh, AIR 1988 SC 139 : (1988) 1 SCC 1 : 1988 CrLJ 398.

[10700] ● Accomplice unworthy of credit unless corroborated.—The presumption that an accomplice is unworthy of credit unless corroborated in material particulars, has become a rule of practice of almost universal application. Balwant Kaur v. Union Territory of Chandigarh, AIR 1988 SC 139 : (1988) 1 SCC 1 : 1988 CrLJ 398. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Chandan v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1988 SC 599 : (1988) 1 SCC 696 : (1988) 1 SCC 696; (2) Abdul Sattar v. Union Territory of Chandigarh, AIR 1986 SC 1438 : 1985 Supp SCC 599 : 1986 CrLJ 1072; (3) State of Maharashtra v. Chandraprakash Kewalchand Jain, AIR 1990 SC 658 : (1990) 1 SCC 550 : 1990 CrLJ 889 (SC).

[10701] ● Not proper to reject case for want of corroboration by independent witnesses.—The public are generally reluctant to come forward to depose before the Court. It is, therefore, not correct to reject the prosecution version only on the ground that all witnesses to the occurrence have not been examined. It is not proper to reject the case for want of corroboration by independent witnesses if the case made out is otherwise true and acceptable. With regard to falsehood stated or embellishment added by the prosecution witnesses, it is well to remember that there is a tendency amongst witnesses in our country to back up a good case by false or exaggerated version. It is also our experience that invariably the witnesses add embroidery to prosecution story, perhaps for the fear of being disbelieved. But that is no ground to throw the case overboard, if true, in the main. If there is a ring of truth in the main, the case should not be rejected. It is the duty of the Court to cull out the nuggets of truth from the evidence unless there is reason to believe that the inconsistencies or falsehood are so glaring as utterly to destroy confidence in the witnesses. State of U.P. v. Anil Singh, AIR 1988 SC 1998 (2002) : 1989 CrLJ 88 : 1989 CrLR (SC) 49 : JT 1988 (3) SC 491 : (1988) 3 Crimes 367.

[10702] ● Accomplice competent witness.—Under Section 133, which lays down a rule of law, an accomplice is a competent witness and a conviction based solely on his uncorroborated evidence is not illegal although in view of Section 114, illustration (b), Courts do not as a matter of practice do so and look for corroboration in material particulars. State of Maharashtra v. Chandra, Prakash Kewalehand Jain, AIR 1990 SC 658 : (1990) 1 SCC 550 : 1990 CrLJ 889 : 1990 East Cr C 341 (348) (SC). TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Suresh Chandra Bahri v. State of Bihar, AIR 1994 SC 2420 : 1995 Supp (1) SCC 80 : 1995 SCC (Cri) 60 : (1994) CrLJ 3271 : 1994 CrLR (SC) 725.

[10703] ● Approver's evidence acceptable if corroborated by independent evidence.—The settled law is that an approver is a competent witness against the accused person. But the Court to satisfy its conscience insists as caution and prudence to seek, as a rule, corroboration to the evidence of the approver, a particeps criminis from independent evidence ocular or circumstantial, of general particulars regarding the story spoken of by the approver of the commission of the crime and the part played by the accused therein to find whether it is true and worthy of acceptance. The reliability of the evidence of an approver should be considered from totality of the facts and circumstances. In the trial of Athiappan murder there is no dispute that such a corroborative evidence connecting both the appellants is available..... The evidence of the approver received corroboration from independent evidence on general prosecution case, namely, PW-

16 spoke that the deceased was brought by the accused and stayed in the lodge. PWs 2 to 4 spoke of A 1 working in their shop, previous thefts by A 1 and MO 1 being missing, their attempt to take back the deceased and MO 1, the dead body was found in the well and was taken out as spoken to by PWs 7 to 10. The medical evidence establishes the stabbing with the knife and death was due to it. PW-24 corroborates A 1 of selling MO 1 chain and taking the money. The canopy of the material evidence from independent sources sufficiently corroborates the approver's evidence. PW-1 is a reliable witness. No infirmity has been pointed out to disbelieve his evidence. Sevaka Perumal v. State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 1991 SC 1463 : (1991) 3 SCC 471 : 1991 SCC (Cri) 724 (731, 732) : 1991 CrLJ 1845 : JT 1991 (2) SC 546.

[10704] ● Evidence of approver—Amply corroborated in regard to one accused.—The deceased, an old lady was not in good terms with her daughter-in-law, Accused No. 2. There was constant nagging vitiating the life of A 2. PW-1 was a way ward boy and used to indulge in thefts and therefore he was driven out of home and thus he was a wayward youth. He become friendly with the first accused who suggested that PW-1 may come along with him to Madras. The first appellant told PW-1 about the second appellant and the ill-treatment meted out to her by the deceased. According to the prosecution, the ill-treatment of the second appellant continued and the second appellant began saying openly that her life was being ruined by the deceased. The accused No. 1 and PW-1 having conspired to murder the old lady came from Madras to Avadi where the deceased lived, equipped with a rope and two sets of gloves. At the house A 1 opened the door and PW-2 sprang upon the old lady closed her mouth and A 2 roped her neck and cut it by a razor and then decamped with some ornaments etc. PW-1 turned an approver. He was found to be reliable and his version true and thus satisfied the double tests. Now coming to the corroboration part of it. So far as A 1 is concerned, the prosecution relied on the evidence of medical witnesses. The doctor (PW-22) who conducted the autopsy found a clear-cut would running from left side to right side and as per PW-1's version, the first appellant cut the neck of the deceased with the razor. PW-22 further opined that MO 1, the razor, could have caused such injuries. The prosecution also relied on the evidence of PW-10 a pan broker of Bangalore who deposed that A 1 and PW1 visited his shop and sold out a chain for Rs. 2,200/-. Though in certain aspects this witness gave answers which did not support the prosecution case, but, so far as pleading part is concerned, his evidence is believed by both the Courts below. Another Pan broker of Bangalore spoke about his purchasing jewellery from A 1 and PW-1. Thus the testimony of approved so far as the culpability of accused No. 1 stood sufficiently corroborated and he was convicted. As to the role of Accused No. 2 there was no corroboration and she was acquitted. Gajalami v. State of T.N., AIR 1996 SC 3373 : (1996) 5 SCC 174 : 1995 CrLJ 3231 (SC).

[10705] ● Omnibus statement by approver that accused assaulted deceased.—We have also gone through the evidence of Gurjant Singh (PW-3) the approver and what we find from his evidence is an omnibus statement that Amrik Singh, the accused and the other accused also assaulted Harnek Singh (deceased). Only from this omnibus statement, in the absence of any corroboration to the evidence of Gurjant Singh (PW-3) on record we are unable to sustain the conviction of the appellant under Section 302, IPC. The High Court did refer to the law on this topic but, however, this circumstances does not appear to have been well projected before the High Court and, therefore, there is no discussion on this aspect of the case in the impugned judgment. In these circumstances we are unable to sustain the conviction of the appellant for an offence punishable under Section 302, IPC and consequently the conviction and sentence of the appellant on that count is set aside. Niranjan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1996 SC 3254 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 939 : 1996 CrLJ 2506 : 1996 (2) Crimes 251 (SC).

[10706] ● Evidence of eye-witness truthful and corroborated.—".......according to PW-1, Rajender, while he was returning to his village, he had met one Krishna Kumar and on enquiry by him he had told him that the father and uncle had been murdered but the said Krishna Kumar had not been examined by the prosecution in order to lend credence to the deposition of Rajender that when he had been returning weeping, on being asked by Krishna Kumar, he told about the said incident shortly after the incident........ We do not think that prosecution case is to be disbelieved only because Krishna Kumar was not examined. Law does not receive corroboration of the evidence like that of Rejender." Vijai Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1996 SC 3016 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 745 (750) : 1996 CrLJ 1993 : JT 1996 (3) SC 299.

[10707] ● Evidence of eye witness—Appreciation of.—It is of course true that when a witness is said to have exaggerated in his evidence at the stage of trial and has tried to involve many more accused and if that part of the evidence is not found acceptable, the remaining part of evidence has to be scrutinised with care and the Court must try to see whether the acceptable part of evidence get corroborated from other evidence on record so that the acceptable part can be safely relied upon. Hari Chand v. State of Delhi, AIR 1996 SC 1477 : (1996) 9 SCC 113 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 950 (962) : 1996 CrLJ 1701 : JT 1996 (2) SC 140.

[10708] ● Number of injuries found on person of eye-witness corroborating their claim.—The presence of injuries on the person's of prosecution witnesses goes a long way to corroborate their claim that alongwith their parents they were the victims of attack. Major Singh v. State of Punjab, 1996 SCC (Cri) 1189 (1192) : 1996 CrLJ 4162.

[10709] ● Deposition of approver about injuries caused on person of deceased corroborated by medical evidence.—The deposition of the approver PW-12 about the injuries caused on the person of the deceased is substantially corroborated from the medical evidence and absence of any injury caused by the blunt weapon of lathi on the person of the deceased cannot be held to be such a contradiction in the deposition of PW-12 for which such deposition is liable to be discarded. We have already indicated that five persons were seen by PWs 4 and 5. Such evidence tallies with the deposition of PW-12 that besides the approver, there were other four accused. The deposition of PW-12 also stands corroborated that PWs 4 and 5 could identify Mohan and Yashin and had enquired of them as to from where they had been coming then. Such deposition fully lends support to the deposition given by PW-12.

There is no reason to interfere with the concurrent findings made by the Courts below against the appellants. Balbir Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1997 SC 1704 : 1997 SCC (Cri) 972 : 1997 CrLJ 1179 : 1997 CrLR (SC) 352 : 1997 (1) Crimes 67 (SC).

[10710] ● Evidence of witnesses if supported corroborated by reliable witnesses.—The three eye-witnesses have implicated all the accused uniformly of the offence charged while their presence at the place of incident cannot be doubted, it would be difficult to accept the fact that these three witnesses could have noticed and identified all the accused numbering 64 out of nearly 500 participants in the incident out of nearly 500. If evidence of PWs 1 to 3 is supported/corroborated by one or more reliable witnesses, then a conviction can be safely based on the appellants in regard to the charge of which they stand convicted. Kamaksha Rai v. State of U.P., AIR 2000 SC 153 : (1999) 8 SCC 701 : 2000 CrLJ 178.

[10711] ● Corroboration to version of eye-witnesses by independent witnesses.—The Courts below considered it prudent to look for corroboration to the version of the eye-witnesses from other independent witnesses. Testing the evidence on such touchstone, it has been held that the involvement of the appellants in the incident as deposed by PWs 2 to 6 and PW-23 has been corroborated by PW-8 who is admittedly not a resident of village where the occurrence took place. Nelabothu Sundararamaiah v. State of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 2001 SC 288 (289) : (2001) 9 SCC 223 : 2001 CrLJ 509 : 2001 CrLR (SC) 4 : 2001 Cr App R (SC) 46.

[10712] ● Accomplice evidence—Corroboration.—All that is required is that there must be some additional evidence rendering it probable that the story of the accomplice (or complainant) is true and that it is reasonably safe to act upon it. Secondly, the independent evidence must not make it safe to believe that the crime was committed but must in some way reasonably connect or tend to connect the accused with it by confirming some material particular the testimony of the accomplice or complainant that the accused committed the crime. This does not mean that the corroboration as to identification must extend to all the circumstances necessary to identify the accused with the offence. Again, all that is necessary is that there should be independent evidence which will make it reasonably safe to believe the witness's story that the accused was the one, or among those, who committed the offence. The reason for this part of the rule is that : "A man who has been guilty of a crime himself will always be able to relate the facts of the case, and if the confirmation be only on the truth of that history, without identifying the persons, that is really no corroboration at all...... It would not at all tend to show that the party-accused participated in it." Thirdly, the corroboration must come from independent sources and thus ordinarily the testimony of one compliance would not be sufficient to corroborate that of another. But of course the circumstances may be such as to make it safe to dispense with the necessity of corroboration and in those special circumstances a conviction so based would not be illegal. I say this because it was contended that the mother in this case was not an independent source. Fourthly, the corroboration need not be direct evidence that the accused committed the crime. It is sufficient if it is merely circumstantial evidence of his connection with the crime. Were it otherwise, "many crimes which are usually committed between accomplices in secret, such as incest, offences with females" (or unnatural offences) "could never be brought to justice". Hashim v. State of T.N., 2005 SCC (Cri) 292 (303-04).

3. CONDUCT

[10713] ● Complainants' conduct.—Who complainants' conduct of narrating the occurrence to three of her colleagues, when corroborated by those three witnesses is clearly admissible under Section 157, Evidence Act. Chander Kala v. Ram Kishan, AIR 1985 SC 1268 : 1985 SCC (Cri) 491 : 1985 CrLJ 1490 : 1985 (2) Crimes 642.

4. CORROBORATION, NECESSITY OF

[10714] ● Corroboration, necessity of.— Requirement of corroboration is a question of fact in every case which depends upon the circumstances of each case. The requirement of corroboration is a rule of prudence and not a rule of law. Rameshwar S/o Kalyan Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54 : 1952 CrLJ 547 : 1952 SCR 377.

[10715] ● Approver's evidence corroboration.— However, it must never be forgotten that before the Court reaches the stage of considering the question of corroboration and its adequacy or otherwise, the first initial and essential question to consider is whether, even as an accomplice, the approver is a reliable witness. If the answer to this question is against the approver, then there is an end of the matter, and no question, as to whether his evidence is corroborated or not, falls to be considered. In other words, the appreciation of an approver's evidence has to satisfy a double test, namely, that—

(1) his evidence must show that he is a reliable witness, and

(2) the approver's evidence must receive sufficient corroboration. Sarwan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1957 SC 637 : 1957 CrLJ 1014 : 1957 SCR 953.

[10716] ● Accomplice evidence corroboration need not be direct.—A Court should be circumspect and look for corroboration in material particulars by reliable testimony, direct or circumstantial, before accepting the testimony of a partially unreliable witness. The Court should shift, from the evidence before it, parts which are wholly reliable and parts which are wholly unreliable and those which are partly reliable and partly unreliable. Even a partly unreliable part of evidence may form the basis of a conviction, where it is corroborated in material particulars by some reliable evidence. It is always a question of fact, whether a particular piece of evidence is sufficiently reliable to be used, or even if it appears unreliable, whether it ought not to be accepted in view of some other independent and reliable corroborative evidence. Their Lordships pointed out that a question appertaining to shifting or weighing of individual items of evidence, about which no fixed and rigid rules can possibly be laid down, must be distinguished from the general rule that a piece of evidence which is found to be partly unreliable, after such a shifting and weighing, needs to be corroborated by reliable evidence before it is acted upon. Vadivelu Thevar v. State of Madras, AIR 1957 SC 614 : 1957 CrLJ 1000 : 1957 SCJ 527 : 1957 SCA 793.

[10717] ● Accomplice evidence credibility—Corroboration—Necessity and expert of.—It is not necessary that there should be independent corroboration of every material circumstance. All that is required is that there must be some additional evidence rendering it probable that the story of the accomplices or the complainant is true and that it is reasonably safe to act upon it and the corroboration need not be direct evidence. It is sufficient if it is merely circumstantial evidence of the connection of the accused with the crime. Ramanlal Mohanlal Pandya v. State of Bombay, AIR 1960 SC 961 : 1960 CrLJ 1380.

[10718] ● Evidence of accomplice when uncorroborated.—If the essential part of the prosecution story in respect of a charge really rests on the evidence of the accomplice uncorroborated by any other evidence, it should be held as not proved. R.R. Chari v. State of U.P., AIR 1962 SC 1573 : (1962) 2 CrLJ 510.

[10719] ● Approver's evidence—Corroboration.—Ordinarily, a Court seeks for corroboration of the evidence of an approver before convicting an accused on that evidence. Generally speaking, this corroboration is of two kinds, namely—

(1) the Court has to satisfy itself that statement of the approver is credible in itself, and there is evidence other than the statement of the approver that the approver himself had taken part in the crime; and

(2) after the Court is satisfied that the approver's statement is credible and that his part in the crime is corroborated by other evidence, the Court seeks for corroboration of the approver's evidence with respect to the part of other accused persons in the crime, and this evidence has to be of such a nature as to connect the other accused with the crime. Saravana- bhavan v. State of Madras, AIR 1966 SC 1273 : (1996) 1 SCA 730 : (1966) 1 SCWR 840.

[10720] ● Approvers evident to be considered as a whole.—The evidence of an approver has not to be dealt within two water-tight compartments. It must be considered as a whole along with other evidence. Even so, the Court has to consider whether the approver's evidence is credible in itself; and, in doing so, it may refer to such corroborative pieces of evidence as may be available.

If the evidence of the approver is so thoroughly discrepant, and so inherently incredible, that the Court considers him wholly unreliable, the Court has to discard his evidence. Saravanabhavan v. State of Madras, AIR 1966 SCC 1273 : 1966 CrLJ 949. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) E.C. Barsay v. State of Bombay, AIR 1961 SC 1762 : (1962) 2 SCR 195; (2) Suresh v. State, 1991 CrLJ 859.

[10721] ● Evidence of approver and accomplice—Necessity of corroboration.—An accomplice is competent to depose but as a rule of caution it will be unsafe to convict upon his testimony alone. The warning of the danger of convicting on uncorroborated evidence is therefore given when the evidence is that of an accomplice.

The primary meaning of accomplice is any party to the crime charged and someone who aids and abets the commission of crime. The nature of corroboration is that it is confirmatory evidence and it may consist of the evidence of second witness or of circumstances like the conduct of the person against whom it is required. Corroboration must connect or tend to connect the accused with the crime. When it is said that the corroborative evidence must implicate the accused in material particulars it means that it is not enough that a piece of evidence tends to confirm the truth of a part of the testimony to be corroborated.

That evidence must, confirm that part of the testimony which suggests that the crime was committed by the accused. The first test of reliability of approver and accomplice evidence was for the Court to be satisfied that there was nothing inherently impossible in evidence. After that conclusion is reached as to reliability corroboration is required. The rule as to corroboration is based on the reasoning that there must be sufficient corroborative evidence in material particulars to connect the accused with the crime. Sheshanna Bhumanna Yadav v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1970 SC 1330 : (1970) 2 SCC 122 : 1970 CrLJ 1158 : 1971 (1) SCR 617.

[10722] ● Circumstantial evidence—Appreciation of.—It is well to remember that in cases where the evidence is of a circumstantial nature, the circumstances from which the conclusion of guilt is to be drawn should in the first instance be fully established, and all the facts so established should be consistent only with the hypothesis of the guilt of the accused. Again, the circumstances should be of a conclusive nature and tendency and they should be such as to exclude every hypothesis but the one proposed to be proved. In other words, there must be a chain of evidence so far complete as not to leave any reasonable ground for a conclusion consistent with the innocence of the accused and it must be such as to show that within all human probability the act must have been done by the accused. Of course, the evidence on basic or primary facts has to be approached in the ordinary practical way but the conclusions in the case of circumstantial evidence must necessarily point only to the guilt of the accused excluding any reasonable possibility of his innocence. We are not satisfied that the evidence against the appellant in this case satisfies this test. Subedar v. State of U.P., AIR 1971 SC 125 : (1970) 2 SCC 445 : 1970 SCC (Cri) 474 : 1971 CrLJ 25 : 1971 (1) SCR 826.

[10723] ● Approver's testimony when to be accepted.—Approver's testimony can be accepted if he involves him in the crime and gives a natural account of the events implicating the accused in clear manner. Ordinarily his testimony would require corroboration. Ravindra Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 1975 SC 856 : (1975) 3 SCC 742 : 1975 SCC (Cri) 202 : 1975 CrLJ 765 : 1975 CrLR (SC) 27.

[10724] ● Approver evidence—Evidentiary value.—So far as PW-5, Bhimal, is concerned, it must be realised that on his own admission he is a person who has no compunction in betraying an illiterate woman (Smt. Ghogari) who had engaged him to look after her affairs and had placed implicit trust in him, PW-5 has brazenly stated that he had joined hands with the other conspirators in order to practice a fraud on Smt. Ghogari with a view to deprive her of her land as he was promised a share in the booty. According to his own admission he was paid Rs. 5,000 for betraying Smt. Ghogari. By the very nature of things, therefore, the evidence of such a witness deserves to be scrutinised closely and carefully and in the absence of corroboration in regard to material aspects of the case, the Court would be reluctant to accept his testimony apart from the fact that he being an approver his evidence calls for corroboration even otherwise. The other point of criticism which requires to be borne in mind in regard to his testimony is that while the offence was committed on November 18, 1968, he made an application for becoming an approver about twenty months thereafter on July 21, 1970. Lalchand v. State of Haryana, AIR 1984 SC 226 : (1987) 1 SCC 686 : 1984 SCC (Cri) 355 (358) : 1984 CrLJ 164 : (1984) 1 Crimes 337.

[10725] ● Approver—Suspect witness.—The reasons for taking usual precautions before accepting the evidence of an approver are not far to seek. An approver is an accused converted as a prosecution witness. In order to escape the possible consequences of the charges against him he is one likely to swear falsely. He is an immoral person having participated in the crime. Consequently he cannot have much regard for the sanction of oath. The thought of pardon always makes him lean towards the prosecution. His inclination is always to make his own share in the transaction as slight as possible and to place the serious blame on others. If there is other independent evidence about the crime the testimony of an accomplice is superfluous. Therefore in practice police usually invites a party to become an approver only after they have failed in every other way to supply the missing links. For all these reasons an approver is a suspect witness and his evidence can be accepted only if it is materially corroborated. In view of this inclination of an approver the Supreme Court has impressed upon the need of Court's being satisfied about the approver's truthfulness. The Supreme Court lays down that unless he is found to be a reliable witness the worth of his evidence is lost and even by seeking corroboration such evidence cannot be the foundation for conviction. Abdul Sattar v. Union Territory, Chandigarh, 1995 Supp SCC 599 : 1985 SCC (Cri) 505 : 1986 CrLJ 1072 (SC) : 1985 CrLR (SC) 485 : 1985 All Cr R 522 : 1985 All Cr C 427 : (1986) 1 Supreme 214 : 1985 SCC Supp 599.

[10727] ● Evidence of approver reliability.—The reliability of the evidence of an approver should be considered from the totality of the facts and circumstances. Sevaka Perumal v. State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 1991 SC 1463 : (1991) 3 SCC 471 : 1991 CrLJ 1845 : 1961 (2) Crimes 515.

[10728] ● Testimony of Food Inspector—Corroboration by Panch witnesses—It is not the law that the evidence of Food Inspector must necessarily need corroboration from independent witnesses. The evidence of the Food Inspector is not inherently suspected, nor be rejected on that ground. He discharges the public function in purchasing an article of food for analysis and if the article of food so purchased in the manner prescribed under the Act is found adulterated, he is required to take action as per law. He discharges public duty. His evidence is to be tested on its own merits and if found acceptable the Court would be entitled to accept and rely on to prove prosecution case. If in a given case where the factum of the very purchase is put in question and any personal allegations are made against the Food Inspector, perhaps it may be necessary for the prosecution to dispel the doubt and to examine the Panch witnesses seeking corroboration to the evidence of the Food Inspector. State of U.P. v. Hanif, AIR 1992 SC 1131 : 1993 Supp (1) SCC 510 : 1992 CrLJ 1429.

[10729] ● Uncorroborated testimony of approver—Credibility.—The provisions of Section 133 of the Evidence Act which deal with the testimony of an accomplice. It contemplates that an accomplice shall be a competent witness against an accused person; and a conviction is not illegal merely because it proceeds upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice. The first part envisages that an accomplice, in other words, a guilty companion in crimes, shall be a competent witness while the second part states that conviction is not illegal merely because it is based on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice. But if we read Section 133 of the Evidence Act with illustration (b) of Section 114 of the Evidence Act it may lead to certain amount of confusion and misunderstanding as to the real and true intention of the Legislature because quite contrary to what is contained in Section 133 illustration (b) to Section 114 of the Evidence Act lays down "that an accomplice is unworthy of credit, unless he is corroborated in material particulars". A combine reading of the two provisions that in Section 133 and illustration (b) of Section 114 of Evidence Act go to show that it was considered necessary to place the law of accomplice evidence on a better footing by stating in unambiguous terms that according to Section 133 a conviction is "not illegal or in other words not unlawful" mealy because it is founded on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice while accepting that on accomplice is a competent witness. But at the same time the Legislature intended to invite attention to the illustration (b) of Section 114 of the Evidence Act with a view to emphasis that the rule contained therein as well as in Section 133 are parts of one and the same subject and neither can be ignored in the exercise of judicial discretion except in cases of very exceptional nature. However, the difficulty in understanding the combined effect of the aforementioned two provisions arises largely due to their placement at two different places of the same Act. It may be noticed that illustration (b) attached to Section 114 is placed in Chapter VII of Evidence Act while Section 133 is inserted in Chapter IX of the Act. The better course was to insert the illustration (b) to Section 114 as an explanation or in any case as a proviso to Section 133 of the Act instead of their insertion at two different places and that too in different Chapters of Evidence Act. In any case since an approver is guilty companion in crime and, therefore, illustration (b) to Section 114 provides a rule of caution to which the Courts should have regard. It is now well settled by a long series of decisions that except in circumstances of special nature it is the duty of the Court to raise the presumption in Section 114 illustration (b) and the Legislature requires that the Courts should make the natural presumption in that section as would be clear from the decisions which we shall discuss hereinafter.

Thus it is clear that a definite rule has been crystallized to the effect that though a conviction can be based on uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice but as a rule of prudence it is unsafe to place reliance on the uncorroborated testimony of an approver as required by illustration (b) of Section 114 of the Evidence Act. Suresh Chandra Bahri v. State of Bihar, AIR 1994 SC 2420 : 1995 Supp (1) SCC 80 : 1995 SCC (Cri) 60 : 1994 CrLJ 3271 : 1994 (2) Crimes 1027.

[10730] ● Approver planted witness.—Once we have found that the approver is a planted witness and his testimony is not worthy of credence and is uninspiring and unacceptable justifying its rejection outright, it will be futile and wholly unnecessary to look for corroboration of his testimony. It is only when the approver's evidence is considered otherwise acceptable that the Court applies its mind to the rule that his testimony needs corroboration in material particulars connecting or tending to connect each one of the accused with the crime charged. Rampal Pithwa Rahidas v. State of Maharashtra, 1994 SCC (Cri) 851 (870) : 1994 CrLJ 2320 : (1994) 2 (Supp) SCC 73.

5. CORROBORATION CONNECTING ACCUSED WITH OFFENCE

[10731] ● Corroboration connecting accused with offence.—Corroboration required for conviction on the basis of approver's evidence, need not be of a kind which proves the offence against the accused—It is sufficient to connect the accused with crime. S. Swamirathnam v. State of Madras, AIR 1957 SC 340 : 1957 CrLJ 422.

[10732] ● Corroborative evidence must relate to identity of accused.—Corroborative evidence must be evidence which implicates the accused, i.e., which confirms in some material particulars not only the evidence that the crime had been committed but also that the appellant had committed it. The moment there is corroboration evidence which connects or tends to connect an accused with the crime such corroborative evidence relates to the identity of the accused in connection with that crime. It is the approver's evidence which is the direct evidence of the crime. There should be corroboration in material particulars not only concerning the crime but corroboration of the approver's story by evidence which connects or tends to connect an accused with the crime. It is this corroborative evidence which determines the mind of the Court or a jury that the approver's evidence that the accused committed the crime is true. Jnanendra Nath Ghose v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1959 SC 1199 : 1959 CrLJ 1492.

[10733] ● Accomplice evidence—Corroboration from independent source.—The combined effect of Sections 133, and 114, Illustration (b) is that though a conviction based upon accomplice evidence is legal the Court will not accept such evidence unless it is corroborated in material particulars. The corroboration must connect the accused with the crime. It may be direct or circumstantial. It is not necessary that the corroboration should confirm all the circumstances of the crime. It is sufficient if the corroboration is in material particulars. The corroboration must be from an independent source. One accomplice cannot corroborate another. Mohd. Hussain Umar Kochra v. K.S. Dalip Singh Ji, AIR 1970 SC 45 : (1969) 3 SCC 429 : 1970 CrLJ 68 : (1970) 1 SCR 130 : (1970) 1 SCJ 149. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Rabindra Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 1975 SC 856 : (1975) 3 SCC 742 : 1975 SCC (Cri) 202 : 1975 CrLJ 765.

[10734] ● Evidence of approver corroboration—Necessity.—The corroborating evidence, broadly stated, must connect or tend to connect the accused with the crime charged. This is so because of the danger of the approver introducing some innocent person or persons into an otherwise true prosecution story. Such evidence, however, need not by itself be sufficient for sustaining the conviction of the accused for in that case the evidence of the approver would be wholly unnecessary and mere surplusage. Ram Narain v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1973 SC 1188 : (1973) 3 SCC 805 : 1973 SCC (Cri) 545 (551) : 1973 CrLJ 914 : 1973 CrLR (SC) 228 : (1973) 3 SCR 463.

[10735] ● Testimony of approver corroboration.—The corroboration must be on a point material to the issue; the testimony of the approver ought to be corroborated in some material circumstances, such circumstances connecting and identifying the prisoners with the offence. Ranjeet Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1988 SC 672 : (1988) 1 SCC 633 : 1988 CrLJ 845. To the same effect : (1) Chandan v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1988 SC 599 : (1988) 1 SCC 696 : 1988 CrLJ 842; (2) Balwant Kaur v. Union Territory of Chandigarh, AIR 1988 SC 139 : 1988 CrLJ 398 : (1988) 1 SCC 1; (3) G.S. Bakshi v. State (Delhi Admn.), AIR 1979 SC 569 : (1978) 4 SCC 482 : 1979 CrLJ 476; (4) Mukhtiar Kaur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1980 SC 1871 (2) : 1980 CrLJ 1420; (5) Ranbir Singh v. Emperor, AIR 1932 Lah 204 : 136 IC 19 : 33 PLR 241.

6. CORROBORATION IN MATERIAL PARTICULARS : MODE OF CORROBORATION :

[10736] ● Corroboration in material particulars : mode of corroboration.—The independent corroboration need not cover the whole prosecution story; on the other hand, corroboration must not be on minor particulars and incidental details—the corroboration must be on material particulars. Sarwan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1957 SC 637 : 1957 CrLJ 1014.

[10737] ● Approver evidence—Corroboration on material particulars.—The approver's evidence must show that he is a reliable witness, and secondly, there should be corroboration on material particulars. Corroborative evidence must relate to the identity of the accused in connection with the crime. Jnanendranath Ghose v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1959 SC 1199 : 1959 CrLJ 1492.

[10738] ● Accomplice competent witness.—An accomplice is undoubtedly a competent witness under the Indian Evidence Act. There can be, however, no doubt that the very fact that he has participated in the commission of the offence introduces a serious taint in his evidence and Courts are naturally reluctant to act on such tainted evidence unless it is corroborated in material particulars by other independent evidence. It would not, however, be right to expect that such independent corroboration should cover the whole of the prosecution case or even all the material particulars of the prosecution case. If such a view is adopted it will render the evidence of the accomplice wholly superfluous. On the other hand, it will not be safe to act upon such evidence merely because it is corroborated in minor particulars or incidental details because, in such a case, corroboration does not afford the necessary assurance that the main story disclosed by the approver can be reasonably and safely accepted as true. It is well-settled that the appreciation of approver's evidence has to satisfy a doubt test. His evidence must show that he is a reliable witness and that is a test which is common to all the witnesses. If this test is satisfied, the second test which will remain to be applied is that approver's evidence must receive sufficient corroboration. Piara Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1969 SC 961 : (1969) 1 SCC 379 : 1969 CrLJ 1435 : (1969) 3 SCR 236.

[10739] ● Accomplice evidence—Corroboration necessity.—So far as the evidence of an accomplice is concerned it is most fundamental that the Court will not accept an evidence of an accomplice unless it is corroborated in material particulars. Hussein Umar v. Dalip Singh, AIR 1970 SC 45 : 1970 CrLJ 9 : (1970) 1 SCJ 149 : 1970 SCD 58 : 1970 Mad LJ (Cri) 68 : 1970 SC Cr R 76 : (1970) 1 SCR 130. To the same effect : (1) Mukkar Kaur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1980 SC 1871 : (1980) 2 SCC 369 : 1980 SCC (Cri) 456 : 1980 CrLJ 1420.

[10740] ● Testimony of approver corroboration.—When there is a chain of circumstantial evidences not explainable by any other hypothesis except that the accused is guilty, it may furnish adequate corroboration of the testimony of approver whereon conviction may be based. Maghar Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1975 SC 1320 : (1975) 4 SCC 234 : 1975 SCC (Cri) 479 : 1975 CrLJ 1102 : 1975 Cur LJ 484 : (1975) 1 SCWR 624.

[10741] ● Accomplice evidence corroboration.—Though an approver, an accomplice is a competent witness, yet to base conviction of other accused persons Court should require corroboration in material particulars which mean there should be some independent evidence tending to criminate the particular accused in the commission of the crime. Dogdu v. State of Maha- rashtra, AIR 1977 SC 1579 : (1977) 3 SCC 68 : 1977 CrLJ 1206.

[10744] ● One accomplice cannot corroborate another.—One accomplice cannot corroborate another when it has been laid down that statement of accused person under Section 108, Customs Act cannot be corroborative evidence of the testimony of another accused who later turned to be a prosecution witness. Supdt. of Customs v. Bhanabhai Bhalpabhai Patel, AIR 1992 SC 1583 : 1992 CrLJ 2516 : JT 1992 (2) SC 305.

[10745] ● Approver evidence—Finds corroboration in all material particulars.—We have carefully gone through the evidence of Ashok Kumar Singh (PW-1), the approver and we find that his evidence is trustworthy. Moreover this evidence finds corroboration in all material particulars from the evidence of Meena Kumari (PW-22) and Phulia Devi (PW-28). The evidence of Ashok Kumar Singh (PW-1), the approver apart from being reliable does not suffer from any omission or contradiction vis-a-vis his statement recorded under Section 164, CrPC Ashok Kumar Singh (PW-1) has given all minor details about the conspiracy hatched. Yamuna Singh v. State of Bihar, AIR 1996 SC 2826 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 1177 : 1996 CrLJ 4144 : 1996 (3) Crimes 220 (SC).

7. NATURE AND EXTENT OF CORROBORATION

[10746] ● Nature and extent of corroboration.— It would be impossible, indeed it would be dangerous, to formulate the kind of evidence which should, or would, be regarded as corroboration. Its nature and extent must necessarily vary with the circumstances of each case and also according to the particular circumstances of the offence charged. But to this extent the rules are clear : "First, it is not necessary that there should be independent confirmation of every material circumstance in the sense that the independent evidence in the case, apart from the testimony of the complainant or the accomplice, should in itself be sufficient to sustain conviction. As Lord READING says : 'Indeed, if it were required that the accomplice should be confirmed in every detail of the crime, his evidence would not be essential to the case, it would be merely confirmatory of another and independent testimony.' All that is required is that there must be 'some additional evidence rendering it probable that the story of the accomplice (for complainant) is true and that it is reasonably safe to act upon it.' Secondly, the independent evidence must not only make it safe to believe that the crime is committed but must, in some way, reasonably connect or tend to connect the accused with it by confirming, in some material particular, the testimony of the accomplice or complainant that the accused committed the crime. This does not mean that the corroboration as to identify must extend to all the circumstances necessary to identity the accused with the offence. Again, all that is necessary is that there should be independent evidence which will make it reasonably safe to believe the witness's story that the accused was the one, or among those, who committed the offence. The reason for this part of the rule is that a man who has been guilty of a crime himself will always be able to relate the facts of the case, and if the confirmation be only on the truth of that history, without identifying the persons, that is really no corroboration at all......... It would not at all tend to show that the party accused participated in it. Thirdly, the corroboration must come from independent sources, and thus ordinarily the testimony of one accomplice would not be sufficient to corroborate that of another. But of course the circumstances may be such as to make it safe to dispense with the necessity of corroboration and in those special circumstances a conviction so based would not be illegal. Fourthly, the corroboration need not be direct evidence that the accused committed the crime. It is sufficient, if it is merely circumstantial evidence of his connection with the crime. Were it otherwise, 'many crimes which are usually committed between accomplices in secret, (such as incest offences with females for unnatural offences) could never be, brought to justice. Rameshwar v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54 at 57 : 1952 CrLJ 547. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Shamsher Bahadur Saxena v. State of Bihar, AIR 1956 Pat 404; (2) State of Bihar v. Basawan Singh, AIR 1958 SC 500 : 1958 CrLJ 976; (3) Sideshwar Ganguly v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1958 SC 143 : 1958 CrLJ 273 : 1959 SCR 749 :

1958 AWR (HC) 391 : 1958 Pat LR (SC) 1 : 1958 MLJ (Cri) 311 : 1958 SCA 147 : 1958 SCJ 349; (4) Balwant Kaur v. Union Territory of Chandigarh, AIR 1988 SC 139 : (1988) 1 SCC 1 : 1988 CrLJ 398.

[10747] ● Evidence of accomplice—Corroboration.—Although, under this section, a conviction is justified in law even on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice, yet Courts should be slow to depart from the rule of prudence based on long experience which requires some independent evidence implicating the particular accused. The Court should give some indication in its judgment that it has had the above rule of caution and prudence in mind and should proceed to give reasons for considering corroboration unnecessary. Ordinarily, the Court should require corroboration, and if there is no corroboration, it must show why it considers it safe to convict the accused without corroboration in that particular case. Rameshwar v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54 : 1952 CrLJ 547 : 1952 SCA 40.

[10748] ● Evidence of accomplice—Corroboration—Nature and extent of—Rules to.—The extent of the corroboration must necessarily vary (a) with the circumstances of each case, and also (b) according to the circumstances of the offence charged. Rameshwar Kalyan Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54.

[10749] ● Accomplice—Appreciation of evidence.—If the position of a witness is somewhat analogous to that of an accomplice, though not exactly the same, there should be such corroboration of the material part of the story connecting the accused with the crime as well as satisfy reasonable minds that the witness can be regarded as truthful. V. Satyanarayan Reddy v. State of Hyderabad, AIR 1956 SC 379 : 1956 CrLJ 777.

[10750] ● Approver's evidence corroboration.—Though the corroboration of an approver's evidence need not be of a kind which proves the offence against the accused, it is sufficient if it connects the accused with the crime. The corroboration is required only of material circumstances but not confirmation of every detail deposed to by the accomplice. There must be corroboration both of the crime and of the identity of the person charged. The corroboration must be by independent testimony but not necessarily by direct evidence. Corroborative evidence means evidence which shows or tends to show that the story of the accomplice regarding the fact that the accused committed the crime is true. Swamirathnam v. State of Hyderabad, AIR 1957 SC 340 : 1957 CrLJ 422.

[10751] ● Accomplice evidence—Corroboration by independent evidence.—It would not be right to expect that the independent corroboration required to support the evidence of the accomplice should cover the whole of the prosecution story or even all the material particulars. If such a view is adopted, it would render the evidence of the accomplice wholly superfluous. On the other hand, it would not be safe to act upon such evidence merely because it is corroborated in minor particulars or incidental details, because, in such a case, corroboration does not afford the necessary assurance that the main story disclosed by the approver can be reasonably and safely accepted as true. Sarwan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1957 SC 637 : 1957 CrLJ 1014 : 1957 SCJ 699.

[10752] ● Approver's evidence—Corroboration in material particulars.—Although the approver's evidence is the direct evidence of the crime yet it should be corroborated in material particulars by evidence—

(a) concerning the crime, and

(b) connecting or tending to connect the accused with the crime. Jnanendra Nath Ghose v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1959 SC 1199 : (1960) 2 SCA 180.

[10753] ● Accomplice competent to give evidence.—According to Section 133, Evidence Act, which is a rule of law, an accomplice is competent to give evidence and according to illustration (b) to Section 114, Evidence Act which is a rule of practice, it is almost always unsafe to convict an accused person upon his testimony alone. Bhiva Doulu Patil v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1963 SC 599 : (1963) 3 SCR 830 : (1963) 2 SCJ 327 : 1963 SCD 276 : 1963 AWR (HC) 163 : 1963 ALJ 253 : 65 Bom LR 347 : 1963 MPLJ 225 : 1963 MLJ (Cri) 450 : (1963) 1 Ker LR 109. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Mohd. Hussain Umar v. K.S. Dalipsinghji, AIR 1970 SC 45 (50); (2) Shankar v. State of T.N., (1994) 4 SCC 478 : 1994 SCC (Cri) 1252.

[10754] ● Accomplice evidence corroboration need not be by direct evidence.—That what the law requires in the case of an accomplice's evidence is that there should be such corroboration for the material parts of the story connecting the accused with the crime as will satisfy reasonable minds that the approver can be regarded as a truthful witness. The corroboration need not be by direct evidence of the commission of the offence by the accused. It may merely be by circumstantial evidence of his connection with the crime. But the nature of the corroboration will depend on, and vary with, the circumstances of each case.

Kanbi Karsan Jadav v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1966 SC 821 (823) : 1966 CrLJ 605.

[10755] ● Tainted evidence of approver—Corroboration by independent evidence.—Naturally reluctant to act on the tainted evidence of an approver unless it is corroborated in material particulars by other independent evidence, it does not follow that independent corroboration should cover the whole of the prosecution story or even all the material particulars, as, in that case, the evidence of the accomplice will be rendered wholly superfluous. It would not be safe to act, upon the approver's evidence, merely because it is corroborated in minor particulars, or incidental details, as, in such cases, corroboration does not afford the necessary assurance that the main story disclosed by the approver can be reasonably and safely accepted as true. Sarwan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1967 SC 637 : (1967) SCR 255.

[10756] ● Testimony of accomplice—Corroboration.—Corroboration should be such which lends assurance to the reliability of the story testified by the accomplice. Tribhuvan Nath v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1973 SC 450 : (1972) 3 SCC 511 : 1972 SCC (Cri) 604 : 1972 CrLJ 1277 : 1972 SCD 571 : 1972 SC CrR 458.

[10757] ● Evidence of accomplice—Rule of appreciation—Duty of Court.—The relative scope of illustration (b) to Section 114, and Section 133 and observed that the need of corroboration which was a rule of prudence has been by judicial experience elevated into a rule of law, however, the rule is not that conviction without corroboration is illegal but that the necessity of corroboration should be present in the mind of the Judge and must be dispensed with only when circumstances are such that it can be safely dispensed with. Dagdu v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1977 SC 1579 : (1977) 3 SCC 68 : 1977 SCC (Cri) 421 : (1977) CrLJ 1206 : (1977) 2 SCJ 241 : (1977) 1 MLJ (Cri) 462. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Ranjeet Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1988 SC 672 : (1988) 1 SCC 633 : 1988 CrLJ 845 : (1988) 1 SCJ 321; (2) Balwant Kaur v. Union Territory of Chandigarh, AIR 1988 SC 139 : (1988) 1 SCC 1 : 1988 SCC (Cri) 1 : 1988 CrLJ 398 : (1988) 1 Cr LC 197; (3) State of Maharashtra v. Chandraprakash Kewalchand Jain, 1900 CrLJ 889 (SC); (4) Sheikh Zakir v. State of Bihar, AIR 1983 SC 911 : (1983) 4 SCC 10 : 1983 CrLJ 1285.

[10758] ● Recovery of weapons at instance of accused lending reassurance by way of corroboration.—The prosecution has been able to recover weapons of the crime from the accused. The recovery of the weapons has been made at the instance of the accused. It also lends reassurance by way of corroboration to the evidence of the approver. Ranjeet Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1988 SC 672 : (1988) 1 SCC 633 : 1988 SCC (Cri) 229 : 1988 CrLJ 845 : 1988 CrLR (SC) 173.

[10759] ● Testimony of accomplice—Basing of conviction.—"So far as the question about the conviction based on the testimony of an accomplice is concerned the law is settled and it is established as a rule of prudence that the testimony of accomplice if it is thought reliable as a whole conviction could only be based if it is corroborated by independent evidence either direct or circumstantial connecting the accused with the crime." Chandan v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1988 SC 599 : (1988) 1 SCC 696 : 1988 CrLJ 842 : (1988) 1 SCJ 321.

[10760] ● Evidence of approver—Plenty of corroborating evidence on record.—While looking for corroboration, we must first look at the broad spectrum of the approver's version and then find out whether there is other evidence to lend assurance to that version. The nature and extent of the corroboration may depend upon the facts of each case. The corroboration need not be of any direct evidence that the accused committed the crime. The corroboration even by circumstantial evidence may be sufficient. But such evidence as to corroboration must be independent and must not be vague or unreliable. In the instant case, we have plenty of such corroborating evidence.

The evidence of Hanuman (PW-15) is trustworthy. He is a khati (carpenter). He was very much known to the accused. He saw the accused alongwith the approver at the sunset time near the waterkund from where they proceeded towards the house of the deceased. He saw them taking their meals at that kund. Khyali Ram (PW-3) and Ram Kishan (PW-4) saw a part of the incident. They saw the accused in the house of the deceased. The evidence of Jaisingh (PW-9) further established the presence of the accused alongwith the approver in the house of the deceased. There is no reason to discard the testimony of these three witnesses. Ranjeet Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1988 SC 672 : (1988) 1 SCC 633 : 1988 SCC (Cri) 229 : 1988 CrLJ 845 : 1988 CrLR (SC) 173.

[10761] ● Eye-witnesses injured witnesses—Corroboration.—What type of corroboration is necessary in a given case depends upon various factors and circumstances. In the instant case, all the eye-witnesses are injured witnesses. It cannot be said that every one of them is active partisan in the sense that they would have the tendency of implicating the innocent persons leaving out the real culprits. Amarjit Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1993 SC 229 : 1993 SCC (Cri) 509 (515) : 1992 CrLJ 3858 : JT 1992 (5) SC 676 : (1992) 3 Crimes 549.

[10762] ● Murder—Eye-witnesses Testimony corroboration.—The testimony of PW-3, who had sent rukka, ExPD, to the Police after deceased had been taken to the Primary Health Centre in a seriously injured condition by PW-8 and PW-10, clearly establishes the presence of both these witnesses in the Primary Health Centre at about 4.30 p.m. The name of PW-8, as the person who had brought deceased to the Primary Health Centre is clearly written in rukka ExPD. Corroboration in this behalf is also available from rukka, ExPA sent by PW-1 which conveyed the necessary information to the police at Gurgaon to the effect that the deceased had been brought to the casualty ward of the Civil Hospital Gurgaon as dead. Balwant Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 1995 SC 84 (87) : 1994 Supp (2) SCC 471.

[10763] ● Accomplice evidence—Corroboration.—Thus, the law is not that the evidence of an accomplice deserves outright rejection if there is no corroboration. What is required is to adopt great circumspection and care when dealing with the evidence of an accomplice. Though there is no legal necessity to seek corroboration of accomplice's evidence it is desirable that Court seeks reassuring circumstances to satisfy the judicial conscience that the evidence is true. State of Tamil Nadu v. Suresh, AIR 1998 SC 1044 : (1998) 2 SCC 372 : 1998 CrLJ 1416 (1420) (SC).

[10764] ● Corroboration—No distinction made between accomplice who is approved and who is not so.—No distinction is made between an accomplice who is or is not an approver. As both have been treated alike, the rule of corroboration applies to both. Accomplice's evidence is taken on record as a matter of necessity in cases where it is impossible to get sufficient evidence of a heinous crime unless one of the participators in the crime is disposed to disclose the circumstances within his knowledge on account of tender of pardon.

For corroborative evidence, the Court must look at the broad spectrum of the approver's version and then find out whether there is other evidence to corroborate and lend assurance to that version. The nature and extent of such corroboration may depend upon the facts of different cases. Corroboration need not be in the form of ocular testimony of witnesses and may be even in the form of circumstantial evidence. Corroborative evidence must be independent and not vague or unreliable. From the judgment of the trial Court as well as the High Court it is crystal clear that the Courts were conscious of the credibility of an approver's witness and insisted upon the corroborative evidence in material particulars of the depositions made by PW-2. Narayan Chetanram Chaudhary v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 2000 SC 3352 : (2000) 8 SCC 457 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 1546 (1566, 1567) : 2000 CrLJ 4640 : 2000 CrLR (SC) 700.

8. BLOOD

[10765] ● Blood.—Legally there is no bar to accepting the uncorroborated testimony of a child witness yet prudence requires that Courts should not act on the uncorroborated evidence of a child whether sworn or unsworn. The true rule is not that corroboration is essential before there can be a conviction, but the necessity of corroboration, as a matter of prudence, except where the circumstances make it safe to dispense with it, must be present to the mind of the judge, (and be indicated in the judgment) before a conviction without corroboration can be sustained. Rameswar Kalyan Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54 : 1952 CrLJ 547 : 1952 SCA 40 : 7 DLR (SC) 87 : (1952) 1 Mad LJ 440 : 1952 SCJ 46 : 1952 SCR 377.

[10766] ● Child witness conviction without corroboration not proper.—Conviction on evidence of child witness without corroboration generally is not proper. Bikha Valu v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1971 SC 1064 : 1971 CrLJ 927.

[10767] ● Evidence of eye-witnesses corroboration.—In the instant case of murder, the evidence of eye-witnesses was corroborated by recovery of weapon of attack stained with human blood. The evidence of eye-witnesses is also corroborated by the fact that spear P-1 stained with human blood was secured from Asa Singh, likewise, spear P-2 and Kirpan P-3 both of which were stained with human blood, were recovered in pursuance of the disclosure statement of Darshin Singh and Sewa Singh accused. Asa Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1973 SC 512 : (1972) 3 SCC 746 : 1972 SCC (Cri) 814 (817, 818) : 1973 CrLJ 623.

[10768] ● Teenage witness—Evidence of.—Evidence of teenage eye-witnesses should be scrutinized with care and caution. Shivji Genu Mohite v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1973 SC 55 : (1973) 3 SCC 219 : 1973 SCC (Cri) 214 : 1973 CrLJ 159 : (1973) 2 SCJ 303. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) C.P. Fernandez v. Union Territory, AIR 1977 SC 135 : (1977) 1 SCC 707 : 1977 CrLJ 167.

[10769] ● Dying declaration—Corroborated by recovery of blood-stained clothes.—Evidence furnished by the dying declaration corroborated by the recovery of blood-stained clothes from the person of accused 1 further corroborated by the recovery of blood-stained knife on the information given by him would affirmatively establish that accused I attacked deceased and caused him four injuries. State of H.P. v. Wazir Chand, AIR 1978 SC 315 : (1978) 1 SCC 130 : 1978 SCC (Cri) 58 (66) : 1978 CrLJ 347 : 1977 CrLR (SC) 511.

[10770] ● Rickshaw puller most important witness—Evidence corroborated by discovery of blood-stained baniyan and knife.—The most important witness in this case is Bodu Lal (PW-2). He is an independent witness, in whose cycle rickshaw the appellant and the co-accused Kanahiya Lal travelled from the Hotel of Shankar Maharaj to the scene of offence. Bodu Lal identified the appellant in the identification parade. According to his evidence, the appellant was wearing a yellow baniyan at the time of the incident. When the appellant was arrested, a yellow baniyan was found on his person and it was stained with human blood. A knife stained with human blood was also recovered from his person.

The High Court convicted the appellant relying on the evidence of Bodu Lal, as corroborated by the discovery of blood-stained baniyan and knife. This evidence seems to us unassailable. Bhanwar Lal v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1985 SC 336 (337) : 1984 Supp SCC 538 : 1985 SCC (Cri) 91 : 1985 CrLJ 657 : 1985 CrLR (SC) 23 : (1985) 1 SCR 859.

[10771] ● Extra-judicial confession—Evidentiary value.—It is clear from the evidence that the accused had made a confession before the police and on the basis of their statements, a blood-stained farsi and a sword were recovered which were found to contain human blood as mentioned earlier. This circumstance, therefore, reinforces both the extra-judicial confession and the evidence of PW-11. Narayan Singh v. State of M.P., AIR 1985 SC 1678 : (1985) 4 SCC 26 : 1985 SCC (Cri) 460 : 1985 CrLJ 1862 : 1985 CrLR (SC) 404 : 1985 (2) Crimes 604.

[10772] ● Presence of human blood on weapon and pant corroborative testimony of witness.—The finding of human blood on the weapon and the pant of the appellant lends corroboration to the testimony of PW-1, Komal Chand, when he states that he had seen the appellant inflicting a knife blow on the deceased. The appellant has not explained the presence of human blood on these two articles. Khujji alias Surendra Tiwari v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1991 SC 1853 : (1991) 3 SCC 627 : 1991 SCC (Cri) 916 (928) : 1991 CrLJ 2653 : 1991 CrLR (SC) 605 : JT 1991 (3) SC 151 : (1991) 3 Crimes 82.

[10773] ● Child witness—Evidence of—Corroboration.—Evidence of a child witness should be examined cautiously and the Court should find some corroboration. In this case the child witness was silent as to the names of the assailants who at night caused death of five persons inside a family house in her statement to police under Section 161, CrPC nor she said about the lantern by which she during the trial asserted, she could identify the culprits. Recovery of murder weapon at the instance of an accused, cannot be held to be a corroborative evidence of the testimony of the child witness. Nirmal Kumar v. State of U.P., AIR 1992 SC 1131 : 1993 Supp (1) SCC 510 : 1992 CrLJ 1426.

[10774] ● Existence of blood-stains on turban and gandasi—Corroborates testimony of eye-witnesses.—The blood-stain on the turban of the appellant and also on the gandasi of the appellant could not be explained by the appellant. Such existence of the blood-stain on the said articles corroborates the testimony of the eye-witnesses. Lakhwinder Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1993 SC 87 : (1993) 2 SCC (Supp) 551 : 1993 SCC (Cri) 719 (724) : 1992 CrLJ 3958 : JT 1992 (5) SC 461 : (1992) 3 Crimes 531.

[10775] ● Children witnesses—Corroboration.—In a Supreme Court case the deceased was the husband of the woman with whom the main accused was intimate. The accused once came to the house when the deceased was absent. The main accused wanted another accused to distil illicit liquor as liquor was not available. The liquor was being distilled. At this stage the deceased came and abused the main accused. The wife of the victim brought a gun and the accused shot him to death. The children of the couple gave detailed description of the episode. Their presence at the place of occurrence was natural. They had been subjected to a preliminary questioning and then were examined. The Supreme Court affirmed conviction. It may be noted that in that case the children witnesses received corroboration from circumstantial evidence as also an oral dying declaration. Baby Kandayanathil v. State of Kerala, AIR 1993 SC 2275.

[10776] ● Conviction on basis of evidence of child aged five years.—Immediately after the incident, the witness, a minor girl was taken away by her maternal uncle. In her evidence she stated that there used to be quarrels between her father and mother and the former used to ill-treat the latter without any rhyme or reason. Then she adds that her father wanted to remarry and therefore, he was ill-treating her mother. Now the case put up was that the husband was ill-treating the wife as he wanted to sell her jewellery to purchase a scooter. Therefore, the statement made by PW-2 that her father was ill-treating her mother because he wanted to remarry could only be result of tutoring. She also tried to involve all the other family members including her uncle Shambhoo whom she could not even recognize in the dock. This she could have done only at the behest of someone else. She also stated that neither her father nor her grandfather met her mother's expense at Deoghar, a fact of which ordinarily a child under five years of age would not be aware. She even tried to involve her father's sister whose name she had not mentioned earlier. There are also certain other statements made in the course of her deposition which would suggest that possibility of tutoring could not be ruled out. Having taken a careful look at the evidence of this child witness we are of the opinion that implicit faith and reliance cannot be placed on her testimony since it is not corroborated by any independent and reliable evidence. It is well-settled that a child-witness is prone to tutoring and hence the Court should look for corroboration particularly when the evidence betrays traces of tutoring. Arbind Singh v. State of Bihar, AIR 1994 SC 1068 : 1995 Supp (4) SCC 416 : 1994 SCC (Cri) 1418 (1420) : 1994 CrLJ 1227.

[10777] ● Case based on circumstantial evidence.—"If the evidence of PW-2 is trust-worthy, which we hold it is, we see no reason why reliance should not be placed thereon, particularly when it is corroborated by the finding of the blood-stained sickle, a blood-stained banian on the person of the accused and injuries on the person of the accused which could have been caused to him in the course of the struggle which his wife who was a well-built person must have put up." State of M.P. v. Ratan Lal, AIR 1994 SC 458 (460) : 1994 CrLJ 131.

[10778] ● Evidence on record corroborating evidence of approver.—The tractor and trolley owned by Amrik Singh, the accused developed a fault and was stranded near the railway track and thereafter Amrik Singh contacted Gandoor Singh (PW-4) and Ranjit Singh (PW-5) residents of village Chotian to tow-chain the said tractor and trolley and bring it to the village Chotian. This all happened on 8th December, 1980, at about 5.00 a.m. Both these witnesses then brought the tractor and trolley to village Chotian. On the following day Amrik Singh and Niranjan Singh, the appellant went to the said village and after knowing the suspicion entertained by Gandoor Singh (PW-4) and Ranjit Singh (PW-5) as regards the foul play since the blood was found on the trolley, Amrik Singh and Niranjan Singh (accused) brought the said tractor to their village. The evidence of Gandoor Singh (PW-4) and Ranjit Singh (PW-5) corroborates the evidence of Gurjant Singh, the approver on this issue. In these circumstances we are of the opinion that the High Court was right in upholding the conviction of the appellant under Sections 120-B, 201 of the Indian Penal Code. We accordingly uphold the conviction of the appellant for the offences punishable under Sections 120-B and 201, IPC. Niranjan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1996 SC 3254 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 939 : 1996 CrLJ 2506 : 1996 (2) Crimes 251 (SC) : 1996 (2) CCR 137.

[10779] ● Witness—Testimony.—It is settled law some improvements here and some exaggerations there or some minor discrepancies in the evidence do not hurt the prosecution case. PW-4, Dr. Das, who had done post-mortem, does not in any way show if Ranjit Singh was not in a position to speak. Dying declaration has received corroboration because of finding of one blood-stained keduwa from appellant Rooqa and blood-stained lathi recovered at the instance of appellant Baje. No doubt, it is correct that the serologist had not given the blood groupings; but, the finding of extensive stains of human blood does incriminate the appellants, because when they were questioned about these findings in their examination under Section 313, CrPC they had not given any explanation, which it was their duty, if the blood-stains had been contacted, not in the course of the occurrence but due to injury received somewhere else, as contended by Shri Bachawat. Failure to bring on record any evidence regarding motive does not, however, weaken a prosecution case, though existence of the same may strengthen the same. Secondly, there is also nothing on record to show as to why the dying man would have falsely implicated the appellants. Natural presumption is that a dying man does not lie, if there be no motive for the same. We confirm the conviction as awarded by the High Court; so too the sentence which is imprisonment for life. Meharban v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1997 SC 1528 : 1997 SCC (Cri) 118 : 1997 CrLJ 766 : 1996 CrLR (SC) 614 : 1996 (4) Crimes 23.

[10780] ● Appreciation of evidence—Knife blows corroborated by recovery of knife.—In the present case, apart from the evidence of PW-7, the prosecution version that he saw that appellant was having knife in his hand and was quarrelling with the deceased gets corroboration from the evidence of PWs-11 and 12 to whom he disclosed the incident immediately. On the basis of the said information, within one hour, FIR was lodged disclosing the name of the appellant as the person who inflicted the knife blow. The prosecution version gets further corroboration from discovery of Mndammal Knife containing the human blood Group "A". Further the bush shirt and banyan which were put on by the accused at the time of incident were having extensive blood stains which were also found containing human blood Group "A". Koli Lakhmanbhai Chanabhai v. State of Gujarat, AIR 2000 SC 210 (211, 212) : (1996) 10 SCC 615 : 1997 CrLJ 766 : 2000 CrLR (SC) 111.

[10781] ● Testimony of child—No legal bar against relying on.—There is no legal bar against relying on the testimony of a child to whom oath could not be administered due to her incapacity to understand the meaning of oath, if the Court is satisfied that her evidence is reliable. Evidence of victim was corroborated by her friend and medical evidence. High Court was correct in believing the story of the victim, particularly in the light of the medical evidence and also the testimony of her friend. Paras Ram v. State of Himachal Pradesh, (2001) 4 Supreme 484 : (2001) 3 Crimes 184 (SC).

[10782] ● Child witness.—It cannot be laid down as a rule that in all circumstances, the evidence of a minor must be corroborated by other independent evidence, but the evidence of a minor requires close scrutiny. Pratap Singh v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 2006 SC 514 : (2005) 13 SCC 624 : 2006 CrLJ 310 (312, 313) : 2006 (1) Crimes 61.

[10783] ● Finding of blood stains on salwar of accused.—Finding of blood stains on Salwar of Accused and its matching with the blood group of deceased Sunil and Lokesh strengthened the case of prosecution. Ram Singh v. Sonia, AIR 2007 SC 1218 : (2007) 3 SCC 1 : 2007 CrLJ 1642 (1663) : 2007 (2) Crimes 1 (SC).

9. CIRCUMSTANCES

[10784] ● Circumstances.—The learned Judges who dealt with the case, did not condemn the oral evidence outright, but, as a matter of prudence and caution, they decided not to convict an accused person unless there were some circumstances to lend support to the evidence of the eye-witnesses with regard to him. It is quite clear on reading the judgment that the corroboration which the learned Judges required to satisfy themselves, was not that kind of corroboration which one requires in the case of the evidence of an approver or an accomplice, but corroboration by some circumstances which would lend assurance to the evidence before them and satisfy them that the particular accused persons were really concerned in the murder of the deceased. Judged by this standard, which it was open to them to prescribe, it seems to us that the case of each of the appellants clearly fell within the rule which they had laid down for their own guidance. Lachman Singh v. State, AIR 1952 SC 167 : 1952 CrLJ 863.

[10785] ● Dying declaration—Conviction of accused on basis of.—The firing of shot was heard by the deceased and after he was injured, he turned to that side and saw the accused running away and he identified him and has given the particulars of the accused namely about his residence and his brother's name also. Therefore, there is no question of any mistake in identification. The High Court has considered this aspect in great detail and has rightly held that all the particulars mentioned in the dying declaration would leave no doubt regarding the identity of the accused. Apart from this even though PW-1 is treated hostile, in his chief examination and also during cross-examination on the first day, he supported the prosecution case and his evidence also would show that it was the accused who shot at the deceased. The Doctors, PWs. 3 and 4 who recorded the dying declaration deposed that the injured was conscious and his mental condition was such that he could give a statement and whatever he stated was correctly recorded and read out to him. The High Court also pointed out certain circumstances which corroborate the dying declaration. Therefore we see absolutely no grounds to come to a different conclusion. Gopal (Ram Gopal) v. State of U.P., 1994 SCC (Cri) 169 : 1994 CrLJ 240 : 1993 CrLR (SC) 683 : 1993 (3) Crimes 1106.

[10786] ● Evidence of approver—Corroboration.—In the instant case the only evidence other than the deposition of the said approver, is the deposition of PW-16, the brother of the deceased who only stated that the deceased was seen by the said brother near the canal bridge of village Midha at about 9.00 p.m. on 28.7.1982 and he had gone to the western side alongwith the appellant Shera Singh. As the names of other two accused were not mentioned by PW-16, the High Court gave them the benefit of doubt and acquitted them but since the name of the appellant was mentioned by PW-16 as the person with whom the deceased was last seen together, the conviction against the appellant has been upheld by the High Court. Such finding of the High Court is not justified. Simply on the evidence of PW-16 that the deceased was last seen in the company of the appellant, the appellant is not liable to be convicted for the offence of murder. The deposition of an approver is required to be corroborated in material particulars. The circumstances about which PW-16 deposed cannot be regarded such a corroboration. So, the conviction of the appellant by relying upon the evidence of PW-13 was not justified. Shera Singh v. State of Punjab, (1996) 10 SCC 330 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 1271 (1271-1272).

[10787] ● Minor inter se contradiction in evidence of eyes-witnesses.—There are some minor inter-se contradictions in the evidence of these three eye-witnesses but in our opinion the same are of too trivial in nature and, therefore, the Courts below rightly ignored such minor contradictions. All the three accused came together on a motorcycle and after getting down near the log cabin of Cheturam, A-1 and A-2 threw the acid and then assaulted him and thereafter fled away on the same motorcycle. This unimpeachable evidence cannot be overlooked and in our opinion the Courts below have committed no error in convicting all the three accused persons. The most crucial circumstance against A-1 and A-2 is that they had sustained acid burn injuries on their persons. After going through the evidence and other materials on record we are satisfied that the impugned judgment and order of conviction and sentence passed by the High Court does not suffer from any infirmity. Asha alias Ashanand v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1997 SC 2828 : (1997) 11 SCC 525 : 1997 SCC (Cri) 712 : 1997 CrLJ 3508 : 1997 CrLR (SC) 406 : 1997 (2) Crimes 36.

[10788] ● Evidence of witness—Corroborated by the facts that explosion took place in house of appellant.—The most important circumstance which corroborates the evidence of PW-2 is the very fact that an explosion took place in the house of the appellant, which was proved to be the consequence of storing explosive bombs. Shamsher Khan v. State (NCT of Delhi), AIR 2000 SC 3662 (3664) : (2000) 8 SCC 568 : 2001 CrLJ 119 : 2001 CrLR (SC) 49.

10. CONFESSION

[10789] ● Confession.—The extent and nature of corroboration depends upon the circumstances of each case. Corroboration, however, must be on material particulars connecting the accused with the crime. The production of property, the subject of offence, or some other article connected with the offence will be sufficient corroboration. Hemraj v. State of Ajmer, AIR 1954 SC 462 : 1954 SCR 1133. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Shri Sail Nageshia Pare v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1985 SC 866 : (1985) 2 SCC 341 : 1985 SCC (Cri) 235 : 1985 CrLJ 1173 : (1985) 1 Crimes 876 : 1985 Pat LJR (SC) 40.

[10790] ● Evidentiary value of confession.—Each and every circumstance mentioned in the confession with regard to the participation of the accused person in the crime is not required to be separately and independently corroborated nor is it essential that the corroboration must come from facts and circumstances discovered after the confession is made. Balbir Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1957 SC 216 : 1957 CrLJ 216.

[10791] ● No bar to base conviction on retracted confession.—Although rule or prudence insists on corroboration there is no legal bar to base conviction on retracted confession. The test for the evidence of accomplice is not appropriate for dealing with retracted confessions. The standard of corroboration in the two are quite different. In case of a person who has retracted from his statement general corroboration is sufficient, while the evidence of an accomplice is required to be corroborated in material particulars. Subramania Goundan v. State of Madras, AIR 1958 SC 66 : 1958 CrLJ 238.

[10792] ● Retracted confession and evidence of accomplice—Difference.—The standard of corroboration in respect of retracted confession and evidence of an accomplice is different. In the case of a person confessing who has resided from his statement, general corroboration is sufficient, while accomplice's evidence should be corroborated in material particulars. In addition the Court must find that the reasons given for the retraction in the case of a confession are untrue. Subramaniyam Goundan v. State of Madras, AIR 1958 SC 66 : 1958 CrLJ 238. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Modi Ganga v. State of Orissa, AIR 1981 SC 1165 : (1981) 2 SCC 224 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 411 : 1981 CrLJ 628.

[10793] ● Confession of co-accused—Relevancy.—The confession of co-accused is not irrelevant against co-accused but it is a matter of practice that it is not ordinarily acted upon without corroboration. Ram Parkash v. State of Punjab, AIR 1959 SC 1 : 1959 CrLJ 90 : 1959 SCR 1219.

[10794] ● Extra-judicial confessional statement corroboration.—The Court requires some material corroboration before an extra-judicial confessional statement is acted upon. Ratan Gaud v. State of Bihar, AIR 1959 SC 18 : 1959 CrLJ 108.

[10795] ● Retracted confession unsafe to convict on basis of.—Courts ordinarily consider it unsafe to convict any accused person on the basis of his retracted confession except where the truth of such confession is established by corroboration in material particulars by independent evidence. What is sufficient corroboration for this purpose has to be decided in each case on its own facts and circumstances. It may, however, be generally stated that where the prosecution by the production of reliable evidence which is independent of the confession and which is also not tainted evidence like the evidence of an accomplice or the evidence of a co-accused, establishes the truth of certain parts of the account given in the confession and these parts are so integrally connected with other parts of the accused's confession, that a prudent judge of facts would think it reasonable to believe, in view of the established truth of these parts, that what the accused has stated in the confession as regards his own participation in the crime is also true, that a sufficient corroboration. More than this is not needed; less than this is ordinarily insufficient. Nand Kumar v. State of Rajasthan, 1963 (2) CrLJ 702 : 1963 (2) SCR 890.

[10796] ● Admissibility of evidence and weight to be attached—Distinction between.—There is a clear distinction between the admissibility of an evidence and the weight to be attached to it. A confessional soliloquy is a direct piece of evidence. It may be an expression of conflict of emotion; a conscious effort to stifle the pricked conscience; an argument to find excuse or justification for his act; or a penitent or remorseful act of exaggeration of his part in the crime. The tone may be soft and low; the words may be confused; they may be capable of conflicting interpretations depending on witnesses, whether they are biased or honest, intelligent or ignorant, imaginative or prosaic, as the case may be. Generally they are mutterings of a confused mind. Before such evidence can be accepted, it must be established by cogent evidence what were the exact words used by the accused. Even if so much was established, prudence and justice demand that such evidence cannot be made the sole ground of conviction. It may be used only as a corroborative piece of evidence. Sahoo v. State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1966 SC 40 : 1966 CrLJ 68 : 1965 (3) SCR 86.

[10797] ● Extra-judicial confession—Whether reliable and whether finds corroboration.—Before the Court will act on extra-judicial confession the circumstances under which the confession is made, the manner in which it is made, the persons to whom it is made will be considered along with two rules of caution. First, whether the evidence of confession is reliable and secondly whether it finds corroboration. Wakil Nayak v. State of Bihar, (1971) 3 SCC 778 : 1972 CrLJ 566.

[10798] ● Extra-judicial confession corroboration.—It is a matter of prudence for the Courts to find corroboration from some independent source before relying upon confession even though retracted extra judicial confession can also legally form basis of concession. Abdul Ghani v. State of U.P., AIR 1973 SC 264 : (1973) 4 SCC 17 : 1973 CrLJ 280 : 1973 CrLR (SC) 64.

[10799] ● Extra-judicial confession—Evidence furnished by.—The evidence furnished by the extra-judicial confession made by the accused to witnesses cannot be termed to be a tainted evidence and if corroboration is required it is only by way of abundant caution. If the Court believes the witnesses before whom the confession is made and it is satisfied that the confession was voluntary, then in such a case conviction can be founded on such evidence alone. Maghar Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1975 SC 1320 : (1975) 4 SCC 234 : 1975 CrLJ 1102.

[10800] ● Retracted confession when to be acted upon.—Retracted confession can be acted upon only if substantially corroborated by independent evidence. State of U.P. v. Bolta Singh, AIR 1978 SC 1770 : (1979) 1 SCC 31 : 1978 All LJ 1156. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Puran v. State of Punjab, AIR 1953 SC 459 : 1953 CrLJ 1925; (2) Pyare Lal Bhargav v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1963 SC 1094 : 1963 (2) CrLJ 178.

[10801] ● Retracted confession—Conviction on basis of.—Conviction on the basis of retracted confession is not permissible. Kora Ghasi v. State of Orissa, AIR 1983 SC 360 : (1983) 2 SCC 251 : 1983 SCC (Cri) 387 : 1983 CrLJ 692 : 1983 CrLR (SC) 188.

[10802] ● Confessions retracted.—The confessions have no doubt been retracted, but in view of the fact that they are generally corroborated the circumstantial evidence in ample measure there is no satisfactory reason for the confessions not being accepted and acted upon. Henry West Muller Roberts v. State of Assam, AIR 1985 SC 823 : (1985) 3 SCC 291 : 1985 CrLJ 1079.

[10803] ● Retracted confession by accused form basis for convicting co-accused.—A retracted confession by an accused may form the basis for convicting co-accused though it may be taken into consideration against co-accused also. It is wrong to think that a confession can lead nowhere. Shri Shail Nageshi Pare v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1985 SC 866 : (1985) 2 SCC 341 : 1985 SCC (Cri) 235 : 1985 CrLJ 1173.

[10804] ● Retracted confession—Without independent corroboration.—Retracted confession without independent corroboration cannot sustain conviction. Palanisamy v. State of T.N., AIR 1986 SC 593 : (1986) 1 SCC 693 : 1986 CrLJ 551 : (1986) 1 Crimes 599 (SC).

[10805] ● Hand-writing expert—Evidence of.—Confessional statement corroborated without first marshalling and considering evidence against accused excluding confession altogether from consideration. If on such consideration or evidence available other than confession conviction can safely be based, then only confession could be used to support that belief or conclusion. Confession could be used to support that belief or conclusion. Confession of accused retracted at the time when accused was questioned under Section 313, CrPC—It would be erroneous when prosecution making confessional statement as basis and then looking for corroboration and concluding that confession corroborated in material particulars by prosecution witness. Evidence of handwriting expert be decisive if prosecution witness believable. Chandrakant Chimanlal Desai v. State of Gujarat, (1992) 1 SCC 473 : 1992 CrLJ 2757.

[10806] ● Circumstantial evidence—Corroborated by extra-judicial confession.—PW-1 has given a cogent and convincing evidence and has given all the details as to how the accused came to him and confessed before him and that accused said that he would go to Police Station. Then we have the evidence of the Head Constable who was in the Police Station before whom the accused surrendered himself. As a matter of fact the accused himself has gone to the Police Station and lodged a complaint by giving there a first information report. The evidence of the two children show that the accused was in the company of the deceased in the field and thereafter he was seen missing. The accused has no explanation as to where he went and why he went to the Police Station and he also had not come forward with any acceptable explanation for the presence of the blood on the clothes as well as on the pick-axe. The serological report shows that the group of the blood found on the clothes of the accused was the same as that of the deceased. These are the circumstances which corroborate extra-judicial confession. Lavji Mona v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1993 SC 2480 (2481) : 1993 CrLJ 3148.

[10807] ● Firing by guns corroborated by against of ballistic expert.—Prosecution case that the appellants had fired their guns stood amply corroborated by the report of the ballistic expert that all the cartridges of .12 bore recovered from the house of the deceased had been fired from the guns of the appellants. Bhola Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1994 SC 137 : 1994 Supp (1) SCC 546 : 1993 CrLJ 3904 : 1993 CrLR (SC) 558 : 1993 Crimes 303.

[10808] ● Retracted extra-judicial confession—Reliability.—It is well-settled now that a retracted extra-judicial confession, though a piece of evidence on which reliance can be placed, but the same has to be corroborated by independent evidence. That apart, the Court must be satisfied that the confession alleged to have been made to PW-11 was true and voluntary one and in judging the same, the conduct of PW-11 and the circumstances which impelled the accused to make such a statement to PW-11 should be above suspicion. PW-11 deposed that he and the accused studied together some years ago and thereafter they left the school and PW-11 was working as a labourer. PW-11 further admitted that 7 or 8 years back, the accused and the father left the village and two years prior to this occurrence he met him and during the period, the accused did not even visit his house. PW-11 further admitted that he did not inform anybody and he did not even think of informing the Police even after coming to know that the accused committed the murder. Though he has stated that he informed his mother but no statement of the mother has been recorded as such. PW-11 further deposed that on 8-5-1977 the accused was living in the village on which date he was arrested. But he has not stated so before the Police. This conduct of PW-11 throws any amount of suspicion on his veracity. Unless we are satisfied that the extra-judicial confession itself is true, voluntary and reliable, we cannot proceed further to examine whether there is any other independent corroboration evidence. There are many suspicious features in the evidence of PW-11. It becomes highly doubtful as to why the accused should cover such a long distance and go all the way to PW-11 to confess his crime and then immediately leave his house. This is a retracted extra-judicial confession which is the sole basis on which both the Courts have relied and based the conviction. If PW-11's evidence becomes unreliable, then there is no other circumstance to connect the accused with the crime. Sakharam Shankar Bansode v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1994 SC 1594 (1595) : 1994 SCC (Cri) 505 : 1994 CrLJ 2189.

[10809] ● Extra-judicial confession—Corroboration not necessary.—Law does not require that the evidence of an extra-judicial confession should in all cases be corroborated and where such confession was proved by an independent witness who was a responsible officer and who bore no animus against the accused, there was hardly any justification to disbelieve the same. Vinayak Shivajirao Pal v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1998 SC 1096 (1100) : (1998) 2 SCC 233 : 1998 SCC (Cri) 610 : 1998 CrLJ 1558 : 1998 CrLR (SC) 83. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Piara Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1977 SC 2274 : (1977) 4 SCC 452 : 1977 CrLJ 1941.

[10810] ● Extra-judicial confession corroboration.—It is no doubt true that extra-judicial confession by its very nature is rather a weak type of evidence and it is for this reason that a duty is cast upon the Court to look for corroboration from other reliable evidence on record. Such evidence requires appreciation with a great deal of care and caution. If such an extra-judicial confession is surrounded by suspicious circumstances, needless to state that its credibility becomes doubtful and, consequently, it loses its importance. Pakkirisamy v. State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 1998 SC 107 (109) : (1997) 8 SCC 158 : 1998 CrLJ 89 : JT 1997 (8) SC 310.

[10811] ● Confessional statement of approver to Magistrate before tender of pardon can be aged as corroborative material.—The confessional statement given by PW-2 to the Magistrate before pardon was tendered to him, is projected as a material for corroboration. Though legally it can be used as a corroborative material, we are not disposed to attach great weight to it since it is only the former statement of an accomplice. Ramprasad v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1999 SC 1969 : (1999) 5 SCC 30 : 1999 SCC (Cri) 651 (657) : 1999 CrLJ 2889 : 1999 CrLR (SC) 378 : JT 1999 (4) SC 74.

[10812] ● Confession by one accused can be used against Co-accused for Corroboration.—The Confession made one co-accused can be used against the co-accused even when the other conditions under Section 30, Evidence Act are satisfied only for the purpose of corroboration. State of Maharashtra v. Damu Gopinath Shinde, AIR 2000 SC 1691 : (2000) 6 SCC 269 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 1088 : 2000 CrLJ 2301.

[10813] ● Corroboration of confessional statement of rule of law.—Corroboration of the confessional statement is not a rule of law but a rule of prudence. Whether in a given case corroboration is sufficient, would depend upon the facts and circumstances of that case. In order to sustain a conviction on the basis of a confessional statement, it is sufficient that there is its general corroboration. State of Maharashtra v. Bharat Chaganlal Raghani, AIR 2002 SC 409 : (2001) 9 SCC 1 : 2002 CrLJ 1944.

[10814] ● Confessional statement sufficient general corroboration from testimony of witnesses and documents.—Looking at the record of the instant case including the testimony of witnesses and the documents produced, we find sufficient general corroboration of the confession statements made by A 5 and A 6. It is proved that they were associates of Dawood Ibrahim and Abu Salem (A 9) and were continuously in touch with them on telephone for the purpose of getting directions and receiving remuneration. They were seem at and near the place of occurrence on 7-3-1995. They had brought weapons of offence and distributed to other accused. Recoveries of the weapons were made from them which were seized in the presence of witnesses. They were identified by the witnesses at the Test identification parade. Their other associates in crime have been killed or absconding. The cause which provoked Abu Salim (A 9) to kill Pradeep Jain stands corroborated by the testimony of PW-23, widow of the deceased what more corroboration was required in such a case has not been pointed out for the learned counsel appearing for A 5 and A 6. State of Maharashtra v. Bharat Chaganlal Raghani, AIR 2002 SC 409 (429, 430, 431) : (2001) 9 SCC 1 : 2002 CrLJ 944.

[10815] ● Extra-judicial confession by co-accused may be admitted as corroboration piece of evidence.—Another incriminating circumstance sought to be proved against the accused is the extra-judicial confession alleged to have been made by the ninth accused PM wherein he named A-1, A-2, A-5 and A-6. It is alleged that he made the confession of PW-105 SN and A-9 is alleged to have disclosed to PW-105 that these accused persons had given him money and he murdered SGN for the sake of money. Under Section 30 of the Evidence Act, the extra-judicial confession made by a co-accused could be admitted in evidence only as a corroborative piece of evidence. In the absence of any substantive evidence against these accused persons, the extra-judicial confession allegedly made by the ninth accused loses its significance and there cannot be any conviction based on such extra-judicial confession. The High Court, in our view, has given cogent and satisfying reasons for the acquittal of the accused A-1 to A-8. State of Madhya Pradesh v. Paltan Mallah, AIR 2005 SC 733 : 2005 CrLJ 918 (921, 922) : 2005 (3) Crimes 220 (SC).

[10816] ● Extra-judicial confession—Corroboration.—Extra-judicial confession being generally of weak nature, no conviction can be based solely thereupon unless the same is corroborated on material particulars. Baldev Singh v. State of Punjab, (2009) 6 SCC 564 : 2009 (3) Crimes 8 (SC).

11. DYING DECLARATION

[10817] ● Dying declaration—Not safe to conviction evidence furnished by.—It is not safe to convict an accused person merely on the evidence furnished by dying declaration without further corroboration because such a statement is not made on oath and is not subject to cross-examination and because the marker of it might be mentally and physically in a state of confusion and might well be drawing upon his imagination while he was making the declaration. Ram Nath Madhoprasad v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1953 SC 420 : 1953 CrLJ 1772.

[10818] ● Dying declaration to be subjected to close scrutiny.—In order to pass the test of reliability, a dying declaration has to be subjected to a very close scrutiny, keeping in view the fact that the statement has been made in the absence of the accused who had no opportunity of testing the veracity of the statement by cross-examination. But once the Court has come to the conclusion that the dying declaration was the truthful version as to the circumstances of the death and the assailants of the victim, there is no question of further corroboration. If, on the other hand, the Court, after examining the dying declaration in all its aspects, and testing its veracity, has come to the conclusion that it is not reliable by itself, and that it suffers from an infirmity, then, without corroboration it cannot form the basis of a conviction. Thus, the necessity for corroboration arises not from any inherent weakness of a dying declaration as a piece of evidence, as held in some of the reported cases, but from the fact that the Court, in a given case, has come to the conclusion that that particular dying declaration was not free the infirmities, referred to above or from such other infirmities as may be disclosed in evidence in that case. Khushal Rao v. State of Bombay, AIR 1958 SC 22 : 1958 CrLJ 106 : 1958 Mad LR (Cri) 100.

[10819] ● Truthful and reliable dying declaration from sole basis of conviction.—A truthful and reliable dying declaration may form the sole basis of conviction, even though it is not corroborated. But the Court must be satisfied that the declaration is truthful. The reliability of the declaration should be subjected to a close scrutiny, considering that it was made in the absence of the accused who had no opportunity to test its veracity by cross-examination. If the Court finds that the declaration is not wholly reliable and a material and integral portion of the deceased's version of the entire occurrence is untrue, the Court may, in all the circumstances of the case, consider it unsafe to convict the accused on the basis of the declaration alone without further corroboration. Thurukanni Pompiah v. State of Mysore, AIR 1965 SC 939 : 1965 (2) CrLJ 31.

[10820] ● Dying declaration—When can be acted upon without—Corroboration.—If the statement of a dying person passes the test of careful scrutiny applied by the Courts, it becomes a most reliable piece of evidence which does not require any corroboration. Suffice it to say that it is now well established by a long course decisions of this Court that although a dying declaration should be carefully scrutinized but if after perusal of the same, the Court is satisfied that the dying declaration is true and is free from any effort to prompt the deceased to make a statement and is coherent and is consistent, there is no legal impediment in founding the conviction on such a dying declaration even if there is no corroboration. Kusa v. State of Orissa, AIR 1980 SC 559 : (1980) 2 SCC 207 : 1980 SCC (Cri) 389 (393, 394) : 1980 CrLJ 408 : 1980 CrLR (SC) 200 : (1980) 2 SCR 801.

[10821] ● Dying declaration—Conviction on basis of.—There can be conviction on the basis of dying declaration and it is not at all necessary to have a corroboration provided the Court is satisfied that the dying declaration is a truthful dying declaration and not vitiated in any manner. State of Assam v. Mufizuddin Ahmad, AIR 1983 SC 274 : (1983) 2 SCC 14 : 1983 SCC (Cri) 325 : 1983 CrLJ 426 : 1983 CrLR (SC) 1673. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) State of U.P. v. Chet Ram, AIR 1989 SC 1543 : (1989) 2 SCC 425 : 1989 CrLJ 1785 : 1989 (2) Crimes 13.

[10822] ● Dying declaration—Evidentiary value.—Section 32(1) of the Evidence Act is an exception to the general rule that hearsay evidence is not admissible evidence and unless evidence is tested by cross-examination, it is not creditworthy. Under Section 32 when a statement is made by a person, as to the cause of death or as to any of the circumstances which result in his death, in cases in which the cause of that person's death comes into question, such a statement, oral or in writing, made by the deceased to the witness is a relevant fact and is admissible in evidence. The statement made by the deceased, called the dying declaration, falls in that category provided it has been made by the deceased while in a fit mental condition. A dying declaration made by person on the verge of his death has a special sanctity as at that solemn moment, a person is most unlikely to make any untrue statement. The shadow of impending death is by itself the guarantee of the truth of the statement made by the deceased regarding the cause of circumstances leading to his death. A dying declaration, therefore, enjoys almost a sacrosanct status, as a piece of evidence, coming as it does from the mouth of the deceased victim. Once the statement of the dying person and the evidence of the witnesses testifying to the same passes the test of careful scrutiny of the Courts, it becomes a very important and a reliable piece of evidence and if the Court is satisfied that the dying declaration is true and free from any embellishment such a dying declaration, by itself, can be sufficient for recording conviction even without looking for any corroboration. If there are more than one dying declarations, then the Court has also to scrutinise all the dying declarations to find out if each one of these passes the test of being trustworthy. The Court must further find out whether the different dying declarations are consistent with each other in material particulars before accepting and relying upon the same. Kundula Bala Subrahmanyam v. State of Andhra Pradesh, (1993) 2 SCC 684 : 1993 CrLJ 1635 : 1993 (1) Crimes 1169.

[10823] ● Dying declaration—Corroborated by evidence of witnesses.—Even assuming there was some infirmity, there is ample corroboration to the dying declaration from the evidence of PWs-1, 3 and 4, out of whom PWs-1 and 3 are the injured witnesses. The injuries on them establish that they were present at the scene of occurrence and during the course of the same transaction they received the injuries. The learned Counsel further submits that the assailants alleged to have inflicted these injuries have been acquitted. That by itself cannot be a ground to reject the evidence once we accept their presence and also other persons received injuries during the course of the same transaction. However, their evidence have been used only for corroboration in the dying declaration. The names of three appellants have been mentioned in the dying declaration and to that extent the dying declaration is also corroborated by the evidence of PWs-1, 3 and 4. Therefore, there is ample evidence in this case establishing the guilt of the three appellants. Nawab Ali Jhinnu v. State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1994 SC 1607 (1609) : 1994 CrLJ 2191.

[10824] ● Dying declaration—Basis of conviction.—The dying declaration, if after careful scrutiny the Court is satisfied that it is true and free from any effort to induce the deceased to make a false statement and if it is coherent and consistent, there is no legal impediment to form such dying declaration the basis of conviction, even if there is no corroboration. State of Rajasthan v. Kishore, AIR 1996 SC 2035 : (1996) 9 SCC 225 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 646 : 1996 CrLJ 2003 : 1996 (1) Crimes 156 (SC).

[10825] ● Dying declaration recorded by Magistrate—Corroborated by other dying declaration.—The statement given to the Executive Magistrate is quite clear and is a categorical statement. It gets corroboration, if at all it is needed, from the subsequent dying declaration recorded by the Investigation Officer. It is settled law that a dying declaration, if found truthful, is sufficient to base a conviction without any further corroboration. In this case, the medical evidence corroborates her dying declarations. It is not necessary that it should be recorded in the form of questions and answers as contended for the accused. The Doctor has certified that she was in a mentally fit condition to give the statement. That the prosecution has proved its case beyond any shadow of doubt. The judgment and order of acquittal passed by the High Court is set aside and that of the Sessions Court stands confirmed consequently. State of Uttar Pradesh v. Ameer Ali, (1996) 8 SCC 523 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 686 (688) : JT 1996 (4) SC 123.

[10826] ● Statement given under expectation of death.—Though the statement given to a Magistrate by someone under expectation of death ceases to have evidentiary value under Section 32 of the Evidence Act if the maker thereof did not die, such a statement has, nevertheless, some utility in trials. It can be used to corroborate this testimony in Court under Section 157 of the Evidence Act which permits such use, being a statement made by the witness "before any authority legally competent to investigate". The word "investigate" has been used in the section in a broader sense. Similarly, the words "legally competent" denote a person vested with the authority by law to collect facts. A Magistrate is legally competent to record dying declaration "in the course of an investigation" as provided in Chap. XII of the CrPCode, 1973. The contours provided in Section 164(1) would cover such a statement also vide Maqsoodan v. State of U.P., AIR 1983 SC 126. However, such a statement, so long as its maker remains alive, cannot be used as substantive evidence. Its user is limited to corroboration of contradiction of the testimony of its maker. Gentela Vijayavardhan Rao v. State of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 1996 SC 2791 (2793, 2794) : (1996) 6 SCC 241 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 1290 : 1996 CrLJ 4151.

[10827] ● Dying declaration—Corroboration if necessary.—Though no corroboration of dying declaration as such is necessary to convict the accused a principle which has been laid down in Khushal Rao's case AIR 1958 SC 22, however, in this case, there is circumstantial evidence which corroborates the dying declaration, viz., the statements of PWs-3 and 4 that they found the victim in her room where the smell of kerosene was present, the statement of PW-5, the Doctor, who conducted the post-mortem examination after four days of the accident noticed smell of kerosene, from the scalp of the deceased, statements of PWs-4 and 6 who rushed to the house of the appellant immediately after hearing of the incident and found that the house was locked from inside and the appellant was delaying in opening the lock on one pretext or the other; the plea of the appellant that she died of accident while igniting the oven and that the appellant and DW 2 put water on her was belied from the evidence on record as no sign of water was found in the kitchen and that the ash in the oven was found intact. These facts corroborate and lend assurance to the truth of the declaration of the deceased "mere pati ne mujhe jala diya hai". Ram Bihari Yadav v. State of Bihar, AIR 1998 SC 1850 (1854) : (1998) 4 SCC 517 : 1998 SCC (Cri) 1085 : 1998 CrLJ 2515 : 1998 CrLR (SC) 562 : JT 1998 (3) SC 290.

[10828] ● Dying declaration—Evidentiary value.—A dying declaration is admissible in evidence on the principle of necessity and can form the basis for conviction if it is found to be reliable. While it is in the nature of an exception to the general rule forbidding hearsay evidence, it is admitted on the premises that ordinarily a dying person will not falsely implicate an innocent person in the commission of a serious crime. It is this premises which is considered strong enough to set off the need that the maker of the statement should state so on oath and be cross-examined. In order that a dying declaration may form the sole basis of conviction without corroboration it must be shown that the person making it had the opportunity of identifying the person implicated and is thoroughly reliable. If, in the facts and circumstances of the case, it is found that the maker of the statement was in a fit state of mind and had voluntarily made the statement on the basis of personal knowledge without being influenced by others and the Court on strict scrutiny finds it to be reliable, there is no rule of law or even of prudence that such a reliable piece of evidence cannot be acted upon unless it is corroborated. A dying declaration is an independent piece of evidence like any other piece of evidence. Jai Karan v. State of NCT Delhi, AIR 1999 SC 3512 : (1999) 8 SCC 161 : 1999 SCC (Cri) 1385 (1388) : 1999 CrLJ 4529 : 1999 CrLR (SC) 767 : JT 1999 (7) SC 514.

[10829] ● Dying declaration—Court to deal with caution.—It is well settled that a dying declaration must be dealt with caution for the reason that the maker of the statement had not been subjected to cross-examination. There is no rule of law or rule of prudence that a dying declaration cannot be accepted unless it is corroborated. (Khushal Rao's case, AIR 1958 SC 22). In the instant case PW-9, though declared hostile has admitted that at about 2.30 a.m. when he was going to fetch water for his child, he had seen the deceased running with his clothes on flames. PW-13, who was also declared hostile has admitted that he had heard noise and saw Islamuddin in flames. Later, he informed the accused persons that the man in flames was running from their side of Jhuggi. PW-16 (Dr. George Paul) has stated that in his opinion the deceased had died due to septicaemia and toxaemia and that his body had burn injuries. PW-19, the then SDM has referred to the recording of statement Ex PW-19/A, the narration of which is almost identical as detailed in Ex PW-22/B. It is worthwhile to mention that all the four accused were arrested immediately after recording of the statement of the deceased and registration of the case against them. It is, therefore, evident that the material facts stated in Ex PW-22/B have been corroborated by various witnesses and the attending circumstances of the case. Gulam Hussain v. State of Delhi, AIR 2000 SC 2480 : (2000) 7 SCC 254 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 1343 (1348, 1349) : 2000 CrLJ 3949 : 2000 CrLR (SC) 634.

[10830] ● Oral dying declaration.—An oral dying declaration no doubt can form the basis of conviction, though the Courts seek for corroboration as a rule of prudence. But before the said declaration can be acted upon, the Court must be satisfied about the truthfulness of the same and that the said declaration was made by the deceased while he was in a fit condition to make the statement. The dying declaration has to be taken as a whole and the witness who deposes about such oral declaration to him must pass the scrutiny of reliability. So far as the statement in the ambulance is concerned, it was made to PW-2 who is the brother of the deceased. PW-2 in his cross-examination, candidly admitted that there were three or four persons inside the ambulance when his brother told him the names of his assailants but none of those disinterested persons have been examined by the prosecution to corroborate said PW-2. He also admitted in his cross-examination that those persons who were in the ambulance were present near him when his brother stated the words and yet the prosecution has not offered any explanation as to why none of those persons were examined who could have been disinterested persons deposing about the dying declaration said to have been made by the deceased inside the ambulance while he was being carried to the hospital. While according to the evidence of PW-2, the deceased told him that the appellant gave him a dao blow but according to PW-5 to whom the deceased made a declaration in the hospital, the deceased told him that the appellant held a thang and Paka Singh had a hockey stick. Intrinsically, therefore, the so-called dying declaration made by the deceased to PW-2 is different from the declaration made by the deceased to PW-5. PW-2 happens to be the elder brother of the deceased. In the aforesaid premise, we do not think it safe to hold the evidence of PW-2 to be reliable and, therefore, the oral dying declaration as deposed to him by him cannot be pressed into service for bringing home the charges levelled against the accused/appellant. Heikrujam Chaoba Singh v. State of Manipur, AIR 2000 SC 59 : (1999) 8 SCC 458 : 2000 CrLJ 184.

[10831] ● Rule requiring corroboration of dying declaration—Mere rule of prudence.—Rule requiring corroboration of the dying declaration is a mere rule of prudence. Sham Shankar Kankaria v. State of Maharashtra, (2006) 3 SCC 165 : (2007) 2 SCC (Cri) 663 : (2006) 4 Crimes 59.

[10832] ● Court satisfied that declaration is true—No corroboration required.—Once Court is satisfied that the dying declaration is true, conviction can be based on it without any further corroboration. State of Punjab v. Raj Kumar, 2008 AIR SCW 5698 (5701).

[10833] ● Principles governing dying declaration.—The dying declaration is only a piece of untested evidence and must, like any other evidence, satisfy the Court that what is stated therein is the unalloyed truth and that it is absolutely safe to act upon it. If after careful scrutiny, the Court is satisfied that it is true and free from any effort to induce the deceased to make a false statement and if it is coherent and consistent, there shall be no legal impediment to make it the basis of conviction, even if there is no corroboration. S.P. Devaraju v. State of Karnataka, AIR 2009 SC 1725 : 2009 (12) SCC 676 : 2009 (2) SCR 308.

[10834] ● Dying declaration—Necessity of corroboration.—No absolute rule of law can be laid down that unless dying declaration is corroborated, no conviction can be based on it. Once the Court is satisfied that declaration is true and voluntary, it can base conviction on dying declaration without any further corroboration. Jaishree Anant Khandekar v. State of Maharashtra, (2009) 11 SCC 647 : 2009 (2) Crimes 23 (SC) : 2009 (4) SCR 982; TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Sharda v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 2010 SC 408 : 2010 (1) Crimes 24 : JT 2009 (15) SC 164. (2) Subash Soni v. State of Madhya Pradesh, (2009) 6 SCC 647 : 2009 (8) SCR 136.

[10835] ● Rule of prudence.—Rule requiring corroboration is merely a rule of prudence. Satish Ambanne Bansode v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 2009 SC 1626 : (2009) 1 SCC 217 : 2009 (2) Crimes 19 (SC) : 2009 (3) SCR 1166.

[10836] ● Corroboration, when not required.—Corroboration is not required when a dying declaration is found to be voluntary, reliable and made in fit mental condition. Gopal v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 2009 SC 2111 : (2009) 12 SCC 600 : 2009 CrLJ 2434; TO THE SAME EFFECT : Varrikuppal Srinivas v. State of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 2009 SC 1487 : (2009) 3 SCC 415 : 2009 (1) SCR 680.

[10837] ● Suspicious dying declaration.—Suspicious dying declaration must be corroborated before conviction is based on it. Varrikuppal Srinwas v. State of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 2009 SC 1487 : (2009) 3 SCC 415 : JT 2009 (2) SC 8.

[10838] ● Dying declaration found voluntary—No corroboration required.—Once Court is satisfied that the statement of deceased was not as a result of either tutoring or prompting or product of imagination and further that deceased was in a fit condition of mind, it can base conviction without further corroboration. Kalawati v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 2009 SC 1932 : (2009) 4 SCC 37 : 2009 (3) SCR 187. TO THE SAME EFFECT : Ongali Ravikant v. State of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 2009 SC 2129 : (2009) 13 SCC 647 : 2009 CrLJ 3944.

[10839] ● Different dying declarations—Contradictory to each other—Corroboration is required.—Different dying declaration with contradictions and inconsistency cannot be accepted on their face value and corroboration must be sought from other evidence on record. Samadhan Dhudaka Kali v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 2009 SC 1059 : (2008) 16 SCC 705 : 2009 (1) Crimes 190 (SC) : JT 2009 (1) SC 122.

[10840] ● Dying declaration—Voluntary—Needs no corroboration.—The Court has to be on guard that the statement of deceased was not as a result of either tutoring, prompting or a product of imagination. The Court must be further satisfied that the deceased was in a fit state of mind after a clear opportunity to observe and identify the assailants. Once the Court is satisfied that the declaration was true and voluntary, undoubtedly, it can base its conviction without any further corroboration. It cannot be laid down as an absolute rule of law that the dying declaration cannot form the sole basis of conviction unless it is corroborated. The rule requiring corroboration is merely a rule of prudence. Jayabalan v. U.T. of Pondicherry, 2010 (1) SCC 199 : 2009 (14) JT 401 : 2009 (7) Supreme 270 : 2009 (4) Crimes 172 (SC).

[10841] ● Conviction based on dying declaration—Principles.—The Court has to be on guard that the statement of deceased was not as a result of either tutoring, prompting or a product of imagination. The Court must be further satisfied that the deceased was in a fit state of mind after a clear opportunity to observe and identify the assailants. Once the Court is satisfied that the declaration was true and voluntary, undoubtedly, it can base its conviction without any further corroboration. It cannot be laid down as an absolute rule of law that the dying declaration cannot form the sole basis of conviction unless it is corroborated. The rule requiring corroboration is merely a rule of prudence. Jayabalan v. U.T. of Pondicherry, 2010 (1) SCC 199 : 2009 (13) Scale 614 : 2009 (7) Supreme 270 : 2009 (4) Crimes 172 (SC).

[10842] ● Court satisfied that dying declaration is true and voluntary—No inducement—No corroboration is necessary.—The dying declaration is only a piece of untested evidence and must, like any other evidence, satisfy the Court that what is stated therein is the unalloyed truth and that it is absolutely safe to act upon it. If after careful scrutiny, the Court is satisfied that it is true and free from any effort to induce the deceased to make a false statement and if it is coherent and consistent, there shall be no legal impediment to make it the basis of conviction, even if there is no corroboration. S.P. Devaraju v. State of Karnataka, AIR 2009 SC 1725 : (2009) 12 SCC 676 : 2009 (2) SCR 308 : JT 2009 (2) SC 408 : 2009 (2) Scale 572.

12. EXPERT

[10843] ● Expert.—There is no rule of law nor any rule of prudence which has crystallized into a rule of law that opinion evidence of a handwriting expert must never be acted upon unless substantially corroborated. But having regard to the imperfect nature of the science of identification of handwriting, the approach should be one of caution. Reasons for the opinion must be carefully probed and examined. All other relevant evidence, must be considered. In appropriate cases, corroboration may be sought. In cases where the reasons for the opinion are convincing and there is no reliable evidence throwing a doubt, the uncorroborated testimony of an handwriting expert may be accepted. There cannot be any inflexible rule on a matter which, in the ultimate analysis, is no more than a question of testimonial weight. Murari Lal v. State of M.P., AIR 1980 SC 531 : (1980) 1 SCC 704 : 1980 SCC (Cri) 330 (338) : 1980 CrLJ 396 : 1980 CrLR (SC) 168.

13. FIRST INFORMATION REPORT

[10844] ● First Information Report.—The fact that the first information report was lodged within 35 minutes of the occurrence at the police station at a distance of two miles from the place of occurrence and the fact that in the aforesaid report the names of the accused as the culprits as well as the names of the eye witnesses were mentioned lends considerable corroboration to the testimony of Harihar Nath PW-regarding the participation of the accused-appellants in the present occurrence. Dargahi v. State of U.P., AIR 1973 SC 2695 : 1973 CrLJ 1828.

[10845] ● First Information Report—Evidentiary value.—Unless a first information report can be tendered in evidence under any provision contained in Chapter II of the Evidence Act such as a dying declaration falling under Section 32(1) as to the cause of the informants' death, or as a part of informants' conduct under Section 8, it can ordinarily be used only for the purpose of corroborating, contradicting or discrediting its author, if examined and not any other witness. Shanker v. State of U.P., AIR 1975 SC 757 : (1975) 3 SCC 851 : 1975 SCC (Cri) 270 (273) : 1975 CrLJ 634 : 1975 CrLR (SC) 199.

[10846] ● FIR corroborates statement of maker.—The first information report was lodged within about 10 minutes of the incident and contains the necessary details, including the name of the respondent as the person who inflicted the dagger blow, and the names of the eye-witnesses. It, therefore, goes to corroborate the statement of its maker, Harnam Singh. State of Punjab v. Ramji Das, AIR 1977 SC 1085 : (1977) 4 SCC 597 : 1977 SCC (Cri) 368 (373) : 1977 CrLJ 705 : 1977 CrLR (SC) 198.

[10847] ● Statement in FIR establishing one of miscreants assaulted by vegetable knife.—The best corroborative piece of evidence is furnished by the FIR which was lodged by Karamat Ali (PW-1) on the basis of what he heard from PW-5 in the FIR, which was lodged within two hours of the incidence, the substratum of the entire prosecution case finds place including a statement that during the incident Smt. Naeema Parveen had, in defending herself, given a blow to one of the accused with a vegetable cutting knife. Chand Khan v. State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1995 SC 2140 (2145) : (1995) 5 SCC 448 : 1995 SCC (Cri) 915 : 1995 CrLJ 3675.

14. HEARSAY

[10848] ● Hearsay.—The witness stated that the deceased shouted the name of assailant while he was beaten. This part of testimony is admissible as part of res qestae. It can be used for corroboration of other evidence. Badruddin Rukonddin, AIR 1981 SC 1227 : 1981 Supp SCC 1 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 610 : 1981 CrLJ 729 : 1981 CrLR (SC) 198.

[10849] ● Hearsay evidence—Admissibility.—When a witness testifies about what he heard from somebody else, it is ordinarily not admissible in evidence being hearsay, but if the person for whom he heard is examined to give direct evidence within the meaning of Section 60 of the Evidence Act, the former's evidence would be admissible to corroborate the latter in accordance with Section 157, CrPC. However, such a statement made to a Police Officer, when he is investigating into an offence in accordance with Chap. XII of the CrPCode cannot be used to even corroborate the maker thereof in view of the embargo in Section 162(1), CrPCode appearing in that Chapter and can be used only to contradict him (the maker) in accordance with the provision thereof, except in those cases where sub-section (2) of the section applies. Jagdish Narain v. State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1996 SC 3136 : (1996) 8 SCC 199 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 565 (569).

15. HOSTILE WITNESS

[10850] ● Hostile witness.—It is settled law that evidence of hostile witness also can be relied upon to the extent to which it supports the prosecution version. Evidence of such witness cannot be treated as washed off the record. It remains admissible in the trial and there is no legal bar to base his conviction upon his testimony if corroborated by other reliable evidence. In Re : Bhagwan Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 1976 SC 202 : (1976) 1 SCC 389 : 1976 CrLJ 203. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Sat Paul v. Delhi Administration, AIR 1976 SC 294 : (1976) 1 SCC 727 : 1976 CrLJ 295; (2) Koli Lakhmanbhai Chanabhai v. State of Gujarat, AIR 2000 SC 210 (211) : (1999) 8 SCC 624 : 2000 CrLJ 408 : 2000 CrLR (SC) 111.

16. INFIRM WITNESS

[10851] ● Infirm witness.—It is elementary that the evidence of an infirm witness does not become reliable merely because it has been corroborated by a number of witnesses of the same brand. Muluwa v. State of M.P., AIR 1976 SC 989 : (1976) 1 SCC 37 : 1975 SCC (Cri) 759 (764) : 1976 CrLJ 717 : 1975 CrLR (SC) 521.

17. INFORMERS, SPIES AND DECOY

[10852] ● Informers, Spies and Decoy.—If any of the witnesses are accomplices who are particepes criminis in respect of the actual crime charged, their evidence must be treated as the evidence of accomplices is treated; if they are not accomplices but are partisan or interested witnesses, who are concerned in the success of the trap, their evidence must be tested in the same way as other interested evidence is tested by the application of diverse considerations which must vary from case to case, and in a proper case, the Court may even look for independent corroboration before convicting the accused person. If a Magistrate puts himself in the position of a partisan or interested witness, he cannot claim any higher status and must be treated as any other interested witness. State of Bihar v. Basawan Singh, AIR 1958 SC 500 : 1958 CrLJ 976 : 1958 SCJ 856 : 1958 MCJ (Cri) 641 : (1958) 2 MLJ (SC) 136 : (1958) 2 Andh WR (SC) 136. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Khilli Ram v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1985 SC 79 : (1985) 1 SCC 28 : 1985 SCC (Cri) 24 : 1985 CrLJ 504 : (1984) 2 Crimes 909; (2) Prakash Chand v. State (Delhi Admn.), AIR 1979 SC 400 : (1979) 3 SCC 90 : 1979 SCC (Cri) 656 : 1979 CrLJ 329; (3) Khemu Ram v. State, 1972 CrLJ 381 (HP).

[10853] ● Interested and partisan witnesses—Corroboration.—Both P.Ws. were interested and partisan witnesses. They were concerned in the success of the trap and their evidence must be tested in the same way as that of any other interested witness and in a proper case the Court may look for independent corroboration before convicting the accused person. There is no search witness who is independent in the present case and there is no other evidence from which any corroboration could be found of the evidence given by the members of the raiding party. Ram Prakash Arora v. State of Punjab, AIR 1973 SC 498 : (1972) 3 SCC 652 : 1972 CrLJ 1293.

[10854] ● No flexible rule of law that evidence of relations required corroboration.—There is no general rule that the evidence of the relations of the deceased must be corroborated for securing the conviction of the offender. Each case depends on its own facts and circumstances. In the present case the straightforward nature of the deposition of these two witnesses and the fact that they were undoubtedly in a position to identify the assailants of their father coupled with the recovery of blood-stained earth from the place of occurrence leave no reasonable doubt about the guilt of the accused persons. State of U.P. v. Paras Nath Singh, AIR 1973 SC 1073 : (1973) 3 SCC 647 : 1973 CrLJ 850 : 1973 CrLR (SC) 186 : 1973 (3) SCR 313.

18. INTERESTED WITNESS

[10855] ● Interested witness.—Interested or partisan witness is distinct from an approver or accomplice. While the evidence of former can be accepted even without corroboration, the evidence of the latter class cannot be. Karim v. State, 1971 Ker LT 672 : (1962) 2 SCR 195 relying on : AIR 1961 SC 1762 : (1962) 2 SCR 195. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) B.H. Dabe v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1968 SC 1323 : 1968 CrLJ 1505 : 9 Guj LR 853.

[10856] ● Witnesses and deceased involved in same litigation.—Where witnesses and deceased are involved in the same litigation against each other, witnesses are not reliable without corroboration. Satyanarain v. State of M.P., AIR 1972 SC 1309 : (1972) 3 SCC 484 : 1972 CrLJ 881.

[10857] ● Not safe to act upon testimony of close relation of deceased without corroboration.—"We cannot lose sight of the fact that Ramji Das and Rup Lal being close relations were highly interested in the prosecution. There was no love lost between Ramji Das and the deceased on one hand, and both the accused on the other. In a case of this kind, therefore, particularly where sitting in appeal over a judgment of acquittal recorded by the High Court, it will not be safe to act upon his testimony without corroboration from independent source against each of the two accused. State of Punjab v. Mukhtiar Singh, AIR 1975 SC 2001 : (1975) 4 SCC 590 : 1975 SCC (Cri) 625 (632) : 1975 CrLJ 1745 : 1975 CrLR (SC) 477.

[10858] ● Interested and partisan witness—Evidentiary value of.—It is not the law that the evidence of an interested witness should be equated with that of a tainted witness or that of an approver so as to require corroboration as a matter of necessity. The evidence of an interested witness does not suffer from any infirmity as such but the Courts require as a rule of prudence, not as a rule of law, that the evidence of such witnesses should be scrutinized with a little care. Once that approach is made and the Court is satisfied that the evidence of interested witnesses have a ring of truth such evidence could be relied upon without corroboration. Sarwan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1976 SC 2304 : (1976) 4 SCC 369 : 1976 SCC (Cri) 646 (653) : 1976 CrLJ 1757 : 1976 CrLR (SC) 362.

[10859] ● Credibility of witness—Tests.—The real test of the credibility of Tatoba's version was the medical evidence. If his version was corroborated by the medical evidence there could be no ground to discard his sole evidence just because he happened to be a brother of the deceased. On the other hand, if medical evidence contradicted the version of Tatoba, it was evident that the prosecution case could not succeed. Shamu Balu Chaugule v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1976 SC 557 : 1976 SCC (Cri) 56 : 1976 CrLJ 492 : 1976 CrLR (SC) 26.

[10860] ● Evidence of partisan witness—Corroboration.—There is no hard and fast rule that the evidence of a partisan witness cannot be acted upon without corroboration. If his presence at the scene of occurrence cannot be doubted and his evidence is consistent with the surrounding circumstances and probabilities of the case and strikes the Court as true, it can be a good foundation for a conviction more so if some assurance for it is available from the medical evidence. Tameshwar Sahi v. State of U.P., AIR 1976 SC 59 : (1974) 3 SCC 595 : 1976 SCC (Cri) 19 (24) : 1976 CrLJ 6.

[10861] ● Partisan testimony corroboration by medical evidence.—In the instant case, on facts, the corroboration furnished by the medical evidence, in the circumstances of the case was sufficient to make partisans testimony safe for basing a conviction thereon. Tameshwar Sahi v. State of U.P., AIR 1976 SC 59 : (1974) 3 SCC 595 : 1976 SCC (Cri) 19 (23) : 1976 CrLJ 6.

[10862] ● Eye-witnesses highly interested and partisan.—In the present case each of the two witnesses has deposed that appellant held the left hand of the deceased, appellants 3 & 5 held his right hand and held the deceased from behind and then appellant No.1, delivered a knife blow which according to them resulted in the death of the deceased. Both the witnesses did not attribute any other overt act to appellants 2 to 5. Since both the witnesses are highly interested and partisan, their evidence has to be subjected to a greater scrutiny. In a case of this nature, there is a likelihood of false implication and having regard to the version, we find it difficult to accept the evidence of these two witnesses as against appellants 2 to 5, who are not attributed any overt acts without any further corroboration. It is not necessary in every case that there should be such corroboration, but having regard to the part attributed to the appellants 2 to 5, the possibility of false implication of one or more cannot be ruled out. Therefore, we think it is not safe to convict the appellants 2 to 5. Shaikh Nabab Shaikh Babu Musalman v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1993 SC 169 : 1993 Supp (2) SCC 217 : 1993 SCC (Cri) 517 (520) : 1993 CrLJ 43.

[10863] ● Interested witnesses.—Since they are interested witnesses, their evidence was subjected to greater scrutiny and one of the tests applied is whether the specific overt acts are attributed to them so that the omnibus allegations may not be accepted so as to rule out the possibility of implicating some innocent persons. In appreciating evidence of this kind of witnesses, the Courts have always considered that such of those accused to whom specific overt acts have been attributed consistently and the same is corroborated by the medical evidence and the circumstances of the case, can safely be convicted. Bolineedi Venkataramaiah v. State of A.P., AIR 1994 SC 76 (78) : 1994 Supp (3) SCC 732 : 1994 CrLJ 61.

[10864] ● Evidence of decoy-witness in bribery case—Corroboration.—To sustain conviction on the evidence of a decoy-witness in bribery case, corroboration is needed. But the corroborating evidence can be even by way of circumstantial evidence. M.O. Shamsuddin v. State of Kerala, (1995) 3 SCC 351 : 1995 SCC (Cri) 509 : JT 1995 (3) SC 367 : 1995 (2) Scale 298. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Ramesh Kumar Gupta v. State of M.P., AIR 1995 SC 2121 : (1995) 5 SCC 320 : 1995 SCC (Cri) 909 : 1995 CrLJ 3656 : JT 1995 (6) SC 88 : 1995 CCR (3) 74 (SC) : (1995) 3 Crimes 263 (SC).

[10865] ● Acceptance of bribe by accused Police Inspector.—The complainant went to police station to lodge a diary about disappearance of his wife along with one person, a Kotwar. They met the accused, a police officer, at the police station, narrated to him about the missing wife of PW-1 whereon the accused rebuked him for beating his wife and put PW-1 to custody. PW-1 requested the accused to release him and the accused released him on condition that he would pay to the accused a sum of Rs. 500/-. The aggrieved PW-1 contacted higher officers, a trap was laid. A few notes were treated by phenolphthalein powder. PW-1 knocked the door of the house of the accused and he was called in. The accused asked him if he had brought the amount and PW-1 took out the packet containing five currer.cy notes and tried to hand over the same to the accused. The accused, however, asked him to keep the money between the tape (niwar) and mattress of the cot on which he was sitting. Accordingly PW-kept the notes and gave a signal. Immediately the members of the trap party entered and disclosed their identity to the accused. They searched his person but not finding anything on his person they searched the room and recovered the five notes which were kept between the tape and the mattress of the cot. A seizure memo was prepared and the hands of the accused were washed with solution of Sodium Carbonate and the same was collected in a bottle and sealed. The hands of PW-1 also were washed in that solution which was kept in a separate bottle and sealed. The same test was conducted in respect of the five currency notes. The necessary panchanama of search and seizure was made and after completion of the investigation and after obtaining the necessary sanction, the charge-sheet was laid. It was urged that no currency notes having been found on the person of the accused, the possibility could not be ruled out that the notes were kept there or smuggled inside the cot without the knowledge of the accused. Repelling this contention the apex Court held that PW-1 categorically stated that the accused asked him to keep the notes between the tape and the mattress of the cot and after that he left the room and gave the signal. It must also be remembered that the notes were wrapped in a paper. Unless the accused has touched them after PW-1 left the room his hands would not have been tainted and the phenolphthalein powder test regarding the washing of the hands of the accused gave positive result itself shows that the accused must have handled them at some stage and therefore his bare denial that he had no knowledge whatsoever is without any substance. Ramesh Kumar Gupta v. State of M.P., AIR 1995 SC 2121 : (1995) 5 SCC 320 : 1995 SCC (Cri) 909 : 1995 CrLJ 3656 : JT 1995 (6) SC 88 : 1995 (3) Crimes 263 (SC).

[10866] ● Interested witness not incompetent.—An interested witness is not incompetent to depose but rules of prudence dictate that deposition of such witness should be weighed with care and caution before accepting it. Wariyam Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1996 SC 305 : (1995) 6 SCC 458 : 1995 CrLR (SC) 581 : JT 1995 (7) SC 117 : 1995 (5) Scale 604 (2).

[10867] ● Witnesses—Police officials—Conviction can be recorded on testimony of.—No infirmity attaches to the testimony of Police Officials, merely because they belong to the Police force and there is no rule of law or evidence which lays down that conviction cannot be recorded on the evidence of the Police Officials, if found reliable, unless corroborated by some independent evidence. The rule of prudence, however, only requires a more careful scrutiny of their evidence, since they can be said to be interested in the result of the case projected by them. Where the evidence of the Police Officials, after careful scrutiny, inspires confidence and is found to be trustworthy and reliable, it can form basis of conviction and the absence of some independent witness of the locality to lend corroboration to their evidence, does not in any way affect the creditworthiness of the prosecution case. Tahir v. State (Delhi), AIR 1996 SC 3079 : (1996) 3 SCC 338 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 515 (517, 518).

19. INVESTIGATING OFFICER

[10868] ● Investigating officer.—Whether the evidence of an investigating officer who conducted the search needs to be corroborated depends on the facts of each case. Girdhari Lal Gupta v. D. N. Mehta, Assistant Collector of Customs, AIR 1971 SC 28 : (1970) 2 SCC 530 : 1970 SCC (Cri) 496 : 1971 CrLJ 1.

[10869] ● Testimony of investigating officer—Consideration of.—There is no general rule that the testimony of investigating officer cannot be considered without corroboration. Girdhari Lal Gupta v. D. N. Mehta, Assistant Collector of Customs, AIR 1971 SC 28 : (1970) 2 SCC 530 : 1971 CrLJ 1 : 1971 (3) SCR 748.

[10870] ● Trap witness—Credibility corroboration.—The demanding degree of proof, traditionally required in a criminal case and the devaluation suffered by a witness who is naturally involved in the fruits of his investigative efforts, suggest the legitimate search for corroboration from an independent or unfaltering source—human or circumstantial—to make judicial certitude doubly sure. Not that this approach casts any pejorative reflection on the Police Officer's integrity, but that the hazard of holding a man guilty on interested, even if honest, evidence may impair confidence in the system of justice. We are aware of the exaggerated criticism of the Police Force as a whole and of the reluctance of the framers of the CrPC to trust statements recorded by Police investigators but these are partly at least, the hangover of the British past. Today trust begets trust and the higher officers of the Indian Police, especially in the Special Police Establishment deserve better credence. Som Prakash v. State of Delhi, AIR 1974 SC 989 : (1974) 4 SCC 84 : 1974 SCC (Cri) 215 (219) : 1973 CrLJ 784 : 1974 CrLR (SC) 216 : (1974) 3 SCR 200.

[10871] ● Investigating officer not appearing as witness without justifiable reason.—It is unfortunate that Investigating Officer has not stepped into the witness-box without any justifiable ground. But this conduct of the Investigating Officer or other hostile witnesses cannot be a ground for discarding the evidence of the eyewitness PW-5 and PW-7, who are injured eyewitnesses and whose presence on the spot is established beyond reasonable doubt. Ambika Prasad v. State (Delhi Admn.), AIR 2000 SC 718 (722) : (2000) 2 SCC 646 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 522 : 2000 CrLJ 810.

20. PREVIOUS STATEMENT OF ACCUSED

[10872] ● Previous statement of accused.—"The section makes no exception." Therefore, provided the conditions prescribed, that is to say, "at or about the time, etc." are fulfilled, there can be no doubt that previous statement of accomplice is legally admissible in India as corroboration. The weight to be attached to it is, of course, another matter and it may be that in some cases the evidentiary value of two statements emanating from the same tainted source may not be high, but in view of Section 118 its legal admissibility as corroboration cannot be questioned. To state this is, however, no more than to emphasise that there is no rule of thumb in these cases. When corroborative evidence is produced, it also has to be weighed and in a given case, as with other evidence, even though it is legally admissible for the purpose on hand its weight may be nil. On the other hand, seeing that corroboration is not essential to a conviction, conduct of this kind may be more than enough in itself to justify acceptance of the complainant's story. It all depends on the facts of the case. Rameshwar v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54 (58) : 1952 CrLJ 547.

21. REASONS FOR HOLDING TO BE UNTRUSTWORTHY

[10873] ● Reasons for holding to be untrustworthy.—But, whenever corroboration is looked for, the other evidence must be : (a) from an independent source, and (b) such as to support the direct testimony in material particulars, and (c) must connect the accused with the crime. However, the rule as to the need for corroboration of tainted evidence of an accomplice, or an interested or hostile witness, is not absolute; and, if the Court is satisfied that the witness is truthful and reliable and his evidence does not suffer from any infirmity, it is open to the Court to base a conviction on this sole uncorroborated testimony. Rameshwar v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54 : 1952 CrLJ 547. To the same effect : (1) Kashmira Singh v. State of M.P., AIR 1952 SC 159 : 1953 CrLJ 839; (2) Rao Shiv Bahadur Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1954 SC 322 : 1955 CrLJ 310; (3) Swamirathnam v. State of Madras, AIR 1957 SC 340 : 1957 CrLJ 1014; (4) Sarwan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1957 SC 637 : 1957 CrLJ 1014; (5) State of Bihar v. Basawan Singh, AIR 1958 SC 500 : 1958 CrLJ 976; (6) Vaiknntam Chandrappa v. State of A.P., AIR 1960 SC 1340 : 1960 CrLJ 1681; (7) Ram Narayain v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1973 SC 1188 : (1973) 1 SCC 805 : 1973 SCC (Cri) 545 : 1973 CrLJ 914 : 1973 CrLR (SC) 228; (8) Chandan v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1988 SC 672 : (1988) 1 SCC 633 : 1988 CrLJ 845 : (1988) 1 SCJ 472.

22. RELATIVE WITNESSES

[10874] ● Relative witnesses.—The proposition that when the eye-witnesses to the occurrence were interested persons there should be corroboration of their evidence by independent witnesses cannot be of universal application. Mangal Singh v. State of M.B., AIR 1957 SC 199 : 1957 CrLJ 325.

[10875] ● Eye-witness closely related to victim.—In a murder case when evidence is given by near relatives of the victim and the murder is alleged to have been committed by the enemy of the family, criminal Courts must examine the evidence of the interested witnesses, like the relatives of the victim very carefully. But a person may be interested in the victim, being his relation or otherwise and may not necessarily be hostile to the accused. In that case, the fact that the witness was related to the victim or was his friend, may not necessarily introduce any infirmity in his evidence. In dealing with such evidence, Courts naturally being the enquiry as to whether the said witnesses were chance witnesses or whether they were really present on the scene of the offence. If the offence has taken place in front of the house of the victim, the fact that on hearing his shouts, his relatives rushed out of the house, cannot be ruled out as being improbable. If the criminal Court is satisfied that the witness who is related to the victim was not a chance witness, then his evidence has to be examined from the point of view of probabilities and the account given by him as to the assault has to be carefully scrutinised. In dong so it may be relevant to remember that though the witness is hostile to the assailant, it is not likely that he would deliberately omit to name the real assailant and substitute in his place the name of the enemy of the family out of malice. It is not possible to hold that such witnesses are no better than accomplices and their evidence as a matter of law must receive corroboration before it is accepted. That is not to say that the evidence of such witnesses should be accepted light-heartedly without very close and careful examination. Dariya Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1965 SC 328 : 1965 (1) CrLJ 350 : (1964) 2 SCJ 319.

[10876] ● Evidence of related witness.— Evidence of related witness hostile to accused by itself cannot be relied on for conviction without corroboration from independent sources against each of accused. State of Punjab v. Mukhtiar Singh, AIR 1975 SC 2001 : (1975) 4 SCC 590 : 1975 SCC (Cri) 625 : 1975 CrLJ 1745.

[10877] ● Evidence of eye-witness if corroborated by medical evidence.—If the evidence of an eye-witness is corroborated by medical evidence he should not be disbelieved because he happens to be the brother of deceased. Shamnbalu v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1976 SC 557 : (1976) 1 SCC 438 : 1976 CrLJ 492.

[10878] ● Evidence relatives of deceased.— This is not a case where there was any previous enmity between the deceased or his relative on the one side and the appellant and the accused No. 2 on the other, so that evidence given by the relatives of the deceased could be regarded as suspect needing corroboration from independent witnesses. Varghese Thomas v. State of Kerala, AIR 1977 SC 701 (703) : (1976) 4 SCC 348 : 1977 SCC (Cri) 643 : 1977 CrLJ 1343 : 1977 CrLR (SC) 86.

[10879] ● Evidence of mother of deceased.— The evidence of PW 5 who is no other than the mother of the deceased, is ample corroboration of PW 1 the brother of deceased whose presence is not at all doubted at the scene of occurrence. Jairam v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1993 SC

92 : 1993 SCC (Cri) 731 : 1993 CrLJ 3994 : 1992 (3) Crimes 274.

[10880] ● Evidence of eye-witness—One of whom wife of deceased.—These two witnesses who were related to deceased having not only seen the occurrence but also they have seen the accused persons with their respective weapons in their hands mercilessly assaulting the deceased, which is fully corroborated by the medical evidence and presence of large number of injuries on the dead body of the deceased on different parts. There is no infirmity in High Court relying upon the testimony of the two trustworthy witnesses PWs-6 and 7, one of whom happens to be the wife of the deceased and as such is the most natural witness to be present and having witnessed the occurrence. Hari Ram v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 2000 SC 1647 : (2000) 9 SCC 136 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 1178 (1182) : 2000 CrLJ 2312.

[10881] ● Relative witness—Value of.—The Place of the occurrence is the Court-yard of deceased-Kitab Singh. It was the beginning of the month of July. In that part of the country where the village of occurrence is situated, in early July, the summer is at its height and arrival of monsoon is awaited. The weather is sultry. Usually, people in the villages sleep in verandahs or court-yards to avail open air and if at all there are any casual showers they can easily move to a covered place so as to save themselves from rain water. Gangashri being the wife of the deceased was sleeping on a cot in the same part of the house where her husband was sleeping, and there is nothing unnatural about it. After the mid-night, her getting awake for easing herself and then returning to her cot also appears to be natural and in any case there is nothing unusual or unbelievable about it. She heard some voice and became alert and soon she saw her husband being fatally shot at. A murder having taken place in the house nobody would risk moving 10kms. away in the dead of night to lodge FIR of the incident. Early morning Karan Singh left for the Police Station and lodged the FIR at about 9.45 a.m. The testimony of Gangashri finds support from the testimony of Ram Sanehi, PW-3, Karan Singh, PW-2 and corroboration from the promptly lodged FIR. Baij Nath, PW-4, an uncle of the deceased-Kitab Singh, who also reached soon after the occurrence corroborates the statements of Gangashri and Ram Sanehi. The narration of the incident by Gangashri is most natural. Her testimony has remained unshaken though subjected to lengthy cross-examination. We find no reason to disbelieve her. There is nothing unnatural about Gangashri also sleeping on a cot in the Court-yard. Rising from the sleep at about or after midnight for easing oneself during summer when people consume enough water is also very natural. The voice she heard was "here is enemy shoot him". Rakesh had not named the deceased in his exhortation. But the time Gangashri could understand what the exhortation meant and what was going to happen, the appellant had fired from the katta. The witness sprang up from her cot and grappled with the assailants. The conduct of the witness is most natural and the criticism levelled on the conduct of the witness is unwarranted. Thus, the High Court was fully justified in holding Gangashri a natural witness and a witness of truth and we too on our own independent evaluation of her testimony, find ourselves in agreement will the opinion of the High Court. Sewaka v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 2002 SC 50 : (2001) 10 SCC 1 : 2002 CrLJ 205 : 2002 (1) Crimes 131.

23. RETRACTED CONFESSION

[10882] ● Retracted confession.—A retracted confession does not come within the definition of evidence contained in Section 3. But, where there is evidence against the co-accused sufficient, if believed, to support his conviction, then the kind of confession described in Section 30 may be thrown into the scale as an additional reason for believing that evidence. Kashmira Singh v. State of M.P., AIR 1952 SC 159 : 53 CrLJ 839 : 1952 SCA 474 : 1952 SCJ 201 : 1952 SCR 526.

[10883] ● Confession Evidentiary value use of in corroboration of accomplice and approver.—"Then, as regards its use in the corroboration of accomplices and approvers, a co-accused who confesses is naturally an accomplice and the danger of using the testimony of one accomplice to corroborate another has repeatedly been pointed out. The danger is in no way lessened when the evidence is not on oath and cannot be tested by cross-examination. Prudence will dictate the same rule of caution in the case of a witness who, though not an accomplice, is regarded by the Judge as having no greater probative value. But all these are only rules of prudence. So far as the law is concerned, a conviction can be based on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice, provided the Judge has the rule of caution, which experience dictates, in mind and gives reasons why he thinks it would be safe in a given case to disregard it." Kashmira Singh v. State of M.P., AIR 1952 SC 159 : 53 CrLJ 839 : 1952 SCA 474 : 1952 SCJ 201 : 1952 SCR 526.

[10884] ● Standards of corroboration in retracted confession and accomplice evidence different.—The standards of corroboration in Retracted Confession and accomplice evidence are quite different. In the case of the person confessing who has resided from his statement, general corroboration is sufficient while the evidence of an accomplice should be corroborated in material particulars. In addition the Court must feel that the reasons given for the retraction in the case of a confession are untrue. Subramania Goundan v. State of Madras, AIR 1958 SC 66 : 1958 CrLJ 238 : (1958) 1 Mad LJ (SC) 130 : 1958 SCR 428 : (1958) 1 SCJ 321 : 1958 AWR (Supp) 78 : 1958 Mad LJ (Cri) 292 : (1958) 1 Andh WR (SC) 130 : 1958 All Cr R 261.

[10885] ● Retracted confession to form basis of conviction when.—"We wish to make it clear and this is only to repeat what is so well established that a retracted confession by an accused may form the basis of a conviction of that accused, if it receives some general corroboration from other independent sources. It cannot, however, be the basis for convicting co-accused though it may be taken into consideration against co-accused also. It is entirely wrong to think that a confession can lead nowhere." Shrishail Nageshi v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1985 SC 866 : 1985 CrLJ 1173 (1174).

[10886] ● Corroboration necessary for basing conviction on retracted confession.—A retracted confession may form the legal basis of a conviction if the Court is satisfied that it was true and was voluntarily made. But it has been held that a Court shall not base a conviction on such a confession without corroboration. The expression "corroboration of material particulars" does not imply that there should be meticulous examination of the entire material particulars. It is enough that there is broad corroboration in conformity with the general trend of the confession, as pointed out in Subramania Goundan's case. Parmananda Pegu. v. State of Assam, AIR 2004 SC 4197 : (2004) 7 SCC 779 : 2004 CrLJ 4197 : 2004 (3) Crimes 337.

[10887] ● Retracted confession.—Evidence brought on record by way of confession which stood retracted must be substantially corroborated by other independent and cogent evidence, which would lead adequate assurance to the Court that it may seek to rely thereupon. Vinod Solanki v. Union of India, (2008) 16 SCC 537 : 2008 (17) SCR 1070 : JT 2009 (1) SC 1.

24. RULE IN SECTION 133 & SECTION 114, ILL (B)

[10888] ● Rule in Section 133 & Section 114, ILL (b).—The Evidence Act nowhere requires that in class of cases commonly referred to as sexual cases, there should be corroboration of the testimony of an accomplice. Although it says in Section 114(b) that the Court may presume that an accomplice is unworthy of credit, unless he is corroborated in material particulars, it makes it clear in Section 133 that an accomplice shall be a competent witness against the accused person, and a conviction is not illegal merely because it proceeds upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice. There is no doubt, therefore, that the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice is admissible in evidence. But it has long been a rule of practice at common law, which has become virtually equivalent to a rule of law, and which is exactly that law in India, so far as accomplices are concerned, and it is certainly not any higher in the case of sexual offences, that the Judge should warn the jury of the danger of convicting a prisoner on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice or accomplices, and it lies in the discretion of the Judge to advise them not to convict upon such evidence : but the Judge should point out to the jury that it is within their legal province to convict upon unconfirmed evidence. If after this proper caution by the Judge, the jury nevertheless convict the prisoner, his conviction will not be quashed, merely upon the ground that the accomplice's testimony was uncorroborated. The only clarification necessary in India is where this class of offence is sometimes tried by a Judge without the aid of a jury. The rule in every case of this type is that the rule absent the advisability of corroboration should be present to the mind of the Judge. In such cases, it is necessary that the Judge should give some indication in his judgment that he had this rule of caution in mind, and should proceed to give reasons for considering it unnecessary to require corroboration on the facts of the particular case before him and show why he considers it safe to convict without corroboration in that particular case. It is wrong for a Judge to think that he could not, as a matter of law, convict without corroboration. "The rule, which according to the cases has hardened into one of law, is not that corroboration is essential before there can be a conviction but that the necessity of corroboration, as a matter of prudence, except where the circumstances make it safe to dispense with it, must be present to the mind of the Judge, and injury cases, must find place in the charge, before a conviction without corroboration can be sustained." See Rameshwar v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54 : 1952 CrLJ 547. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) State of Bihar v. Basawan Singh, AIR 1958 SC 500 : 1958 CrLJ 976.

[10889] ● Accomplice unworthy of credit unless corroborated in material particulars.—Though, under Section 133 of the Evidence Act, a conviction is not illegal merely because it proceeds on the uncorroborated testimony of witness. Illustration (b) to Section 114 lays down that a Court may presume that an accomplice is unworthy of credit unless he is corroborated in material particulars. In the case of such a person, on his own showing, he is a depraved and debased individual who having taken part in the crime tries to exculpate himself and wants to fasten the liability on another. In such circumstances, it is absolutely necessary that what he has deposed must be corroborated in material particulars. Subramania Goundan v. State of Madras, AIR 1958 SC 66 : 1958 SCR 428 : 1958 SCJ 321.

[10890] ● Inquiring officer in departmental inquiry against public servant not Bound by strict rules of law of evidence.—An inquiring officer, in a departmental inquiry against a public servant, is not bound by the strict rules of the law of evidence. Hence Illustration (b) to Section 114 of the Evidence Act cannot be literally applied and it is open to such inquiring officer to hold a public servant guilty even on the basis of evidence of an accomplice. M.R. Bhatia v. Union of India, AIR 1962 SC 1344.

[10891] ● Evidence of approver—Corroboration of.—The combined effect of Sections 133 and 114, illustration (b) may be stated as follows : "According to the former, which is a rule of law, an accomplice is competent to give evidence and according to the latter which is a rule of practice it is almost always unsafe to convict upon his testimony alone. Therefore, though the conviction of an accused on the testimony of an accomplice cannot be said to be illegal yet the Courts will as a matter of practice, not accept the evidence of a witness without corroboration in material particulars. There should be corroboration of the approver in material particulars and qua each accused. Bhiba v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1963 SC 599 : 1963 Supp (1) SCR 275.

[10892] ● Accomplice evidence to be received after usual corroboration.—It is sad that the approver is a most unworthy friend and he having bargained for his immunity must prove his worthiness for credibility in Court. Ordinarily, combined effect of Sections 133 and 114 of the Evidence Act is that conviction can be based on uncorroborated testimony of an approver but as a rule of prudence it is unsafe to place reliance on the uncorroborated testimony of an approver. Section 114 illustration (b) incorporated a rule of caution to which the Courts should have regard. The word "accomplice" is ordinarily used in connection with law of evidence and rarely under substantive law of crimes. Accomplice evidence denotes evidence of a participant in crime with others. L. Chorasia v. State of Maharashtra, 1968 CrLJ 1124 (1127-1128) (SC).

[10893] ● Approver's evidence—Corroboration necessity.—Section 133, Evidence Act provides that an accomplice is a competent witness and the conviction is not illegal merely because it proceeds on uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice. In other words this section renders admissible such uncorroborated testimony. But this section has to be read along with illustration (b) to Section 114. The latter section empowers the Court to presume the existence of certain facts and the illustrations elucidate what the Court may presume and make clear by means of examples as to what facts the Court shall have regard in considering whether or not the maxims illustrated apply to given case before it. Illustration (b) in express terms says that an accomplice is unworthy of credit unless he is corroborated in material particulars. The statute permits the conviction of an accused person on the basis of uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice but the rule of prudence embodied in illustration (b) of Section 114 strikes a note of warning cautioning the Court that an accomplice does not generally deserve to be believed unless corroborated in material particulars. In other words, the rule is that the necessity of corroboration as a matter of prudence except when it is safe to dispense with such corroboration must be clearly present to the mind of the judge. Ram Narain v. State of Bihar, AIR 1973 SC 1188 : (1973) 3 SCC 805 : 1973 SCC (Cri) 545 : 1973 CrLJ 914.

[10894] ● Approver—Testimony—Credibility.—An approver is a most unworthy friend, if at all, and he, having bargained for his immunity, must prove his worthiness for credibility in Court. This test is fulfilled, firstly, if the story he relates involves him in the crime and appears intrinsically to be a natural and probable catalogue of events that had taken place. The story if given of minute details according with reality is likely to save it from being rejected brevi manu. Secondly, once that hurdle is crossed, the story given by an approver so far as the accused on trial is concerned must implicate him in such a manner as to give rise to a conclusion of guilt beyond reasonable doubt. In a rare case, taking into consideration all the factors, circumstances and situations governing a particular case, conviction based on the uncorroborated evidence of an approver confidently held to be true and reliable by the Court may be permissible. Ordinarily, however, an approver's statement has to be corroborated in material particulars ridging closely the distance between the crime and the criminal. Certain clinching features of involvement disclosed by an approver appertaining directly to an accused, if reliable, by the touchstone of other independent credible evidence, would give the needed assurance for acceptance of his testimony on which a conviction may be based. Ravinder Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 1975 SC 856 : (1975) 3 SCC 742 : 1975 CrLJ 765.

[10895] ● Evidence of accomplice—Corroboration.—There is no antithesis between Section 133 and illustration (b) to Section 114 of the Evidence Act, because the illustration only says that the Court may presume a certain state of affairs. It does not seek to raise conclusive and irrebuttable presumption. Reading the two together the position which emerges is that though an accomplice is a competent witness and though a conviction may lawfully rest upon his uncorroborated testimony, yet the Court is entitled to presume and may indeed be justified in presuming in the generality of case that no reliance can be placed on the evidence of an accomplice unless that evidence is corroborated in material particulars by which is meant that there has to be some independent evidence tending to incriminate the particular accused in the commission of the crime. It is hazardous, as a matter of prudence, to proceed upon the evidence of a self-confessed criminal, who in so far as an approver is concerned, has to testify in terms of the pardon tendered to him. The risk involved in convicting an accused on the testimony of an accomplice, unless it is corroborated in material particulars is real and potent. Dagdu v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1977 SC 1579 : (1977) 3 SCC 68 : 1977 CrLJ 1206 : (1977) 2 SCJ 241 : (1977) Mad LJ (Cri) 462.

[10896] ● Conviction—Uncorroborated evidence of accomplice.—"Although, as a general rule, it would be most unsafe to convict an accused person on the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice, such evidence must, like that of any other witness, be considered and weighed by the Judge, who, in dong so, should not overlook the position in which the accomplice at the time of giving his evidence may stand, and the motives which he may have for stating what is false. If the Judge, after making due allowance for these considerations and the probabilities of the story, comes to the conclusion that the evidence of the accomplice, although uncorroborated, is true, and the evidence, if believed, establishes the guilt of the prisoner, it is his duty to convict." Joseph v. State of Kerala, 1993 Supp (4) SCC 7 : 1994 SCC (Cri) 23 : 1993 CrLJ 3538.

[10897] ● Uncorroborated testimony of approver—Credibility.—Section 133, Evidence Act deals with the testimony of an accomplice. It contemplates that an accomplice shall be a competent witness against an accused person : and a conviction is not illegal merely because it proceeds upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice. The first part envisages that an accomplice in other words a guilty companion in crime shall be a competent witness while the second part states that conviction is not illegal merely because it is based on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice. But if one read Section 133 with illustration (b) of Section 114 it may lead to certain amount of confusion and misunderstanding as to the real and true intention of the Legislature because quite contrary to what is contained in Section 133 illustration (b) : Section 114 lays down "that an accomplice is unworthy of creed, unless he is corroborated in material particulars". A combined reading of the two provisions that is Section 133 and illustration (b) of Section 114 goes to show that it was considered necessary to place the law of accomplice evidence on a better footing by stating in unambiguous terms that according to Section 133 a conviction is "not illegal or in other words not unlawful" merely because it is founded on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice while accepting that an accomplice is a competent witness. But at the same time the Legislature intended to invite attention to the illustration (b) of Section 114 with a view to emphasise that the rule contained therein as well as in Section 133 are parts of one and the same subject and neither can be ignored in the exercise of judicial discretion except in cases of very exceptional nature. However, the difficulty in understanding the combined effect of the aforementioned two provisions arises largely due to their placement at two different places of the same Act. It may be noticed that illustration (b) attached to Section 114 is placed in Chapter VII of Evidence Act while Section 133 is inserted in Chapter IX of the Act. The better course was to insert the illustration (b) to Section 114 as an explanation or in any case as proviso to Section 133 of the Act instead of their insertion at two different places and that too in different chapters of Evidence Act. In any case since an approver is guilty companion in crime and, therefore, illustration (b) to Section 114 provides a rule of caution to which the Courts should have regard. Though a conviction can be based on uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice but as a rule of prudence it is unsafe to place reliance on the uncorroborated testimony of an approver as required by illustration (b) of Section 114. S.C. Bahri v. State of Bihar, AIR 1994 SC 2420 : 1995 Supp (1) SCC 80 : 1994 CrLJ 3271 (SC) : (1994) 2 Crimes 1027.

[10898] ● Testimony of approver basing of conviction on uncorroborated.—Ordinarily the combined effect of Sections 133 & 114 is that conviction can be based on uncorroborated testimony of an approver but as a rule of prudence it is unsafe to place reliance on the uncorroborated testimony of an approver. Section 114 illustration (b) incorporates a rule to which the Courts should have regard. Niranjan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1996 SC 3254 : (1996) 9 SCC 98 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 939 : 1996 CrLJ 2506 : 1996 (2) Crimes 251 (SC) : 1996 (3) Scale 774.

25. SEXUAL OFFENCES

[10899] ● Sexual offences.—A woman who has been raped is not an accomplice, if she was ravished, she is the victim of an outrage, if she consented, there is no offence unless she is a married woman, in which case question of adultery may arise. But adultery presupposes consent and so is not on the same footing as rape. In the case of a girl who is below the age of consent, her consent will not matter so far as the offence of rape is concerned, but if she consented, her testimony will naturally be as suspect as that of an accomplice. So also in the case of unnatural offences. But, in all these cases, a large volume of case-law has grown up which treats the evidence of the complainant some what along the same lines as accomplice evidence, though often for widely differing reasons, and the position now reached is that the rule about corroboration has hardened into one of law. Rameshwar Kalyan Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54 (57) : 1952 CrLJ 547.

[10900] ● Corroboration by independent evidence.—The only rule of law is that this rule of caution and prudence must be present to the mind of the Judge or the jury and be understood and appreciated by him or them. There is no rule of practice that there must, in every case, be corroboration, before a conviction can be allowed to stand. The independent evidence must not only make it safe to believe that the crime was committed, but must in some way reasonably connect or tend to connect the accused with it by confirming in some material particular the testimony of the victim. There cannot be any hard and fast rule as to the nature and extent of the evidence required to corroborate the case. The corroboration should be such as to render the prosecution story reliable and safe to act upon. Rameshwar Kalyan Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54 : 1952 SCR 377 : 1952 CrLJ 547.

[10901] ● Mother of raped child—If independent witness for corroboration purpose.—Corroboration may be had from the testimony of the mother of the prosecutrix. It may be that all mothers may not be sufficiently independent to fulfil the requirements of the corroboration rule but there is no legal bar to exclude them from its operation merely on the ground of their relationship. Independent merely means independent of sources which are likely to be tainted. In the absence of enmity against the accused there is no reason why she should implicate him falsely. Rameshwar Kalyan Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54 : 1952 CrLJ 547.

[10902] ● Evidence of accomplice corroboration—Nature and extent of.—The nature and extent of the corroboration must necessarily vary with the circumstances of each case and also according to the particular circumstances of the offence charged. It is not necessary that there should be independent confirmation of every material circumstance, that is, the independent testimony should not, itself, be sufficient to sustain conviction. All that is required is, that there must be some additional evidence, direct or indirect rendering it probable that the story is true and that it is reasonably safe to act upon it. Rameshwar Kalyan Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54 : 1952 CrLJ 547.

[10903] ● Evidence of spouse accusing other of matrimonial offence—Corroboration.—A spouse, accusing the other of any matrimonial offence, must prove the offence beyond reasonable doubt, and that where the evidence is that of the spouse, it is a rule of caution and prudence that the evidence should receive corroboration. Bipinchandra v. Prabhavati, AIR 1957 SC 176 : 1956 SCR 838.

[10904] ● Testimony of prosecutrix uncorroborated.—The Judge may, as a rule of prudence, warn the jury that such a rule of prudence required corroboration of the testimony of the prosecutrix, but that it was open to the jury to convict even on the uncorroborated testimony of the prosecutrix if the jury, in the particular circumstances of the case before it, came to the conclusion that corroboration was not essential for conviction. It is for the jury to decide whether or not it will convict on the uncorroborated testimony of a prosecutrix in the particular circumstances of the case before it. In other words insistence on corroboration is advisable but is not compulsory in the eye of law. Sidheswar Ganguly v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1958 SC 143 : 1958 CrLJ 273.

[10905] ● Corroboration of evidence—Victim of outrageous attack.—It is well established that the nature and extent of corroboration, necessary, vary with the circumstances of each case. The nature of the corroborative evidence should be such as to lend assurance that the evidence of the prosecutrix can be safely acted upon. Sidheswar Ganguly v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1958 SC 143 : 1958 CrLJ 273. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Rameshwar v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54 : 1952 CrLJ 547; (2) Bharwada Bhoginbhai Hirjibhai v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1983 SC 753 : (1983) 3 SCC 217 : 1983 CrLJ 1096 : 1983 Guj Crimes 232; (3) Sheikh Zakir v. State of Bihar, AIR 1983 SC 911 : (1983) 4 SCC 10 : 1983 CrLJ 1285; (4) State of Maharashtra v. Chandra P.K. Jain, AIR 1990 SC 658 : (1990) 1 SCC 550 : 1990 SCC (Cri) 210 : 1990 CrLJ 889 : 1990 East CrC 341 (SC).

[10906] ● Statement of prosecutrix that she was threatened and induced to go with accused must be corroborated in material particulars.— Keeping in view the medical evidence which shows that the prosecutrix had been used to sexual intercourse, in order to accept her statement that she was compelled, threatened or otherwise induced to go with the appellant, there should, in our opinion, be corroboration of some material particular from some independent source and her bare statement cannot be considered sufficient to sustain the appellant's conviction. Ram Murti v. State of Haryana, AIR 1970 SC 1029 : (1970) 3 SCC 21 : 1970 CrLJ 991.

[10907] ● Offence under Section 366, IPC—Corroboration necessity.—In the case of an offence under Section 366, Indian Penal Code, there should be corroboration of some material particular from some independent source and the bare statement of the prosecutrix is not sufficient to sustain the conviction of the accused. Ram Murti v. State of Haryana, AIR 1970 SC 1029 (1032) : (1970) 3 SCC 21 : 1970 CrLJ 991 : 1970 SCD 663 : 1970 SCCrR 510. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Gurcharan Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 1972 SC 2661 : (1972) 2 SCC 749 : 1973 CrLJ 179.

[10908] ● Evidence of prosecutrix—Corroboration of.—It is well-settled that the prosecutrix cannot be considered as an accomplice and, therefore, her testimony cannot be equated with that of an accomplice in an offence. As a rule of prudence, however, Court normally looks for some corroboration of her testimony so as to satisfy its conscience that she is telling the truth and that the person accused of rape on her has not been falsely implicated.

The recovery of the prosecutrix and Sanjha Ram, i.e., the co-accused from the appellant's sugarcane field, her complaint to Harnam Singh and others about the abduction and rape and the later recovery of some broken pieces of bangles from the said field and the medical evidence in our opinion fully corroborate the testimony of the prosecutrix which even without corroboration seems to us to be impressive enough to render it safe for sustaining the appellant's conviction. Gurcharan Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 1972 SC 2661 : (1972) 2 SCC 749 : 1973 CrLJ 179 : 1973 CrLR (SC) 280 : 1972 Cr App R (SC) 407 : (1973) 2 SCR 197.

[10909] ● Testimony of prosecutrix not equated with that of accomplice—Corroboration.—The testimony of the prosecutrix cannot be equated with that of an accomplice. As a rule of prudence, Court, however, normally looks for some corroboration of her testimony so as to satisfy its conscience that she is telling the truth and that the person accused of rape has not been falsely implicated. Gurcharan Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 1972 SC 2661 : (1972) 2 SCC 749 : 1973 CrLJ 179 : 1973 CrLR (SC) 280.

[10910] ● Evidence of prosecutrix value of—Corroboration.—In a trial under Section 376 or 366, IPC prosecutrix could not be considered as an accomplice. But the Court normally looked for corroboration but there was no rule of practice that there should be corroboration in every case to base conviction. Madhoran v. State of U.P., AIR 1973 SC 469 : (1973) 1 SCC 530 : 1973 CrLJ 673 : 1973 SCD 173 : 1973 Mad LJ (Cri) 366 : (1973) 2 SCJ 140. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Gurcharan Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 1972 SC 2661 : (1972) 2 SCC 749 following (2) Rameshwar Kalyan Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54 : 1952 CrLJ 547 : 1952 SCR 377; (3) Siddeswar Ganguli v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1958 SC 749 : 1958 CrLJ 273 : (1961) 1 CrLJ 689.

[10911] ● Evidence—Rape absence of injury on male organ of accused.—According to Dr. Katiyar, Medical Officer of District Jail Rae Bareli, if a girl of 10 or 12 years who is virgin and whose hymen is intact is subjected to rape by a fully developed man, there are likely to be injuries on the male organ of the man. No injury was, however, detected by the doctor on the male organ of any of the two accused. The absence of such injuries on the male organs of the accused would thus point to their innocence. Rahim Beg v. State of U.P., AIR 1973 SC 343 : (1972) 3 SCC 759 : 1972 SCC (Cri) 827 : 1972 CrLJ 1260.

[10912] ● Evidence—Semen stain on Langot of young man exists because of variety of reasons.—Rahim Beg is a young man of 22. The Langot in question was dirty at the time it was taken into possession. It cannot be said as to how old was the semen stain on the Langot. The semen stain on the Langot of a young man can exist because of a variety of reasons and would not necessarily connect him with the offence of rape. Rahim Beg v. State of U.P., AIR 1973 SC 343 : (1972) 3 SCC 759 : 1972 SCC (Cri) 827 : 1972 CrLJ 1260.

[10913] ● Evidence of prosecutrix corroboration—Necessity.—The prosecutrix cannot be considered to be an accomplice. As a rule of prudence Courts should normally look for some corroboration of her testimony in order to satisfy itself that the prosecutrix is telling the truth and that a person accused of abduction or rape has not been falsely implicated. The view that, as a matter of law, no conviction without corroboration was possible is erroneous. The only rule of law is the rule of prudence, namely the advisability of corroboration should be present in the mind of the Judge or the Jury, as the case may be. There is no rule of practice that there must, in every case, be corroboration before a conviction can be allowed to stand. As to what type of corroboration may be required when the Court is of the opinion that it is not safe to dispense with that requirement, it has been laid down that the type of corroboration required must necessarily vary with the circumstances of each case and also according to the particular circumstances of the offence with which a person is charged. The High Court, in the instant case, found corroboration regarding abduction in the evidence of PWs-1, 11 and 13. In respect of offence of rape, the High Court found corroboration in the reports of the chemical examiner and the sexologist regarding her clothes containing spermatozoa and human blood. Madho Ram v. State of U.P, AIR 1973 SC 469 : (1973) 1 SCC 533 : 1973 SCC (Cri) 417 (420) : 1973 CrLJ 673 : 1973 CrLR (SC) 132.

[10914] ● Victim child of six years—Corroborating evidence.—Even assuming that the evidence of little children requires general corroboration, we are satisfied that the proved circumstances that the girl was playing in broad day light, that she was carved away by the accused and brought back trying after a time, that the medical examination of the accused's genitals indicated the presence of spermatozoa, are sufficiently corroborative of the guilt of the appellant. R.K. Agarwal v. State of Orissa, AIR 1976 SC 1774 : (1976) 2 SCC 177 : 1976 SCC (Cri) 244 (245) : 1976 CrLJ 1376 : 1976 CrLR (SC) 144.

[10915] ● Rape—Evidence and proof.—Although according to the prosecutrix, three persons raped her with great force and violence resulting in great pain to her and her breasts becoming swollen and red and other injuries yet when she was examined by the Doctor only after 16 or 17 hours of the occurrence, the Doctor found no marks of injuries on her body at all.

Thus, if such a serious violence was caused to the prosecutrix by the appellants, the injuries are not likely to have disappeared before 2 or 3 days and the signs were bound to persist at least when she was examined by the Doctor. The absence of injuries on the person of the appellants as also on the person of the prosecutrix is yet another factor to negative the allegation of rape and to show that the appellants had sexual intercourse with the prosecutrix with her tacit consent. Pratap Misra v. State of Orissa, AIR 1977 SC 1307 : (1977) 3 SCC 41 : 1977 SCC (Cri) 447 (455, 456) : 1977 CrLJ 817 : 1977 CrLR (SC) 233 : 1977 Cr App R (SC) 164.

[10916] ● Evidence of prosecutrix—Corroboration necessity.—Previously, on the question whether the version of the prosecutrix about the factum of rape was required to be corroborated or not the rule of law was that corroboration was not essential before there could be a conviction but the necessity of corroboration, as a matter of prudence except where the circumstances made it safe to dispense with it, must have to be present in the mind of the Judge before a conviction without corroboration could be sustained. It would be dangerous to formulate the kind of evidence which should or would be regarded as corroboration. Its nature and extent would necessarily vary with the circumstances of each case and also according to particular circumstances of the offence charged. M. Mahammad v. State of Karnataka, 1978 CrLJ (NOC) 17 (Kant-Myilsam) : (1977) 2 Kant LJ 308. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) In Re, (1970) 2 Mad LJ 422; (2) Madhoram v. State of U.P., AIR 1973 SC 469 : (1973) 1 SCC 533 : 1973 SCC (Cri) 417 : 1973 CrLJ 673 : 1973 Mad LJ (Cri) 366 : 1973 SCD 179 : 1973 All WR 391.

[10917] ● Prosecutrix—Testimonial Potency.—"We must bear in mind human psychology and behavioural probability when assessing the testimonial potency of the victim's version. What girl would foist a rape charge on a stranger unless a remarkable set of facts or clearest motives were made out? The inherent bashfulness, the innocent naivete and the feminine tendency to conceal the outrage of masculine sexual aggression are factors which are relevant to improbabilise the hypothesis of false implication. The injury on the person of the victim, especially her private parts, has corroborative value. Her complaint to her parents and the presence of blood on her clothes are also testimony which warrants credence. More than all, it baffles belief in human nature that a girl sleeping with her mother and other children in the open will come by blood on her garments and injury in her private parts unless she has been subjected to the torture of rape. And if rape has been committed, as counsel more or less conceded, why, of all persons in the world, should the victim hunt up the petitioner and point at him the accusing finger? To forsake these vital considerations and go by obsolescent demands for substantial corroboration is to sacrifice commonsense in favour of an artificial concoction called 'Judicial' probability. Indeed, the Court loses its credibility if it rebels against realism. The law Court is not an unnatural world." Kishan Lal v. State of Haryana, AIR 1980 SC 1252 : 1980 CrLJ 926.

[10919] ● Rape—Corroboration necessity.—While corroboration in the form of eye-witness account of an independent witness may often be forthcoming in physical assault cases, such evidence cannot be expected in sex offences, having regard to the very nature of the offence. It would, therefore, be adding insult to injury to insist on corroboration drawing inspiration from the rules devised by the Courts in the western world. If the evidence of the victim does not suffer from any basic infirmity, and the "probabilities factor" does not render it unworthy of evidence as a general rule, there is no reason to insist on corroboration except from the medical evidence.

Corroboration may be insisted upon when a woman having attained majority is found in a compromising position and there is a likelihood of her having levelled such an accusation on account of the instinct of self-preservation. Or when the "probabilities factor" is found to be out of tune. Even at the age of 10 or 12, a girl in India can be trusted to be aware of the fact that the reputation of the entire family would be jeopardised upon such a story being spread. She can be trusted to know that in the Indian society her own future chances of getting married and settling down in a respectable or acceptable family would be greatly marred if any such story calling into question her chastity were to gain circulation in the society. It is also unthinkable that the parents would tutor their minor daughter to invent such a story in order to wreak vengeance on some one. Bharwada Bhoginbhai Hirjibhai v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1983 SC 753 (757) : (1983) 2 SCC 217 : 1983 CrLJ 1096 : (1983) 2 Crimes 232.

[10920] ● Evidence of victim of rape—To be treated like evidence of accomplice.—Even though a victim of rape cannot be treated as an accomplice on account of a long line of judicial decisions rendered in our country the evidence of the victim in a rape case is to be treated almost like the evidence of an accomplice requiring corroboration……. . There must be an indication in the course of the judgment that the Judge had this rule in his mind when he prepared the judgment and if in a given case the Judge finds that there is no need for such corroboration he should give reasons for dispensing with the necessity for such corroboration. But if a conviction is based on the evidence of a prosecutrix without any corroboration it will not be illegal on that sole ground. In the case of a grown-up and married woman it is always safe to insist on such corroboration. Wherever corroboration is necessary it should be from an independent source but it is not necessary that every part of the evidence of the victim should be confirmed in every detail by independent evidence. Such corroboration can be sought from either direct evidence or circumstantial evidence or from both. Sheikh Zakir v. State of Bihar, AIR 1983 SC 911 : (1983) 4 SCC 10 : 1983 SCC (Cri) 761 : 1983 CrLJ 1285.

[10921] ● Gang rape—Medical report supporting case of prosecutrix.—In the instant case it is not correct to say that that the evidence of prosecutrix does not find any corroboration. The medical report supports the case of the prosecutrix that she was raped. According to the medical report, the hymen was torn and edges of the tear were red and painful and bled on tonch. There were abrasions on the right breast. She complained of pain in both legs and back of neck. There is no reason why her evidence should not be believed. Balwant Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1987 SC 1080 : (1987) 2 SCC 27 : 1987 SCC (Cri) 249 (252, 253) : 1987 CrLJ 971 : 1987 CrLR (SC) 187 : 1987 (1) Crimes 910.

[10922] ● Prosecutrix of sex offence not on par with accomplice.—A prosecutrix of a sex-offence cannot be put on par with an accomplice. She is in fact a victim of the crime. The Evidence Act no where says that her evidence cannot be accepted unless it is corroborated in material particulars. She is undoubtedly a competent witness under Section 118 and her evidence must receive the same weight as is attached to an injured in cases of physical violence. The same degree of care and caution must attach in the evaluation of her evidence as in the case of an injured complainant or witness and no more. What is necessary is that the Court must be alive to and conscious of the fact that it is dealing with the evidence of a person who is interested in the outcome of the charge levelled by her. If the Court keeps this in mind and feels satisfied that it can act on the evidence of the prosecutrix, there is no rule of law or practice incorporated in the Evidence Act similar to illustration (b) to Section 114 which requires it to look for corroboration……. . "We think it proper, having regard to the increase in the number of sex-violation cases in the recent past, particularly cases of molestation and rape in custody, to remove the notion, if it persists, that the testimony of a woman who is a victim of sexual violence must ordinarily be corroborated in material particulars except in the rarest of rare cases. To insist on corroboration except in the rarest of rare cases is to equate a woman who is a victim of the lust of another with an accomplice to the crime and thereby insult womanhood. It would be adding insult to injury to tell a woman that her story of woe will not be believed unless it is corroborated in material particulars as in the case of an accomplice to a crime. Ours is a conservative society where it concerns sexual behaviour. Ours is not a permissive society as in some of the Western and European countries. Our standard of decency and morality in public life is not the same as in those countries. It is, however, unfortunate that respect for womanhood in our country is on the decline and cases of molestation and rape are steadily growing. An Indian woman is now required to suffer indignities in different forms, from lewd remarks to eve-teasing, from molestation to rape. Decency and morality in public life can be promoted and protected only if we deal strictly with those who violate the societal norms. The standard of proof to be expected by the Court in such cases must take into account the fact that such crimes are generally committed on the sly and very rarely direct evidence of a person other than the prosecutrix is available. Courts must also realise that ordinarily a woman, more so a young girl, will not stake her reputation by levelling a false charge concerning her chastity." State of Maharashtra v. Chandraprakash Kewalchand Jain, AIR 1990 SC 658 : (1990) 1 SCC 550 : 1990 CrLJ 889.

[10923] ● Victim of outrageous act not accomplice—Corroboration necessity.—"In sexual crimes, the other person usually the woman—may or may not be an accomplice, according as she is, by the nature of the crime, a victim of it or a voluntary partner in it. Thus, in adultery, the other party may well be deemed an accomplice : and so also, perhaps, in incest, and in pandering or pimping. But the woman is not an accomplice in rape, rape under age, seduction, or abortion, nor the participant in sodomy." A girl who is a victim of an outrageous act is, generally speaking, not an accomplice, though the rule of prudence requires that the evidence of a prosecutrix should be corroborated before a conviction can be based upon it. State of Maharashtra v. Chandraprakash Kewalchand Jain, AIR 1990 SC 658 : (1990) 1 SCC 550 : 1990 CrLJ 889 : 1990 East Cr C 341 (SC). TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Sheikh Zakir v. State of Bihar, AIR 1983 SC 911 : (1983) 4 SCC 10 : 1983 SCC (Cri) 761 : 1983 CrLJ 1285; (2) Sidheswar Ganguly v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1958 SC 143 : 1958 CrLJ 273.

[10924] ● Rape—Evidence of prosecutrix corroboration not necessary.—Ordinarily the evidence of a prosecutrix must carry the same weight as is attached to an injured person who is a victim of violence, unless there are special circumstances which call for greater caution, in which case it would be safe to act on her testimony, if there is independent evidence lending assurance to her accusation. State of Maharashtra v. Chandraprakash Kewalchand Jain, AIR 1990 SC 658 : (1990) 1 SCC 550 : 1990 CrLJ 889 : 1990 East CrC 341 (80).

[10925] ● Rape—Evidence of prosecutrix standard of proof.—"A prosecutrix of a sex offence cannot be put on par with an accomplice. She is in fact a victim of the crime. The Evidence Act nowhere says that her evidence cannot be accepted unless it is corroborated in material particulars. She is undoubtedly a competent witness under Section 118 and her evidence must receive the same weight as is attached to an injured in cases of physical violence. The same degree of care and caution must attach in the evaluation of her evidence as in the case of an injured complainant or witness and no more. What is necessary is that the Court must be alive to and conscious of the fact that it is dealing with the evidence of a person who is interested in the outcome of the charge levelled by her. If the Court keeps this in mind and feels satisfied then it can act on the evidence of the prosecutrix; there is no rule or law or practice incorporated in the Evidence Act similar to illustration (b) to Section 114 which requires it to look for corroboration. If for some reason the Court is hesitant to place implicit reliance on the testimony of the prosecutrix, it may look for evidence which may lend assurance to her testimony short of corroboration required in the case of an accomplice. The nature of evidence required to lend assurance to the testimony of the prosecutrix must necessarily depend on the facts and circumstances of each case. But if a prosecutrix is an adult and of full understanding, the Court is entitled to base a conviction on her evidence unless the same is shown to be infirm and not trustworthy. If the totality and the circumstances appearing on the record of the case disclose that the prosecutrix does not have a strong motive to falsely involve the person charged, the Court should ordinarily have no hesitation in accepting her evidence." (per AHMADI C.J.) State of Maharashtra v. Chandraprakash Kewalchand, AIR 1991 SC 658 : (1990) 1 SCC 550 : 1990 CrLJ 889 : 1990 East CrC 341 (SC) followed in TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, AIR 1996 SC 1393 : (1996) 2 SCC 384 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 316 : JT 1996 (1) SC 298.

[10926] ● Victim of rape—Corroboration not necessary.—It is not necessary that there would be corroboration to the evidence of the victim of rape. If her evidence inspires confidence to be truthful that itself would be sufficient to connect the accused. We need not seek corroboration. State of Orissa v. Damburu Naiko, AIR 1992 SC 1161 : (1992) 2 SCC 522 : 1992 SCC (Cri) 400 (402) : 1992 CrLJ 1537.

[10927] ● Rape—Medical evidence inconsistent with version of prosecutrix.—The only ground urged in support of this appeal is that the medical evidence is, inconsistent with the version of the prosecutrix who claims to have been raped by the appellant. That there is such a discrepancy is beyond doubt. However, the High Court has in explicit terms observed that the medical evidence had been influenced and deserved to be rejected. It appears that the Doctor examining the prosecutrix was changing her stand, an initially she had stated that there were signs of sexual intercourse, but later changed her opinion to say that there was no such signs. The prosecutrix was an unmarried girl coming from the weaker section of the society who pinned the appellant to be the one who had committed rape on her. Her words have believed by both the Court below. We see no reason to differ from the analysis of her statement and as to her credibility, as recorded by the High Court. There is, therefore, no ground to interfere in this appeal. Dagdulal v. State of Madhya Pradesh, 1995 CrLJ 3639.

[10928] ● Custodial Rape—Evidence of prosecutrix reliable.—The prosecutrix is not only a reliable witness but her word directed against the appellants bears a ring of truth for no explanation whatsoever as to why the appellants have been accused of the offence has been rendered. Her word is corroborated by the evidence of not only her husband, PW 4, but her brother-in-law, PW 1. Besides this evidence, we have the evidence of local people who had seen the prosecutrix being led to the Police Station and PW 6, who was approached by PW to seek help because of the illegal confinement of the prosecutrix and her husband. Ram Kumar v. State of Himachal Pradesh, AIR 1995 SC 1965 (1966) : 1995 Supp (4) SCC 67 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 100 : 1995 CrLJ 3621.

[10929] ● Woman victim of sexual assault not accomplice.—A woman who is a victim of sexual assault is not an accomplice to the crime but is a victim of another person's lust and therefore, her evidence need not be tested with the same amount of suspicion as that of an accomplice and, therefore, the rule of prudence that her evidence must be corroborated in material particulars has no application, at the most the Court may look for some evidence which lends assurance. In the present case the prosecutrix was a poor labourer hired by a contractor just a few days back and had no enmity with the appellant and his companion. Nor is there any such history so far as her husband is concerned. There is, therefore, no reason to doubt her word. As for corroboration the find of semen stains on her "saya" and in her vagina lends sufficient assurance to her accusation. Karnel Singh v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1995 SC 2472 (2474) : (1995) 5 SCC 518 : 1995 CrLJ 4173.

[10930] ● Testimony of prosecutrix—Evidentiary value.—The testimony of the victim in vital and unless there are compelling reasons which necessitate looking for corroboration of her statement, the Courts should find no difficulty to act on the testimony of a victim of sexual assault alone to connect an accused. Where her testimony inspires confidence and is found to be reliable. Seeking corroboration of her statement before relying upon the same, as a rule, in such cases amounts to adding insult to injury. The Court while appreciating the evidence of the prosecutrix may look for some assurance of her statement to satisfy its judicial conscience, since she is a witness who is interested in the outcome of the charge levelled by her, but there is no requirement of law to insist upon corroboration of her statement to lease conviction of an accused. The evidence of a victim of sexual assault stands almost on a par with the evidence of an injured witness and to an extent is even more reliable. State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, AIR 1996 SC 1393 : (1996) 2 SCC 384 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 316 (327).

[10931] ● Rape—Sufficient corroboration from medical evidence.—In the instant case the trial Court totally ignored the report of the Chemical Examiner, Ex PM, according to which semen had been found on the slides which had been prepared by the Lady Doctor for the vaginal secretions from the posterior of the vaginal fornix of the prosecutrix. The presence of semen on the slides lent authentic corroboration to the testimony of the prosecutrix. Thus even though no corroboration is necessary, yet sufficient corroboration from the medical evidence and the report of the chemical examiner is available on the record. State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, AIR 1996 SC 1393 : (1996) 2 SCC 384 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 316 (329).

[10932] ● Rape—Corroborative evidence.—Corroborative evidence is not an imperative component of judicial credence in every case of rape. Corroboration as a condition for judicial reliance on the testimony of the prosecutrix is not a requirement of law but a guidance of prudence under given circumstances. It must not be overlooked that a woman or a girl subjected to sexual assault is not an accomplice to the crime but is a victim of another person's lust and it is improper and undesirable to test her evidence with a certain amount of suspicion, treating her as if she were an accomplice. State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, AIR 1996 SC 1393 : (1996) 2 SCC 384 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 316 (327).

[10933] ● Non-detection of semen.—The High Court went wrong in negativing the version of PW-1 regarding sexual ravage merely on the basis of non-detection of semen or spermatozoa in the vaginal swab. There could be more than one explanation for absence of semen in the vaginal swab. State of Tamil Nadu v. Suresh, AIR 1998 SC 1044 : (1998) 2 SCC 372

[10934] ● Spermatozoa.—The presence of spermatozoa, dead or alive, would differ from person to person and its positive presence depend upon various circumstances. Otherwise also the presence or absence of spermatozoa is ascertained for the purposes of corroboration of the statement of the prosecutrix. If the prosecutrix is believed to be truthful witness, in her deposition, no further corroboration may be insisted. State of Himachal Pradesh v. Lekhraj, AIR 1999 SC 3916 : (2000) 1 SCC 247 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 147 : 2000 CrLJ 44 : JT 1999 (9) SC 43.

[10935] ● Rape—Testimony of prosecutrix corroboration.—It is well settled that a prosecutrix complaining of having been a victim of the offence of rape is not an accomplice after the crime. There is no rule of law that her testimony cannot be acted without corroboration in material particulars. Her testimony has to be appreciated on the principle of probabilities just as the testimony of any other witness; a high degree of probability having been shown to exist in view of the subject-matter being a criminal charge. However, if the Court of facts may find it difficult to accept the version of the prosecutrix on its face value, it may search for evidence, direct or circumstantial, which would lend assurance to her testimony. Assurance, short of corroboration as understood in the context of an accomplice, would do. State of Rajasthan v. N.K., AIR 2000 SC 1812 : (2000) 5 SCC 30 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 898 : 2000 CrLJ 2205 : 2000 CrLR (SC) 388.

[10936] ● Absence of spermatozoa.—The absence of spermatozoa on the clothes worn by the prosecutrix or accused does not show that the rape has not been committed. State of Himachal Pradesh v. Mange Ram, AIR 2000 SC 2798 : (2007) 7 SCC 224 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 1331 : 2000 CrLJ 4027 : (2000) 3 Crimes 179.

[10937] ● Rape—Corroboration of prosecutrix testimony.—The narration of the incident to so many independent witnesses without any discrepancy soon after the incident was also in our view, correctly, admitted by the Trial Court under Section 157 of the Evidence Act as corroborative of prosecutrix's testimony. State of Karnataka v. Manjanna, AIR 2000 SC 2231 (2234) : (2000) 6 SCC 188 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 1031 : 2000 CrLJ 3471 : 2000 CrLR (SC) 482 : JT 2000 (6) SC 529.

[10939] ● To insist on corroboration except in rarest of rare cases is insult to womanhood.—To insist on corroboration except in the rarest of rare cases is to equate one who is a victim of the lust of another with an accomplice to a crime and thereby insult womanhood. It would be adding insult to injury to tell a woman that her claim of rape will not be believed unless it is corroborated in material particulars as in the case of an accomplice to a crime. Why should be the evidence of the girl or the woman who complains of rape or sexual molestation be viewed with the aid of spectacles fitted with lenses tinged with doubt, disbelief or suspicion? The plea about lack of corroboration has no substance. Bhupender Sharma v. State of Himachal Pradesh, AIR 2003 SC 2684 : (2003) 8 SCC 551 : 2004 SCC (Cri) 31 : 2004 CrLJ 1.

[10940] ● Victim of rape not accomplice.—A prosecutrix complaining of having been a victim of the offence of rape is not an accomplice after the crime. There is no rule of law that her testimony cannot be acted without corroboration in material particulars. She stands at a higher pedestal than an injured witness. In the latter case, there is injury on the physical form, while in the former it is both physical as well as psychological and emotional. However, if the Court of facts finds it difficult to accept the version of the prosecutrix on its face value, it may search for evidence, direct or circumstantial, which would value, it may search for evidence, direct of circumstantial, which would lend assurance to her testimony. Assurance, short of corroboration as understood in the context of an accomplice would suffice. Aman Kumar v. State of Haryana, AIR 2004 SC 1497 : (2004) 4 SCC 379 : 2004 SCC (Cri) 1266 (1272) : 2004 CrLJ 1399 : JT 2004 (2) SC 274. TO THE SAME EFFECT : State of Chhattisgarh v. Derha, AIR 1976 SC 1774 : 2004 CrLJ 1376.

[10941] ● Prosecutrix not accomplice.—It is well settled that a prosecutrix complaining of having been a victim of the offence of rape is not an accomplice after the crime. There is no rule of law that her testimony cannot be acted without corroboration in material particulars. She stands at a higher pedestal than an injured witness. In the latter case, there is injury on the physical form, while in the former it is physical as well as psychological and emotional. However, if the Court on facts finds it difficult to accept the version of the prosecutrix on its face value, it may search for evidence, direct or circumstantial, which would lend assurance to her testimony. Assurance, short of corroboration as understood in the context of an accomplice would suffice. State of Himachal Pradesh v. Shree Kant Shekari, AIR 2004 SC 4404 : (2004) 8 SCC 153 : 2004 CrLJ 4232 (4235, 4236) : 2004 (4) Crimes 32.

[10942] ● Corroboration of prosecutrix in material particulars—Not required.—It is not the law that in every case version of the prosecutrix must be corroborated in material particulars by independent evidence on record. It all depends on the quality of the evidence of the prosecutrix. If the Court is satisfied that the evidence of prosecutrix is free from blemish and is implicitly reliable, then on the sole testimony of the prosecutrix, the conviction can be recorded. In appropriate cases, the Court may look for corroboration from independent sources or from the circumstances of the case before recording an order of conviction. In the instant case the allegations were that the accused during night entered the prosecutrix room and committed rape on her, the evidence of the prosecution was found worthy of credit and implicitly reliable. The evidence of four witnesses PW-2 (mother of the prosecutrix), PW3, PW7 (younger brother) and PW9 (younger brother), corroborated the prosecutrix version. The acquittal of the accused on charge under Sections 376 and 450 IPC recorded by trial Court was set aside and conviction recorded by the trial Court was restored. State of Rajasthan v. Biram Lal, AIR 2005 SC 2327 : (2005) 10 SCC 714 : 2005 CrLJ 2561 (2564) : 2005 (2) Crimes 133.

[10943] ● Conviction can be founded on testimony of prosecutrix alone, unless compelling reasons.—It is now well-accepted principle of law that conviction can be founded on the testimony of the prosecutrix alone unless there are compelling reasons for seeking corroboration. It is also well accepted principle of law that corroboration as a condition for judicial reliance on the testimony of the prosecutrix is not a requirement of law but a guidance of prudence. The woman or a girl subjected to sexual assault is not an accomplice to the crime but is a victim of another person's lust and it is improper and undesirable to test her evidence with a certain amount of suspicion treating her as if she were an accomplice. State of Tamil Nadu v. Ravi, AIR 2005 SC 2568 : (2006) 10 SCC 534 : 2006 CrLJ 3305 (3308, 3309) : 2006 (3) Crimes 17.

[10944] ● Conviction can be based on testimony of prosecutrix alone unless compelling reasons exist.—It is now well settled principle of law that conviction can be founded on the testimony of prosecutrix alone unless there are compelling reasons for seeking corroboration. The evidence of a prosecutrix is more reliable than that of an injured witness. The witness of sexual assault is vital unless there are compelling reasons, which necessitate looking for corroboration of her statement, The Courts should find no difficulty in acting on the testimony of a victim of sexual assault alone to convict an accused where her testimony inspires confidence and is found to be reliable. State of Himachal Pradesh v. Asha Rai, AIR 2006 SC 381 : (2005) 13 SCC 766 : 2006 CrLJ 139 (141) : 2005 (4) Crimes 269. To the same effect : Vishnu v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 2006 SC 508 : (2006) 1 SCC 283 : 2006 CrLJ 303 (309) : 2005 (4) Crimes 323.

[10946] ● Evidence of prosecutrix corroborated by medical evidence.—Victim (PW-1) had gone in the field to bring green grass and after collecting the green grass she was on her way back to her home. The appellant came to her and proposed for sexual intercourse. The victim protested and told that she will inform her mother in respect thereof. The appellant induced her not to say so to her mother as he will provide Rs. 10/- to her. The appellant felled her on the ground and removed her undergarment and ravished her. She was crying in pain and at this the appellant had stuffed her mouth by clothes. The genital of the appellant had penetrated in her genital which gave immense pain to her and, thereafter, the appellant left her. She saw blood oozing from her private part which had besmeared her undergarment. After the return from the said field she narrated the incident to the brothers and their wives. The evidence of medical officer noted by the High Court was: PW-7, Dr. Asha Saxena had deposed to have examined PW-1, Jalebia on 29.2.1998 and she had found superficial laceration present over perineum just at the bottom of Labia Majora and Labia Minora, the size which is 1/4 cms. X 1/4 cms. She has further deposed that the hymen membrane of the victim was found torn and there was fresh bleeding from slight touch and she had also found that her vaginal orifice admits one finger with difficulty." The evidence of the prosecutrix was corroborated by medical evidence. The conviction of the accused for offence under Section 376 IPC was found proper. Ram Kripal v. State of Madhya Pradesh, (2007) 11 SCC 265 : 2007 CrLJ 2302 (2305) (SC) : 2007 (3) Crimes 115 (SC).

[10947] ● Conviction in case of rape needs no corroboration.—It is not well settled that a finding of guilt in a case of rape, can be based on the uncorroborated evidence of the prosecutrix. The very nature of offence makes it difficult to get direct corroborating evidence. The evidence of the prosecutrix should not be rejected on the basis of minor discrepancies and contradictions. If the victim of rape states on oath that she was forcibly subjected to sexual intercourse, her statement will normally be accepted, even if it is uncorroborated, unless the material on record requires drawing of an inference that there was consent or that the entire incident was improbable or imaginary. Radhu v. State of Madhya Pradesh, (2007) 12 SCC 57 : 2007 CrLJ 4704 (4705) : 2007 (4) Crimes 1 (SC).

[10948] ● Insistence on corroboration in rape case—Not required.—In a charge of rape, an accused cannot cling to a fossil formula and insist on corroborative evidence, even if taken as a whole, the case spoken to by the victim strikes a judicial mind as probable. Moti Lal v. State of Madhya Pradesh, (2008) 11 SCC 20 : 2008 CrLJ 3543 (3546).

26. SINGLE WITNESS

[10949] ● Single witness.—A witness may be neither an accomplice nor anything analogous to an accomplice; he may be an ordinary witness, who was undoubtedly present at the time the incident took place. As a general rule, a Court may act on the testimony of a single witness, though uncorroborated. Unless corroboration is insisted upon by statute Court should not insist on corroboration except in cases where the nature of the testimony of the single witness itself requires, as a rule of prudence that corroboration should be insisted upon, and that the question, whether corroboration of the testimony of a single witness was or was not necessary must depend upon the facts and circumstances of each case. Vadravelu Thevar v. State of Madras, AIR 1957 SC 614 : 1957 CrLJ 1000 : (1957) 3 SCR 981. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Ramratan v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1962 SC 424 : (1962) 1 CrLJ 473 : (1962) 1 SCJ 371 : (1962) 3 SCR 590.

[10950] ● Corroboration with former statement by solitary witness.—Corroboration with former statement made earlier by the solitary witness held to be sufficient corroboration. Ramratan v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1962 SC 424 : 1962 (1) CrLJ 473 : 1962 (3) SCR 590.

[10951] ● Witness resiling from statement in committing Court.—The witness resiled from his statement before Sessions Court. Earlier statement was relied on account of its vividness and description of details of incident. In the absence of corroboration, conviction on the basis of such sole testimony is not safe. Sharnappa Mutyappa Halke v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1964 SC 1357 : 1964 (2) CrLJ 359 : 1964 (4) SCR 589 : 66 Bom LR.

[10952] ● Evidence of single witness—Enough to sustain conviction.—Even if the case against the accused hangs on the evidence of a single eye-witness it may be enough to sustain the conviction given on sterling testimony of a competent, honest man, although as a rule of prudence Courts call for corroboration. It is a platitude to say that witnesses have to be weighed and not counted since quality matters more than quantity in human affairs. We are persuaded that the PW-5 is a witness for truth but in view of the circumstances that he is interested, we would still want corroboration in this case to reassure ourselves. Shivaji Sahebrao Bobade v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1973 SC 2622 : (1973) 2 SCC 793 : 1973 CrLJ 1783 : 1974 (1) SCR 489.

[10953] ● Conviction—Basing of on sole testimony of Food Inspector.—There is no rule of law that convictions cannot be based on the sole testimony of a Food Inspector. It is only out of a sense of caution that the Courts insist that the testimony of a Food Inspector should be corroborated by some independent witness. This is a necessary caution which has to be borne in mind because the Food Inspector may in a sense be regarded as an interested witness, but this caution is a rule of prudence and not a rule of law. Prem Ballab v. State (Delhi Admn.), AIR 1977 SC 56 : (1977) 1 SCC 173 : 1977 SCC (Cri) 78 (81) : 1977 CrLJ 12 : 1976 CrLR (SC) 495 : (1977) 1 SCR 592.

[10954] ● Single eye-witness—Basing of conviction on testimony of.—This case primarily lunges on the testimony of a single eye-witness. Indeed. Conviction can be based on the testimony of a single eye-witness and there is no rule of law or evidence which says to the contrary provided the sale witness passes the test of reliability.

So long as the single eye-witness is a wholly reliable witness the Courts have no difficulty in basing conviction on his testimony alone. However, where the single eye-witness is not found to be a wholly reliable witness, in the sense that there are some circumstances which may show that he could have an interest in the prosecution, then the Courts generally insist upon some independent corroboration of his testimony, in material particulars, before recording conviction. It is only when the Court finds that the single eye-witness is wholly unreliable witness that his testimony is discarded in to and no amount of corroboration can cure that defect. Anil Phukan v. State of Assam, AIR 1993 SC 1462 (1464) : (1993) 3 SCC 282 : 1993 CrLJ 1796 : JT 1993 (2) SC 290 : (1993) 1 Crimes 1180.

[10955] ● Conviction of accused on basis of testimony of sole eye-witness.—"That the entire case revolves around and rests on the testimony of PW 3 only is not in doubt. It is now well established that conviction can be based on the testimony of a single eye-witness provided the Court finds from the scrutiny of his evidence that he is a wholly reliable witness. Where, however, the Court is of the opinion that the single eye-witness is only partly reliable, prudence requires that corroboration of his testimony in material particulars should be sought before recording conviction. . . . . . On his own showing PW 3 was an employee of the deceased. He was present according to his testimony, when the deceased was assaulted by the appellants. He admits that after committing the crime the appellants and their associates fled away. The witness, however, not only did not raise any alarm when his master was being assaulted, he did not go near his employer even after the assailants had fled away to see the condition in which the employer was after having suffered the assault. According to him he got frightened and fled away to his home. He also admitted in his cross-examination that neither at his home nor in the village did he disclose what he had seen in the evening of 4th February, 1982.

The witness however tried to take shelter on the pleas that he was "frightened" and therefore till he appeared before the Police, he did not pick up courage to inform anyone either in the village or on the brick-fields regarding the occurrence. This plea does not impress us.

It is not understandable why the witness who was in the village did not appear before the Investigating Officer, when he was camping in the village throughout the night or even the next morning. No explanation whatsoever has been offered by him. PW-3 in view of his unexplained silence, delayed statement to the Police and relationship with the deceased, therefore, does not appear to be a wholly reliable witness. There is no corroboration of his evidence from any other independent source either. In the absence of any corroboration of his testimony. We find it rather unsafe to rely upon the evidence of PW 3 only to uphold the conviction and sentence of the appellants." Alil Mollah v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1996 SC 3471 : (1996) 5 SCC 369 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 1028 (1030) : 1996 CrLJ 3842.

[10956] ● Conviction of accused on uncorroborated evidence of single eye-witness.—If the High Court thought it unsafe to convict any of the accused on the uncorroborated evidence of a single eye-witness it does not mean that the evidence of the witness stands castigated. It is no stigma against the evidence of any eye-witness if the Court only wanted re-assurance from yet other sources. The corroboration is what the Court required as a matter of prudence and as a step of caution. If the accused had used a torchlight or if the victim had a torchlight with him during the occurrence there would be much force in insisting that the investigating officer should have seized it as the same could be used as a material object during trial but a torchlight used by the witness to see the occurrence cannot be equated with the torchlight used by the victim or the assailants in the encounter for evidentiary purposes. Non-seizure of such a torchlight cannot therefore, be considered as a lapse on the part of any investigating officer much less a ground for impairment of the testimony of the eye-witness concerned.

Apparently, those were sharp cutting weapons. One of them could have been a pointed and sharp weapon. All the injuries of the deceased were incised wounds and two of them had penetrated into the body and perforated some of the vital organs. The doctor who conducted the autopsy has said in evidence that the injuries which he noticed could have been caused with those weapons.

None of the points raised before us by the learned counsel for the appellants is capable of changing the conclusion reached by the High Court against the appellants. Balo Yadav v. State of Bihar, AIR 1997 SC 2678 : 1997 SCC (Cri) 701 : 1997 CrLJ 3395 : 1997 CrLR (SC) 414 : 1997 (2) Crimes 38.

27. STATEMENT OF ANOTHER WITNESS

[10957] ● Statement of another witness.—Ordinarily, the testimony of one accomplice would not be sufficient to corroborate that of another. But an exception arises. If several accomplices simultaneously and without previous covert, gives a consistent account of the crime implicating the accused, the Court may accept the several statements of the accomplices were given independently and without any previous concert. Mohd. Husain Umar v. K.S. Dalip Singhji, AIR 1970 SC 45 : (1969) 3 SCC 429 : 1970 CrLJ 9 : (1970) 1 SCR 130.

28. STATEMENT OF PW DURING INQUIRY UNDER SECTION 202, CrPC

[10958] ● Statement of PW during inquiry under Section 202, CrPC.—A plain reading of Section 157 of the Evidence Act would show that previous statement of a particular witness can be used to corroborate only his own evidence during trial and not evidence of other witnesses. Sashi Jena v. Khadal Swain, AIR 2004 SC 1492 : (2004) 4 SCC 236 : 2004 SCC (Cri) 1077 (1082) : 2004 CrLJ 1394 : JT 2004 (2) SC 339 : (2004) 2 Crimes 153 : (2004) 1 JCC 420.

29. STATEMENT UNDER SECTION 161, CrPC

[10959] ● Statement under Section 161, CrPC.—Statements recorded under Section 161 cannot be used for corroborating statements made in Court. Rameshwar Singh v. State of J&K, AIR 1972 SC 102 : (1971) 2 SCC 715 : 1972 CrLJ 15 : 1970 Cr App R 416 (SC) : (1972) 1 SCR 627 : (1972) 1 SCJ 594 : 1972 Mad LJ (Cri) 364.

30. STATEMENT RECORDED UNDER SECTION 164, CrPC

[10960] ● Statement recorded under section 164, CrPC.—The statement recorded is not substantive evidence but is only corroborative evidence. State of Rajasthan v. Kartar Singh, AIR 1970 SC 1305 : (1970) 2 SCC 61 : 1970 CrLJ 1144 : (1970) 1 SCR 56 : (1971) 1 SCJ 165 : 1971 Mad LJ (Cri) 113 : 1970 SCD 724. To the same effect : (1) Ram Kishan Singh v. Harmit Kaur, 1972 CrLJ 267 : (1972) 1 SCWR 130.

31. STATEMENT TO POLICE

[10961] ● Statement to police.—Statement to Police cannot be used to corroborate statement made before the Court. Rameshwar Singh v. State of J&K, AIR 1972 SC 102 : (1971) 2 SCC 715 :

1972 CrLJ 15 : 1971 CAR 416 : (1972) 1 SCR 627 : 1972 All WR 247 : 1972 Mad LJ (Cri) 364.

32. STATEMENT RECORDED DURING COMMITTAL PROCEEDINGS

33. TEST IDENTIFICATION PARADE

[10963] ● Test identification parade.—Purpose of test identification is to have corroboration to the evidence of the eye-witnesses in the form of earlier identification and that substantive evidence of a witness is the evidence in the Court. If that evidence is found to be reliable then absence of corroboration by test identification would not be in any way material. Daya Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 2001 SC 1188 : (2001) 3 SCC 468 : 2001 SCC (Cri) 553 (562) : 2001 CrLJ 1268 : 2001 CrLR (SC) 284 : (2001) 2 Crimes 93.

[10964] ● Evidence of identification—Value.—In appropriate cases the Court may accept the evidence of identification even without insisting on corroboration. Md. Kalam v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 2008 SC 1813 : (2008) 11 SCC 352 : 2008 CrLJ 2602 (2605) (SC).

34. TRAP WITNESS

[10965] ● Trap witness.—A bribe-giver is an accomplice only when he gives it with intention of gaining some undue official favour, but one who gives it to aid detection of a crime is not an accomplice, necessary mens rea being absent. Rao Shib Bahadur v. State of U.P., AIR 1954 SC 322 : 1954 SCR 1098 : 1954 CrLJ 910.

[10966] ● Appreciation of evidence—Distinction between tainted evidence of accomplice and interested testimony of partisan witness.—"The principles, on which the employment of magistrates as witnesses of police traps has been condemned, have hardly any application where the magistrates concerned are executive magistrates who perform no judicial functions, or where the officers concerned are the officers of the Anti-Corruption Department, whose duty it is to detect offences of corruption. In the case before us, Mukherji and Misra belonged to such a department. Moreover, however inexpedient it may be to employ magistrates as trap witnesses, their evidence has to be judged by the same standard as the evidence of other partisan or interested witnesses, and the inexpediency of employing magistrates as trap witnesses cannot be exalted into an inflexible rule of total rejection of their evidence, in the absence of independent corroboration. The learned Solicitor-General referred, in the course of arguments, to the difficulty of detecting corruption cases and of securing conviction in such cases. We do not think that such a consideration should influence the mind of a judge. Whatever be the difficulties, admissible evidence given in a case must be judged on its own merits, with due regard to all the circumstances of the case. In some of the cases which have been cited at the bar a distinction has been drawn between two kinds of 'traps'— legitimate and illegitimate—and in some cases, a distinction has been made between tainted evidence of an accomplice and interested testimony of a partisan witness, and, it has been said, that the degree of corroboration necessary is higher in respect of tainted evidence that for partisan evidence. We think that, for deciding the questions before us, such distinctions are somewhat artificial, and in the matter of assessment of the value of evidence and the degree of corroboration necessary to inspire confidence, no rigid formula can or should be laid down." State of Bihar v. Basawan Singh, AIR 1958 SC 500 : 1958 CrLJ 976 : 1958 SCJ 856.

[10967] ● Evidence of raiding party—Corroboration.—There is no inflexible rule that the evidence of the witnesses of the raiding party must be discarded in the absence of any independent corroboration. The correct rule is this : if any of the witnesses are accomplices who are particeps criminis in respect of the actual crime charged, their evidence must be treated as the evidence of accomplices is treated; if they are not accomplices but are partisans or interested witnesses, who are concerned in the success of the trap, their evidence must be tested in the same way as other interested evidence is tested by the application of diverse considerations which must vary from case to case, and in a proper case, the Court may even look for independent corroboration before convicting the accused person. If a Magistrate puts himself in the position of a partisan or interested witness, he cannot claim any higher status and must be treated as any other interested witness. State of Bihar v. Basawan Singh, AIR 1958 SC 500 : 1958 CrLJ 976.

[10968] ● Evidence of interested and partisan witnesses—Corroboration.—Evidence of interested and partisan witnesses who are concerned in the success of a trap must be tested in the same way as that of any other interested witness. In a proper case Court can look for independent corroboration before convicting the accused. State of Bihar v. Basawan Singh, AIR 1958 SC 500 : 1959 SCR 195. To the same effect : (1) Ram Arora v. State of Punjab, AIR 1973 SC 498 : (1972) 3 SCC 652 : 1972 CrLJ 1293.

[10969] ● Evidence of accomplice corroboration necessity.—When the witnesses fall under the category of accomplices by reason of their being bribe-givers independent corroboration is necessary. R.R. Chari v. State of U.P., AIR 1959 All 149 : 1959 CrLJ 268. This decision has been reversed on another point in R.R. Chari v. State of U.P., AIR 1962 SC 1573 : (1962) 2 CrLJ 510.

[10970] ● Conviction not to be based on accomplice evidence without corroboration.—No conviction can be based on accomplice evidence unless it is corroborated in material particulars. But as to evidence of a partisan or interested witness, i.e. who had laid a trap or offered bribe it is open to the Court to convict solely on the basis of such evidence, if reliable. In appropriate case the Court may look for corroboration in a general way and not material corroboration as in the case of evidence of accomplice. E.G. Barsay v. State of Bombay, AIR 1961 SC 1762. To the same effect : (1) Bhamprosad Dabe v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1968 SC 1323 : 1968 CrLJ 1505 : 1968 SCD 1026 : 9 Guj LR 853 overruling (2) Rao Shiv Bahadur Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1954 SC 322 : 1954 CrLJ 910.

[10971] ● Trap witness—Not approver.—A trap witness is not an approver but he is certainly an interested witness in the sense that he is interested in seeing that the trap laid by him has succeeded. He could hence be at least equated with a partisan witness, and it would therefore be not advisable to rely upon his evidence without corroboration. Though the Court might reject the evidence of the witness in regard to some events, either because that part of the evidence is inconsistent with the other parts of his evidence, or with the evidence of some disinterested witnesses, still it can accept the evidence given by the witness in regard to the events when the version is corroborated in all material particulars by the evidence of the other disinterested witnesses. Corroboration must be by independent testimony, confirming, in some material particulars, not only that the crime was committed but also that the accused had committed it, it is, however, not necessary that all the circumstances of the case or every detail of the crime must be corroborated. It is enough, if it relates to the material circumstances of the case and of the identity of the accused. E.G. Barsay v. State of Bombay, AIR 1961 SC 1762.

[10972] ● Though witness—Evidence not to be rejected for want of corroboration.—Though trap witness is an interested witness, as a matter of law his evidence cannot be rejected for want of corroboration. Dalpat Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1969 SC 17 : 1969 CrLJ 262 : (1968) 3 SCR 189 : 1969 SCD 43 : (1968) 2 SCJ 676 : 1968 Mad LJ (Cri) 668 : (1968) 1 Um NP 737.

[10973] ● Person giving illegal gratification not accomplice.—The person giving illegal gratification to the person accused of accepting bribe cannot be treated as accomplice. Corroboration of testimony in material particulars, is not necessary. Dalpat Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1969 SC 17 : 1969 CrLJ 262 : 1968 (3) SCR 189 : 1968 Mad LJ (Cri) 668.

[10974] ● Illegal gratification—Trap witness to be corroborated.—In the case of acceptance of illegal gratification, trap-witness should be corroborated by independent evidence. Darshan Lal v. Delhi Administration, AIR 1974 SC 222 : (1974) 3 SCC 587 : 1974 CrLJ 307.

[10975] ● Evidence of trap witnesses—Corroboration required.—Corroboration is required from independent source of the evidence of trap-witnesses for two reasons. Firstly, a criminal case is to be proved beyond reasonable doubt. Secondly, evidence of witnesses interested in the fruits of investigative efforts becomes devalued. Som Prakash v. State of Delhi, AIR 1974 SC 989 : (1974) 4 SCC 278 : 1974 SCC (Cri) 215 : 1974 CrLJ 784 : 1974 CrLR (SC) 216 : (1974) 1 SCWR 386.

[10976] ● Officer in anti-corruption department to secure independent and respectable witnesses.—The officers functioning in the anti-corruption department must seriously endeavour to secure really independent and respectable witnesses so that evidence in regard to trap inspires confidence in the mind of the Court and the Court is not left to doubt as to whether or not any money was paid to public servant by way of bribe. Trap witnesses when are interested witnesses the prosecution should fail. Raghuvir Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1976 SC 91 : (1976) 1 SCC 145 : 1975 SCC (Cri) 776 : 1976 CrLJ 172 : 1975 CrLR (SC) 646 : 1975 BBCJ 821 : 1976 Cr App R (SC) 1.

State of Rajasthan, AIR 1976 SC 739 : (1976) 1 SCC 577 : 1976 SCC (Cri) 95 : 1976 CrLJ 625 : 1975 BBCJ 846.

[10978] ● Court justified in acting upon uncorroborated testimony of trap witness.—A trap-witness may perhaps be considered as a person interested in the success of the trap may entitle a Court to view his evidence as that of an interested witness. Where the circumstances justify it, a Court may refuse to act upon the uncorroborated testimony of a trap-witness. A Court may well be justified in acting upon the uncorroborated testimony of a trap-witness, if the Court is satisfied from the facts and circumstances of the case that the witness is a witness of truth. Prakash Chand v. State (Delhi Administration), AIR 1979 SC 400 (402, 403) : 1979 SCC 90 : 1979 SCC (Cri) 656 : 1979 CrLJ 329 : (1979) 1 SCJ 512 : 1979 BLJR (Summary of Cases) 3 : (1979) 2 SCR 330 : 1979 LW 17 : 1979 Mad LJ (Cri) 419. To the same effect : (1) Ram Prakash Arora v. State of Punjab, AIR 1973 SC 498 : (1972) 3 SCC 652 : 1972 CrLJ 1293; (2) Darshan Lal v. Delhi Administration, AIR 1974 SC 218 : (1974) 3 SCC 595 : 1974 CrLJ 307; (3) Bihar v. Basawan Singh, AIR 1958 SC 500 : 1958 CrLJ 976; (4) Raghubir Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 1974 SC 1516 : (1974) 4 SCC 560 : 1974 SCC (Cri) 596 : 1974 CrLJ 1062 : (1974) 3 SCR 799; (5) Raghubir Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1976 SC 91 : (1976) 1 SCC 145 : 1975 SCC (Cri) 776 : 1976 CrLJ 172; (6) Bhanu Prasad v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1968 SC 1323 : 1968 CrLJ 1505.

[10979] ● Evidence of trap officer—Corroboration.—The evidence of trap officer can be acted upon even without the help of any corroboration. Vide Prakash Chand v. State Delhi Administration, AIR 1979 SC 400 : (1979) 3 SCC 90 : 1979 CrLJ 329 : (1979) 2 SCR 330. To the same effect : (1) Hazari Lal v. Delhi Administration, AIR 1980 SC 873 : (1980) 2 SCC 390 : 1980 CrLJ 564 : (1980) 2 SCR 1053; (2) State of U.P. v. Zakaullah, AIR 1998 SC 1474 : (1998) 1 SCC 557 : 1998 SCC (Cri) 456 : 1998 CrLJ 863 : 1998 CrLR (SC) 137.

[10980] ● Evidence of Police Officer laid trap—Corroboration not necessary.—There is no rule of prudence which has crystallised into a rule of law, nor indeed any rule of prudence, which requires that the evidence of a police officer who laid a trap in a bribery case should be treated on the same footing as evidence of accomplices and there should be insistence on corroboration. In the facts and circumstances of a particular case, a Court may be disinclined to act upon the evidence of such an officer without corroboration, but, equally, in the facts and circumstances of another case of Court may unhesitatingly accept the evidence of such an officer. It is all a matter of appreciation of evidence and on such matters there can be no hard and fast rule, nor can there be any precedential guidance. Hazarilal v. State (Delhi Administration), AIR 1980 SC 873 (1980) 2 SCC 390 : 1980 SCC (Cri) 458 : 1980 CrLJ 564 : (1980) 2 SCR 1053 : 1980 Mad LJ (Cri) 756 at p. 759 : 1980 LW (Cri) 130 (SC).

[10981] ● Complainant in bribery case accomplice.—The complainant in a bribery case is in the nature of accomplice. His story is prima facie suspect and, therefore, corroboration of his testimony in material particulars is accessory for the Court to act upon the same. Gulam Mahmood A Malik v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1980 SC 1558 : 1980 Supp SCC 684 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 586 : 1980 CrLJ 1096 : 1980 CrLR (SC) 504.

[10982] ● Trap witness—Appreciation of evidence.—It is not proper on the part of the Judge to magnify every minor detail or omission of a trap witness to falsify him and to cast a shadow of doubt in the prosecution case. State of Maharashtra v. K.G. Pimple, AIR 1984 SC 63 : (1984) 1 SCC 446 : 1984 CrLJ 4 : (1983) 2 Crimes 838.

[10983] ● Testimony of trap witness—Reliability.—The testimony of a trap-witness who has no animus or grudge against the accused is ordinarily reliable. State of Maharashtra v. Narsingrao Gangarao, AIR 1984 SC 63 : (1984) 1 SCC 446 : 1984 CrLJ 4.

[10984] ● Trap witness turning hostile.—Where the trap-witnesses turn hostile, conviction can be recorded on the testimony of the complainant and Police officials conducting raid, where the testimony is corroborated by circumstantial evidence. State of U.P. v. G.R. Ghosh, AIR 1984 SC 1453 : (1984) 1 SCC 254 : 1984 SCC (Cri) 46 : 1985 CrLJ 904.

[10985] ● Evidence of trap witness not to be viewed with suspicion.—The evidence of trap-witnesses should not be viewed with suspicion because they are Government servants or because they are associated with the investigating agencies. State v. Raghunath Baxi, (1985) 2 GLR 988 at 991 (SC).

[10986] ● Uncorroborated testimony of trap witness.—The Court can act on the uncorroborated testimony of the trap-witnesses if the Court is satisfied from the facts and circumstances of the case that they are witnesses of trust. Narayan

Chandra Sahu v. State of Orissa, 1986 (1) Crimes 593 at 597 (Ori). TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) C. Ganesan, In re, 1983 LW (Cri) 15 (SN) (Mad); (2) State of Maharashtra v. Nar Singhrao, AIR 1984 SC 63 at 67 : (1984) 1 SCC 446 : (1984) SCC (Cri) 10 : 1984 CrLJ 4 : 1984 CrLR (SC) 10 : (1983) 2 Crimes 838 : (1984) 1 Bom CR 77 : 1984 Mad LJ (Cri) 207 : 1984 Cr App R (SC) 97.

[10987] ● Evidence of complainant trap witness.—When X demands bribe from the complainant, a trap is laid, but on being approached X leaves the place allegedly requesting that the sum may be given to Y and when it is really paid to Y and recovered from his possession, no adverse inference against X is permissible. Sadasiv Mahadeo v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1990 SC 287 : (1990) 1 SCC 299 : 1990 CrLJ 600 : (1990) 1 Crimes 46 (SC).

[10988] ● Acceptance of illegal gratification proof.—In all this type of cases of bribery, two aspects are important. Firstly, there must be a demand and secondly there must be acceptance in the sense that the accused has obtained the illegal gratification. Mere demand by itself is not sufficient to establish the offence. Therefore, the other aspect, namely, acceptance is very important and when the accused has come forward with a plea that the currency notes were put in the drawer without his knowledge, then there must be clinching evidence to show that it was with the tacit approval of the accused that the money had been put in the drawer as an illegal gratification. Unfortunately, on this aspect in the present case there is no other evidence except that of PW 1. Since PW 1's evidence suffers from infirmities, we sought to find some corroboration but in vain. There is no other witness or any other circumstance which supports the evidence of PW 1 that this tainted money as a bribe was put in the drawer, as directed by the accused. Unless we are satisfied on this aspect. It is difficult to hold that the accused tacitly accepted the illegal gratification or obtained the same within the meaning of Section 5 (1)(d) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1947, particularly when the version of the accused appears to be probable. M.K. Harshan v. State of Kerala, AIR 1995 SC 2178 (2181) : (1996) 11 SCC 720 : 1995 CrLJ 3978.

[10989] ● Evidence of bribe giver—Nature and extent of corroboration needed.—It is generally accepted that the person offering a bribe to a public officer is in the nature of an accomplice in the offence of accepting illegal gratification but the nature of corroboration required in such a case should not be subjected to the same rigorous tests which are generally applied to a case of an approver. Though bribe-givers are generally treated to be in the nature of accomplices but among them there are various types and gradations. In cases under the Prevention of Corruption Act the complainant is the person who gives the bribe in a technical and legal sense because in every trap case wherever the complaint is filed there must be a person who has to give money to the accused which in fact is the bribe money which is demanded and without such a giving the trap cannot succeed. When there is such a demand by the public servant from a person who is unwilling, and if to do public good approaches the authorities and lodges a complaint, then in order that the trap succeeds he has to give the money. There could be another type of bribe-giver who is always willing to give money in order to get his work done and having got the work done he may send a complaint. Here he is a particeps criminis in respect of the crime committed and thus is an accomplice. Thus there are grades and grades of accomplices and therefore a distinction could as well be drawn between cases where a person offers a bribe to achieve his own purpose and where one is forced to offer bribe under a threat of loss or harm that is to say under coercion. A person who falls in this category and who becomes a party for laying a trap stands on a different footing because he is only a victim of threat or coercion to which he was subjected to. Where such witnesses fall under the category of 'accomplices' by reason of their being bribe-givers, in the first instance, the Court has to consider the degree of complicity and then look for corroboration if necessary as a rule of prudence. The extent and nature of corroboration that may be needed in a case may vary having regard to the facts and circumstances. M.O. Shamsuddin v. State of Kerala, (1995) 3 SCC 351 : 1995 SCC (Cri) 509 (516).

[10990] ● Evidence of interested witness—Scrutinizing of by Court.—If any of the witnesses are accomplices who are particeps criminis in respect of the actual crime charge, their evidence must be treated as the evidence of accomplices is treated; if they are not accomplices in that sense but are only partisan or interested witnesses who are concerned in the success of the trap, their evidence must be tested in the same way as other interested evidence is tested which may vary from case to case and the corroboration in the case of such interested witnesses can be in a general way and not as one required in material particulars as in the case of an approver. Therefore in seeking corroboration for the evidence of trap witnesses a distinction has to be drawn where participation of an individual in a crime is not voluntary but is the result of pressure. In such a case the element of mens rea to commit the crime is not apparent and (sic) cannot strictly be classified as an accomplice and at any rate he cannot be treated as being on the same footing. Where a bribe has already been demanded from a man and if without giving the bribe he goes to the police or magistrate and brings them to witness the payment it will be a legitimate trap and in such cases at the most he can be treated as an interested witness and whether corroboration is necessary or not will be within the discretion of the Court depending upon the facts and circumstances of each case. However as a rule of prudence, the Court has to scrutinise the evidence of such interested witnesses carefully. M.O. Shamsuddin v. State of Kerala, (1995) 3 SCC 351 : 1995 SCC (Cri) 509 (522, 523).

[10991] ● Corroboration can be by way of circumstantial evidence.—Now coming to the nature of corroborating evidence that is required, it is well-settled that the corroborating evidence can be even by way of circumstantial evidence. No general rule can be laid down with respect to quantum of evidence corroborating the testimony of a trap witness which again would depend upon its own facts and circumstances like the nature of the crime, the character of trap witness etc. and other general requirements necessary to sustain the conviction in that case. The Court should weigh the evidence and then see whether corroboration is necessary. Therefore as a rule of law it cannot be laid down that the evidence of every complainant in a bribery case should be corroborated in all material particulars and otherwise it cannot be acted upon. Whether corroboration is necessary and if so to what extent and what should be its nature depends upon the facts and circumstances of each case. In a case of bribe, the person who pays the bribe and those who act as intermediaries are the only persons who can ordinarily be expected to give evidence about the bribe and it is not possible to get absolutely independent evidence about the payment of bribe. However, it is cautioned that the evidence of a bribe-giver has to be scrutinised very carefully and it is for the Court to consider and appreciate the evidence in a proper manner and decide the question whether a conviction can be based upon it or not in those given circumstances. M.O. Shamsudhin v. State of Kerala, (1995) 3 SCC 351 : 1995 SCC (Cri) 509 (523).

CORRUPT
§ (See Also " BRIBERY" and "PREVENTION OF CORRUPTION ACT")

[10992] ● Corrupt.—Corruption in a civilised society is a disease like cancer, which if not detected in time is sure to malign the polity of country leading to disastrous consequences. It is termed as plague which is not only contagious but if not controlled spreads like a fire in a jungle. Its virus is compared with HIV leading to AIDS, being incurable. It has also been termed as Royal thievery. The socio-political system exposed to such a dreaded communicable disease is likely to crumble under its own weight. Corruption is opposed to democracy and social order, being not only anti people, but aimed and targeted against them. It affects the economy and destroys the cultural heritage. Unless nipped in the bud at the earliest, it is likely to cause turbulence shaking of the socio-economic-political system in an otherwise healthy, wealthy, effective and vibrating society. State of Madhya Pradesh v. Ram Singh, AIR 2000 SC 870 (873) : (2000) 5 SCC 88 : 2000 CrLJ 1401 : 2000 CrLR (SC) 188.

[10993] ● FIR—Registration of—Not actuated by malafides or extraneous consideration.—After going through the pleadings of the parties and keeping in view the rival submissions made, the registration of the FIR against the appellant and others cannot be held to be the result of malafides or actuated by extraneous consideration. The menace of corruption cannot be permitted to be hidden under the carpet of legal technicalities. In such matters, probes conducted are required to be determined on facts and in accordance with law. K. Karunakaran v. State of Kerala, AIR 2000 SC 3381 : (2000) 3 SCC 761 : 2000 CrLJ 2278.

CORRUPT PRACTICE : STANDARD OF PROOF

[10994] ● Corrupt practice : standard of proof.—As to the standard of proof of corrupt practice in election it is well settled that a charge of corrupt practice in election it is well settled that a charge of corrupt practice is substantially akin to a criminal charge. The commission of a corrupt practice entails serious penal consequences. It not only vitiates the election of the candidate concerned but also disqualifies him from taking part in elections for a considerably long time. Thus, the trial of an election petition being in the nature of an accusation, bearing the indelible stamp of quasi-criminal action, the standard of proof is the same as in a criminal trial. Ch. Razik Ram v. Ch. Jaswant Singh Chouhan, AIR 1975 SC 667 : (1975) 4 SCC 769 TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Sultan Salauddin Owasi v. Md. Osman Saheed, AIR 1980 SC 1347 : (1980) 3 SCC 281; (2) A. Younus Kunju v. R.S. Unni, AIR 1984 SC 960 : (1984) 3 SCC 346; (3) Ram Singh v. Col. Ram Singh, AIR 1986 SC 3 : 1985 Supp SCC 611.

[10995] ● Corrupt practice—Charge of—To be proved by convincing evidence.—A charge of corrupt practice has to be proved by convincing evidence and not merely by preponderance of probabilities. As the charge of a corrupt practice is in the nature of a criminal charge it is for the party who sets up the plea of undue influence to prove it to the hilt beyond reasonable doubt and the manner of proof should be the same as for an offence in a criminal case. This is more so because once it is proved to the satisfaction of a Court that a candidate has been guilty of undue influence he is likely to be disqualified for a period of six years or such other period by the authority concerned. By and large, the Court in such cases while appreciating or analysing the evidence must be guided by the following considerations :

(1) the nature, character, respectability and credibility of the evidence;

(2) the surrounding circumstances and the improbabilities appearing in the case;

(3) the slowness of the appellate Court to disturb a finding of fact arrived at by the trial Court who had the initial advantage of observing the behaviour, character and demeanour of the witnesses appearing before it, and

(4) the totality of the effect of the entire evidence which leaves a lasting impression regarding the corrupt practices alleged. Ram Sharan Yadav v. Thakur Muneshwar Nath Singh, AIR 1985 SC 24 : (1984) 4 SCC 649 : (1985) 1 SCR 1089 : 1985 BLJ 247 : 1985 BLJR 19 : 1985 UJ (SC) 229.

[10996] ● Corrupt practice—Standard of proof.—Inasmuch as the standard of proof is very high and corrupt practice is to be proved beyond all reasonable doubt, if on evidence two views are possible one in favour of the elected candidate and the other against him, election cannot be declared void. Ram Singh v. Col. Ram Singh, AIR 1986 SC 3 : 1985 Supp SCC 611.

CORRUPT PRACTICE UNDER REPRESENTATION OF THE PEOPLE ACT (43 OF 1951)

1. CASSETTE

[10997] ● Cassette.—From the evidence of PW-1 and the election petitioner it is found that the story regarding the recording of the cassette Ex P-7 by Shri Ingini is shrouded in mystery and the cassette, Ex P-7 appears to be a piece of evidence on which reliance cannot be placed since the very basis as to how it came to be recorded and why it was preserved or how the election petitioner came to know about it, has not been explained by the election petitioner and has been further confused by Basavaraj Ingini, appearing as Court Witness. The appellant has denied his voice in the recorded cassette. ... The manner in which cassette Ex P. 7 came into existence and was produced at the trial and relied upon by the election petitioner has created an impression on our minds that the election petitioner has not come out with the true story. The learned Trial Judge fell in error, even without going into the question of the admissibility of cassette Ex P-7, which, has been seriously disputed by Mr. Subal in view of the denial by the returned candidate that the voice in the cassette was his, to rely upon this piece of evidence and to hold on the basis thereof, that the appellant was guilty of committing the corrupt practices covered by Section 123(2), (3), (3-A) of the Representation of People Act, 1951. We find ourselves unable to rely on cassette Ex P-7 or to hold that it was recorded in the manner and at the time and place as deposed to by the election petitioner and Shri Ingini. The cassette Ex P-7 is not a reliable price of evidence. Quamarul Islam v. S.K. Kanta, AIR 1994 SC 1733 : 1994 Supp (3) SCC 5 : JT (1994) 1 SC 452.

CORRUPTION

[10998] ● Corruption—Meaning of.—Corruption as such has reached dangerous heights and dangerous potentialities. The word "corruption" has a wide connotation and embraces almost all the spheres of our day-to-day life the world over. In a limited sense it connotes allowing decisions and actions of a person to be influenced not by rights or wrongs of a cause, but by the prospects of monetary gains or other selfish considerations. Avarice is a common frailty of mankind, and while Robert Walpole's observation that every man has a price, may be a little generalized, yet it cannot be gainsaid that it is not far from the truth. Burke cautioned "Among a people generally corrupt, liberty cannot last long." State of A.P. v. V. Vasudeva Rao, AIR 2004 SC 960 : (2004) 9 SCC 319 : 2004 SCC (Cri) 968 (980) : 2004 CrLJ 620 : 2003 (4) Crimes 519.

[10999] ● Acceptance of illegal gratification sentence.—When corruption was sought to be eliminated from the polity, all possible stringent measures are to be adopted within the bounds of law on such measure is to provide a condign punishment. Parliament measured the parameters for such condign punishment and in that process wanted to fix a minimum sentence of imprisonment for giving deterrent impact on other public servants. Who are prove to corrupt deal. That was precisely the reason why the sentence was fixed a 7 years and directed that even of the said period of imprisonment need not be given the sentence shall not be less than imprisonment for one year. Such a legislative insistence is a reflection of Parliaments resolve to meet corruption cases with a very strong hand and to give signals of deterrence as the most pivotal feature of sentencing of corrupt public servants. All public servants were warned through such a legislative measure that corrupt public servants have to face very serious consequences. If on the other hand, any public servant is given the impression that if he succeeds in protracting the proceedings that would help him to have the advantage of getting a very light sentence even if the case ends in conviction. Its fall out would afford an incentive to public servants who are susceptible to corruption to indulge in such nefarious practices with immunity.

Increasing the fine after reducing the imprisonment to a normal period can also defeat the purpose as the corrupt public servant could easily raise the fine amount through the same means. State of A.P. v. V. Vasudeva Rao, AIR 2004 SC 960 : (2004) 9 SCC 319 : 2004 SCC (Cri) 968 (980) : 2004 CrLJ 620 : 2003 (4) Crimes 519.

COUNTER CASE

[11000] ● Counter Case.—No reason has also been indicated by the High Court as to why the evidence of PWs 3, 8, 11, 12 and 15 was to be obliterated merely because they were accused in the counter-case. In a case of this nature, when a counter-case has been registered, the Court hearing the same has to scrutinize the evidence in greater detail and even in such a situation the evidence which is cogent, credible and trustworthy cannot be totally wiped out because of the only circumstance that they were accused in the counter-case. Additionally, we find that PWs-3, 6 and 9 have not been merely described in the first information report to have taken the deceased to the hospital, as observed by the High Court. A bare reading of the firsts information report clearly shows that they were described as eyewitnesses also. Here again, the High Court has committed an error. Raj Kishore Jha v. State of Bihar, AIR 2003 SC 4664 : (2003) 11 SCC 519 : 2004 SCC (Cri) 212 (218) : 2003 CrLJ 5050.

[11001] ● Refusal to register complaint—Counter complaint by police.—In the case of T.T. Antony v. State of Kerala, AIR 2001 SC 2637 : (2001) 6 SCC 181 : 2001 SCC (Cri) 1048 : 2001 CrLJ 3329 has not excluded the registration of a complaint in the nature of a counter-case from the purview of the Code. This Court in that case only held that any further complaint by the same complainant or others against the same accused, subsequent to the registration of a case, is prohibited under the Code because an investigation in this regard would have already started and further complaint against the same accused will amount to an improvement on the facts mentioned in the original complaint, hence will be prohibited under Section 162 of the Code. This prohibition noticed by this Court, in, does not apply to counter-complaint by the accused in the first complaint or on his behalf alleging a different version of the said incident. In the instant case, it is seen in regard to the incident which took place on 20.5.1995, the appellant and the first respondent herein have lodged separate complaints giving different versions but while the complaint of the respondent was registered by the police concerned, the complaint of the appellant was not so registered, hence on his prayer the learned Magistrate was justified in directing the police concerned to register a case and investigate the same and report back. In our opinion, both the learned Additional Sessions Judge and the High Court erred in coming to the conclusion that the same is hit by Section 161 or 162 of the Code which, in our considered opinion, has absolutely no bearing on the question involved. Section 161 or 162 of the Code does not refer to registration of a case, it only speaks of a statement to be recorded by the police in the course of the investigation and its evidentiary value. Upkar Singh v. Ved Prakash, AIR 2004 SC 4320 : (2004) 13 SCC 292 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 211 (215-6, 217-18) : 2004 CrLJ 4219.

COUNTERFEITING

SYNOPSIS

1. Delivery of coin (Section 238, IPC) 2253
2. Import or export of counterfeit coin (Section 237, IPC) 2253
3. Possession of instrument or material (Section 235, IPC) 2253
4. Counterfeiting Court fee stamps (Sections 258, 259, IPC)..................................2253
5. Counterfeiting currency notes or bank notes (Sections 489A to 489E, IPC) 2254
6. Counterfeiting property mark (Section 486, IPC) 2255

1. DELIVERY OF COIN (SETION 238, IPC)

[11002] ● Delivery of coin.—Section 238, IPC is directed against a person other than the coiner, who procures or obtains or receives counterfeit coin and not to the offence committed by the coiner. When a counterfeit Indian coin is involved, Section 240, IPC, is applied. In respect of other counterfeit coins, Section 239 is appropriate. Delivery to another of coin with the knowledge of its counterfeitness is an offence. To constitute the offence under this section it is not necessary to prove that the coin used is a counterfeit of current coin. (1905) 1 Weir 221.

2. IMPORT OR EXPORT OF COUNTERFEIT COIN (SECTION 237, IPC)

[11003] ● Import or export of counterfeit coin.—The word "import" has not been defined in Penal Code nor in the General Clauses Act. The definition of the term in one statute does not afford a guide to the construction of the same term in another statute. Income-Tax Commissioner v. Binay Kumar, AIR 1957 SC 768 : 1958 SCR 101.

[11004] ● Import—Meaning of.—To import is to bring something within the municipal limits from a place beyond its boundaries, irrespective of the consideration as to whether the goods were manufactured within the municipal limits, how long they were outside those limits and for what purpose—Import is not merely the bringing into but comprises something more i.e. incorporating and making up of goods imported with the mass of the property in the local area. Central India Spinning v. Municipal Committee, AIR 1958 SC 341 : 1958 SCR 1102 : 1958 SCJ 604.

[11005] ● "Counterfeit"—Definition.—The expression "counterfeit" has been defined in Section 28, IPC. Ordinarily counterfeiting implies the idea of an exact imitation. But for the purpose of the Indian penal Code there can be counterfeiting even though the imitation is not exact and there are differences in detail between the original and the imitation so long as the resemblance in so close that deception may thereby be practiced. State of U.P. v. H.M. Ismail, AIR 1960 SC 669 : 1960 CrLJ 1017 : (1960) 2 SCR 911 : 1960 All LJ 438.

[11006] ● Expression "import"—Subsequent transaction of said goods outside scope of.— The process of import does not end immediately and prohibited goods are brought into India but continues till the goods are delivered to the importer physically or constructively. But the subsequent transactions in regard to the said goods are outside the scope of the expression "import". Assistant Collector of Customs v. Sitaram Agarwala, AIR 1966 SC 955 : (1965) 2 SCJ 111 : (1966) 1 SCA 640 : (1966) 2 SCR 1.

3. POSSESSION OF INSTRUMENT OR MATERIAL (SECTION 235, IPC)

[11007] ● Possession of instrument or material.—Possession of instrument or material for the purpose of counterfeiting coins is the visible possibility of excusing physical control over a thing, coupled with the intention of doing so, either against all the world or against all the world except certain persons. There are, three requests of possession. First, there must be actual or potential physical control. Secondly, physical control is not possession unless accompanied by intention; hence if a thing is put into the hand of a sleeping person, he has not possession of it. Thirdly the possibility and intention must be visible or evidenced by external signs, for if the thing shows no signs of being under the control of anyone, it is not possessed—Jowilt's Dictionary of English Law, 2nd Edn. Possession must be conscious possession—S.D.O. Shiv Sagar v. Gopal Chandra, AIR 1971 SC 1190 : (1972) 4 SCC 263.

[11008] ● "Possession"—Meaning.—"Possession" is a polymorphous or term which may have different meanings in different contexts. It is impossible to work out a completely logical and precise definition of "possession" uniformly applicable to all situations on the context of all statutes. Superintendent Legal Remembrancer v. Anil Kumar, AIR 1980 SC 52 : (1979) 4 SCC 274 : 1979 CrLJ 1390 : (1979) 2 SCWR 334.

[11009] ● Possession or "occupation" takes various forms.—Possession or occupation may take various forms and even keeping the household effects by the owner in the premises is act of occupation. Bimla Devi v. Kailash Nandan, AIR 1984 SC 1376 : (1984) 2 SCC 582.

4. COUNTERFEITING COURT FEE STAMPS (SECTIONS 258, 259, IPC)

[11010] ● Counterfeiting Court fee stamps.—The gravamen of the charge was that all the accused conspired and agreed to do the illegal act of counterfeiting of Government stamps and in pursuance of that conspiracy, counterfeited Government stamps and sold the same and they were also found in possession of the counterfeit stamps and some of them were found in possession of instruments and other materials intended to be used for the purpose of counterfeiting stamps. The High Court while confirming the acquitted of other accused, however convicted the appellant under Sections 258, 259, IPC and sentenced him to undergo three years R.I. and a fine of Rs 500/= on each count. The offence is a serious one and the sentence awarded is not excessive. Joti Parshad v. State of Haryana, AIR 1993 SC 1167 (1167, 1169) : 1993 SCC (Cri) 691 : 1993 CrLJ 413 : (1992) 3 Crimes 256.

[11011] ● Counterfeit Court fee stamps—Recovery of from possession of licensed stamp vendor.—In context of the circumstances in the instant case namely that the appellant admittedly was a licensed stamp vendor and he was found in possession of counterfeit stamps, the explanation of the accused also becomes relevant and important in assessing and appreciating whether he had such knowledge or reason to believe that the stamp was counterfeited. Admittedly, he used to purchase stamps from the treasury and all such transactions are duly recorded in the official registers. There is absolutely no material whatsoever to show that counterfeit stamps were in fact purchased by him from the treasury. A bare allegation by way of an explanation by the appellant that he purchased all the stamps including the counterfeit ones from the treasury appears on the face of it to be false, as he has neither produced registers maintained by him nor did he make even an effort to summon the treasury records. There is no material whatsoever even to probabilise such a plea. In these circumstances the only inference that can be drawn is that he had "knowledge" and "reason to believe" that the stamps which he had in his possession and which he was selling or offering to sell, were counterfeit ones. Joti Prashad v. State of Haryana, AIR 1993 SC 1167 (1169) : 1993 SCC (Cri) 691 : 1993 CrLJ 413 : (1992) 3 Crimes 256.

5. COUNTERFEITING CURRENCY NOTES OR BANK NOTES (SECTIONS 489A TO 489E, IPC)

[11012] ● Counterfeiting currency notes or bank notes.—In a case of possession of counterfeit currency notes, there was no evidence of any witness to show that the counterfeit notes were of such a nature or description that a mere look at them would convince any person of average intelligence that it was a counterfeit note. No question was put to the accused in his examination under Section 342 (Section 313 of the new Code) of the CrPC, 1898. No presumption could reasonably be drawn, if the notes were not of such a nature that a mere look at them would convince anybody that it was counterfeit. The appellant was not examined in order to find out whether he knew that the notes were of such a nature. It is impossible to sustain the conviction of the appellant in those circumstances. Decision of the Karnataka High Court was reversed. M. Mammutti v. State of Karnataka, AIR 1979 SC 1705 : (1979) 4 SCC 723 : 1979 CrLJ 1383 : 1979 UJ (SC) 271 : 1979 BBCJ (SC) 54 : 1979 Chand LR (Cri) 186 (SC).

[11013] ● Currency notes—Counterfeiting of.— The analysis of Section 489A revealed that the legislative embargo against counterfeiting enveloped and took within its sweep currency notes of all countries. It was not restricted to 'Indian' currency notes. If the legislative intent was to restrict the parameters of prohibition to 'Indian currency' only, the legislature could have said so unhesitatingly. The expression 'currency note' was large enough in its amplitude to cover the currency notes of 'any' country. When the legislature did not speak of currency notes of India, the Court interpreting the relevant provision of law could not substitute the expression 'Indian currency note' in the place of the expression 'currency note' as had been done by the High Court. The Code not only defined the word 'counterfeit' in very wide terms but a rule of evidence was also prescribed in Expln. 2 to Section 28 of the Code so as to draw an adverse presumption against the maker of the counterfeit article. The expression 'bank note' employed in Section 489 A to 489E of the I.P.C. also took within its sweep an engagement for the payment of money issued by or under the authority of any State or Sovereign power as was evident from the analysis of Section 489A. It would, therefore, cover a Dollar Bill or Dollar Note as well. State of Kerala v. Mathal Verghese, AIR 1987 SC 33 : (1986) 4 SCC 746 : 1987 CrLJ 308.

[11014] ● Sections 489A to 489E, IPC—Object of.—Sections 489A to 489E, IPC deal with various economic offences in respect of forged or counterfeit currency notes or bank-notes. The object of legislature in enacting these provisions is not only to protected the economy of the country but also to provide adequate protection to currency notes and bank-notes. The currency notes are, in spite of growing accustomedness to the Credit Cards System, still the backbone of the commercial transactions by multitudes in our country. But these provisions are not meant to punish unwary possessors or users. Umashanker v. State of Chhattisgarh, AIR 2001 SC 3074 (3075) : (2001) 9 SCC 642 : 2001 CrLJ 4696.

[11015] ● Mens rea essential to constitute offence under Sections 489B and 489C, IPC.—A perusal of the provisions contained in Section

489-A to 489-E shows. Mens rea of offences under S. 489-B and 489-C, I.P.Code is, "knowing or having reason to believe the currency notes or banknotes are forged or counterfeit". Without the aforementioned mens rea, selling, buying or receiving from another person or otherwise trafficking in or using as genuine, forged or counterfeit currency notes or banknotes is not enough to constitute offence under S. 489-B of I.P.C. So also possessing or even intending to use any forged or counterfeit currency notes or banknotes is not sufficient to make out a case under S. 489-C in the absence of the mens rea. No material in brought on record by the prosecution to show that the appellant had the requisite mens rea. Umashanker v. State of Chhattisgarh, AIR 2001 SC 3074 (3075) : (2001) 9 SCC 642 : 2001 CrLJ 4696.

[11016] ● Counterfeiting currency notes or bank-notes (S. 489-A, IPC).—The Supreme Court maintaining the conviction of accused, who was already undergoing sentence for a period of 7 years, altered the sentence to imprisonment for a period 10 years. Uma Shankar Singh v. State of Jharkhand, (2004) 13 SCC 373 : (2006) 1 SCC (Cri) 761.

[11017] ● "Counterfeiting"—Ingredients of.— Section 28 defines the word "counterfeiting in very wide terms. The main ingredients of counterfeiting as laid down in Section 28 are :

(1) causing one thing to resemble another thing;

(2) intending by means of that resemblance to practise deception; or

(3) knowing it to be likely that deception will thereby be practised.

Thus, if one thing is made to resemble another thing and the intention is that by such resemblance deception would be practised or even if there is no intention but it is known to be likely that the resemblance is such that deception will thereby be practised, there is counterfeiting. There is no necessity of importing words like "colourable imitation" therein. In order to apply Section 28, what the Court has to see is whether one thing is made to resemble another thing and if that is so and if the resemblance is such that a person might be deceived by it, there will be a presumption of the necessary intention or knowledge to make the thing counterfeit, unless the contrary is proved. "Counterfeit" in Section 28 does not connote an exact reproduction of the original counterfeited. Explanation 2 of Section 28 is of great significance. It lays down a reputable presumption where resemblance is such that a person might be deceived thereby. In such a case the intention or the knowledge is presumed unless the contrary is proved. K. Hashim v. State of T.N., AIR 2005 SC 128 : (2005) 1 SCC 237 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 292 (306) : 2005 CrLJ 143.

[11018] ● Counterfeiting currency—Notes or bank-notes.—Sections 489-A to 489-E deal with various economic offences in respect of forged or counterfeit currency notes or banknotes. The object of the legislature in enacting these provisions is not only to protect the economy of the country but also to provide adequate protection to currency notes and banknotes. Section 489-A not only deals with complete act of counterfeiting but also covers the case where the accused performs any part of the process of counterfeiting. Therefore, if the material shows that the accused knowingly performed any part of the process of counterfeiting, Section 489-A becomes applicable. Similarly Section 489-B relates to using as genuine forged or counterfeited currency notes or banknotes. The object of the legislature in enacting this section is to stop the circulation of forged notes by punishing all persons who knowing or having reason to believe the same to be forged do any act which could lead to their circulation. Section 489-C deals with possession of forged or counterfeit currency notes or banknotes. It makes possession of forged and counterfeited currency notes or banknotes punishable. Possession and knowledge that the currency notes were counterfeited notes are necessary ingredients to constitute offence under Sections 489-C and 489-D. The expression "currency notes" is large and wide enough in its amplitude to cover the currency notes of any country. Section 489-C is not restricted to Indian currency note alone but it includes the dollar also and it applies to American dollar bills. The wording of Section 489-D is very wide and would clearly cover a case where a person is found in possession of machinery, instrument or materials for the purpose of being used for counterfeiting currency notes, even though the machinery, instruments or materials so found were not all the materials particular (sic) required for the purpose of counterfeiting. K. Hashim v. State of T.N., AIR 2005 SC 128 : (2005) 1 SCC 237 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 292 (305-306) : 2005 CrLJ 143.

6. COUNTERFEITING PROPERTY MARK (SECTION 486, IPC)

[11019] ● Counterfeiting property mark.— Under Section 28 which defines the word "counterfeit", the offence of counterfeiting has two ingredients, namely, (a) that one thing must be caused to resemble another thing, and (b) that the act must be done with the intention of practising deception, or with the knowledge that deception is likely to be practiced thereby. Explanation I to Section 28 says that it is not essential to counterfeiting that the imitation should be exact. Explanation 2 lays down the rule of evidence, that when the accused causes his article or goods to resemble that of another, and the resemblance with the original is of such a nature that a person may be deceived thereby, then, unless the accused proves the contrary, it shall be presumed that he did so either with the intention of practicing deception or with the knowledge that deception was likely to be practiced thereby. State of U.P. v. Hafiz Mohammad Ismail, AIR 1960 SC 669 : 1960 CRLJ 1017 : (1960) 2 SCR 911.

[11020] ● Existence of resemblance enough.—The combined effect of Section 28 and its Explanations is that, when a person is charged with an offence which includes the element of counterfeiting, what is required to be proved is only that the accused caused his goods to resemble the goods of another, and that the resemblance is close enough to deceive any ordinary person. It that is proved, it shall be presumed that the accused caused such resemblance with the guilty intention or knowledge. For the purpose of the Penal Code, there can be counterfeiting even though the imitation is not exact, and there are differences in detail between the original and the imitation, so long as the resemblance is close enough to enable a deception to be practiced thereby. State of U.P. v. Hafiz Mohammad Ismail, AIR 1960 SC 669 : 1960 CrLJ 1017 : (1960) 2 SCR 901

[11021] ● No necessity of importing words—Colourable imitation into definition of counterfeiting.—When considering the application of Section 28, there is no necessity of importing words like 'colourable imitation' into the definition of 'counterfeiting' in Section 28. When determining the question whether the accused is guilty under Section 486, the Court should not be led away, by the difference in detail between the label or wrapper used on the original product and the label or wrapper used by the accused on his product, and if merely by stressing those differences the Court comes to the conclusion that 'though the wrapper or label used by the accused is a colourable imitation of the wrapper or label on the genuine product, it cannot be regarded as a counterfeit', it is a clear error in law. Such an approach is wrong, because it overlooks the plain language of Section 28. State of U.P. v. Hafiz Mohammad Ismail, AIR 1960 SC 669 : 1960 CrLJ 1017 : (1960) 2 SCR 901.

[11022] ● Causing wrapper or label to reasonable wrapper or Label of genuine product.—In order to determine the question whether the accused is guilty under Section 486 read with Section 28, what the Court has to see is, whether the accused has caused his wrapper or label to resemble the wrapper or label of the genuine product, and if that is so, whether, even with the differences in detail between the two, the resemblance is close enough to deceive an ordinary person. If the Court is satisfied on both these question of fact, it is bound in law to raise the presumption under Explanation 2 regarding the intention or knowledge of the accused to practice deception or that deception was likely to be praised, unless the contrary is proved by the accused. Thereafter, the Court has to consider whether the accused has proved that his case fell under clauses (a) and (b) or under clause (c) of Section 486, and if it finds that he has not, the Court must hold that the charge under Section 486 has been established. State of U.P. v. Hafiz Mohammad Ismail, AIR 1960 SC 609 : 1960 CrLJ 197 : (1960) 2 SCR 911.

[11023] ● Suggestion of defence at investigation stage.—Each and every suggestion of the defence at the investigation need not lead the investigator to follow it. Had there been a counter version and the suggestion was that the Investigating Officer had wrongly not recorded a cross FIR it might have been different matter. Various avenues were then open to Kirtan Bhuyan and his co-accused to approach the higher officers in the Police hierarchy or to approach the District Magistrate for the purpose. Furthermore, a criminal complaint could have been filed if the counter version had to be deployed. The suspicion entertained by the defence could, thus, be of no consequences for that alone could not lead to discredit the eye-witnesses to the crime. It was at best a rumour. Kirtan Bhuyan v. State of Orrisa, AIR 1992 SC 1579 : 1992 CrLJ 2325.

COURSE OF CONDUCT

[11024] ● Course of conduct.—The course of conduct of the parties is of no relevance for the construction of a document which is itself un ambiguous. Ram Kishorelal v. Kamalnarayan, AIR 1963 SC 890 (897) : 1963 Supp (2) SCR 417.

COURT IDENTIFICATION

[11025] ● Court Identification.—As a general rule the substantive evidence of a witness is the statement made in Court. The evidence of mere identification of the accused person at the trial for the first time is from its very nature inherently of a weak character. The purpose of a prior test identification, therefore, is to list and strengthen the trustworthiness of that evidence. It is accordingly considered a safe rule of prudence to generally look for corroboration of the sworn testimony of witnesses in Court as to identify the accused who are strangers to them, in the form of earlier identification proceedings. Heera v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 2007 SC 2425 : (2007) 10 SCC 175 : 2007 CrLJ 3514 (3516) (SC).

COURT MARTIAL
§ (See "ARMY ACT" and "ARMY RULES")

[11026] ● Court.—The word "Court in Section 197(2) is not the same as "person" in Section 14(1). The power vested in the sanctioning Government by Section 197(2) is only permissive, and it is not exclusive of the powers vested under Section 14(1) in any other Government. If the sanctioning Government does not choose to exercise its power under Section 197(2) by specifying the Court of trial for an offence as to which it has given sanction, trial of the accused for that offence remains subject to the operation of the other provisions of the Code.

Even when the sanctioning Government has exercised its power of specifying the "Court" before which the trial is to be held, such specification does not touch the question as to who is to be the person to function as such Court, and it is open to the Government of the area in which the offence was committed to decide where the trial is to take place, and who will be the person to preside over such a trial. Gopalan, M.K. v. State of M.P., AIR 1954 SC 362 : 1954 CrLJ 1012 : 1954 SCR 108.

[11027] ● High Court at request of Govt. confer upon any person power alike to those of Judicial Magistrate.—Section 13 of the new Code authorises the High Court at the request of the Government to confer upon any person powers alike to those of judicial Magistrates. The old provision in Section 14 of the old Code authorised the State Government to confer upon any qualified person all or any of the powers vested under the Code in a Magistrate of any class, in respect to a particular case or class or classes of cases in specified local areas.

If two contended in the present case that Section 14 violates the guarantee under Article 14 of the Constitution, and in support reliance was placed on the decision of the Court in State of West Bengal v. Anwar Ali Sarkar, AIR 1952 SC 75 : 1952 CrLJ 510. That decision applies only to statutes under which an individual case or group of cases is allotted to a Special Court for trial under a special procedure which is substantially different from the normal procedure under the Code, so that a discrimination arises as between offenders who have committed the same or similar offences. No such discrimination can possibly arise as a result of a trial held by a Special Magistrate appointed under Section 14 because the procedure to be applied at such a trial is entirely the same normal procedure which is prescribed under the Code. A provision of this type which only authorises the Government to invest qualified persons with magisterial powers cannot be said to be discriminatory and is not hit by Article 14. Gopalan, M.K. v. State of M.P., AIR 1954 SC 362 : 1954 CrLJ 1012 : 1954 SCA 557 : 1954 SCJ 534 : 1955 SCR 168 : (1954) 2 MLJ 76 : 1954 MWN 564 : 1954 AWR (HC) 392.

[11028] ● Pronouncement of definitive judgment essential sine qua non of Court.—The pronouncement of a definitive judgment is considered the essential sine qua non of a Court and unless and until a binding or authoritative judgment can be pronounced by a person or a body of persons it cannot be a Court. Brajnandan Singh v. Jyoti Narayan, AIR 1956 SC 66 : 1956 CrLJ 156 : (1955) 2 SCR 255.

[11029] ● Court and quasi-judicial tribunal—Distinction.—What distinguishes a Court from a quasi-judicial tribunal is that it is charged with the duties (i) to decide disputes in a judicial manner which involves that the parties are entitled as a right to be heard in support or their claim and to adduce evidence in proof of it (ii) to declare the rights of the parties in a definitive judgment. Virendra Kumar Satyawadi v. State of Punjab, AIR 1956 SC 153 : 1956 CrLJ 326 : (1955) 2 SCR 1013 : 1956 SCJ 138.

[11030] ● Returning officer under representation of People Act not Court.—The Returning Officer appointed under the Act of 1951 is not a "Court" within the meaning of Section 195, CrPC, though he discharged quasi-judicial functions, and hence the offence under Section 193 of the Penal Code which was committed before him was not an offence "in or in relation to a proceeding in a Court" within the meaning of Section 195(1)(b), CrPC. That being so, the complaint made by the Returning Officer was only a private complaint under Section 200, CrPC, and not one made under Section 476, CrPC and hence no appeal to the High Court under Section 476-B could lie against such a complaint. Under the circumstances, the order of the High Court rejecting V's appeal under Section 200, and not under Section 476, was perfectly justified and proper. Virendra Kumar Satyawadi v. State of Punjab, AIR 1956 SC 153 : 1956 CrLJ 326 : 1956 SCJ 138 : 1956 SCA 410.

[11031] ● Commissioner appointed under Public Servants (Inquiries) Act not Court.—A Commissioner appointed under the Public Servants (Inquiries) Act, 1850 is not a Court within the meaning of the Contempt of Courts Act, 1952. Brajnandan Sinha v. Jyoti Narain, AIR 1956 SC 66 : 1956 CrLJ 156 : (1955) 2 SCR 955.

[11032] ● Fabricating false evidence—Offence of.—The offence of fabricating false evidence punishable under Section 193 of the Penal Code falls under two parts, the first being one which relates to that offence when committed in or in relation to a judicial proceeding, an the other to the same offence when committed ”in any other case”. Section 195(1)(b), CrPC, applies only when the offence committed falls under the first part of Section 193, and not when it falls under its second part. Therefore even when the offence of fabricating false evidence is committed before a tribunal which is quasi-judicial in character, and not merely administrative or ministerial, the offence is not one to which Section 195(1)(b), CrPC, can apply, because such a tribunal is not a "Court" within the meaning of that expression as used in Section 195. A tribunal is a "Court" only when it has the statutory power to decide as between rival claims and give a definitive and enforceable judgment. Virendara Kumar Satyawadi v. State of Punjab, AIR 1956 SC 153 : 1956 CrLJ 326 : 1956 SCA 410 : 1956 SCJ 138.

[11033] ● Senior Subordinate Judge not appellate authority.—The Senior Subordinate Judge is not the appellate authority contemplate by Section 476-A, read with Section 195(3) of the Code, because his appellate jurisdiction is exercisable only under a special notification; and is not a Court to which appeals would 'ordinarily' lie, within the meaning of Section 195(3), from the orders of the Subordinate Judge. The District Court is the Court of inferior jurisdiction to which such appeals would ordinarily lie, and that Court alone is the proper authority for the exercise of powers under Section 476-A or 476-B. The High Court itself has no power to make the complaint applied for, and it had no jurisdiction, in the exercise of its powers in revision, either to make an order making a complaint or to restore the original order making such a complaint, because the High Court was not the Court contemplated for that purpose by Section 476-A or 476-B or 195(3). All that the High Court was authorised to do in the exercise of its powers of revision was to send the case back to the District Court for disposal according to law. Kuldip Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1956 SC 391 : 1956 SCC 455 : 1956 CrLJ 781 : 1956 SCJ 387 : 1956 SCR 125.

[11034] ● Magistrate acting under Section 234 of Ajmer—Merwara Municipalities Regulation not act as inferior criminal Court.—A Magistrate who is designated in a Municipal Act or Regulation as the authority to which the Municipality can apply for recovery of any Municipal tax or of any amount recoverable as if it were a tax is a persona designata, and the recovery proceeding before him is a ministerial proceeding, or at best a quasi-judicial proceeding of a civil nature. The Magistrate who holds such a proceeding in his capacity as a persona designata under the Municipal Act or Regulation does not function as a Magistrate under the Code of Criminal Procedure. That being so, the order made by the Magistrate in such a proceeding is not an order of an "inferior criminal Court" within the meaning of Sections 435 and 439 of the Code, and revision application under Section 439 to the High Court from an order made by the Magistrate in a recovery proceeding under the Municipal Act or Regulation is not competent. Dargah Committee, Ajmer v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1962 SC 574 : 1962 (1) CrLJ 507 : (1962) 1 SCJ 583 : (1962) 2 SCR 265 : 1962 MLJ (Cri) 321.

[11035] ● Sales Tax Officers instrumentalities of State for collection of taxes.—Sales Tax Officers are the instrumentalities of the State for the collection of certain taxes. Under the Sales Tax Act and the Rules made thereunder they have duties assigned to them for the imposition and collection of taxes and in the process they have to perform many duties which are administrative duties. Merely because these instrumentalities of the State employed for the purpose of taxation have, in the discharge of their duties, to perform certain quasi-judicial functions, they are not converted thereby into Courts. They remain the instrumentalities of the State and are within the definition of "State" in Article 12. No doubt, they have certain powers which are similar to the powers exercised by Courts, but that would not make them "Courts" as understood in Section 195 of the Code. Under the Sales Tax Act, as Sales Tax Officer is only an assessing authority and the scheme of the Act shows that the Sales Tax Officer cannot be equated with a Court. Jagannath Prasad v. State of U.P., AIR 1963 SC 416 : 1963(1) CrLJ 330 : (1963) 2 SCJ 120 : (1963) 1 SCA 248 : 1963 SCD 167 : (1963) 2 SCR 850 : 1963 ALJ 1 : ILR (1963) 1 All 147 : 1963 MLJ (Cri) 338 : 1963 AnWR (HC) 152 : 1963 ACrR 99 : (1963) 1 ALT 194 : (1963) 14 STC 536.

[11036] ● Proceeding before income-tax officer under Section 37(4) of Income Tax 1922 proceeding in Court.—Proceeding's before an Income-Tax officer under Section 37(4) of the Indian Income-Tax Act, 1922 is a proceeding in any Court within the meaning of Section 195(3), CrPC. Lalji Haridas v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1964 SC 1154 : (1964) 2 CrLJ 249.

[11037] ● Word "Court" connotation.—The word "Court" in sub-section (3) of Section 195, CrPC includes not only a civil, revenue or criminal Court but also Courts which are not civil, revenue or criminal Courts. But still to be a Court, the authority in question must satisfy the essential requirements of a Court as settled by established principles. Lalji Haridas v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1964 SC 1154 : (1964) 2 CRLJ 249.

[11038] ● Magistrate acting as Court subject to revisional jurisdiction.—The fact that the enquiry does not relate to an offence is not decisive of the question whether the Magistrate is functioning as a Court. There are many proceedings under the Code of Criminal Procedure, such as those under Ss. 133, 144,145 and 488, which do not deal with offences but still it is never suggested that a Magistrate in making an enquiry in respect of matters thereunder is not functioning as a Court. We, therefore, hold that in the circumstances the Magistrate must be held to be acting as a Court. If the Magistrate is acting as a Court, as we have held he is, it is obvious that he is subject to the revisional jurisdiction conferred under Ss. 435 and 439 of the CrPC. State of Uttar Pradesh v. Kaushailiya, AIR 1964 SC 416 : 1964 CrLJ 304(308) : (1964) 4 SCR 1002.

[11039] ● Term 'Court'—Meaning.—Originally, the term Court meant among other things, the sovereign's place that it had acquired the meaning of the place where justice was administered and had further come to mean the person who exercised judicial functions under the authority derived either immediately or moderately from the sovereign. Thakur Jugal Kishore v. Sitamurhi Central Cooperative Bank Ltd., AIR 1967 SC 1494 : 1967 CrLJ 1380.

[11040] ● Assistant Registrar discharging function of Registrar.—The Assistant Registrar discharging functions of the Registrar under Section 48 read with Section 6(2) of the Bihar and Orissa Cooperative Societies Act was a Court. Thakur Jugal Kishore v. State Mushi Central Cooperative Bank Ltd., AIR 1967 SC 1494 : 1967 CrLJ 1380.

[11041] ● Registrar or Sub-Registrar under Registration Act not Courts.—The Registrar or Sub-Registrar under Registration Act are not Courts. Rama Rao v. Narayan, AIR 1969 SC 724 : (1969) 1 SCC 167 : 1969 CrLJ 1064.

[11042] ● Obligation to act judicially.—The obligation to act judicially may not necessarily make an officer a "Court" for example the Registrars nominee under the Maharashtra Cooperative Societies Act, 1960. Rama Rao v. Narayan, AIR 1969 SC 724 : (1969) 1 SCC 167 : 1969 CrLJ 1064 : (1969) 3 SCR 185.

[11043] ● Person filing sworn affidavit not witness.—The crucial point to be noticed in Section 479-A, CrPC is that it is only a witness who has appeared before the Court who can be proceeded against. Now the appellant did not appear as a witness before the High Court. He undoubtedly filed sworn affidavits but is not possible to hold that by doing so he could be said to have appeared as a witness. Section 479-A, CrPC is, therefore inapplicable and it cannot operate as a bar to the proceedings under Section 476, CrPC. Chajoo Ram v. Radhey Shyam, AIR 1971 SC 1367 : (1971) 1 SCC 774 : 1971 SCC (Cri) 331 : 1971 CrLJ 1096 (1098).

[11044] ● Discretion of officer mentioned in Section 125 Army Act to decide before which Court proceedings to be instituted.—But in the first instance, discretion is left to the officer mentioned in Section 125, Court Martial (adjustment of Jurisdiction) Rules, 1952 to decide before which Court the proceedings should be instituted. It is only when he so exercises his discretion and decides that the proceedings should be instituted before a Court-Martial, that the provisions of Section 126(1) of the said Act come into operation. If the designated officer odes not exercise his discretion and decides that the proceedings should be instituted before a Court-Martial, the Army Act would not obviously be in the way of a criminal Court exercising its ordinary jurisdiction in the manner provided by law. Then Section 126 of the said Act would not come into operation. From a perusal of Rules 3 and 4 framed by the Central Government under Section 549(1) of the old Code (Section 475(1) of the new Code), the scheme of these two Rules appears to be that the Magistrate shall not proceed to try a military personnel unless he forms an opinion for reasons to be recorded to proceed with the trial without being moved by the competent authority or the Magistrate has been so moved by the competent military authority; but before a Magistrate decides to proceed with the trial without being moved by the competent authority or the Magistrate has been so moved by the competent military authority; but before a Magistrate decides to proceed with the trial without being moved by the competent authority, he is obliged to give a return notice to the Commanding Officer of the accused and is further enjoined not to pass any of the orders enumerated as (a) to (d) in Rule 4, till the expiry of the said period of the notice mentioned in Cls. (1) and (2). Where the designated officer under Section 125 of the said Act, who had the discretion in the first instance to decide that the appellant should be tried before a Court-Martial had decided to the contrary, surrender of the accused to the civil authorities to be dealt with by the latter, after being made aware of the nature of the offence against the appellant, is a clear indication that the decision of the military authorities was that the appellant need not be tried by a Court-Martial and that his trial can take place before the criminal Court. Joginder Singh v. State of H.P., AIR 1971 SC 500 : (1971) 3 SCC 86 : 1971 CrLJ 511 : (1971) 2 SCJ 277 : (1971) 2 SCA 517 : 1971 CrAppR (SC) 32 : 1971 MLJ (Cri) 684.

[11045] ● Document to be produced or given in evidence in proceeding.—The document must be produced or given in evidence in a proceeding in any Court. Where, therefore, the Magistrate orders an investigation under Section 156(3) of the Code and the alleged forced receipt is produced by the accused in the inquiry by the police and is then seized by them, then the forged document cannot be held to have been produced in a proceeding before any Court. Nirmaljit Singh Han v. State of W.B., AIR 1972 SC 2639 : (1973) 3 SCC 573 : 1973 CrLR (SC) 237.

[11046] ● Use of false property mark.—Though the complainant used the words "Trade mark" at several places in his complaint, it was loosely used by him as it was not registered. His accusation was the use by the accused of a property mark of the complainant with the object of "palming off" to likely purchasers, his scent of inferior quality as if it was the scent made by and belonging to the complainant. As such, the accused committed the offences of using a false property mark and of selling goods marked with a counterfeit property mark. Sumat Prasad v. Sheojanan Prasad, AIR 1972 SC 2488 : (1973) 1 SCC 56 : 1972 CrLJ 1707.

[11047] ● Administration of justice.—Judicial administration is an integrated function of the judge and cannot suffer any dissection so far maintenance of high standards of rectitude or judicial administration is concerned. The whole set up of a Court is for the purpose of administration of justice, and the control which the Judge exercise over his assistants has also the object of maintaining the purity of administration of justice. These observations apply to all Courts of justice in the land whether they are regarded as superior or inferior Courts of justice. Courts of justice have, in accordance with their constitutions, to perform multifarious function for due administration of justice. Any lapse from the strict standards of rectitude in performing these functions is bound to affect administration of justice which is a term of wider import than mere adjudication of causes from the seat of justice.

In a country which has a hierarchy of Courts one above the other it is usual to find that the one which is above is entrusted with disciplinary control over one below it. Such control is devised with a view to ensure that the lower Court functions properly on its judicial administration. It is therefore as important for the superior Court to be vigilant about the conduct and behaviour of the subordinate Judge as a Judge, as it is to administer the law because both functions are essential for administration of justice. The Judge of the superior Court in whom this disciplinary control is vested functions as much as a Judge in such matters as when he hears and disposes of cases before him. If the Superior Courts neglect to discipline subordinate Courts. They will fail in an essential function of judicial administration. The mere function of adjudication between parties is not the whole of administration of justice for any Court. It is important to remember that disciplinary control is vested in the Court and not in a Judge as a private individual. Control, therefore, is an function as conducive to proper administration of justice as laying down the law or doing justice between the parties. Baradakanta Misra v. Registrar of Orissa High Court, AIR 1974 SC 710 : (1974) 1 SCC 374 : 1974 SCC (Cri) 128 : 1974 CrLJ 631 (642) : 1974 CrLR (SC) 124.

[11048] ● Decision of co-ordinate judge.—When there was a decision of a co-ordinate Court, it was open to the learned Judge to differ from it but in that case the only judicial alternative was to refer it to a larger Bench and not to dispose of the appeal by taking a contrary view. Judicial discipline as well as decorum should suggest that as the only course. It is true that the decision is pending before this Court in appeal by special leave. That however cannot be sufficient reason for the learned Judge to ignore it and observe that it is "unnecessary to keep back this matter" till the Supreme Court decides the matter. Eknath Shankarrao Mukkawar v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1977 SC 1177 : (1977) 3 SCC 25 : 1977 SCC (Cri) 410 : 1977 CrLJ 964 (968) : 1977 CrLR (SC) 352 : (1977) 3 SCR 513.

[11049] ● Appellate authority under Section 6-C of Essential Commodities Act.—Even though the State Government is authorised to appoint an appellate authority under Section 6-C of the Essential Commodities Act, 1955, the Legislature clearly indicated that such appellate authority must of necessity be a judicial authority. Since under the constitution the Courts being the repository of the judicial power and the officer presiding over the Court derives his designation from the nomenclature of the Court, even if the appointment is made by the designation of the judicial officer the appellate authority indicated is the Court over which he presides discharging functions under the relevant Code and placed in the hierarchy of the Courts for the purposes of appeal and revision. Viewed from this angle, the Sessions Judge, though appointed an appellate authority by the notification what the state Government did was to constitute an appellate authority in the Sessions Court over which the Sessions Judge presides. The Sessions Judge is constituted under the Code of criminal procedure and indisputably it is an inferior criminal Court in relation to High Court. Therefore against the order made in exercise of powers conferred by Section 6-C of the Essential Commodities Act, a revision application would be to the High Court. Thakur Das (dead) by LRs. v. State of M.P., AIR 1978 SC 1 (6) : (1978) 1 SCC 27 : 1978 SCC (Cri) 21 : 1978 CrLJ 1 : 1977 CrLR (SC) 484 : (1978) 1 SCR 732.

[11050] ● Magistrate master of orderly conduct of Court proceedings.—The Magistrate is the master of the orderly conduct of Court proceedings and his authority shall not hang limp if his business is stalled by browbeating. It is his duty to clear the Court of confusion, yelling and nerve racking gesture which mar the serious tone of judicial hearing. The officials whose duty is to keep the public place shall on requisition be at the command of the Court to help it run its process smoothly. Maneka Sanjay Gandhi v. Ram Jethmalani, AIR 1979 SC 468 : (1979) 4 SCC 167 : 1979 SCC (Cri) 934 : 1979 CrLJ 458 (462) : (1979) 2 SCR 378 : 1979 UJ (SC) 120.

[11051] ● Magistrate releasing person on bail.—A Magistrate while passing an order releasing an accused person on bail or discharging him in pursuance of a report submitted by the police to the effect that the evidence was insufficient to sustain the charge, acts judicially and therefore is a Court within the meaning of that term as used in clause (b) of Sub-Section (1) of Section 195 of the Code. Kamalapati v. State of W.B., AIR 1979 SC 777 : (1980) 2 SCC 91 : 1979 CrLJ 679 : 1979 CrLR SC 128 : (1979) 2 SCR 717.

[11052] ● Dynamics of judicial process has new "enforcement" dimension.—The dynamics of the judicial process has a new "enforcement" dimension not merely through some of the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code, but also through activated tort consciousness. The officers-in-charge and even the elected representatives will have to face the penalty of the law if what the Constitution and follow-up legislation direct them to do are defied or denied wrongfully. The wages of violation is punishment, corporate and personal. Municipal Council, Ratlam v. Vardhichand, AIR 1980 SC 1622 : (1980) 4 SCC 162 : 1980 SCC (Cri) 933 (945) : 1980 CrLJ 1075 : 1980 CrLR (SC) 543 : (1980) 1 SCR 97 : 1980 CrAppR (SC) 267.

[11053] ● Counter-petitioner—Prisoner—Court to give him facility of being defended at state expense.—When counter-petitioner is in prison, the Magistrate trying the case should give him the facility of being defended by counsel now that Article 21 of the Constitution has been reinforced by Article 39(a). Otherwise the order to bind over would be bad and void. The Court must insist on specificity of facts and be satisfied that one swallow did not make a summer and a consistent course of conduct convincing enough to draw the rigorous inference that by confirmed habit, which is second nature, the counter-petitioner was sure to commit the offences mentioned if he was not kept captive. Preventive sections privative of freedom, if incautiously proved by indolent judicial processes, might do deeper injury. Goplanachari v. State of Kerala, AIR 1981 SC 674 : 1980 Supp SCC 649 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 546 : 1981 CrLJ 337 : 1981 CrLR (SC) 94 : 1981 KLT 108 : 1981 CrAppR (SC) 15 : 1981 ACrC 49 : 1981 Supp SCC 649 : 1981 SCCrR 338.

[11054] ● In or in relation to proceeding in Court—Meaning of.—Bail proceedings took place before Magistrate D and subsequent proceedings before Magistrate K commencing with presentation of challan by Police for prosecution of one DK. Both proceedings are parts of or stages of the same integral whole. DK was released on a bail application accompanied by an affidavit purported to have been sworn by one GRT as a surety. As the accused failed to appear, NBW was issued against him and notice to the surety. Surety appeared and filed a reply in writing contending that he never stood as surety, did not make any affidavit or sign on any application, affidavit or bail bond, that he was a literate while those documents bore thumb-impressions of the surety. After enquiry, the respondent and others were committed for trial and two of the accused convicted under Sections 419, 465 and 471, IPC. etc. Bail proceedings and subsequent trial proceedings before the Magistrate are parts, of entire judicial process and as such the offences relating to the surety bond are committed "in or in relation to" the proceedings before Magistrate K for the purpose of taking action under Section 476 of the Code. The High Court erred that the Magistrate was not competent to hold a preliminary enquiry under Section 476, CrPC and /or to make a complaint for prosecution of the respondents in respect of the offences for which they were convicted. State of Maharashtra v. S.K. Bannu, AIR 1981 SC 22 : (1980) 4 SCC 286 : 1980 SCC (Cri) 951 : 1980 CrLJ 1280 : 1980 CrLR (SC) 638 : 1980 CrAppR (SC) 385 : 1981 MLJ (Cri) 166 : (1981) 1 SCJ 244 : 1981 SCCrR 173 : (1981) 1 SCR 694.

[11055] ● Filing false affidavit before Rent Central Officer.—Offence under Section 193, IPC, was alleged for filing a false affidavit before the Rent Control Officer. Rent Control Officer shall be deemed to be a Civil Court within the meaning of Sections 345 & 346, CrPC, 1973 and in view of Section 34(2) of the U.P. Urban Buildings (Regulation of Letting, Rent & Eviction) Act, 1972, shall be a Civil Court for purposes of Section 193, IPC. Compliant by the Court in writing is a pre-condition under Section 195(1)(b)(i) for taking cognizance of such offence by any Criminal Court. If the same is not satisfied, the Court has no jurisdiction to take cognizance. Chandrapal Singh v. Maharaj Singh, AIR 1982 SC 1238 : (1982) 1 SCC 466 : 1982 SCC (Cri) 249 : 1982 CrLJ 1731 : 1982 CrLR (SC) 126 : 1982 ALJ 507 : 1982 CrAppR (SC) 65 : 1982 ACrR 170 : 1982 UJ (SC) 517 : (1982) 2 SCWR 61.

[11056] ● Judgments not to be treated as mere counters in game of litigation.—"We are afraid that we cannot launch into any inquiry as to what transpired in High Court. It is simply not done Public policy bars us. Judicial decorum restrains us. Matters of judicial record are unquestionable. They are not open to doubt. Judges cannot be dragged into the arena. 'Judgments cannot be treated as mere counters in the game of litigation." State of Maharashtra v. Ramdas Shriniwas Nayak, AIR 1982 SC 1249 : (1982) 2 SCC 463 : 1982 SCC (Cri) 478 (481) : 1982 CrLJ 1581.

[11057] ● Court bound to accept statement of Judges recorded in judgment.—We are bound to accept the statement of the Judges recorded in their judgment, as to what transpired in the Court. We cannot allow the statement of Judges to be contradicted by statements at the Bar or by affidavit or other evidence. If the Judges say in their judgment that something was done, said or admitted before them, that has to be the last word on the subject. The principle is well-settled that statements of fact as to what transpired at the hearing, recorded in the judgment of the Court, are conclusive of the facts so stated and no one can contradict such statements by affidavit or other evidence. If a party thinks that the happening s in Court have been wrongly recorded in a judgment, it is incumbent upon the party, while the matter is still fresh in the minds of the Judges, to call the attention of the very Judges who have made the record to the fact that the statement made with regard to his conduct was a statement that had been made in error. (Per Lord BUCKMASTER in Madha Sudan Chowdhri v. Chandrabati Chaudhrain, AIR 1917 SC 30 : 42 2C 527). That is the only way to have the record corrected. If no such step is taken, the matter must necessarily end there of course a party may resile and an Appellate Court may permit him in rare and appropriate cases to resile from a concession on the ground that the concession was made on a wrong appreciation of the law and had led to gross injustice, but, he may not call in question the very fact of making the concession as recorded in the judgment. So the judges record is conclusive. Neither lawyer nor litigant may claim to contradict it except before the judge himself, but no where else. State of Maharashtra v. Ramdas Shrinivas Nayak, AIR 1982 SC 1249 : (1982) 2 SCC 463 : 1982 SCC (Cri) 478 (481) : 1982 CrLJ 1581 : 1982 CrLR (SC) 328 : (1983) 1 SCR 8.

[11058] ● Court cannot insist that accused shall keep on standing during trial.—Court cannot insist that accused shall keep on standing during trial, particularly when it is long and arduous. All High Courts will take appropriate steps, if not already done, to provide in their respective Criminal Manuals prepared under Section 477(1) of the Code that accused shall be permitted to sit down during trial unless it became necessary to stand up for any specific purpose. Avtar Singh v. State of M.P., AIR 1982 SC 1260 : (1982) 1 SCC 438 : 1982 CrLJ 1740.

[11059] ● Court of special Judge—Court of original jurisdiction.—"Shorn of all embellishment the Court of a special Judge is a Court of original criminal jurisdiction. As a Court of original criminal jurisdiction in order to make it functionally oriented some powers were conferred by the statute setting up the Court. Except those specifically conferred and specifically denied, it has to function as a Court of original criminal jurisdiction not being hidebound by the terminological status description of Magistrate or a Court of Session under the Code it will enjoy all powers which a Court of original criminal jurisdiction enjoys same and except the ones specifically derived. A.R. Antulay v. Ramdas Sriniwas Nayak, AIR 1984 SC 718 : (1984) 2 SCC 500 : 1984 SCC (Cri) 277 : 1984 CrLJ 647 : 1984 CrLR (SC) 206 : 1984 (1) Crimes 547.

[11060] ● Juvenile Courts—Necessity to set up.—The State Governments must set up Juvenile Courts in each district and they must appoint suitably trained special cadre of Magistrates for dealing with cases against children. Where a complaint is filed or FIR is lodged against a child below the age of 16 years for an offence punishable with imprisonment of not more that 7 years, the investigation shall be completed within a period of two months from the date of filing of the compliant or lodging of the FIR and if the investigation is not completed within that time, the case against the child must be treated as closed. If a charge-sheet is filed within 3 months in the case of such an offence, the case must be filed and disposed of within a further period of 6 months at the most inclusive of the time taken up in committal proceedings, if any. If is desirable to have a uniform Children Act throughout India instead of State Acts. Sheela Barse v. Union of India, AIR 1986 SC 1773 : (1986) 3 SCC 596 : 1986 SCC (Cri) 337 : 1986 CrLJ 1736.

[11061] ● Offence under Section 52 of Army Act—Trial by ordinary criminal Court or Court martial.—In regard to the offence which fall within the purview of S. 70 of the Army Act of 1950, an offender can be tried only by Court-Martial whereas in regard to offences falling within the purview of S. 52 of the said Act, the offences can be tried both by the ordinary Criminal Court as also by the Court-Martial both of which have concurrent jurisdiction. The offences with which the concerned accused were charged before the learned Trial Judge were offences which fell within the scope of S. 52 of the Army Act of 1950 and accordingly the ordinary Criminal Court as also the Court-Martial had concurrent jurisdiction. In order to avoid any conflict of jurisdiction between the criminal Court and the Court-Martial in regard to offenders who are charged with having committed offences which fall under purview of Section 52 of Army Act, 1950, Section 549(1) of the CrPC provides that Central Government may make Rules consistent with CrPC and the Army Act. In pursuance of this provision contained in S. 549(1), CrPC the Central Government has framed Rules known as Criminal Courts and Court-Martial (Adjustment of Jurisdiction) Rules, 1952. R. 3 of the said Rules requires that when a person subject to Military, Naval or Air Force law is brought before a Magistrate on accusation of an offence for which he is liable to be tried by Court-Martial also, the Magistrate shall not proceed with the case unless he is requested to do so by the appropriate Military Authority. On a combined reading of Rr. 3 and 4, it is evident that in case the Magistrate is of the opinion that he should proceed with the case without there being any such request from the appropriate Military Authority, the concerned Magistrate is enjoined to give notice to the Commanding Officer in this behalf. Till the expiry of seven days from the service of such notice on the Commanding Officer, the Magistrate is prohibited from making any order of conviction or acquittal or framing any charges or committing the accused. It is in the background of those provision that the High Court has taken the view that compliance with the procedure prescribed by the Rules is a mandatory requirement and that any proceedings undertaken by the learned Trial Judge without compliance with the aforesaid mandatory procedure would vitiated the trial before the ordinary Criminal Court and the entire proceedings would be rendered null and void. It cannot be said that the Rules framed thereunder are applicable only to the Court presided by the Magistrate and not to a Judge presiding over a special Court. Superintendent and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs, West Bengal v. Usha Ranjan Roy Choudhury, AIR 1986 SC 1655 : 1986 Supp SCC 190 : 1986 SCC (Cri) 311 (314, 315) : 1986 CrLJ 1248 : 1986 CrLR (SC) 309 : JT (1986) SC 363 : (1986) 3 Crimes 11.

[11062] ● Section 549, CrPC designed to avoid conflict of jurisdiction.—Section 549(1), CrPC is designed to avoid the conflict of jurisdiction in respect of the last category of offences. The phrase in the said section "is liable to be tried either by a Court to which this Code applies or a Court-Marital" imports that the offence for which the accused is to be tried should be an offence of which cognizance can be taken by an ordinary Criminal Court as well as a Court-Martial. In our opinion the phrase is intended to refer to the initial jurisdiction of the two Courts to take cognizance of the case and not to their jurisdiction to decide it on merits. It is admitted that both the ordinary Criminal Court and the Court-Martial have concurrent jurisdiction with respect to the offences for which the respondent has been charged by the Special Judge. So, S. 549 and the Rules made thereunder are attracted to the case at hand. Having regard to the enunciation of law to this effect it is evident that the ordinary Criminal Court would have no jurisdiction to take cognizance of the case and to try the accused in a matter where the procedure prescribed by the Rules has not been complied with. The initial lack of jurisdiction to take cognizance and try the case would of logical necessity vitiate the trial and the order of conviction and sentence would be liable to be quashed as a result thereof we are therefore unable to accept to the submission urged that even if Rules are applicable having regard to the fact that more than three years have expired from the date of the commission of the alleged offence, the trial is not vitiated. Superintendent and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs, West Bengal v. Usha Ranjan Roy Choudhury, AIR 1986 SC 1655 : 1986 Supp SCC 190 : 1986 SCC (Cri) 311 : 1986 CrLJ 1248 : 1986 CrLR (SC) 309 : (1986) 3 SCR 113 : (1986) 3 Crimes 11.

[11063] ● Juvenile Court—Meaning of.—The Juvenile Court has to be manned by a Judicial Officer with some special training. Creation of a Court with usual Judicial Officer and labeling it as Juvenile Court does not serve the requirement of the statute. If that were so, the statutes have no necessity of providing a Juvenile Court. The statutory scheme contemplates a Judicial Officer of a different type with a more sensitive approach-oriented outlook. Without these any Judicial Officer would, indeed, not be competent to handle the special problem of children. Sheela Barse v. Secretary Children Aid Society, AIR 1987 SC 656 : (1987) 3 SCC 50 : 1987 SCC (Cri) 458 (463) : 1987 CrLR (SC) 29 : JT (1987) SC 58 : (1987) 1 SCR 870 : (1987) 1 UJ (SC) 516.

[11064] ● Commission of inquiry not Court for purposes of Section 195, CrPC.—A Commission of Inquiry appointed by the appropriate Government under S. 3(1) of the Commission of Inquiry Act is not a Court for the purposes of S. 195 of the CrPC. Baliram Hiray (Dr.) v. Justice B.lentin, AIR 1988 SC 2267 : (1988) 4 SCC 419 : 1988 SCC (Cri) 941 : 1989 CrLJ 306 : 1988 CrLR (SC) 799.

[11065] ● Commission of Inquiry fictionally civil Court for limited purpose of proceeding under Section 346, CrPC.—We are quite clear that the first part of Sub-Section (4) of Section 5 of the commission of Inquiry Act, 1952 cannot be read in isolation but must take its colour from the context in which it appears. It would not be correct to contend that the fiction created by the first part by the words "shall be deemed" to be a "Civil Court" is full and complete in itself. The purpose and object of the legal fiction created by the first part of sub-S (4) of Section 3 of the said Act is reflected in the second. A Commission of Inquiry is, therefore, fictionally a Civil Court for the limited purpose of proceeding under S. 482 of the old Code or under S. 346 of the present Code. A fortiori the legal fiction contained in sub-s. (5) of S. 5 of the said Act which relates to the proceedings before the Commission is necessarily confined to offences that are punishable under Ss. 193 and 228 of the IPC and does not extend beyond that. Baliram Hiray (Dr.) v. Justice B. Lentin, AIR 1988 SC 2267 : (1988) 4 SCC 419 : 1988 SCC (Cri) 941, 967 : 1989 CrLJ 306 : 1988 CrLR (SC) 799.

[11066] ● Case diary—Use by accused.—The provision embodied in S. 172(3) of the code cannot be characterised as unreasonable or arbitrary. Under S. 172 (2) the Court itself has the unfettered power to examine the entries in the diaries. This is a very important safeguard. The Legislature has reposed complete trust in the Court which is conducting the inquiry or the trial. It has empowered the Court to call for any such relevant case diary, if there is any inconsistency or contradiction arising in the context of the case diary the Court can use the entries for the purpose of contradicting the Police Officer as provided in S. 172(3) of the CrPC. Ultimately there can be no better custodian or guardian of the interest of justice than the Court trying the case. No Court will deny to itself the power to make use of the entries in the diary to the advantage of the accused by contradicting the police officer with reference to the contents of the diaries. In view of this safeguard, the charge of unreasonableness or arbitrariness cannot stand scrutiny. The petitioner claims an unfettered right to make roving inspection of the entries in the case diary regardless of whether these entries are used by the police officer concerned to refresh his memory or regardless of the fact whether the Court has used these entries for the purpose of contradicting such police officer. It cannot be said that unless such unfettered right is conferred an recognised, the embargo engrafted in S. 172 (3) of the Code would fail to meet the test of reasonableness. Mukund Lal v. Union of India, AIR 1989 SC 144 : 1989 SCC (Cri) 606 : 1989 CrLJ 872 : 1989 CrLR (SC) 29 : JT 1988 (4) SC 143.

[11067] ● Offence to be investigated or inquired into or tried according to provisions of CrPC.—Under S. 26(b) of the CrPC, any offence under any other law shall, when any Court is mentioned in this behalf in such law, be tried by such Court and when no Court is mentioned in this behalf, may be tried by the High Court or other Court by which such offence is shown in the First Schedule to be triable.

The combined operation of Ss. 4(2) and 26(b) of the CrPC is that the offence complained of should be investigated or inquired into or tried according to the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code where the enactment which creates the offence, indicates no special procedure. The provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code would be applicable to the extent in the absence of any contrary provision in the special Act or any special provision excluding the jurisdiction or applicability of the Code. Directorate of Enforcement v. Deepak Mahajan, AIR 1994 SC 1775 : (1994) 3 SCC 440 : 1994 SCC (Cri) 785 (819, 821) : 1994 CrLJ 2269.

[11068] ● Custodial death or police torture—Evidence and proof.—The exaggerated adherence to and insistence upon the establishment of proof beyond every reasonable doubt by the prosecution, ignoring the ground realities, the fact situations and the peculiar circumstances of a given case often results in miscarriage of justice and makes the first delivery system a suspect. Tortures in police custody, which of late are on the increase, receive encouragement by this type of an unrealistic approach of the Courts because it re-inforces the belief in the mind of the police that no harm would come to them, if an odd prisoner dies in the lock-up because there would hardly be any evidence available to the prosecution to directly implicate them with the torture. The Court must not lose sight of the fact that death in police custody is perhaps one of the worst kind of crimes in a civilized society. The Court must, therefore deal with such cases in a realistic manner and with the seniority which they deserve. The Courts should exhibit more sensitivity and adopt a realistic rather than a narrow technical approach while dealing with the cases of custodial crime so that as far as possible within their powers, the guilty should not escape. So that the victim of the crime has the satisfaction that ultimately the majesty of law has prevailed. State of M.P. v. Shyam Sunder Trivedi, (1995) 4 SCC 262 : 1995 SCC (Cri) 715 (725, 726).

[11069] ● Railway claims tribunal not Court.—Railway claims Tribunal is not a Civil Court and therefore Limitation Act would not apply. Birla Cement Works v. G.M. Western Railway, AIR 1995 SC 111 : 1994 Supp (3) SCC 424.

[11070] ● Word "Court" connotation.—The word "Court" is a word of very wide connotation. In legal parlance it indicates a place where justice is judicially administered. But for the purposes of Section 195(1)(b) of the Code we have to go by the definition of the word "Court" contained in sub-section (3) of Section 195 (1)(b) of the Code. The term "Court" had a wider meaning under the old Code but under the new Code it is given a restricted meaning. Now the word "Court" does not include all the judicial bodies and authorities constituted for administering justice. The Courts, contemplated now by Section 195 are only Civil Courts, revenue Courts and Criminal Courts and those tribunals which are required by the Acts constituting them to be Courts for the purposes of Section 195, CrPC. Keshab Narayan Banerjee v. State of Bihar, AIR 2000 SC 485 : (2000) 1 SCC 607 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 272 (278) : 2000 CrLJ 595.

[11071] ● Compensation officer appointed under Bihar Land Reforms Act not Court.—A Compensation Officer appointed under the Bihar Land Reforms Act, 1950 is not a Court for the purposes of Section 195(1)(b), CrPC. Though a proceeding before him is to be considered as a judicial proceeding and is of a civil nature, it is of a limited nature. His appointment is under a special law and for a specific and limited purpose. His main function is to determine the amount of compensation. The amount of compensation is to be determined by finding out the rent and then making certain additions, subtractions and multiplication as provided in the Act itself. He cannot determine the questions of title or rights of the rival claimants except for the purpose of determining who should be paid compensation. The party claiming compensation cannot lead evidence as regards the value of his interest in the estate or tenure. Nor does a Compensation Officer has the discretion to decide independently the amount of compensation on the basis of such evidence. He lacks the essential attribute of evidence which a Civil Court possesses. Thus, considering the nature of his jurisdiction and the extent of powers conferred on him, it has to be said that he is not a Civil Court. Determination of compensation for divesting a tenure holder or an intermediary of his right in the estate or tenure is not a matter pertaining to revenue. For that reason he is not a Revenue Court also. Keshab Narayan Banerjee v. State of Bihar, AIR 2000 SC 485 : (2000) 1 SCC 607 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 272 (278) : 2000 CrLJ 595.

[11072] ● Registrar or Sub-Registrar under Indian Registration Act not Court.—A Registrar or Sub-Registrar under the Indian Registration Act, 1877 is not Court within the meaning of that word in clause (b) of Section 195(1), CrPC 1973

In the former Court the Registrar as well as Sub-Registrar had been expressly excluded by the words " but does not include a Registrar or Sub-Registrar under the Indian Registration Act, 1977". Sub-section (3) of Section 195 of the Code of CrPC makes such words superfluous, because under that clause a Court means only a civil criminal or Revenue Court and includes only a new category known as Tribunal. Keshab Narayan Banerjee v. State of Bihar, AIR 2000 SC 485 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 272 : 2000 CrLJ 495.

[11073] ● Rules 39, 40 and 102, Army Rules, 1954—Interpretation.—A combined reading of Rules 39, 40 and 102 of the Army Rules, 1954 suggest that an officer who is disqualified to be a part of Court-Martial is also disqualified from acting and sitting as a Judge-Advocate at the Court-Martial. It follows, therefore, that if an officer lower in rank than the officer facing the trial cannot become a part of the Court-Martial, the officer of such rank would be disqualified for acting as a Judge-Advocate at the trial before a General Court-Martial. Accepting a plea to the contrary, would be invalidating the legal bar imposed upon the composition of the Court in sub-rule (2) of Rule 40. In other words, a Judge-Advocate appointed with the Court-Martial should not be an officer of a rank lower than that of the officer facing the trial unless the officer of such rank is not (having due regard to the exigencies of public services) available and the opinion regarding non-availability is specifically recorded in the convening order. Union of India v. Charanjit S. Gill, AIR 2000 SC 3445 : (2000) 5 SCC 742.

[11074] ● Court-Martial proceedings—Nature.—The Court-Martial proceedings deal with the penal aspect of the misconduct while the proceedings under the Central Rules deal with the disciplinary aspect of the misconduct. The two proceedings do not overlap. Union of India v. Sunil Kumar Sarkar, AIR 2001 SC 1092 : (2001) 3 SCC 414.

[11075] ● Arbitrator not Court within the meaning of Section 195, CrPC.—An Arbitrator cannot be termed to be a Court within the meaning of Section 195, CrPC and as such question of applicability of Section 340, CrPC does not and cannot arise. Manohar Lal v. Vinesh Anand, AIR 2001 SC 1820 : (2001) 5 SCC 407 : 2001 SCC (Cri) 1322 (1333) : 2001 CrLJ 2044.

[11076] ● Objection to membership of Court-Martial—Disposal of.—Navy Act, 1957, Sections 101, 102, 103, 105, 77, 97.—The steps taken before the stage is reached under Section 104 of the Act for administering oath or affirmation to the President and the Members of the Court-Martial, are taken at the pre-trial stage. Though the proceedings commence before the Court-Martial for compliance with the requirements of Sections 101, 102 and 103 of the Act, the trial commences only after the President and the Members of the Court-Martial are administered oath as required by Section 104 of the act and the accused is produced before the Court-Martial. Sub-section (3) of Section 101 directs the Trial Judge Advocate to read out the warrant for assembling the Court and the names of officers who are exempted from attending together with the reasons for such exemption. After the warrant is read out, the Trial Judge is required to read out the names of the officers composing the Court. It shall then ask the prosecutor whether he objects to any of them. If any objection is made by the prosecutor the same has to be disposed of. However, if the prosecutor has no objection, the Trial Judge Advocate shall ask the accused if he objects to any Member of the Court. It would, thus, appear that before the trial commences, objections to membership of the Court have to be considered with a view to ensure fairness of trial and to avoid charge of bias against any of the Members of the Court-Martial. Section 102 lays down the provisions, which shall apply to the disposal of objections raised by the prosecutor as well as the accused. cl. (a) provides that any Member may be objected to on a ground, which affects his competency to act as an impartial judge, and the Trial Judge Advocate may reject summarily without reference to the Members of the Court any objection not made on such ground. Section 103 refers to any further objection respecting the constitution of the Court-Martial. It is, therefore, open to the accused to raise further objections on other grounds respecting the constitution of the Court-Martial, and for this purpose he may urge the ground of breach of any of the provisions of the sub-sections of Section 97 of the act, or any other objection which he has respecting the constitution of the Court-Martial. These objections have to be decided under Section 103 by the Court-Martial, which must mean all the Members of the Court-Martial, who are entitled to sit as a Court after the disposal of objections, if any, under Section 102 of the Act. Union of India v. Shivendra Bikaram, AIR 2003 SC 2481 : (2003) 6 SCC 359 : 2003 SCC (Cri) 1343 : 2003 CrLJ 3028.

[11077] ● Objections to constitution of Court-Martial—Consideration of.—Reading the provisions contained in Section 102 & 130 together the scheme of the Act appears to be that in the first instance the Court has to consider whether any of its member is disentitled to sit as a member of the Court martial on the ground that he is not competent to act as an impartial judge. No other objection is to be entertain at this stage. Therefore, when an objection to any member is raised on a ground other than the ground, which affects his competency to act as an impartial judge, the trial Judge Advocate is authorized to reject the same summarily without reference to the members of the Court martial. But if any member is objected to on the ground, which affects his competency to act as an impartial judge, the trial Judge Advocate has no discretion in the matter and he must place the matter before the Court, which must consider the objection in accordance with the procedure laid down in clauses (b) to (e) of Section 102. Whether there is any merit in the objection, is not a matter to be considered by the trial Judge Advocate, since he is not vested with the jurisdiction to decide such objections. That power has to be exercised by the Court itself. The only authority that is given to the trial Judge Advocate under clause (a) of Section 102 is to reject at that stage all other objections without reference to the members of the Court martial which are not on a ground which affects the competency of a member to act as an impartial judge. This is because such other objections may be considered later after the constitution of the Court is first finalized after disposal of objections to membership of the Court martial on the ground, which affects the competency of any member to act as an impartial judge. The scheme of the Act, therefore, is to provide for two stages at which the objections to the constitution of the Court martial have to be considered. Section 102 clarifies that at that stage only those objections have to be considered which proceed on a ground, which affects the competency of any member to act as an impartial judge. All other objections to the constitution of the Court have to be considered after the objections on the grounds specified in clause (a) of Section 102 of the act are disposed of. Those other objections have to be disposed of in the manner laid down under Section 103 of the Act. Union of India v. Shivendra Bikaram Singh, AIR 2003 SC 2481 : (2003) 6 SCC 359 : 2003 CrLJ 3028 : (2003) 3 Crimes 17 (SC).

[11078] ● Non-production of records.—The respondent challenged the order convening General Court of Martial in writ petition. Despite several opportunities to appellant, records were not produced on the ground of being destroyed. Held, According to Rules records relating to Court-Martial proceedings should be retained only for 7 years. The respondent filed the writ petition within seven years. Despite the matter was sub-judice before the Court, the records were alleged to have been destroyed. In absence of records, it cannot be determined effectively as to whether the appellant had applied the mind or not. The High Court was justified in quashing the order convening the General Court-Martial. Union of India v. Ex-Major Sudershan Gupta, 2009 (9) SCR 584 : (2009) 6 SCC 298 : JT 2009 (14) SC 99.

COURT MARTIAL (APPEAL) ACT, 1968

[11079] ● Court Martial (Appeal) Act, 1968.—The Court Martial appellate Court has power to determine any question necessary to be determined to do justice and also has power to order production of documents and witnesses. Prithipal Singh Bedi v. Union of India, AIR 1982 SC 1413 : 1982 (3) SCC 140 : 1982 SCC (Cri) 642 : 1982 CrLJ 647 : 1982 CrLR (SC) 524.

[11080] ● Expression of opinion.—Any expression of opinion by trial Court regarding petitioner will not be taken into consideration by the Courts in trial by way of appeal or revision arising out of that trial. Jiwan Mal Kochar v. Union of India, AIR 1983 SC 1102 : 1983 CrLR (SC) 453 : 1983 UJ(SC) 852 : 1983 (2) Crimes 587.

[11081] ● Interrogation not to mean inflicting injuries.—Interrogation does not mean inflicting injuries, while it should make the investigation effective and as such torturing a person and using third degree methods are contrary to law. Bhagwan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1992 SC 1689 : (1992) 3 SCC 249 : 1992 CrLJ 3144 : 1992 CrLR (SC) 454.

COURT'S POWERS AND DUTIES

[11082] ● Court's powers and duties.—If at the trial of a murder case it is shown that persons who had witnessed the incident have been deliberately kept back, the Court may draw an inference against the prosecution and may, in a proper case, regard the failure of the prosecutor to examine the said witnesses as consisting a serious infirmity in the proof of the prosecution case. In such a case if the ends of justice require, the Court may even examine such witnesses by exercising its power under Section 540, CrPC but to say that in every murder case, the Court must scrutinize the police diary and make a list of witnesses whom the prosecutor must examine is virtually to suggest that the Court should itself take the role of a prosecutor. Darya Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR

1965 (SC) 328 : (1965) CrLJ 350 : (1964) 2 SCJ 319 : 1964 SCD 87.

[11083] ● Duty of Court in the matter of appreciating evidence.—The Criminal Courts holding trial under the Code of Criminal Procedure have to bear in mind the provisions of Section 342-A of the Code of Criminal Procedure and to take anxious care that in appreciating the evidence on the record and the circumstances of the case, their mind is not influenced by failure on the part of the accused to give evidence. Hargun Sunder Das Godeja v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1970 SC 1514 : (1970) 1 SCC 724 : 1970 SCC (Cri) 284 : 1970 CrLJ 1391 : 1970 SCD 790 : 1970 SC CrR 422.

[11084] ● Recalling witness.—The Court has inherent power to recall a witness if it is satisfied that he is prepared to give evidence which is materially different from what he had given at the trial. In this case, there was no material upon which the Court could be so satisfied. The Magistrate rightly disallowed the prayer for recalling the witness in question. Mohd. Hussain Umar Kachra v. K.S. Dalip Singhji, AIR 1970 SC 45 : (1969) 3 SCC 429 : 1970 CrLJ 9 : (1970) 1 SCJ 149.

[11085] ● Appreciation of evidence.—No doubt, in cases of party faction, there is generally speaking, a tendency on the part of the prosecution witnesses to implicate some innocent persons also along with the guilty ones, but normally where the general substratum of the occurrence cannot be held to arouse, any reasonable doubt of suspicion about its having taken place, then the prosecution witnesses, provided they are held to have witnessed the occurrence and to be in a position to identify the assailants, are ordinarily not to be assumed to have left out the actual offender or the guilty persons. Although the witnesses for the prosecution are in such circumstances prove to exaggerate the culpability of the actual assailants as also to extend the participation in the occurrence to some possible innocent members of the opposite party as well, the Court has to sift the evidence and after a close scrutiny with anxious care and caution to try to come to a judicial conclusion as to who out of the accused persons can be safely considered to have taken part in the assault. As pointed out in Deep Chand v. State of Haryana the maxim falsus in ure falsus omnibus is not a sound rule to apply in the conditions in this country and, therefore, it is the duty of the Court in cases where a witness has been found to have given unreliable evidence in regard to certain particulars to scrutinize the rest of his evidence with care and caution. If the remaining evidence is trustworthy and the substratum of the prosecution case remains intact, then the Court should uphold the prosecution case to the extent it is considered safe and trustworthy. Ranbir v. State of Punjab, AIR 1973 SC 1409 : (1973) 2 SCC 444 : 1973 SCC (Cri) 858 : 1973 CrLJ 1120 : 1973 CrLR (SC) 488 : (1973) 2 SCWR 25 : 1973 Cur LJ 721 : 1973 SCD 723.

[11086] ● Where prosecution leads two sets of evidence.—The function of the Court in a criminal trial is to find whether the person arraigned before it as the accused is guilty of the offence with which he is charged. For this purpose the Court must see the material on record to find whether there is any, reliable and trustworthy evidence upon the basis of which it is possible to have found the conviction of the accused and to hold that he is guilty of the offence with which is charged. If in a case the prosecution leads two sets of evidence, each one of which contradict and strikes at the other and shows it to be unreliable, the result would unnecessarily be that the Court would be left with no reliable an trustworthy evidence upon which the conviction of the accused might be based. Inevitably, the accused would have the benefit of such a situation. Harchand Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 1974 SC 344 : (1974) 3 SCC 397 : 1974 CrLJ 366 : 1973 CrLR (SC) 628.

[11087] ● Rules 44(g) and 45 of PFA Rules not violative of Article 14 of constitution.—In no view can the discretion of the Government, exercised after listening to the technical counseling of the Central Committee, be castigated as arbitrary and capricious are as unreasonable. So long as the exercise of power is not smeared by bad faith, influenced by extraneous considerations, uniformed by relevant factors, and is within the limits of reasonableness it becomes out of bounds for judicial re-evaluation. Where expertise of a complex nature is expected of the State in framing rules, the exercise of that power, not demonstrated as arbitrary must be presumed to be valid as reasonable restriction on the fundamental rights of the citizen and judicial review must halt at the frontiers. The Court cannot re-weigh and substitute its notion of expedient solution. Constitutionality not chemistry, abuse not error, is our concern and the executive has not transgressed limits at all here. Within the wide judge-proof areas of policy and judgment open to Government, if they makes mistakes, correction is not in Court but elsewhere. That is the comity of constitutional jurisdictions in our jurisprudence. We cannot evolve a judicial policy on medical issues or food additives and should refuse to invalidate Rules 44 (g) and 47 on the mystic may be and happy hopefuls held up before us by the appellant. Pyarali K. Tejani v. Mahadao Ramchandra Donge, AIR 1974 SC 228 : (1974) 1 SCC 167 : 1974 CrLJ 313 : 1973 CrLR (SC) 758.

[11088] ● Evidence—Appreciation of.—Unless the exaggeration and falsehood in the evidence are on points destructive of the substance of the prosecution story, it is the Court's duty to sift the evidence, separating truth form falsehood, and come to its conclusion about the guilt or innocence of the persons accused of the offence. Exaggeration or falsehood on points which do not touch the core of the prosecution story are not to be given undue importance, provided, of course, there is trustworthy evidence supporting the real substance and core of the prosecution case. After going through the judgment of the trial Court we cannot help observing that the real test. Dharamdas v. State of U.P., AIR 1974 SC 2195 : (1973) 2 SCC 216 : 1973 SCC (Cri) 765 : 1973 CrLJ 1181 : 1973 CrLR (SC) 421 : (1973) 1 SCWR 808 : 1973 SCD 568.

[11089] ● Appreciation of evidence—Duty of Court.—In case where the large number of persons are involved and in the commotion some persons cause injuries to others and the evidence is of a partisan character, it is often safer for the Judge of fact to be guided by the compass or probabilities along the rock ribbed contours of the case converging on the heart of the matter. Once the Court goes astray from the basic features of the case, it is apt to lose itself in the labyrinths of immaterial details, sultory discussion and vacillation arising from unfounded suspicious. This is exactly what has happened in the instant case. Despite the pains taken and the conscientious effort put into write an elaborate judgment, the trial Judge had, as it were, missed the wood for the trees. The Learned Judges of the High Court were, therefore, right in discarding altogether the basically wrong "scheme of approach" adopted by the trial Court, and in analysing the evidence in their own way. Bava Hajee Homsa v. State of Kerala, AIR 1974 SC 902 : (1974) 4 SCC 479 : 1974 CrLJ 755 : 1974 CrLR (SC) 31.

[11090] ● Communal riot—Murder—Partisan witness.—The High Court had found that the appellant had serious injuries on his body. We think that the High Court had not given due importance to this fact and had dismissed the statement of the appellant that he had only a stick with him, without examining the credibility of this version supported by the fact that only a stick not get up. The injury on the body belies the whole prosecution case that a body of persons had fallen upon and done him to death and that a Dhariya blow was inflicted by the appellant in the course of that attack. It is not uncommon in case of a communal nature to find witnesses coming forward to depose falsely about an attack by a person who is believed to be guilty. Apparently, this is why the witnesses had tried to involve the appellant whose participation in the occurrence seemed to them to be established by his having been found lying on the road in an injured condition. This may be enough to convince unsophisticated persons of his complicity in the murder of. But, a Court of justice has to sift and analyse evidence very carefully so as to determine whether the case against an accused person is established beyond reasonable doubt. This is particularly in a case with a communal background in which partisan witnesses may depose falsely out of a mistaken or misplaced sense of a group loyalty. Aher Bhagu Jetha v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1974 SC 292 : (1974) 2 SCC 653 : 1973 CrLJ 343 : 1974 CrLR (SC) 30.

[11091] ● Appeal from conviction—Appreciation of evidence.—It was repeatedly emphasised by the learned counsel for the appellant that the post-mortem examination report disclosed that the small intestine as well as the large intestine of the deceased contained faecal matter and were distended with gas whereas the stomach was found empty. It was submitted before as that it was quite unnatural, that a healthy villager, even though his age was estimated by the Doctor as 60 years found enormously mentioned as so in the judgment of the High Court or in any case that he would not defalcate until that time during the day when there was nothing in evidence that he was suffering from constipation we found that would not eat until 1 p.m. during the day, although Doctor PW-8 who performed the post-mortem examination and Manchanda were examined at the trial no question was put by either side to elucidate whether the contents of the small intestine and the large intestine could remain in that condition until 1 p.m. during the day assuming that the deceased was quite healthy. It is precisely questions of this kind which, even if the prosecution or the defence Counsel omit to put them, the trial Court could and should have put to the Doctors to clear up the position. If the trial Court had failed to consider their importance, the High Court could have and should have taken further evidence on this matter under S. 540, CrPC. In a criminal case, the fate of the proceeding cannot always be left entirely in the hands of the parties. The Court has also a duty to see that essential questions are not so far as reasonably possible, left unanswered. We find it very difficult to believe that a case with death sentence, a matter of such significance, which was noticed by the trial Court, was not raised at all by Counsel for the appellants. In any event, it ought to have been dealt with by the High Court after taking appropriate additional expert medical evidence under S. 540 read with S. 428, CrPC if that was considered necessary before deciding it. The case is remanded. Raghunandan v. State of U.P., AIR 1974 SC 463 : (1974) 4 SCC 186 : 1974 SCC (Cri) (358, 359) : 1974 CrLJ 453 : 1974 CrLR (SC) 195 : (1974) 3 SCR 92 : (1974) CrAppR (SC) 79.

[11092] ● Cross-case—Evidence in one not to be considered in another.—It is difficult to comprehend as to how the High Court could decide the appeal before it by taking into account evidence recorded in another case, even though it might be what is loosely called a cross-case. It is elementary that each case must be decided on the evidence recorded in it and evidence recorded in another case cannot be taken into account in arriving at the decision. Even in other cases this cannot be done unless the parties are agreed that evidence in one case may be treated as evidence in the other. Much more so in criminal cases would this be impermissible is doubtful whether the evidence in one criminal case can be treated as evidence in the other, even with the consent of the accused. The judgment of the High Court must, therefore, be set aside and we must proceed to consider whether, on the evidence recorded in the present case without looking into the evidence record in the other cross-case the conviction and sentence recorded against the appellants can be sustained. Mithulal v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1975 SC 149 : (1975) 3 SCC 529 : 1975 CrLJ 236 : 1974 CrLR (SC) 702 : (1974) 2 SCWR 592 : 1974 UJ (SC) 777 : 1974 CrAR 370.

[11093] ● Appreciation of evidence—Court to make attempt to separate grain from chaff.—It is true that there are as many as eight witnesses who are alleged to have seen the occurrence and they have given a parrot-like version of the entire case regarding the assault on the deceased by the various accused persons. All these witnesses have with one voice and with complete unanimity implicated even the four accused persons acquitted by the High Court, equally with the appellants making absolutely no distinction between one and the other. A perusal of the evidence of the prosecution witnesses would show that the prosecution case against the appellants and the four accused is inextricably mixed up that it is not possible to sever one from the other. It is true that, as laid down by this Court in Twinglee Ariel v. State of Madhya Pradesh and other cases which have followed that case, the Court must make an attempt to separate grain from the chaff the truth from the falsehood. yet this could only be possible when the truth is separable from the falsehood. Where the grain cannot be separated from the chaff, because the grain and the chaff are so inextricably mixed up that in the process of separation the Court would have to reconstruct an absolutely new case for the prosecution by divorcing the essential details presented by the prosecution completely from the context and the background against which they are made, then this principle will not apply. We are satisfied that in the facts of the present case, having regard to the partisan and interested evidence of the prosecution witnesses who can implicate the appellants and the four accused equally with regard to the assault on the deceased it is not possible to reject the prosecution case with respect to the four accused and accept it with respect to the other five appellants. If all the witnesses could in one breathe implicate the four accused who appear to be innocent, then one cannot vouchsafe for the fact that even the acts attributed to Balaka Singh, Joginder Singh, Pritam Singh, Darbara Singh and Jarnail Singh may have been conveniently made to suit the needs of the prosecution case having regard to the animus which the witnesses as also Banata Singh bore against the appellants. In these circumstances, therefore, we are satisfied that in view of finding of the High Court that the FIR was a belated document having come into existence much latter that the time it is said to have been recorded and which adds the names of the fours accused against whom the prosecution case is absolutely identical with the appellants, the case of the appellants cannot at all be distinguished from that of the four accused in any respect. If the case against the four accused fails, then the entire prosecution will have to be discarded and it will not be possible for this Court to make out a new case to convict the appellants as has been done by the High Court. Balaka Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1975 SC 1962 : (1975) 4 SCC 511 : 1975 CrLJ 1734 : 1975 UJ (SC) 529.

[11094] ● Duty of prosecution and Court.—The approach of the Courts below in reconstructing a story different from the one propounded by the prosecution and then convicting the appellant on that basis, is clearly erroneous. It was never the prosecution case that there was a fight or pitched battle between two parties. According to the prosecution, the occurrence was only a one-sided affair, that P.W. Kashiram was forcibly pulled out and taken from his house by the three accused to a distance of 80 feet, and there assaulted. In the FIR, Devisingh made no mention whatever of the injuries received by the accused side. At the trial also, the prosecution witnesses brazenly refused to concede that the appellant or his companion Manohar had received any injury at the time of occurrence. Contrary to what these prosecution witnesses had stated, the Courts have come to the conclusion that these injuries, three of which were incised wounds were received by the accused side, in the course of a free fight, at the hands of the complainant party. The prosecution can succeed by substantially proving the very story it alleges. It must stand on its own legs. It cannot take advantage of the weakness of the defence. Nor can the Court, on its own make out a new case for the prosecution and convict the accused on that basis.. Bhagirath v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1976 SC 975 : (1976) 1 SCC 20 : 1976 CrLJ 706 : 1975 CrLR (SC) 560.

[11095] ● Appeal against acquittal.—"The approach of the trial Judge could not be said to be a judicial approach. Prepossessed by suspicion, he smelled something sinister in the evidence of each and every witness examined by the prosecution. Instead of logical ratiocination, he depended for his conclusions on speculation and conjectures. This is apparent from his repeated observations that he was not impressed by the demeanour of the witnesses, although he did not make any note whatever of such demeanour. Even in his judgment he did not reveal with particularity the nature of the "demeanour" that led him to doubt the veracity of the witnesses. We want to say no more. Suffice it to say that the view of the evidence taken by the learned trial Judge was not reasonably possible, and the High Court was fully justified in reversing the acquittal of the appellant". Abdul Majid, Abdul Rehman, Abdul Samad, Aminmiya v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1976 SC 1782 : (1976) 4 SCC 351 : 1976 SCC (Cri) 625 : 1976 CrLJ 1382 : 1976 CrLR (SC) 260 : 1976 UJ (SC) 652 : 1976 SC Cri 299 : 1976 CrAppR (SC) 247 : 1976 Guj Cr 211.

[11096] ● Conspiracy of all witnesses to implicate innocent person from.—It is not necessary for the defence to prove its case with the same rigour as the prosecution is required to prove its case, and it is sufficient if the defence succeeds in throwing a reasonable doubt on the prosecution case which is sufficient to enable the Court to reject the prosecution version. Where it is not possible to disengage the truth from falsehood, to sift the grain from the chaff and the truth and falsehood are so inextricably mixed together that it is difficult to separate them, if one tries to do so, it will amount to reconstructing a new case for the prosecution which cannot be done in a criminal case. Lakshmi Singh v. State of Bihar, AIR 1976 SC 2263 : (1976) 4 SCC 394 : 1976 CrLJ 1736 : 1977 CrLR (SC) 76.

[11097] ● Not expedient to permit continuance of proceedings for lying complaint in regard to state matter.—In the present case after about 10 years of the alleged incident, the State succeeded in restoring its application which had been dismissed for default. We do think that is not expedient in the interest of justice that a compliant should be laid against the appellant after so many years. We think that the laying of a complaint at this belated stage would make the prosecution a veritable prosecution. Shri Kohli lead counsel for the University very vehemently contended that the appellant had obtained a decree against the University for a large amount by making a false statement on oath and, therefore the interest of justice required that a compliant should be laid against him. He submitted that unless a compliant was laid the University would not be able to get back its money from the appellant. We are not prepared to agree with Sri Kohli. It is not the function of the Court, hearing an application under Section 476, CrPC to cater to the acrimonious and vengeful attitudes taken up by the parties and to advance their interest elsewhere. It will of course be open to the University to take suitable steps by filing a suit of so advised to recover the money paid under the decree. K.N. Mishra v. Jiwagi University, AIR 1981 SC 174 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 356 : 1980 Supp SCC 415.

[11098] ● Death sentence—Reduction of.—Friedman in his Law in Changing Society stated that, "State of criminal law continues to be—As it should be—A decisive reflection of social consciousness of society." Therefore, in operating the sentencing system, law should adopt the corrective machinery or deterrence based on factual matrix. By deft modulation sentencing process be stern where it should be, and tempered with mercy where it warrants to be. The facts and given circumstances in each case, the nature of the crime, the manner in which it was planned and committed, the motive for commission of the crime, the conduct of the accused, the nature of weapons used and all other attending circumstances are relevant facts which would enter into the area of consideration. For instance a murder committed due to deep-seated mutual and personal rivalry may not call for penalty of death. But an organised crime or mass murders of innocent people would call for imposition of death sentence as deterrence. Friedman in his law changing society.

It will be a mockery of justice to permit the accused to escape the extreme penalty of law when faced with such evidence and such cruel acts. To give the lesser punishment for the accused would be to render the justicing system of the country suspect. The common man will lose faith in Courts. In such cases, he understands and appreciates the language of deterrence more than the reformative jargon. Mahesh v. State of M.P., AIR 1987 SC 1346 : (1987) 3 SCC 80 : 1987 SCC (Cri) 379 : 1987 CrLJ 1073 : (1987) 2 SCR 710.

[11099] ● Court to award proper sentence.—Therefore, undue sympathy to impose inadequate sentence would do more harm to the justice system to undermine the public confidence in the efficacy of law and society could not long endure under such serious threats. It is, therefore, the duty of every Court to award proper sentence having regard to the nature of the offence and the manner in which it was executed or committed, etc. Sevak Perumal v. State of T.N., AIR 1991 SC 1463 : (1991) 3 SCC 471 : 1991 SCC (Cri) 724 : 1991 CrLJ 1845 : 1991 (2) Crimes 515.

[11100] ● Circumstantial evidence.—In the instant case, the circumstances lend ample support to the case set up in defence which is not an after thought it being that the appellant fined shots only in exercise of his right of his private defence of his person and his brother. Presumably, the appellant might have thought that Virendra Pal Singh who was lying with severe injuries outside the house and who could not get up and enter into the house was dead and might have entertained, in such circumstances, a reasonable apprehension of imminent danger to his and to his brothers life. Both the Courts below have not adverted to these important and telling circumstances surrounding the case but had proceeded on the ground that one of the persons of the prosecution party was dead. Nagendra Pal Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1993 SC 950 : 1993 SCC (Cri) 896 (900) : 1993 CrLJ 190.

[11101] ● Death sentence—Object.—In the matter of death sentence, the Courts are required to answer new challenges and mould the sentencing system to meet these challenges. The object should be to protect the society and to deter the criminal in achieving the avowed object of law by imposing appropriate sentence. It is expected that the Courts would operate the sentencing system so as to impose such sentence which reflects the conscience of the society and the sentencing process has to be stern where it should be. Even though the principles were indicated in the background of death sentence and life sentence, the logic applies to all cases where appropriate sentence is the issue. Jashubha Bharatsinh Gohil v. State of Gujarat, (1994) 4 SCC 353 : (1994) SCC (Cri) 1193 : 1994 (2) Crimes 92.

[11102] ● Imposition of appropriate punishment.—In Dhananjoy Chatterjee v. State of W.B., (1994) 2 SCC 220 : 1994 SCC (Cri) 358 this Court has observed that a shockingly large number of criminals go unpunished thereby increasingly encouraging the criminals and in the ultimate making justice suffer by weakening the system's creditability. The imposition of appropriate punishment is the manner in which the Court responds to the society's cry for justice against the criminal. Justice demands that Courts should impose punishment befitting the crime so that the Courts reflect public abhorrence of the crime. The Court must not only keep in view the rights of the criminal but also the rights of the victim of the crime and the society at large while considering the imposition of appropriate punishment. Dhananjoy Chatterji v. State of W.B., (1994) 2 SCC 220 : 1994 SCC (Cri) 358.

[11103] ● Death sentence—Nature and gravity of crime.—It is the nature and gravity of the crime but not the criminal, which are germane for consideration of appropriate punishment in a criminal trial. The Court will be failing in its duty if appropriate punishment is not awarded for a crime which has been committed not only against the individual victim but also against the society to which the criminal and victim belong. The punishment to be awarded for a crime must not be irrelevant but it should conform to and be consistent with the atrocity and brutality with which the crime has been perpetrated, the enormity of the crime warranting public abhorrence and it should "respond to the society's cry for justice against the criminal". If for the extremely heinous crime of murder perpetrated in a very brutal manner without any provocation; most deterrent punishment is not given, the case of deterrent punishment will lose its relevance. Rajiv v. State of Rajasthan, (1996) 2 SCC 175 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 225.

[11104] ● Role of Public Prosecutor.—The realities of life have to be kept in mind while appreciating the evidence for arriving at the truth. The Courts are not obliged to make efforts either to give latitude to the prosecution or loosely construe the law in favour of the accused. The traditional dogmatic hyper-technical approach has to be replaced by a rational, realistic and genuine approach for administering justice in a criminal trial. Criminal jurisprudence cannot be considered to be a utopian thought but have to be considered as part and parcel of the human civilization and the realities of life. The Courts cannot ignore the erosion in values of life which are a common feature of the present system. Such erosions cannot be given a bonus in favour of those who are guilty of polluting society and mankind. State of Himachal Pradesh v. Lekh Raj, AIR 1999 SC 3916 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 147 : 2000 CrLJ 44.

[11105] ● Appreciation of evidence.—Investigation and prosecution are two different facts in the administration of criminal justice. The role of Public Prosecutor is inside the Court, whereas investigation is outside the Court. Normally, the role of Public Prosecutor commences after investigating agency presents the case in the Court on culmination of investigation. Its exception is that Public Prosecutor may have to deal with bail applications moved by the parties concerned at any stage. Involving the Public Prosecutor in investigation is injudicious as well as pernicious in law. At any rate, no investigating agency can be compelled to seek opinion of a Public Prosecutor under the orders of Court.

Here is a case wherein the Investigating Officer concerned is directed by the High Court to take back the case from the Court whereat it was laid by him after completing the investigation and he is further directed to consult the Public Prosecutor and submit a fresh charge-sheet in tune with the opinion of the Public Prosecutor.

The High Court has committed an illegality in directing the final report to be taken back and to file a fresh report incorporating the opinion of the Public Prosecutor. Such an order cannot stand legal scrutiny. Same is set aside. R. Sarala v. T.S. Velu, AIR 2000 SC 1731 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 823 : 2000 CrLJ 2453.

[11106] ● Community acting through State and Public Prosecutor entitled to justice.—Section 391 of the Code is another salutary provision which clothes the Courts with the power to effectively decide an appeal. Though Section 386 envisages the normal and ordinary manner and method of disposal of an appeal, yet it does not and cannot be said to exhaustively enumerate the modes by which alone the Court can deal with an appeal. Section 391 is one such exception to the ordinary rule and if the appellate Court considers additional evidence to be necessary, the provisions in Section 386 and Section 391 have to be harmoniously considered to enable the appeal to be considered and disposed of also in the light of the additional evidence as well. For this purpose it is open to the appellate Court to call for further evidence before the appeal is disposed of. The appellate Court can direct the taking up of further evidence in support of the prosecution; a fortiori it is open to the Court to direct that the accused persons may also be given a chance of adducing further evidence. Section 391 is in the nature of an exception to the general rule and the powers under it must also be exercised with great care, especially on behalf of the prosecution lest the admission of additional evidence for the prosecution operates in a manner prejudicial to the defence of the accused. The primary object of Section 391 is the prevention of a guilty man's escape though some careless or ignorant proceedings before a Court or vindication of an innocent person wrongfully accused. Where the Court through some carelessness or ignorance has omitted to record the circumstances essential to elucidation of truth, the exercise of powers under Section 391 is desirable. The legislative intent in enacting Section 391 appears to be the empowerment of the appellate Court to see that justice is done between the prosecutor and the persons prosecuted and if the appellate Court finds that certain evidence is necessary in order to enable it to give a correct and proper finding, it would be justified in taking action under Section 391. There is no restriction in the wording of Section 391 either as to the nature of the evidence or that it is to be taken for the prosecution only or that the provisions of he section are only to be invoked when formal proof for the prosecution is necessary. If the appellate Court thinks that it is necessary in the interest of justice to take additional evidence, it shall do so. There is nothing in the provision limiting it to cases where there has been merely some formal defect. The matter is one of discretion of the appellate Court. As reiterated supra, the ends of justice are not satisfied only when the accused in a criminal case is acquitted. The community acting through the State and the Public Prosecutor is also entitled to justice. The cause of the community deserves equal treatment at the hands of the Court in the discharge of its judicial functions. Zahira Habibullah Sheikh v. State of Gujarat, (2003) 11 SCC 486 : 2004 SCC (Cri) 999 (1028-29).

[11108] ● Power to receive evidence—Exercise of.—The power to receive evidence in exercise of Section 311 of the Code could be exercised "even if evidence on both sides is closed" and such jurisdiction of the Court is dictated by the exigency of the situation and fair play. The only factor which should govern the Court in exercise of powers under Section 311 should be whether such material is essential for the just decision of the case. Even a reading of Section 311 of the Code would show that Parliament has studded the said provision lavishly with the word "any" at different places. This would also indicate the widest range of power conferred on the Court in that matter. P. Chhaganlal Daga v. M. Sanjay Shaw, 2004 SCC (Cri) 183 (185).

[11109] ● Power of Court under Section 165—Evidence Act complementary to its power under Section 311, CrPC.—If a criminal Court is to be an effective instrument in dispensing justice, the Presiding Judge must cease to be a spectator and a mere recording machine, by becoming a participant in the trial evincing intelligence, active interest and eliciting all relevant materials necessary for reaching the correct conclusion, to find out the truth, and administer justice with fairness and impartiality both to the parties and to the community it serves. Courts administering criminal justice cannot turn a blind eye to vexatious or oppressive conduct that has occurred in relation to the proceedings, even if a fair trial is still possible, except at the risk of undermining the fair name and standing of the judges as impartial and independent adjudicators. The Courts have to take a participatory role in a trial. They are not expected to be tape recorders to record whatever is being stated by the witnesses. Section 311 of the Code and Section 165 of the Evidence Act confer vast and wide powers on presiding officers of Court to elicit all necessary materials by playing an active role in the evidence-collecting process. They have to monitor the proceedings in aid of justice in a manner that something, which is not relevant, is not unnecessarily brought into record. Even if the prosecutor is remiss in some ways, it can control the proceedings effectively so that the ultimate objective i.e. truth is arrived at. This becomes more necessary where the Court has reasons to believe that the prosecuting agency or the prosecutor is not acting in the requisite manner. The Court cannot afford to be wishfully or pretend to be blissfully ignorant or oblivious to such serious pitfalls or dereliction of duty on th part of the prosecuting agency. The prosecuto who does not act fairly and acts more like a counsel for the defence is a liability to the fair judicia system, and Courts could not also play into th hands of such prosecuting agency showing indifference or adopting an attitude of total aloofness

The power of the Court under Section 165 o the Evidence Act is in a way complementary to it power under Section 311 of the Code. The sectio consists of two parts i.e. : (i) giving a discretion t the Court to examine the witness at any stage, an (ii) the mandatory portion which compels th Court to examine a witness if his evidenc appears to be essential to the just decision of th Court. Though the discretion given to the Court i very wide, the very width requires a corresponding caution.

The objection of Section 311, CrPC is t enable the Court to arrive at the truth irrespectiv of the fact that the prosecution or the defence ha failed to produce some evidence which i necessary for a just and proper disposal of th case. The power is exercised and the evidence i examined neither to help the prosecution nor th defence, if the Court feels that there is necessity t act in terms of Section 311 but only to subserv the cause of justice and public interest. It is don with an object of getting the evidence in aid of a just decision and to uphold the truth. It is not tha in every case where the witness who had give evidence before Court wants to change his min and is prepared to speak differently, that the Cour concerned should readily accede to such reques by lending its assistance. If the witness wh deposed one way earlier comes before the appellate Court with a prayer that he is prepared t give evidence which is materially different fro what he has given earlier at the trial with th reasons for the earlier lapse, the Court can consider the genuineness of the prayer in the context a to whether the party concerned had a fair opportunity to speak the truth earlier and in an appropriate case, accept it. It is not that the power is t be exercised in a routine manner, but being a exception to the ordinary rule of disposal o appeal on the basis of records received in exceptional cases or extraordinary situation the Cour can neither feel powerless nor abdicate its duty t arrive at the truth and satisfy the ends of justice The Court can certainly be guided by the metaphor, separate the grain from the chaff, and in a case which has telltale imprint of reasonablenes and genuineness in the prayer, the same has to b accepted, at least to consider the worth, credibility and the acceptability of the same on merit of th material sought to be brought in.

Ultimately, ad nauseam the duty of the Court is to arrive at the truth and subserve the ends of justice. Section 311 of the Code does not confer on any party any right to examine, cross-examine and re-examine any witness. This is a power given to the Court not to be merely exercised at the bidding of any one party/person but the powers conferred and discretion vested are to prevent any irretrievable or immeasurable damage to the cause of society, public interest and miscarriage of justice. Recourse may be had by Courts to power under this section only for the purpose of discovering relevant facts or obtaining proper proof of such facts as are necessary to arrive at a just decision in the case. Zahira Habibullah Sheik v. State of Gujarat, 2004 SCC (Cri) 999 (1027, 1028).

[11110] ● Sentence to be proportionate to gravity of offence.—Criminal law adheres in general to the principle of proportionality in prescribing liability according to the culpability of each kind of criminal conduct. It ordinarily allows some significant discretion to the judge in arriving at a sentence in each case, presumably to permit sentences that reflect more subtle considerations of culpability that are raised by the special facts of each case. Judges in essence affirm that punishment ought always to fit the crime; yet in practice sentences are determined largely by other considerations. Sometimes it is the correctional needs of the perpetrator that are offered to justify a sentence. Sometimes the desirability of keeping him out of circulation and sometimes even the tragic results of his crime. Inevitably these considerations cause a departure from just deserts as the basis of punishment and create cases of apparent injustice that are serious and widespread.

Proportion between crime and punishment is a goal respected in principle, and in spite of errant notions, it remains a strong influence in the determination of sentences. The practice of punishing all serious crimes with equal severity is now unknown in civilised societies, but such a radical departure from the principle of proportionality has disappeared from the law only in recent times. Even now for a single grave infraction drastic sentences are imposed. Anything less than a penalty of greatest severity for any serious crime is thought then to be a measure of toleration that is unwarranted and unwise. But in fact, quite apart from those considerations that make punishment unjustifiable when it is out of proportion to the crime, uniformly disproportionate punishment has some very undesirable practical consequences.

After giving due consideration to the facts and circumstances of each case, for deciding just and appropriate sentence to be awarded for an offence, the aggravating and mitigating factors and circumstances in which a crime has been committed are to be delicately balanced on the basis of really relevant circumstances in a dispassionate manner by the Court. Such act of balancing is indeed a difficult task. It has been very aptly indicated in Dennis Councle McGautha v. State of California, 402 US 183 : 281 Ed 2nd 711 (1971) that no formula of a foolproof nature is possible that would provide a reasonable criterion in determining a just and appropriate punishment in the infinite variety of circumstances that may affect the gravity of the crime. In the absence of any foolproof formula which may provide any basis for reasonable criteria to correctly assess various circumstances germane to the consideration of the gravity of the crime, the discretionary judgment in the facts of each case, is the only way in which such judgment may be equitably distinguished. State of M.P. v. Babbu Barkare, AIR 2005 SC 2846 : (2005) 5 SCC 413 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 1335 (1339-40) : 2005 CrLJ 3117 : 2005 (2) Crimes 245.

[11111] ● Imposition of appropriate sentence.—Imposition of sentence without considering its effect on the social order in many cases may be in reality a futile exercise. The social impact of the crime, e.g. where it relates to offences against women, dacoity, kidnapping, misappropriation of public money, treason and other offences involving moral turpitude or moral delinquency which have great impact on social order and public interest, cannot be lost sight of and per se require exemplary treatment. Any liberal attitude by imposing meagre sentences or taking too sympathetic view merely on account of lapse of time in respect of such offences will be resultwise counterproductive in the long run and against societal interest which needs to be cared for and strengthened by a string of deterrence inbuilt in the sentencing system. State of M.P. v. Babbu Barkare, AIR 2005 SC 2846 : (2005) 5 SCC 413 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 1335 (1340) : 2005 CrLJ 3117 : 2005 (2) Crimes 245.

[11112] ● Rape—Sentence—Discretion of Court to award.—In order to exercise the discretion of reducing the sentence the statutory requirement is that the Court has to record "adequate and special reasons" in the judgment and not fanciful reasons which would permit the Court to impose a sentence less than the prescribed minimum. The reason has not only to be adequate but also special. What is adequate and special would depend upon several factors and no straitjacket formula can be indicated. What is applicable to trial Courts regarding recording reasons for a departure from minimum sentence is equally applicable to the High Court. The only reason indicated by the High Court is that the accused belonged to rural areas. The same can by no stretch of imagination be considered either adequate or special. The requirement in law is cumulative. State of M.P. v. Babbu Barkare, AIR 2005 SC 2846 : (2005) 5 SCC 413 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 1335 (1341) : 2005 CrLJ 3117 : 2005 (2) Crimes 245.

COURT WITNESS

[11113] ● Court witness.—The witness was declared hostile by the prosecution and thus the prosecution did not choose to rely upon him in support of the prosecution case. In the Sessions Court, he was not examined as a witness, but was later called as a Court witness. In these circumstances, therefore, his testimony does not inspire much confidence. Mahadeo v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1980 SC 102 : (1980) 1 SCC 490 : 1980 CrLJ 189.

CRIME

[11114] ● Crime.—Crime is a revolt against the whole society and an attack on the civilization of the day. Order is the basic need of any organised civilized society and any attempt to disturb that order affects the society and the community. The distinction between breach of "law and order" and disturbance of "public order " is one of degree and the extent of reach of the activity in question upon the society. In their essential quality, the activities which affect "law and order" and those which disturb "public order" may not be different but in their potentiality and effect upon even tempo of the society and public tranquillity there is a vast difference. In each case, therefore, the Courts have to see the length, magnitude and intensity of the questionable activities of a person to find out whether his activities are prejudicial to maintenance of "public order " or only "law and order". Harpreet Kaur v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1992 SC 979 : (1992) 2 SCC 177 : 1992 SCC (Cri) 370 (379) : 1992 CrLJ 769 : JT (1992) SC 502.

[11115] ● Word "crime" dated back to 14th century.—Earliest reference to the word "crime" dates back to 14th century when it conveyed to the mind something reprehensible, wicked or base. Any conduct which a sufficiently powerful section of any given community feels to be destructive of its own interest, as endangering its safety, stability or comfort is usual regarded as heinous and it is sought to be repressed with severity and the sovereign power is utilised to prevent the mischief or to punish anyone who is guilty of it. Very often crimes are creations of government policies and the Government in power forbids a man to bring about results which are against its policies. P. Rathinam v. Union of India, AIR 1994 SC 1844 : (1994) 3 SCC 394 : 1994 SCC (Cri) 740 (758) : 1994 CrLJ 1605.

[11116] ● No distinction between Crime and Tort.—In a way there is no distinction between crime and tort, inasmuch as a tort harms an individual whereas a crime is supposed to harm a society. But then, a society is made of individuals, harm to an individual is ultimately harm to society. P. Rathinam v. Union of India, AIR 1994 SC 1844 : (1994) 3 SCC 394 : 1994 SCC (Cri) 740 (759) : 1994 CrLJ 1605.

[11117] ● Crime—Characteristics.—A crime presents these characteristics: (1) it is a harm, brought about by human conduct which the sovereign power in the State desires to prevent; (2) among the measures of prevention selected is the threat of punishment; and (3) legal proceedings of a special kind are employed to decide whether the person accused did in fact cause the harm, and is, according to law, to be held legally punishable for doing so. (See pp. 1 to 5 of Kenny's Outlines of Criminal Law, 19th Edn., for the above propositions.) P. Rathinam v. Union of India, AIR 1994 SC 1844 : (1994) 3 SCC 394 : 1994 SCC (Cri) 740 (759) : 1994 CrLJ 1605.

[11118] ● Protection of society—Basic reason of treating some acts as crime.—Protection of society is the basic reason of treating some acts as crime. Indeed it is one of the aims of punishment. Where there is no feeling of security, there is no true freedom. What is the effect of the same cannot be described better that what was stated by Hobbes in Leviathan, which is : "There is no place for industry, because the fruit thereof is uncertain; and consequently no culture of the earth; no navigation nor use of the commodities that may be imported by sea; no commodious building; no instrument of moving and removing such things as require much forces; no knowledge of the face of the earth; no account of time; no arts, no letters; no society; and which is worst of all continual fear and danger of violent death; and the life of a solitary, poor, nasty, brutish and short." P. Rathinam v. Union of India, AIR 1994 SC 1844 : (1994) 3 SCC 394 : 1994 SCC (Cri) 740 (759) : 1994 CrLJ 1605.

[11119] ● Crime—Definition of.—The very definition of 'crime" depends on the values of a given society. To establish this what has been stated by Justice Krishna Iyer in his book Perspectives in Criminology, Law and Social Change (1980) at pp. 7 and 8 may be noted : "What is a sex crime in India may be sweetheart virtue in Scandinavia. What is an offence against property in a capitalist society may be a lawful way of life in a socialist society. What is permissible in an affluent economy may be a pernicious vice in a indigent community. Thus, criminologists must have their feet all the time on terra firm a." P. Rathinam v. Union of India, AIR 1994 SC 1844 : (1994) 3 SCC 394 : 1994 SCC (Cri) 740 (759, 760) : 1994 CrLJ 1605.

[11120] ● Crimes—Created or abolished with passage of time.—Crimes can also be created or abolished with the passage of time, as stated at p. 7 of R.S. Cavan's Criminology (2nd Edn.). This has been elucidated by the author by stating that in democracy where individual opinion can express itself freely through speaking, writing and elections, public opinion becomes the final arbiter in placing the opprobrium of crime upon a specific type of behaviour and when a law is not accepted the police may attempt to enforce it against public opinion, but gradually the police yield to the pressure of public opinion, which they perhaps share. The law may remain on the statute books but be ignored by all. Whereas when the public opinion supports the law, many pressures of an informal nature are brought against the violators to aid and lessen the police action. P. Rathinam v. Union of India, AIR 1994 SC 1844 : (1994) 3 SCC 394 : 1994 SCC (Cri) 740 (760) : 1994 CrLJ 1605.

[11121] ● Criminology—Crime prevention measures—Moulding of.—The subject as to "how crime can be prevented" is too wide and cannot be discussed meaningfully within the parameters available to us in this judgment. The treatise on Crime and its Prevention edited by Stephen Lewin, Editor, World Week Magazine, would show how complicated the subject is. At p. 217 of the 3rd printing (1973) mention has been made about seven steps for combating a crime. We may not go into the details. Sufficient to say that the steps relate to different disciplines. Professor Dr. N.V. Paranjape. Professor and Head of the Department of Postgraduate and Research in Law and Dean faculty of Law. Jabalpur University, in his book Criminology and Penology has something to say in Chapter VI about causes of crime, knowledge of which is necessary to combat and prevent the same. Dr. Paranjape states that in the absence of a single theory of crime-causation, criminologists have offered different explanations to justify their own theory as an explanation of delinquent behaviour. There are, however, some writers who seem to be convinced that no single theory of crime can fully explain the causes of crime. They therefore prefer a multiple approach to criminal behaviour which suggests that crime is generated not as a result of one solitary factor but as a consequence of a combination of such factors. Justice Krishna Iyer also in his aforesaid book has dealt with this aspect in Chapter 2 captioned "The Pathology of Indian Criminology". In his usual inimitable style, he has painted the crime scenario on a broad canvas and has mentioned about various factors which lead to commission of crimes. Reference may also be made to the White Paper presented to the Parliament by Her Majesty's Government in 1990 on the subject of "Crime, Justice and Protecting the Public", published as Cm. No. 965. The White Paper had summarised main proposals as below : "A coherent legislative framework for sentencing with the severity of the punishment matching the seriousness of the crime and a sharper distinction in the way the Courts deal with violent and non-violent crimes;

New powers for the Crown Court to impose longer sentences for violent and sexual offences, if this is necessary to protect the public from serious harm;

New powers for all Courts to combine community service and probation and to impose curfews on offenders so that more offenders convicted of property crimes can be punished in the community;

Reducing the maximum penalties for theft and burglary, except burglaries of people's homes, which can be a very serious matter;

Requiring the Courts to consider a report by the probation service before giving a custodial sentence and to give reasons for imposing a custodial sentence, except for the most serious offences;

Encouraging more use of financial penalties, especially compensation to victims and fines which take account of offender's means;

Making the time actually served in prison closer to the sentence ordered by the Court, replacing the present system of remission and parole by new arrangements which ensure that all prisoners serve at least half their sentences in custody; prisoners serving sentences of 4 years or more would not get parole if this would put the public at risk;

New powers for the Courts to return released prisoners to custody up to the end of their sentence, if they are convicted of a further imprisonable offence;

All prisoners serving sentences of a year or more to be supervised by the probation service on release, with new national standards for supervision;

Wider powers for the Courts to make parents take more responsibility for crimes committed by their children;

More flexible powers for the Courts to deal with 16 and 17 year old offenders;

Changing the juvenile Courts, to youth Courts, to deal with defendants under the age of 18."

It would be of some interest in this connection to point out that as late as 1991 a need was felt by the British Government to issue a Royal Warrant for issuing a commission to examine the effectiveness of the criminal justice in England and Wales in securing the conviction of those guilty of criminal offences and the acquittal of those who were innocent. For this purpose, the Royal Warrant wanted the commission to make its recommendation on various aspects of the criminal justice. The commission submitted its report in July 1993 and it contains recommendations which number 352 and have been mentioned at pp. 188 and 219 of the Report issued by Her Majesty's Stationery Office. The difficult task of crime prevention would not therefore permit the solution to be put into a strait-jacket; it has to be modulated an moulded as per time and clime. P. Rathinam v. Union of India, AIR 1994 SC 1844 : (1994) 3 SCC 394 : 1994 SCC (Cri) 740 (760,761) : 1994 CrLJ 1605.

[11122] ● Punishment whether reduces crime— Doubtful.—We have also to know as to whether infliction of punishment can be said to have a direct relation with the reduction of criminal propensity. It would be enough in the context to state that it has been seriously doubted whether imposition of even death sentence has been able to reduce the number of murders. BHAGWATI, J. as he then was, in his dissenting judgment in the case of Bachan Singh v. State of Punjab has brought home well this aspect of the matter. While on the question of sentencing it would be rewarding to note that sentencing has been regarded as a subtle art of healing, and the legal and political people uninstructed in the humanist strategy of reformation, fail even on first principles. Justice Iyer in his aforesaid book has further stated at p. 47 that it puzzles a Judge or a Home Secretary to be told in Shavian paradox:

> "If you are to punish a man retributively, you must injure him. If you are to reform him, you must improve him. And men are not improved by injuries."

What was said by Victor Hugo in his Les Miserables is instructive:

> "We shall look upon crime as a disease. Evil will be treated in charity instead of anger. The change will be simple an sublime. The cross shall replace the scaffold reason is on our side, feeling is on our sid and experiment is on our side." P. Rathinam v. Union of India, AIR 1994 SC 1844 (1994) 3 SCC 394 : 1994 SCC (Cri) 74 (761,762) : 1994 CrLJ 1605.

[11123] ● Crime—Connotation.—What i crime in a given society at a particular time has wide connotation as the concept of crime keeps on changing with change in political, economic and social set-up of the country. Various legislations dealing with economic offences or offences dealing with violation of industrial activity o breach of taxing provision are ample proof of it The constitution makers foresaw the eventuality Therefore they conferred such powers both o central and State legislatures to make laws in this regard. Such right includes power to define crime and provide for its punishment. Use o expression "including all matters included in the Indian Penal Code at the commencement of the constitution" is unequivocal indication of comprehensive nature of this entry. It further empowers the legislature to make laws, not only in respect o matters covered by the India Penal Code but any other matter which could reasonably and justifiably be considered to be criminal in nature. Terrorist and disruptive activity is criminal i content, reach and effect. The Central and State Legislature both, therefore, are empowered to legislatee in respect of such an activity in exercise of the power covered under Entry I of the concurrent list. But this power is otherwise controlled and restricted by the latter part of the entry. Kartar Singh v. State of Punjab, (1994) 3 SCC 569 : 1994 SCC (Cri) 899 (1076) : 1994 CrLJ 3139.

[11124] ● Crime—Meaning of.—Crime can be defined as an act that subjects the doer to legal punishment. It may also be defined as the commission of an act specifically forbidden by law, it may be an offence against morality or social order. T.K. Gopal v. State of Karnataka, AIR 2000 SC 1669 : (2000) 6 SCC 168 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 1037 (1045) : 2000 CrLJ 2286 : 2000 CrLR (SC) 456 : 2000 CrAppR (SC) 366.

[11125] ● Sentence of death or life imprisonment.—In dealing with criminal matters where death sentence is prescribed in law as the punishment for the crimes, the Courts are required to answer new challenges as the object lies to be not only to protect the society at large but impose appropriate sentence lest there should be tendency to undermine the public confidence in criminal justice delivery system. Crimes, like the one before us cannot be looked upon with equanimity because they tend to destroy one's faith in all that is good in life. A young man was given opportunity to learn gold-smithery. He was once sent away for alleged act of theft. Yet again, on the day of incident, he was permitted to accompany the deceased old man and as per the evidence, he accompanied the deceased in his house. The reward of that kindness is murder of old man and his wife along with three daughters including one whose marriage was fixed after two months. Hence, even though we reduce the death penalty, we think that punishment should be sufficient so as to have deterrent effect as well as one that gives no further chance to the accused for relapsing into the crime and becoming danger to the Society. Bhagwan v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 2001 SC 2342 : (2001) 6 SCC 296 : 2001 SCC (Cri) 1095 (1102, 1103) : 2001 CrLR (SC) 425.

[11127] ● Crime is an offence against society.—Every crime is considered to be an offence against the society as a whole and not only against an individual even though an individual might have suffered thereby. It is, therefore, the duty of the State to take appropriate action against the offender. Vinay Devanna Nayak v. Ryot Seva Sahakari, AIR 2008 SC 716.

[11128] ● Thoughts even criminal in character, often involuntary.—Thoughts even criminal in character, often involuntary, are not crimes but when they take a concrete shape of an agreement to do or caused to be done an illegal act or an act which is not illegal, by illegal means then even if nothing further is done, agreement would rise to a criminal conspiracy. Mir Naqvi Askari v. C.B.I., 2009 (13) SCR 124 : JT 2009 (11) SC 191.

CRIMINAL AND CIVIL REMEDY

[11129] ● Criminal and civil remedy.—"There are a large number of cases where criminal law and civil law can run side by side. The two remedies are not mutually exclusive but clearly coextensive and essentially differ in their content and consequence. The object of the Criminal law is to punish an offender who commits an offence against a person, property or the State for which the accused, on proof of the offence, is deprived of his liberty and in some cases even his life. This does not, however, affect the civil remedies at all for suing the wrong doer in cases like arson, accidents, etc. It is an anathema to suppose that when a civil remedy is available, a criminal prosecution is completely barred. The two types of actions are quite different in content, scope and import." Pratibha Rani v. Suraj Kuamr, AIR 1985 SC 628 : (1985) 2 SCC 370 : 1985 SCC (Cri) 180 : 1985 CrLJ 817 : 1985 CrLR (SC) 149 : 1985 CrAppR (SC) 96 : (1985) 3 SCR 191 : (1985) 1 Crimes 614. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Medchalo Pharma (P) Ltd. v. Biological E Ltd., AIR 2000 SC 1869 : (2000) 3 SCC 269 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 615 : 2000 CrLJ 1487.

[11130] ● Breach of Trust both civil wrong and criminal offence.—Though a case of breach of trust may be both a civil wrong and a criminal offence but there would be certain situations where it would predominantly be a civil wrong and may or may not amount to a criminal offence. The present case in one of that type where where, if at all, the facts may constitute a civil wrong and the ingredients of the criminal offences are wanting. Having regard to the relevant documents, including the trust deed as also the correspondence following the creation of the tenancy, the submissions advanced on behalf of the parks the natural relationship between the settler and the trustee as mother and son and fall out in their relationship and the fact that the wife of co-trustee was no more interested in the tenancy, it must be held that the criminal case should not be continued. Madhavrao Jiwajirao Seindia v. Sambhajirao Chandrojirao Angre, AIR 1988 SC 709 : (1988) 1 SCC 692 : 1988 CrLJ 853.

[11131] ● Many cheating committed in course of commercial or money transaction.—Merely because an act has a civil profile is not sufficient to denude it of its criminal outfit. In the instant case it may be that the facts narrated in the complaint would as well reveal a commercial or money transaction. But that is hardly a reason for holding that the offence of cheating would elude from such a transaction. In fact many a cheating were committed in the course of commercial and also money transactions. Rajesh Bajaj v. State NCT of Delhi, AIR 1999 SC 1216 : (1999) 3 SCC 259 (263) : 1999 SCC (Cri) 426 : 1999 CrLJ 1833.

[11132] ● Civil profile not sufficient to denude of its criminal outfit.—".... merely because an act has a civil profile is not sufficient to denude it of its criminal outfit .... we are unable to appreciate the reasoning that the provision incorporated in the agreement for referring the disputes to arbitration is an effective substitute for a criminal prosecution when the disputed act is an offence. Arbitration is a remedy for affording reliefs to the party affected by breach of the agreement, but the arbitrator cannot conduct a trial of any act, which amounted to an offence, albeit the same act may be connected with the discharge of any function under the agreement. Hence those are not good reasons for the High Court to axe down the complaint at the threshold itself. The investigating agency should have had the freedom to go into the whole gamut of the allegations and to reach a conclusion of its own. Pre-emption of such investigation would be justified only in very extreme cases". Trisuns Chemical Industry v. Rajesh Agarwal, AIR 1999 SC 3499 : (1999) 8 SCC 686 : 1999 CrLJ 4325.

CRIMINAL COURT

[11133] ● Criminal Court.—Once a judgment has been pronounced by a High Court either in excuse of its appellate or revision jurisdictions no review or revision can be entertained against that judgment as there is no provision in the criminal Procedure Code which would enable the High Court to review the same or to exercise the revisional jurisdiction. The Court entertained the application for quashing the proceedings on the ground that a subsequent application to quash would not amount to review or revise on order made by the Court. The provision of Section 561-A of the old Code cannot be invoked for excuse of a power which is specifically prohibited by the Court. U.J.S. Chopra v. State of Bombay, AIR 1955 SC 633 : 1955 CrLJ 1410.

[11134] ● Magistrate acting under Section 234 of Ajmer Merware Municipalities—Regulation not act inferior criminal Court to High Court.—The Magistrate who holds proceedings in his capacity as a persona designata under Section 34 of the Ajmer Merware Municipalities Regulations, 1925 does not function as a Magistrate under the Code of Criminal Procedure. That being so, the order made by the Magistrate in such a proceeding is not an order of an inferior "Criminal Court" within the meaning of Sections 435 and 439 of the Code and revision application under Section 439 to the High Court from an order made by the Magistrate in a recovering proceedings under the Municipal Act or Regulation is not competent. Dargah Committee, Ajmer v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1962 SC 574 : 1962 CrLJ 507 : (1962) 1 SCJ 583 : (1962) 2 SCR 265.

[11135] ● Order passed under Section 488 CrPC—Summary order.—The order passed in a application filed under S. 488 of the CrPC i summary order which does not finally determine the rights and obligations of the parties thereto. I is an order made in a proceeding under a provision enacted with a view provide a summary remedy for providing maintenance, and for preventing vagrancy. The decision of the Crimina Court that there was a marriage between Barbara and Sethurathinam and that it was valid marriage will not operate as decisive in any civil proceeding between the parties for determining those question. It is made clear that civil Court in hearing the proceeding initiated by Sethurathinam will decide it as evidence which may be produced before the Court uninfluenced by the decision of High Civil Court as to the factum of the ceremony of marriage or as to the validity of a marriage Between a Hindu male and a Christian female. S Sethurathinam v. Barbara, (1971) 3 SCC 923 1972 SC (Cri) 171 (172).

[11136] ● Examination of witnesses—Court's power to ask questions.—If a criminal Court is to be an effective instrument in dispensing justice the presiding Judge must cease to be a spectator and a mere recording machine. He must become a participant in trial by evincing intelligent active interest by putting questions to witnesses in order to ascertain the truth. And the Judge may ask any question, in any form, at any time, of any witness or of the parties, about any fact, relevant or irrelevant. But no question would frighten or bully the witness. Nor the Judge must expose any hint of his partisanship. Nor any question should coerce, confuse or intimidate the witness. Ram Chander v. State of Haryana, AIR 1981 SC 1036 (1981) 3 SCC 191 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 683 : 1981 CrLJ 609.

[11137] ● Offence under Section 193, IPC of filing false affidavits before Rent Control Officer.—Offence under Section 193, IPC was alleged for filing a false affidavit before the Rent Control Officer. Rent Control Officer shall be deemed to be a civil Court within the meaning of Sections 345 and 346, CrPC, 1973 and in view of Section 34(2) of the U.P. Urban Buildings (Regulation of Letting, Rent and Eviction) Act 1972 shall be a Civil Court for purposes of Section 193, IPC. Complaint by the Court in writing is a pre-condition under Section 195 (i)(b) for taking cognizance of such offence by any criminal Court. If the same is not satisfied, the Court has no jurisdiction to take cognizance. Chandrapal Singh v. Maharaj Singh, AIR 1982 SC 1238 : (1982) 1 SCC 466 : 1982 SCC (Cri) 249 : 1982 CrLJ 1731 : 1982 CrLR (SC) 126.

[11138] ● Murder Trial—Evidence.—Every person who witnesses a murder reacts in his own way. Some are stunned become speechless and stand rooted to the spot. Some become hysteric and start wailing. Some start shouting for help. Others run away to keep themselves as for removed from the spot as possible. Yet others rush to the rescue of the victim even going to the extent of counter-attacking the assailants. Every one reacts in his own special way. There is no set rule of natural reaction. To discard the evidence of witnesses on the ground that he did not react in any particular manner is to appreciate evidence in a wholly unrealistic unimaginative way. Rana Pratap v. State of Haryana, AIR 1983 SC 680 : (1980) 3 SCC 8 : 1983 CrLJ 1272 (1274).

[11139] ● Witnesses to serious crime do not react in normal manner.—The witnesses to a serious crime may not react in a normal manner nor do they act uniformly. The horror sticken witnesses at a distardly crime or an act of egregious nature may react differently. Then course of conduct may not be of ordinary type in the normal circumstances. The Court, cannot therefore reject their evidence merely because they have behaved or reacted or an unusual manner. Appabhai v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1988 SC 696 : 1988 Supp SCC 241 : 1988 CrLJ 848 (851).

[11140] ● Wrongful possession of property.—The appellant had joined the services of M/s. Rallis India Ltd. on 10.3.1965. He had occupied a residential flat. He resigned on 15.7.1986. The Rallis India Ltd., initiated proceedings in January, 1987 against the appellant under S. 408, IPC and S. 630 of the Companies Act for the continued occupation of the appellant in the said flat. The Magistrate, by his order dated 12.10.1994, found the appellant guilty of offence under S. 630 of the Companies Act and directed restitution of the flat.

The Trial Court after considering the entire evidence recorded the findings by his judgment and decree dated June 9, 1995 holding that the Company failed to prove that they are the tenant in respect of the suit premises. They had not given the premises to the appellant under leave and licence agreement, as pleaded by them in the plaint. The Company failed to prove that the appellant is a liecensee of the suit premises. It also failed to prove that the premises were given to the appellant in lieu of his service. On the other hand, the appellant proved that he is a monthly tenant of the premises with the landlords.

The civil Court after full dressed trial recorded the finding that the appellant had not come into possession through the company but had independent tenancy rights from the principal landlord and therefore, the decree for eviction was negatived. The findings, recorded by the Criminal Court, stand superseded by the findings recorded by the Civil Court. Thereby, the findings of the Civil Court get precedence over the findings recorded by the Trial Court, or particular in summary trial for offences like Section 630 of the Companies Act.

The mere pendency of the appeal does not have the effect of suspending the operation of the decree of the Trial Court and neither the finding of the Civil Court get nor the decree becomes inoperative.

In these circumstances it cannot be held that the appellant has been in wrongful possession of the property entailing his conviction and punishment under S. 630 of the Companies Act and requiring handing over of the possession of the flat. V.M. Shah v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1996 SC 339 : (1995) 5 SCC 767 : 1995 SCC (Cri) 1077 : JT 1995 (6) SC 433.

[11141] ● Conflicting finding of Civil and Criminal Courts.—As between the Civil Court and the criminal proceedings, the criminal matters should be given precedence. No hard and fast rule can be laid down but the possibility of conflicting decisions in the Civil and Criminal Courts is not a relevant consideration. Law envisages such an eventuality when it expressly refrains from making the decision of one Court binding on the other or even relevant except for certain limited purposes, such as sentence or damages. The only relevant consideration is the likelihood of embarrassment. Another relevant factor to be noted is that a civil suit often drags on for years and it is undesirable that a criminal prosecution should await till everybody concerned has forgotten all about the crime. Public interest demands that criminal justice should be swift and it should ensure that the guilty is punished while the events are still fresh in public mind and that the innocent should be absolved as early as is consistent with a fair and impartial trial. Another reason is that it is undesirable to let things slide till memories have grown too dim to trust. This, however, is not a hard and fast rule. Special considerations obtaining in any particular case may make some other course more expedient and just. Therefore, each case has to be considered on its own facts. V.M. Shah v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1996 SC 339 (1995) 5 SCC 767.

[11142] ● Appearance by non-advocate.—The work in a Court of law is a serious and responsible function. The primary duty of Criminal Court is to administer criminal justice. Any lax or wayward approach, if adopted towards the issues involved in the case, can cause serious consequences for the parties concerned. It is not just somebody representing the party in the Criminal Court who becomes the pleader of the party. In the adversary system which is now being followed in India, both in civil and criminal litigation. It is very necessary that the Court gets proper assistance from both sides. T.C. Mathai v. District and Sessions Judge Thiruvanthapuram, AIR 1999 SC 1385 : (1999) 3 SCC 614 : 1999 SCC (Cri) 455 (458, 459) : 1999 CrLJ 2092 : 1999 CrLR (SC) 499 : JT 1999 (2) SC 494.

[11143] ● Evidence of eye-witness.—Criminal Courts should not expect a set reaction from any eye-witness on seeing an incident like murder. If five persons witness one incident there could be five different types of reactions from each of them. It is neither a tutored impact nor a structured reaction which the eye-witness can make. It is fallacious to suggest that PW 11 would have done this or that on seeing the incident. Unless the reaction demonstrated by an eye-witness is so improbable or so inconceivable from any human being petted in such a situation. It is unsafe to dub his reactions as unnatural. State of Karnataka v. K. Yaiappa Reddy, AIR 2000 SC 185 (189) : (1999) 8 SCC 715 : 2000 CrLJ 400 : 1999 CrLR SC 723.

[11144] ● High Court cannot review its own judgment except to correct clerical or arithmetical error.—The Code of Criminal Procedure does not authorise the High Court to review its judgment or order passed either in excuse of its appellate, revisional or original jurisdiction. Section 362 of the Code prohibits the Court after it has signed its judgment or final order disposing of case from altering or reviewing the said judgment or order except to convict a clinical or arithmetical error. This prohibition is complete and no criminal Court can review its own judgment or order after it is signed. State of Kerala v. M.M. Manikantan Nair, AIR 2001 SC 2145 : (2001) 4 SCC 752 : 2001 SCC (Cri) 808 (810) : 2001 CrLJ 2346.

[11145] ● No jurisdiction of High Court to alter or review its own judgment or order.—Section 362, CrPC mandates that no Court, when it has signed its judgment or final order disposing of a case shall alter or review the same except to correct a clinical or an arithmetical error and this section is based on an acknowledged principle of law that once a matter is finally dispersed of by a Court, the said Court in the absence of a statutory provision becomes functus officio and disentitled to entertain a fresh prayer for the same relief unless the formal order of final disposal is set aside by the Court of competent jurisdiction. Har Singh Mann v. Harbhajan Singh, AIR 2001 SC 43 : (2001) 1 SCC 169 : 2001 SCC (Cri) 113 : 2001 CrLJ 128.

CRIMINAL LIABILITY OF COMPANY

[11146] ● Criminal Liability of Company.—A company cannot be prosecuted for offences under Sections 276-C, 277 and 278 read with Section 278-B of the Income-Tax Act, 1961 since each one of these sections requires the imposition of a mandatory term of imprisonment coupled with a fine and leaves no choice to the Court to impose only a fine. Assistant Commissioner v. Velliappa Textiles Ltd., AIR 2004 SC 86 : (2003) 11 SCC 405 : 2004 SCC (Cri) 1214 (1241) : 2004 CrLJ 1221.

[11147] ● Section 276-B, Income-tax Act.—Company and its Directors failing to credit the amount of TDS, in the account of the Central Government, are liable to prosecution. Machumilan Syntex Ltd. v. Union of India, AIR 2007 SC 1481 (1489) : (2007) 11 SCC 297.

[11148] ● Section 141, Negotiable Instruments Act.—Section 141 of the Negotiable Instruments Act raises a legal fiction in terms whereof the Directors of a company which would include the partners of a firm would be deemed to have committed an offence along with the company if they are in charge of the affairs of the company and responsible to it. Green Earth Asphalt and Power Private Ltd. v. State of Maharashtra, (2008) 8 SCC 278 (279). See Maksud Saiyed v. State to Gujarat, (2008) 5 SCC 668.

CRIMINAL MISAPPROPRIATION
(Section 403, 404, IPC)

[11149] ● Criminal misappropriation.—The offence under Section 403 was not established since the collections made by the accused had not been "misappropriated by him or converted to his own use", within the meaning of that expression as used in that section.

There was no statutory obligation on the accused to reserve the collection made in any one competition for payment to the prize-winners of that very competition, nor was he a trustee for that amount. No doubt the accused had acted with utter recklessness and irresponsibility in setting out to give huge amounts as prizes, but as a consequence of that he had incurred heavy losses in running business and had applied everything, which he collected in making good the losses in the previous competitions. Since it was established, that he had not appropriated any part of the collection from competition No. 92 to his own personal use, the charge of criminal misappropriation must fail. Conviction under Section 403 was set aside and the accused was acquitted. Ramaswami Nader v. State of Madras, AIR 1958 SC 56 : 1958 CrLJ 228 : 1958 SCJ 743 : 1958 SCR 739.

[11150] ● Dishonest misappropriation of property.—It is obvious that an owner of the property, in whichever way he uses his property and with whatever intention, will not be liable for misappropriation and that would be so even if he is not the exclusive owner thereof. A partner has, undefined ownership along with the other partners over all the assets of the partnership. If he chooses to use any of them for his own purposes he may be accountable civilly to the other partners. But he does not thereby commit any criminal misappropriation within the meaning of Section 403, IPC. Velgi Raghavji Patel v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1965 SC 1433 : (1965) 2 CrLJ 431 : 1965 SCD 824 : (1965) 2 SCJ 186.

[11151] ● Moneys payable towards Govt. dues paid by debtors to collection Amin.—Where the Collection Amin was charge under Section 409. IPC, the Supreme Court confirmed his conviction holding that he collected larger amount, but credited negligible amount in the Treasury and misappropriated the balance, that he had passed receipts for the amount collected and no adverse inference should be drawn against the prosecution, because of its failure to produce the demand notice served on the witnesses and the recovery list maintained in the Tehsil in view of the direct evidence of the concerned witnesses, and also when there was nothing to show that any demand notice was issued at all to the witnesses. Shariful Islam v. State of U.P., AIR 1973 SC 82 : (1973) 4 SCC 74 : 1973 CrLJ 199.

[11152] ● Dishonest misappropriation—Evidence and proof.—Where a head Constable had taken away by force, for example, by giving a slap, the watch, gold ornaments and cash from a boatman who had recovered these articles from a dead body of a drowned person but instead of entering them in official records dishonestly kept them with himself and produced them only when confronted with a boatman, apart from an offence under Section 394 he had also committed an offence under Section 404, IPC. Sathi Prasad v. State of U.P., AIR 1973 SC 448 : (1972) 3 SCC 613 : 1973 CrLJ 344.

[11153] ● Criminal misappropriation.—The offence like the offence of criminal misappropriation is characterised by an actual fraudulent appropriation of property. There is not originally wrongful taking or moving as the in the case of theft but the offence consists in wrongful appropriation of property, consequent upon a possession which is lawful. The offence is distinguishable from criminal misappropriation because the subject of it is not the property which by some casual act or otherwise, but without criminal means, comes into the offender's possession : but the property which is entrusted to the offender by the owner or by others lawful authority and which the offender holds subject to some duty or obligation to apply it according to the trust. Ram Narain Poply v. Central Bureau of Investigation, AIR 2003 SC 2748 : (2003) 3 SCC 641 : 2003 SCC (Cri) 869 (996-97) : 2003 CrLJ 4801 : JT 2003 (1) SC 184 : (2003) 2 Crimes 312.

[11154] ● Essential ingredients of Section 403, IPC.—The contract between complaint and TCPL is altogether a different contract. The contractual obligations under both the contracts are separate and independent of each other. The rights and obligations of the parties i.e. the complainant and TCPL are to be governed by the contract between them for which the contract between TCPL and Bokaro Steel (SAIL) has no relevance. Therefore, even if Bokaro Steel has made the payment to TCPL under its contract with the latter, it will not give rise to plea of misappropriation of money because that money is not money or movable property of the complainant. Further, Section 403 uses the words "dishonestly" and "misappropriate". These are necessary ingredients of an offence under Section 403, IPC. Neither of these ingredients is satisfied in the facts and circumstances of the case. Thus admittedly, the two contracts are independent of each other and payment under one has no relevance qua the other. It cannot be said that there is any dishonest intention on the part of appellants nor it can be said that TCPL or the appellants have misappropriated or converted the movable property of the complainant to their own use. Since the basic ingredients of the relevant Section in the Indian Penal Code are not satisfied, the order taking cognizance of the offence as well as the issue of summons to the appellants is wholly uncalled for. Such an order brings about serious repercussions. So far as the appellants are concerned when no case is made out for the alleged offences even as per the complaint filed by the complainant, there is no reason to permit the appellants to be subjected to trial for the alleged offences. U. Dhar v. State of Jharkhand, AIR 2003 SC 974 : (2003)

2 SCC 219 : 2003 SCC (Cri) 490 : 2003 CrLJ 1224 : (2003) 1 Crimes 449 (SC).

CRIMINAL NEGLIGENCE

[11155] ● Criminal negligence on the part of doctor.—For fixing criminal liability on a doctor or surgeon, the standard of negligence required to be proved should be so high as can be described as "gross negligence or recklessness". It is not merely lack of necessary care, attention and skill. Thus, when a patient agrees to go for medical treatment or surgical operation, every careless act of the medical man cannot be termed as "criminal". It can be termed "criminal" only when the medical man exhibits a gross lack of competence or inaction and wanton indifference to his patient's safety and which is found to have arisen from gross ignorance or gross negligence. Where a patient's death results merely from error of judgment or an accident, no criminal liability should be attached to it. Mere inadvertence or some degree of want of adequate care and caution might create civil liability but would not suffice to hold him criminally liable.

From the post-mortem report and the opinion of the three medical experts of the medical team specially constituted, the case of the prosecution laid against the surgeon is that there was negligence in not putting a cuffed endotracheal tube of proper size and in a manner so as to prevent aspiration of blood blocking respiratory passage. No doubt in the present case, the patient was a young man with no history of any heart ailment. The operation to be performed for nasal deformity was not so complicated or serious. Even his own wife did not accompany him during the operation. From the medical opinions produced by the prosecution, the cause of death is stated to be "not introducing a cuffed endotracheal tube of proper size as to prevent aspiration of blood from the wound in the respiratory passage". This act attributed to the doctor, even if accepted to be true can be described as negligent act as there was lack of due care and precaution. For this act of negligence, he may be liable in tort but his carelessness or want of due attention and skill cannot be described to be so reckless or grossly negligent as to make him "criminally liable".

To convict, therefore, a doctor, the prosecution has to come out with a case of high degree of negligence on the part of the doctor. Mere lack of proper care, precaution and attention or inadvertence might create civil liability but not a criminal one. The Courts have, therefore, always insisted in the case of alleged criminal offence against doctor causing death of his patient during treatment, that the act complained against the doctor must show negligence or rashness of such a higher degree as to indicate a mental state, which can be described as totally apathetic towards the patient. Such a gross negligence alone is punishable.

Thus, no case of recklessness or gross negligence has been made out against the doctor to compel him to face the trial for offence under Section 304-A of the IPC. Suresh Gupta v. Govt. of NCT of Delhi, AIR 2004 SC 4091 : (2004) 6 SCC 422 : 2004 CrLJ 3870 : (2004) 3 Crimes 149 : JT 2009 (SC) 6238.

[11156] ● Criminal negligence—Ingredients of.—Generally speaking, it is the amount of damages incurred which is determinative of the extent of liability in tort; but in criminal law it is not the amount of damages but the amount and degree of negligence that is determinative of liability. To fasten liability in criminal law, the degree of negligence has to be higher than that of negligence enough to fasten liability for damages in civil law. The essential ingredient of mens rea cannot be excluded from consideration when the charge in a Criminal Court consists of criminal negligence. In R. v. Lawrence, (1981) 1 All ER (974) : 1982 AC 510. LORD DIPLOCK spoke in a Bench of five and the other Law Lords agreed with him. He reiterated his opinion in R. v. Caldwell, (1981) All ER 961 : 1982 AC 341 and dealt with the concept of recklessness as constituting mens rea in criminal law. His Lordship warned against adopting the simplistic approach of treating all problems of criminal liability as soluble by classifying the test of liability as being "subjective" or "objective", and said : (All ER p. 982 e-f)

"Recklessness on the part of the doer of an act does presuppose that there is something in the circumstances that would have drawn the attention of an ordinary prudent individual to the possibility that his act was capable of causing the kind of serious harmful consequences that the section which creates the offence was intended to prevent, and that the risk of those harmful consequences occurring was not so slight that an ordinary prudent individual would feel justified in treating them as negligible. It is only when this is so that the doer of the act is acting 'recklessly' if, before doing the act, the either fails to give any thought to the possibility of there being any such risk or, having recognised that there was such risk, he nevertheless goes on to do it." Jacob Mathew v. State of Punjab, AIR 2005 SC 3180 : (2005) 6 SCC 1 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 1369 (1383) : 2005 CrLJ 3710 : 2005 (3) Crimes 63.

[11157] ● Criminal negligence—When actionable.—In order to hold the existence of criminal rashness or criminal negligence it shall have to be found out that the rashness was of such a degree as to amount to taking a hazard knowing that the hazard was of such a degree that injury was most likely imminent. The element of criminality is introduced by the accused having run the risk of doing such an act with recklessness and indifference to the consequences. LORD ATKIN in his speech in Andrews v. Director of Public Prosecutions, 1937 AC 576 : (1937) 2 All ER 552 (HC) stated : (All ER p. 556 C)

> "Simple lack of care such as will constitute civil liability is not enough. For purposes of the criminal law there are degrees of negligence, and a very high degree of negligence is required to be proved before the felony is established."

Thus, a clear distinction exists between "simple lack of care" incurring civil liability and "very high degree of negligence" which is required in criminal cases. In Riddell v. Reid, (1942) All ER 161 (AC at p. 31) LORD PORTER said in his speech—

> "A higher degree of negligence has always been demanded in order to establish a criminal offence than is sufficient to create civil liability." Jacob Mathew v. State of Punjab, AIR 2005 SC 3180 : (2005) 6 SCC 1 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 1369 (1383-84) : 2005 CrLJ 3710 : 2005 (3) Crimes 63.

[11158] ● Degree of negligence—Jurisprudentially different.—The jurisprudential concept of negligence differs in civil and criminal law. What may be negligence in civil law may not necessarily be negligence in criminal law. For negligence to amount to an offence, the element of mens rea must be shown to exist. For an act to amount to criminal negligence, the degree of negligence should be much higher i.e. gross or of a very high degree. Negligence which is neither gross nor of a higher degree may provide a ground for action in civil law but cannot form the basis for prosecution.

The moral culpability of recklessness is not located in a desire to cause harm. It resides in the proximity of the reckless state of mind to the state of mind present when there is an intention to cause harm. There is, in other words, a disregard for the possible consequences. The consequences entailed in the risk may not be wanted, and indeed the actor may hope that they do not occur, but this hope nevertheless fails to inhibit the taking of the risk. Certain types of violation, called optimising violations, may be motivated by thrill-seeking. These are clearly reckless. Jacob Mathew v. State of Punjab, AIR 2005 SC 3180 : (2005) 6 SCC 1 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 1369 (1383) : 2005 CrLJ 3710 : 2005 (3) Crimes 63.

[11159] ● Medical negligence.—To constitute criminal negligence by a medical practitioner, the negligence must be of a gross or a very high degree. Malay Kumar Ganguly v. Sukumar Mukherjee, AIR 2010 SC 1162 : (2009) 9 SCC 221 : JT 2009 (10) SC 256.

[11160] ● Criminal negligence—Meaning.—Criminal negligence means failure to exercise duty with reasonable care and proper care and employing precautions guarding against injury to public generally or to any individual in particular. Malay Kumar Ganguly v. Sukumar Mukherjee, AIR 2010 SC 1162 : (2009) 9 SCC 221 : 2009 (13) SCR 1 : JT 2009 (10) SC 256.

[11161] ● Criminal negligence—What is.—Criminal negligence is gross and culpable neglects or failure to exercise reasonable and proper care and precaution to guard against injury either to public generally or to an individual in particular, which having regard to all even instances out of which charge has arisen it was imperative duty of accused person to have adopted. State of Kerala v. Muralidhar, AIR 2009 SC 1621 : (2009) 4 SCC 463 : 2009 (4) SCR 400.

[11162] ● Culpable rashness or negligence.—Culpable negligence lies in a failure to exercise a reasonable and proper care and extent of its reasonableness will always depend upon circumstances of each case. Rushness means doing any act with consciousness of a risk that evil consequences will fallow but hope that it will not. Negligence is breach of duty imposed by law. State of Karnataka v. Muralidhar, AIR 2009 SC 1621 : (2009) 4 SCC 463 : JT 2009 (4) SC 108.

[11163] ● Object of Section 304-A, IPC.—The provisions of Section 304-A are directed at offences outside the purview of Section 299 and 300 IPC. State of Karnataka v. Muralidhar, AIR 2009 SC 1621 : (2009) 4 SCC 463 : 2009 (4) SCR 400.

[11164] ● Negligent Act—Meaning.—A negligent Act as an act done without doing something which a reasonable man guided upon those considerations which ordinarily regulate conduct of human affairs would or act which a prudent or reasonable man would not do in circumstances attending it. State of Karnataka v. Muralidhar, AIR 2009 SC 1621 : (2009) 4 SCC 463 : 2009 (4) SCR 400.

[11165] ● Ingredients.—To prove criminal negligence under Section 304-A it must be proved that (i) there was a death of person; (ii) these was a breach of duty causing death, and (iii) the breach of duty must be characterised as gross-negligence. Malay Kumar Ganguly v. Sukumar Mukherjee, AIR 2010 SC 1162 : (2009) 9 SCC 221 : JT 2009 (10) SC 256.

[11166] ● Medical negligence—Standard of proof.—It is noteworthy that standard of proof as also culpability requirements under Section 304-A of Indian Penal Code stands on an altogether different footing. On comparison of the provisions of Penal Code with the thresholds under the Tort Law or the Consumer Protection Act, a foundational principle that the attributes of care and negligence are not similar under Civil and Criminal Branches of Medical Negligence law is borne out. An act which may constitute negligence or even rashness under torts may not amount to same under Section 304-A. Malay Kumar Ganguly v. Sukumar Mukherjee, AIR 2010 SC 1162 : (2009) 9 SCC 221 : JT 2009 (10) SC 256.

[11167] ● Civil and criminal negligence—Distinction.—Held: For negligence to amount to an offence the element of mens rea must be shown to exist. For an act to amount to criminal negligence, the degree of negligence should be much high degree. A negligence which is not of such a high degree may provide a ground for action in civil law but cannot form the basis for prosecution. To prosecute a medical professional for negligence under criminal law it must be shown that the accused did something or failed to do something which in the given facts and circumstances no medical professional in his ordinary senses and prudence would have done or failed to do. Malay Kumar Ganguly v. Sukumar Mukherjee, AIR 2010 SC 1162 : (2009) 9 SCC 221 : 2009 (13) SCR 1 : 2009 (10) Scale 675 : JT 2009 (10) SC 256.

[11168] ● Civil and criminal Negligence—Distinction.—In criminal law, the degree of negligence has to be higher than that under civil law. Post-Graduate Institute of Medical Education and Research v. Jaspal Singh, (2009) 7 SCC 330 : JT 2009 (7) SC 527.

[11169] ● Road accidents—Economic impact.—In addition to the devastating human toll, the economic impact of road crashes is also enormous. Many of those injured or killed are wage earners, leaving families destitute and without means of support. Loss of wages, property damage, and other factors affected by road traffic crashes represented 4.6% of the gross national product of the United States in 1994. In developing countries, road traffic crashes represent 3-5% of the GNP. The estimated annual cost of road traffic crashes in developing countries exceeds $100 billion (US). This amounts to nearly double the total combined development assistance these countries receive every year from bilateral and multi-lateral government organizations. Globally, the estimated annual costs of road crashes are 500 billion (US). State of Karnataka v. Muralidhar, AIR 2009 SC 1621 : (2009) 4 SCC 463 : 2009 (4) SCR 400 : JT 2009 (4) 108.

[11170] ● Medical negligence.—Admittedly, Anuradha was administered steroids. The learned counsel for the parties have brought before us a vast volume of material to contend that the experts in the field as also the doctors or medical practitioners who have specialized in TEN and other dermatological diseases are sharply divided on the administration of steroid. We for the sake of brevity refer to them as the pro-steroid group and anti-steroid group. Medical science, therefore, has a grey area in this respect.

We would, in view of the difference of opinion amongst experts as noticed by us heretoabove in some detail, proceed on the assumption that steroid can be administered in the TEN patients.

As noticed hereinbefore, precautions as also the course of actions suggested by the authors have not been undertaken by the respondents. It is to be noted that the learned authors' expertise in the field is neither in doubt nor in dispute, particularly when both parties have extensively relied thereupon. Even the suspected offending drug was not withdrawn at later stages. This drug is considered to be a real risk for the patient suffering from TEN. The medicine has also been administered having regard to the physical condition of the patient. They were required to be given only as a part of the total program. We may also place on record that there has been a cleavage of opinion in regard to mortality rate. Whereas according to the one group of experts in TEN patients when properly treated and in particular given supportive treatment, the mortality rate is 0-10% the respondents contend that in fact the mortality rate is quite high being 30-70%.

We would assume that the mortality rate is very high. If that be so, we feel that the doctors should have been more careful. They should have treated the patient upon exercise of more care and caution. For the said purpose, if they had not been able to diagnose the disease properly or identify the proper drug they would have undertaken some research. It is clear that they did not have any expertise in the field and therefore they ought not to have behaved as experts.

We are, therefore, of the opinion that the universally accepted medicated treatment protocol had also not been followed. It is also to be noted at this juncture, that there may well be a difference of opinion on the course of action to be adopted while treating a patient of TEN, but the treatment line followed by Dr. Mukherjee which entailed administration of 80 mg of Depomedrol injection twice is not supported by any school of thought. The treatment line, in this case, does not flow from any considered affinity to a particular school of thought, but out of sheer ignorance of basic hazards relating to use of steroids as also lack of judgment.

It is also of some great significance that both in the criminal as also the civil cases, the concerned doctors took recourse to the blame game. Some of them tried to shirk their individual responsibilities.

In the instant case, negligent action has been noticed with respect to more than one respondent. A cumulative incidence, therefore, has led to the death of the patient. It is to be noted that doctrine of cumulative effect is not available in criminal law. The complexities involved in the instant case as also differing nature of negligence exercised by various actors, make it very difficult to distil individual extent of negligence with respect to each of the respondent. In such a scenario finding of medical negligence under Section 304-A cannot be objectively determined.

In view of our discussions made hereinbefore, we are of the opinion that for the death of Anuradha although Dr. Mukherjee, Dr. Halder, Dr. Abani Roy Chowdhury, AMRI, Dr. B. Prasad were negligent, the extent thereof and keeping in view our observations made hereinbefore, it cannot be said that they should be held guilty for commission of an offence under Section 304-A of the Indian Penal Code. We furthermore in a case of this nature do not intend to exercise our discretionary jurisdiction under Article 136 of the Constitution of India having regard to the fact that a judgment of acquittal has been recorded by the Calcutta High Court. Malay Kumar Ganguly v. Sukumar Mukherjee, AIR 2010 SC 1162 : (2009) 9 SCC 221 : 2009 (13) SCR 1 : 2009 (10) JT 256 : 2009 (10) Scale 675 : JT 2009 (10) SC 256.

[11171] ● Determination of Medical negligence—Principles.—On scrutiny of the leading cases of medical negligence both in our country and other countries specially United Kingdom some basic principles emerged in dealing with the cases of medical negligence in Kusum Sharma v. Batra Hospital and Medical Research Centre, AIR 2010 SC 105 : (2010) 3 SCC 480. The Hon'ble Supreme Court laid down the said principles as under :

I. Negligence is the breach of a duty exercised by omission to do something which a reasonable man, guided by those considerations which ordinarily regulate the conduct of human affairs, would do, or doing something which a prudent and reasonable man would not do.

II. Negligence is an essential ingredient of the offence. The negligence to be established by the prosecution must be culpable or gross and not the negligence merely based upon an error of judgment.

III. The medical professional is expected to bring a reasonable degree of skill and knowledge and must exercise a reasonable degree of care. Neither the very highest nor a very low degree of care and competence judged in the light of the particular circumstances of each case is what the law requires.

IV. A medical practitioner would be liable only where his conduct fell below that of the standards of a reasonably competent practitioner in his field.

V. In the realm of diagnosis and treatment there is scope for genuine difference of opinion and one professional doctor is clearly not negligent merely because his conclusion differs from that of other professional doctor.

VI. The medical professional is often called upon to adopt a procedure which involves higher element of risk, but which he honestly believes as providing greater chances of success for the patient rather than a procedure involving lesser risk but higher chances of failure. Just because a professional looking to the gravity of illness has taken higher element of risk to redeem the patient out of his/her suffering which did not yield desired result may not amount to negligence.

VII. Negligence cannot be attributed to a doctor so long as he performs his duties with reasonable skill and competence. Merely because the doctor chooses one course of action in preference to the other one available, he would not be liable if the course of action chosen by him was acceptable to the medical profession.

VIII. It would not be conducive to the efficiency of the medical profession if no Doctor could administer medicine without a halter round his neck.

IX. It is our bounden duty and obligation of the civil society to ensure that the medical professionals are not unnecessary harassed or humi liated so that they can perform their professional duties without fear and apprehension.

X. The medical practitioners at times also have to be saved from such a class of complainants who use criminal process as a tool for pressurizing the medical professionals/hospitals particularly private hospitals or clinics for extracting uncalled for compensation. Such malicious proceedings deserve to be discarded against the medical practitioners.

XI. The medical professionals are entitled to get protection so long as they perform their duties with reasonable skill and competence and in the interest of the patients. The interest and welfare of the patients have to be paramount for the medical professionals.

As long as the doctors have performed their duties and exercised an ordinary degree of professional skill and competence, they cannot be held guilty of medical negligence. It is imperative that the doctors must be able to perform their professional duties with free mind. Kusum Sharma v. Batra Hospital & Medical Research Centre, AIR 2010 SC 1050 : (2010) 3 SCC 480 : JT 2010 (2) 7 : 2010 (2) Scale 267.

[11172] ● Medical negligence—Requirements for prosecution.—To prosecute a medical professional for negligence under criminal law it must be shown that the accused did something or failed to do something which in the given facts and circumstances no medical professional in his ordinary senses and prudence would have done or failed to do. Hazard taken by the accused doctor should be of such a nature that the injury which resulted was most likely imminent. Kusum Sharma v. Batra Hospital & Medical Research Centre, AIR 2010 SC 1050 : (2010) 3 SCC 480 : JT 2010 (2) 7 : 2010 (2) Scale 267.

CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS
§ (See also Art. 21, Constitution of India)

[11173] ● Criminal proceedings.—The state cannot be permitted to deny the constitutional right of speedy trial to the accused on the ground that the State has no adequate financial resources to incur the necessary expenditure needed for improving the administrative and judicial apparatus with a view to ensuring speedy trial. The State may have its financial constraints and its priorities in expenditure, but, the law does not permit any Government to deprive its citizens of constitutional rights on a plea of poverty or administrative inability. Hussainara Khatoon (IV), AIR 1979 SC 1369 : (1980) 1 SCC 98 : 1979 CrLJ 1045.

[11174] ● Provision prescribed by S. 549 read with rules framed thereunder would be applicable to proceeding before Special Judge in West Bengal.—The branch of jurisprudence that deals with offences committed against the safety and order of the State. No doubt it is true that criminal law is subject which falls within the scope of Entry 1 of List III (Concurrent List) embodied in 7th Schedule to the Constitution of India. The Union Government as well as the State Government can, therefore, legislate in regard to criminal law. The contention that the Criminal Law (Amendment) Act, 1952 enacted by the Parliament of India is not applicable to the State of West Bengal is altogether misconceived. The West Bengal Criminal Law Amendment (Special Courts) Act, 1949, does not contain any provision pertaining to personnel governed by the Army Act. It is altogether silent in regard to the matter pertaining to the procedure to be followed in regard to Army personnel from the perspective of Section 549, CrPC and the Rules framed under the authority thereof. There is, thus, no conflict between the Criminal Law (Amendment) Act of 1952 and the West Bengal Act in so far as this matter is concerned. Such being the position, the provision contained in Criminal Law (Amendment) Act of 1952 with a special eye on the procedure to be followed in Sections 8(3-A) and 11 of the Criminal Law (Amendment) Act of 1952 will operate in this sphere without any let or hindrance.

In view of this provision, the procedure prescribed by Section 549, CrPC read with the Rules framed thereunder will be applicable to a proceeding before a Special Judge in West Bengal as well. Superintendent and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs, West Bengal v. Usha Ranjan Roy Choudhary, AIR 1986 SC 1655 : 1986 SCC (Cri) 311 : 1986 CrLJ 1248 : 1986 (3) Crimes 11.

[11175] ● Right to Speedy Trial.—"(1) Fair, just and reasonable procedure implicit in Article 21 of the constitution creates a right in the accused to be tried speedily. Right to speedy trial is the right of the accused. The fact that a speedy trial is also in public interest or that it serves the social interest also, does not make it any the less the right of the accused. It is in the interest of all concerned that the guilt or innocence of the accused is determined as quickly as possible in the circumstances.

(2) Right to speedy trail flowing from Article 21 encompasses all the stages, namely the stage of investigation, inquiry, trial appeal, revision and re-trial. That is how, this Court has understood this right and there is no reason to take a restricted view.

(3) The concerns underlying the right to speedy trial from the point of view of the accused are:

(a) the period of remand and pre-conviction detention should be as short as possible. In other words, the accused should not be subjected to unnecessary or unduly long incarceration prior to his conviction.

(b) The worry, anxiety, expense and disturbance to his vocation and peace, resulting from an unduly prolonged investigation, inquiry or trial should be minimal; and

(c) Undue delay may well result in impairment of the ability of the accused to defend himself, whether on account of death, disappearance or non-availability of witnesses of otherwise.

(4) At the same time, one cannot ignore the fact that it is usually the accused who is interested in delaying the proceedings. As is often pointed out, "delay is a known defence tactic". Since the burden of proving the guilt of the accused lies upon the prosecution, delay ordinarily prejudices the prosecution. Non-availability of witnesses, disappearance of evidence by lapse of time really work against the interest of the prosecution. Of course, there may be cases where the prosecution, for whatever reason, also delays the proceedings. Therefore, in every case, where the right to speedy trial is alleged to have been infringed, the first question to be put and answered is — who is responsible for the delay? Proceedings taken by either party in good faith, to vindicate their rights and interest, as perceived by them, cannot be treated as delaying tactics nor can the time taken in pursuing such proceedings be counted towards delay. It goes without saying that frivolous proceedings or proceedings taken merely for delaying the day of reckoning cannot be treated as proceedings taken in good faith. The mere fact that an application/petition is admitted and an order of stay granted by a superior Court is by itself no proof that the proceeding is not frivolous. Very often these stays are obtained on ex parte representation.

(5) While determining whether undue delay has occurred (resulting in violation of Right to Speedy Trial) one must have regard to all the attendant circumstances, including nature of offence, number of accused and witnesses, the workload of the Court concerned, prevailing local conditions and so on—what is called, the systemic delays. It is true that it is the obligation of the State to ensure a speedy trial and State includes judiciary as well, but a realistic and practical approach should be adopted in such matters instead of a pedantic one.

(6) Each and every delay does not necessarily prejudice the accused. Some delays may indeed work to his advantage. As has been observed by POWELL, J. in Barker 33 Led 2d 101, "it cannot be said how long a delay is too long in a system where justice is supposed to be swift but deliberate". The same idea has been stated by WHITE, J. in U.S. v. Ewell 15 L Ed 2d 627 in the following words:

> '.....the Sixth Amendment right to a speedy trial is necessarily relative, is consistent with delays and has orderly expedition, rather than mere speed, as its essential ingredients; and whether delay in completing a prosecution amounts to an unconstitutional deprivation of rights depends upon all the circumstances.'

However, inordinately long delay may be taken as presumptive proof of prejudice. In this context, the fact of incarceration of accused will also be a relevant fact. The prosecution should not be allowed to become a persecution. But when does the prosecution become persecution, again depends upon the facts of a given case.

(7) We cannot recognize or give effect to, what is called the 'demand' rule. An accused cannot try himself; he is tried by the Court at the behest of the prosecution. Hence, an accused's plea of denial of speedy trial cannot be defeated by saying that the accused did at no time demand a speedy trial. If in a given case, he did make such a demand and yet he was not tried speedily, it would be a plus point in his favour, but the mere non-asking for a speedy trial cannot be put against the accused. Even in USA, the relevance of demand rule has been substantially watered down in Barker and other succeeding cases.

(8) Ultimately, the Court has to balance and weigh the several relevant factors— 'balancing test' or 'balancing process' — and determine in each case whether the right to speedy trial has been denied in a given case.

(9) Ordinarily speaking, where the Court comes to the conclusion that right to speedy trial of an accused has been infringed the charges or the conviction, as the case may be, shall be quashed. But this is not the only course open. The nature of the offence and other circumstances in a given case may be such that quashing of proceedings may not be in the interest of justice. In such a case, it is open to the Court to make such other appropriate order—including an order to conclude the trial within a fixed time where the trial is not concluded or reducing the sentence where the trial has concluded —as may be deemed just and equitable in the circumstances of the case.

(10) It is neither advisable nor practicable to fix any time-limit for trial of offences. Any such rule is bound to be qualified one. Such rule cannot also be evolved merely to shift the burden of proving justification on to the shoulders of the prosecution. In every case of complaint of denial of right to speedy trail, it is primarily for the prosecution to justify and explain the delay. At the same time, it is the duty of the Court to weigh all the circumstances of a given case before pronouncing upon the complaint. The Supreme Court of USA too has repeatedly refused to fix any such outer time-limit in spite of the Sixth Amendment. Nor do we think that not fixing any such outer limit in effectuates the guarantee of right to speedy trial.

(11) An objection based on denial of right to speedy trial and for relief on that account, should first be addressed to the High Court. Even if the High Court entertains such a plea, ordinarily it should not stay the proceedings, except in a case of grave and exceptional nature. Such proceedings in High Court must, however, be disposed of on a priority basis" Abdul Rehman Antulay v. R.S. Nayak, AIR 1992 SC 1701 : (1992) 1 SCC 225 : 1992 SCC (Cri) 93 (138,141).

[11176] ● Criminal proceedings pending for more than ten years.—During the course of arguments', the learned counsel for the appellant submitted that though a criminal prosecution is pending against the appellant-Ram Niwas but no effective progress has been made in the case except filing of challan. It appears to us that the State is not serious in pursuing the criminal proceedings and even otherwise more than 10 years have already elapsed to the alleged commission of the offence. It would be against the interest of justice to further continue any criminal proceedings in the case. Munshi Ram Ram Niwas v. Collector, Food & Supplies Department, AIR 1993 SC 1203 (1206) : 1991 Supp (2) SCC 310 : 1991 SCC (Cri) 1037 : JT 1991 (4) SC 151 : (1991) 2 UJ (SC) 736.

[11177] ● Any person can initiate criminal proceedings.—The proposition that any one can initiate a criminal proceeding is not in dispute. Union of India v. W.N. Chadha, AIR 1993 SC 1082 : 1993 CrLJ 859 : 1993 (1) Crimes 308.

[11178] ● Simultaneous Disciplinary proceedings and criminal proceedings.—There is no legal bar for both proceedings disciplinary and criminal to go on simultaneously, however, in certain situations, it may not be "desirable" or "appropriate" to proceed with the disciplinary enquiry when a criminal case is pending on identical charges.

The approach and the objective in the criminal proceedings and the disciplinary proceedings is altogether distinct and different. The standard of proof, the mode of enquiry and the rules governing the enquiry and trial in both the cases are entirely distinct and different. Staying of disciplinary proceedings pending criminal proceedings, should not be a matter of course. State of Rajasthan v. B.K. Meena, AIR 1997 SC 13 : (1996) 6 SCC 417.

[11179] ● Exercise of judicial discretion.—The exercise of a judicial discretion on well recognised principles is the safest possible safeguards for the accused which is at the very core of criminal law administered in India. The Legislature cannot, therefore, make law to deprive the Courts of their legitimate jurisdiction conferred under the procedure established by law. Dadu v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 2000 SC 3203 : (2000) 8 SCC 437 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 1528.

[11180] ● Vindictiveness through legal process not to be allowed.—Frustrated litigants ought not to be indulged to give vent to their vindictiveness through a legal process and such an investigation ought not to be allowed to be continued since the same is opposed to the concept of justice, which is paramount.

The factual matrix therefore would thus be relevant in the matter of assessment of the situation as to whether "civic profile" would outweigh the "criminal outfit". Medchl Chemicals and Pharma (P) Ltd., AIR 2000 SC 1869 : (2000) 3 SCC 269 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 615 : 2000 CrLJ 1487.

[11181] ● Speedy trial.—This Court has emphasised time and again, the need for speeding up the trial as undue delay in culminating the criminal proceedings is antithesis to the Constitutional protection enshrined in Art. 21 of the Constitution. Nonetheless the Court has to view it from pragmatic perspective and the question of delay cannot be considered entirely from an academic angle. The High Court and this Court when approached by accused to quash proceedings on the ground of delay, must consider each case on its own facts. Unfortunately, the delay has so permeated in our legal system that at all levels tardiness has become the leitmotif. Such a malady has been judicially reprobated and efforts have been made to curtail the delay which has developed as a systemic canker. Seeta Hemchandra Shashittal v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 2001 SC 1246 (1248) : (2001) 4 SCC 525 : 2001 SCC (Cri) 787 : 2001 CrLJ (SC) 1242 : 2001 CrLR (SC) 256 : (2001) 1 Crimes 248.

[11182] ● Suspension of proceedings till proceedings before charity commissioner disposed of.—We are informed by the learned counsel for the parties that the matter is pending before the Assistant Charity Commissioner, who is to determined the validity or otherwise of the change report submitted by the appellants. On perusal of the record we find that a contention that in the proceeding relating to the confirmation or otherwise of the change report a contention has been raised that the documents on the basis of which the report has been submitted have been forged and fabricated by the appellants. In all probability that question will also arise for consideration by the authority. In the facts and circumstances of the case it is our considered view that in the interest of justice and for a fair trial the proceedings in the criminal case should remain suspended till the proceeding pending before the Assistant Charity Commissioner is disposed of by him. Tukarm Annaba Chavan v. Machindra Yeshwant Patil, AIR 2001 SC 994 : (2001) 3 SCC 33 : 2001 SCC (Cri) 431 : 2001 CrLJ (SC) 1164 : 2001 CrLR (SC) 164.

[11183] ● Right to speedy trial.—The declaration of law made by the Constitution Bench of five learned Judges of this Court in the decision reported in A.R. Antulay's case [(1992) 1 SCC 225] still holds the field and its binding force and authority has not been undermined or whittled down or altered in any manner by an other decision of a larger Bench. Consequently, the Benches of lesser number of Constitution of Judges which dealt with the cases reported in "Common Cause" A Regd. Society through its Director v. Union of India, [(1996) 4 SCC 33]; "Common Cause" A Regd. Society through its Director v. Union of India, [(1966) 6 SCC 775]; Raj Deo Sharma v. State of Bihar, [(1996) 7 SCC 507] and Raj Deo Sharma (II) v. State of Bihar, [(1999) 7 SCC 604] could not have laid down any principles in derogation of the ratio laid down in A.R. Antulay's case (supra) either by way of elaboration, expansion, clarification or in the process of trying to distinguish the same with reference to either the nature of causes considered therein or the consequences which are likely to follow and which, in their view, deserve to be averted. Even where necessities or justification, if any, were found thereof, there could not have been scope for such liberties being taken to transgress the doctrine of binding precedents, which has come to stay firmly in our method of Administration of Justice and what is permissible even under such circumstances being only to have had the matter referred to for reconsideration by a large Bench of this Court and not to deviate by no other means. The solitary reason would suffice by itself to overrule the above decisions, the correctness of which stand referred to for consideration by his Bench. All the more so when, there is no reason to doubt the correctness of the decision in A.R. Antulay's case (supra) and this Bench concurs with the principles laid down therein. P. Ramachandra Rao v. State of Karnataka, AIR 2002 SC 1856 : (2002) 4 SCC 578 : 2002 CrLJ 2547 : JT 2002 (4) SC 92 : (2002) 2 Crimes 200 (SC); (Per DORAISWAMY RAJU J.)

[11184] ● Prescription of limitation period amounts to judicial legislation.—Prescribing periods of limitation at the end of which the trial Court would be obliged to terminate the proceedings and necessarily acquit or discharge the accused, and further, making such directions applicable to all the cases in the present and for the further amounts to legislation, which, in our opinion, cannot be done by judicial directives and within the area of the judicial law-making power available to constitutional Courts, howsoever liberally we may interpret Articles 32, 21, 141, and 142 of the Constitution. The dividing line is fine but perceptible Courts, can declare the law, they can interpret the law, they can remove obvious lacunae and fill the gaps but they cannot entrench upon in the field of legislation properly meant for the legislature.

It is neither advisable, nor feasible, nor judicially permissible to draw or prescribe an outer limit for conclusion of all criminal proceedings. The time-limits or bars of limitation prescribed in the several directions made in Common Cause (1976) 4 SCC 33 (I), Raj Deo Sharma (I), and Raj Deo Sharma (II), (1996) 4 SCC 33, could not have been so prescribed or drawn and are not good law. The criminal Courts are not obliged to terminate trial or criminal proceedings merely on account of lapse of time, as prescribed by the directions made in Common Cause Case (I), Raj Deo Sharma (I) and (II). At the most the periods of time prescribed in those decisions can be taken by the Courts seized of the trial or proceedings to act as reminders when they may be persuaded to apply their judicial mind to the facts and circumstances of the case before them and determine by taking into consideration the several relevant factors as pointed out in A.R. Antulay's case and decide whether the trial or proceedings have become so inordinately delayed as to be called oppressive and unwarranted. Such time-limits cannot and will not by themselves be treated by any Court as a bar to further continuance of the trial or proceedings and a mandatorily obliging the Court of terminate the same and acquit or discharge the accused.

The Criminal Courts should exercise their available powers, such as those under Sections 309, 311 and 258 of Code of Criminal Procedure to effectuate the right to speedy trial. A watchful and diligent trial Judge can prove to be better protector of such right than any guidelines. In appropriate cases jurisdiction of High Court under Section 482 of CrPC and Articles 226 and 227 of Constitution can be invoked seeking appropriate relief or suitable directions.

This is an appropriate occasion to remind the Union of India and the State Governments of their constitutional obligation to strengthen the judiciary-quantitatively and qualitatively - by providing requisite funds, manpower and infrastructure. We hope and trust that the Governments shall act. P. Ramachandra Rao v. State of Karnataka, AIR 2002 SC 1856 : (2002) 4 SCC 578 : 2002 SCC (Cri) 830 : JT 2002 (4) SC 92 : (2002) 2 Crimes 200 (SC).

[11185] ● Stay of criminal proceedings when not warranted.—The High Court stayed the proceedings initiated by the appellants against the respondents under Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act pertaining to cheques till the completion of civil proceedings between the parties. The High Court's order directed that since the subject-matter of the post-dated cheques on which the complaints were based, were subject-matter of adjudication before the arbitrator and the arbitrator had pronounced the award thereupon and the civil proceedings challenging the award were pending, it was a fit case it stay the proceedings of the criminal complaints. The Supreme Court held as under :

The complaints were filed before the award was made. It is also not in issue that objections to the award are pending. It is elementary that the civil proceedings or arbitration proceedings for recovery and the criminal proceedings under Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act are based on independent cause of action. The making of the award may be a defence to such a complaint but to what extent the defence would be valid, shall depend upon the facts and circumstances of each case. Mere making of the award cannot be a ground to stall or stay the proceedings initiated under Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act. That being the only ground to stay the criminal proceedings of complaint cases, we are unable to sustain the impugned order of the High Court. We are, however, expressing no opinion, one way or the other, either on the merits of complaints or that of defence that may be taken or available to the accused in accordance with law. For the aforesaid reasons, we set aside the impugned order of the High Court and direct that the complaint cases would proceed in accordance with law." Gurcharan Singh v. Allied Motors Ltd., (2005) 10 SCC 626 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 1653 : 2006 CrLJ 360.

CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS AND DEPARTMENTAL PROCEEDINGS

[11186] ● Criminal proceedings and departmental proceedings.—Principles of natural justice do not require that the employer should wait for the decision of the criminal Court before taking disciplinary action against the employee. We may, however, add that of the case is of a grave nature or involves questions of fact or law, which are not simple it would be advisable for the employer to await the decision of the trial Court, so that the defense of the employee in a criminal case may not be prejudiced. Delhi Cloth and General Mills Ltd v. Kushal Bhan, AIR 1960 SC 806 : (1960) 3 SCR 227.

[11187] ● Domestic inquiry against workman in regard to certain incident.—It is desirable that if the incident giving rise to a charge framed against a workman in a domestic inquiry is being tried in a criminal Court, the employer should stay the domestic inquiry pending the final disposal of the criminal case. It would be particularly appropriate to adopt such a course where the charge against the workman is of a grave character because in such a case it would be unfair to compel the workman to disclose the defence which he may take before the criminal Court. But to say that domestic inquires may be stayed pending criminal trial is very different from saying that an employer proceeds with the domestic inquiry in spite of the fact that the criminal trial is pending, the inquiry for that reason alone is vitiated. Tata Oil Mills Company Ltd. v. Workman, AIR 1965 SC 155 (160) : (1964) 7 SCR 555.

[11188] ● Immunity against testimonial compulsion.—A criminal prosecution is not a fortress against all other actions in law. To accept the position that the pendency of a prosecution is a valid answer to a rule for habeas corpus would be to subvert the process and to mock at the criminal justice system. All that Art 20(3) of the Constitution, guarantees is that a person accused of an offence shall not be compelled to be a witness against himself, nothing less and, certainly, nothing more. Immunity against testimonial compulsion does not extend to refusal to examine and cross-examine witnesses and it is not open to a party proceeded against to refuse to examine himself or anyone else as a witness on his side and to cross-examine the witnesses for the opposite party on the ground of testimonial compulsion and then to contend that no relief should be given to the opposite party on the basis of the evidence adduced by the other party. We are unable to see how Art 20(3) come, into the picture at all. Dushyant Somal (Capt.) v. Sushma Somal, AIR 1981 SC 1026 : (1981) 2 SCC 977 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 413 : 1981 CrLJ 719 : 1981 CrLR (SC) 576.

[11189] ● Disciplinary proceedings—Initiation of simultaneously with criminal proceedings.— While there could be no legal bar for simultaneous proceedings being taken. Yet there may be cases where it would be appropriate to defer disciplinary proceedings awaiting disposal of the criminal case. In the latter class of cases it would be open to the delinquent employee to seek such an order of stay or injunction from the Court. Whether in the facts and circumstances of a particular case there should or should not be such simultaneity of the proceedings would then receive judicial consideration and the Court will decide in the given circumstances of a particular case as to whether the disciplinary proceedings should be interdicted pending criminal trial. It is neither possible nor advisable to evolve a hard and fast strait jacket formula valid for all cases and of general application without regard to the particularities of the individual situation. Kusheshwar Dubey v. Bharat Coking Coal Ltd., AIR 1988 SC 2118 : (1988) 4 SCC 319.

[11190] ● Stay of disciplinary proceedings will conclusion of criminal proceedings.—There is no legal bar for both proceedings to go on simultaneously and then say that in certain situations it may not be 'desirable', 'advisable' or 'appropriate' to proceed with the disciplinary inquiry when a criminal case is pending on identical charges. The staying of disciplinary proceedings it is emphasised is a matter to be determined having regard to the facts and circumstances of a given case and that no hard and fast rules can be enunciated in that behalf. The only ground suggested in the cases of this Court as constituting a valid ground for staying the disciplinary proceedings is "that the defence of the employee in the criminal case may not be prejudiced". This ground, however, been hedged in by providing further that this may be done in cases of grave nature involving question of fact and law. It means that not only the charge must be grave but that the case must involve complicated questions of law and fact. Moreover 'advisability', 'desirability' or 'propriety' as the case may be, has to be determined in each case taking into consideration all the facts and circumstances of the case—so far as criminal cases are concerned, it is well known that they drag on endlessly with where high officials or persons holding high public offices are involved. If a criminal case is unduly delayed that may itself be a good ground for going ahead with the disciplinary inquiry order where the disciplinary proceedings are held over at an earlier stage. The interest of administration and good government demand that these proceedings are concluded expeditiously. The disciplinary proceedings are meant not really to punish the guilty but to keep the administrative machinery unsullied by getting rid of bad elements. While it is not possible to enumerate the various factors for and against the stay of disciplinary proceedings, we found it necessary to emphasise some of the important consideration in view of the fact that very often the disciplinary proceedings are being stayed for long periods pending criminal proceedings. Stay of disciplinary proceedings cannot be and should not be a matter of course. All the relevant factors, for and against, should be weighed and a decision taken 'keeping in view' the various principles laid down in the ears of this Court. State of Rajasthan v. K.B. Meena, AIR 1997 SC 13 (17) : (1996) 6 SCC 417 : JT 1996 (8) SC 654.

CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS AND PROCEEDINGS ARISING UNDER INCOME TAX ACT

[11191] ● Criminal proceedings and proceedings arising under Income Tax Act.—The prosecution in criminal law and proceedings arising under the Act are undoubtedly independent proceedings and, therefore, there is no impediment in law for the criminal proceedings to proceed even during the pendency of the proceedings under the Act. However, a wholesome rule will have to be adopted in matters of this nature where Courts have taken the view that when the conclusions arrived at by the appellate authorities have a relevance and bearing upon the conclusions to be reached in the case, necessarily one authority will have to await the outcome of the other authority. I.T. Commr., Mumbai v. Bhupen Champak Lal Dalal, AIR 2001 SC 1096 (1097).

CRIMINAL TRESPASS
(Sections 441 - 447, IPC)

[11192] ● Criminal trespass.—In a pen-down strike the employees of the bank entered the office and occupied their seats and refused to work during the office hours. The strike which was peaceful was wholly confined to regular working hours and the only act alleged against the strikers was that they refused to vacate their seats when they were called upon to do so by the superior officers. The conduct of the strikers cannot be held to amount to criminal trespass under Section 441, IPC. Punjab National Bank v. A. I.P.N.B.E. Federation, AIR 1960 SC 160.

[11193] ● Movable property attached in execution of decree—Removal of by unlawful means.—When the movable property belonging to any person is under the legal attachment of a civil Court and it is kept by the Court officer in the custody of any person, if the owner enters upon the house or land of the person with whom the attached property is kept with the intention of forcibly removing that movable property, his intention is to commit the offence constituted by Section 424 of the Penal Code, and therefore he is guilty of the offence of criminal trespass under Section 447 read with Section 441 of the Code. Teeka v. State of U.P., AIR 1961 SC 803 : 1961 (1) CrLJ 859 : 1961 ACrR 198 : 1961 AWR (HC) 355 : 1961 ALJ 430 : 1961 BLJR 545 : 1961 MPC 441.

[11194] ● Offence of criminal trespass.—The test for determining whether the entry over property in the possession of another person was made with the "intent to annoy" is whether causing of annoyance was the aim of the entry, that is the dominant intention which prompted the entry. The offence of criminal trespass is committed, only when the main intention in effecting the entry is to cause annoyance to the person in possession. For establishing the offence it is not sufficient merely to show that the person entering upon the property of another had knowledge that his act would cause annoyance. The rule that a person must be presumed to intend the natural consequence of his act, is not a binding rule of universal application—and cannot be applied to the exclusion of circumstances showing the actual intention with which the act was done. Matri v. State of Punjab, AIR 1964 SC 986 : 1964 (2) CrLJ 57 : 1964 SCD 557.

[11195] ● Meaning of "expression in order to" in Sections 449, 450, 451, 454 and 457, IPC.—The question which arose in the case was, as to the meaning of the expression "in order to" in Sections 449, 450, 451, 454 and 457 of the Penal Code. It was contended that unless the offence mentioned in these sections is actually committed, the higher punishment provided for in these sections cannot be imposed. An act can be said t be committed "in order to the commission of a offence" even though the offence may not b completed. Thus if a person commits a house trespass with the purpose of committing theft bu has failed to accomplish his purpose, it will b proper to say that he has committed the hous trespass in order to the committing of theft. Hous trespass simple and apart from anything else i made punishable under Section 448 of the Pena code, and this section is followed by Section 449, 450, 451 which provide for the highe punishments for the offence of house-trespas when it is committed "in order to commit" som offence of the nature specified in these sections Similarly, Section 453 provides the punishmen for the offence of lurking house-trespass o house-breaking, but such offence is punishabl with the punishment provided in Section 45 when committed "in order to" commit an offenc punishable with imprisonment. The same patter is followed in Sections 456 and 457 in connectio with the offence of lurking house-trespass o house-breaking by night. This shows that i Sections 449, 450, 451, 454 and 457 the punishment prescribed has been graded according to the nature of the offence "in order to" the commissio of which house-trespass is committed. It is quite clear that these higher punishments for the offence of house-trespass are prescribed quite independent of the question whether the offence "in order to" the commission of which house-trespass was committed, has been actually committed or not. There can be no doubt that the words "in order to" have been used in these section to mean "with the purpose of". If the purpose in committing house-trespass is the commission of the offence mentioned in Sections 449, 450, 451, 454 or 457, the house-trespass committed is punishable with the punishment provided in such section. Whether or not the purpose of committing the house-trespass was actually accomplished, is quite irrelevant in these cases and the fact that the offence mentioned therein was not actually committed does not affect the applicability of these sections. Matiullah Sheikh v. State of W.B., AIR 1965 SC 132 : 1965 CrLJ 126 : 1964 SCD 766.

[11196] ● Trespasser is settled possession—Election of.—It is true that no one including the true owner has a right to dispossess the trespasser by force if the trespasser is in settled possession of the land and in such a case, unless he is evicted in due course of law, he is entitled to defend his possession even against the rightful owner. But stray or even intermittent acts of trespass do not give such a right against the true owner. The possession which a trespasser is entitled to defend against a rightful owner must be a settled possession extending over a sufficiently long period and acquiesced in by the true owner. A casual act of possession would not have the effect of interrupting the possession of the rightful owner. The rightful owner may re-enter and reinstate himself provided he does not use more force than necessary. Such entry will be viewed only as a resistance to an intrusion upon possession which has never been lost. The persons in possession by a stray act of trespass, a possession which has not matured into settled possession, constitute an unlawful assembly, giving right to the true owner, though not in actual possession at the time to remove the obstruction even by using necessary force. Munshi Ram v. Delhi Admn, AIR 1968 SC 702 : 1968 CrLJ 806 : (1968) SCWR 30 : (1968) SCJ 521 : 1968 SCD 244 : (1968) 2 SCR 455 : 1968 MLJ (Cri) 577 : 1968 MLW (Cri) 90.

[11197] ● Intention to annoy.—Where the complainant obtained a decree for possession of the disputed land and the same was confirmed on appeal, and the complainant obtained actual physical possession of the land with police help and thereafter the accused were found making preparations for construction of bamboo structures thereon about 13 days thereafter during night time after trespassing on the said land, the intention of the accused was to annoy the complainant who was in possession of the land. Though the land was lying vacant, after the complainant obtained possession, the actual possession must be held to be of the complainant. The law does not require, that the intention must be to annoy a person who is actually present at the time of the trespass. Rash Behari Chatterjee v. Fagu Shaw, AIR l970 SC 20 : 1970 CrLJ 4 : 1969 SCD 1008 : (1969) 2 SCJ 864 : 1970 SCCrR 239 : (1970) 1 SCR 425 : 1969 MLJ (Cri) 860 : 1969 ACrR 439.

[11198] ● Accused committing house-breaking at night with object of abducting woman.—The offence of abduction being an offence punishable with imprisonment, where the accused commit house-breaking by night with the object of committing abduction, the offence falls under Section 457, IPC. Nasiruddin v. State of Assam, AIR 1971 SC 1254 : 1971 CrLJ 1073 : 1971 SCD 872 : 1971 UJ (SC) 642 : 1971 CrAppR (SC) 400 : 1971 CurLJ 836 : 1971 ACrR 407 : 1971 AWR (HC) 541 : AssamLR (1971) SC 51.

[11199] ● Trespasser—Dispossession of by true owner.—A true owner has every right to dispossess or throw away a trespasser, while the trespasser is in the act or process of trespassing, and has not accomplished his act of possession. But this right is not available to the true owner if the trespasser has been successful in accomplishing his possession to the knowledge of the true owner. True owner then can dispossess the trespasser by taking recourse to law. It is not possible to lay down a rule of universal application as to when the possession of a trespasser becomes complete and accomplished. But one test is to find out who had grown the crop. Ram Rattan v. State of U.P., AIR 1977 SC 619 : (1977) 1 SCC 188 : 1977 CrLJ 433.

[11200] ● Appeal with Special Leave—No intention to commit offence intimidate insult or annoy any person in possession.—The appellant feeling aggrieved by the judgment of the High Court filed the present appeal with special leave. In order to satisfy the conditions of Section 441, IPC, it should be established, that the widow entered in possession over the premises with intent to commit an offence. A bare perusal of the complaint made it abundantly clear, that there was absolutely no allegation about the intention of the appellant to commit any offence or to intimidate, insult or annoy any person in possession. The widow might be fondly thinking that she had a right to occupy the premises even after the death of Sood. If a suit for eviction were filed in a civil Court, she might be in a position to vindicate her right and justify her possession. This was essentially a civil matter which could be properly adjudicated upon by a competent civil Court. To initiate criminal proceedings in the circumstances appeared to be only an abuse of the process of the Court. The appeal was allowed. Kanwal Sood v. Nawal Kishore, AIR 1983 SC 159 : (1983) 2 SCC 25 : 1983 SCC (Cri) 555 : 1983 CrLJ 173.

[11201] ● Trespassers should be given reasonable opportunity before force is used to expel them.—There is no doubt that the petitioners are using pavements and other public properties for an unauthorised purpose. But, their intention or object in doing so is not to "commit an offence or intimidate, insult or annoy any persons" which is the gist of the offence of "criminal trespass" under Section 441 of the IPC. They manage to find a habitat in places which are mostly filthy or marshy, out of sheer helplessness. It is not as if they have a free choice to exercise as to whether to commit an encroachment and if so, where. The encroachments committed by these persons are involuntary acts in the sense that those acts are compelled by inevitable circumstances and are not guided by choice. Trespass is a tort. But, even the law of torts requires that though a trespasser may be evicted forcibly, the force used must be no greater than what is reasonable and appropriate to the occasion and what is even more important "the trespassers should be asked and given a reasonable opportunity to depart before force is used to expel him." Olga Tellis v. Bombay Municipal Corporation, AIR 1986 SC 180 : (1985) 3 SCC 545.

[11202] ● Intimidating, insulting or annoying person in possession of property—Criminal trespass.—When entry in or upon property in possession of another is lawful then unlawfully remaining in possession of such property with the object of intimidating, insulting or annoying the person in possession of the property would be criminal trespass. The offence would be continuing so long as the trespass is not lifted or vacated and intimidation, insult annoyance of the person legally in possession of the property is not stopped. Galak Patel Valkart v. Dundayya, (1991) 2 SCC 141 : (1991) 1 Crimes 556 (558, 559).

CRIMINAL TRIAL

[11203] ● Criminal trial.—A criminal trial is not like a fairy tale wherein one is free to give flight to one's imagination and fantasy. It concerns itself with the question as to whether the accused arraigned at the trial is guilty of the crime with which he is charged. Crime is an event in real life and is the product of interplay of different human emotions. In arriving at the conclusion about the guilt of the accused charged with the commission of a crime, the Court has to judge the evidence by the yardstick of probabilities, its intrinsic worth and the animus and witnesses. Every case in the final analysis would have to depend upon its own facts. Although the benefit of every reasonable doubt should be given to the accused, the Courts should not at the same time reject evidence which is ex facie trustworthy on grounds which are fanciful or in the nature of conjectures. State of Punjab v. Jagir Singh Baljit Singh and Karam Singh, AIR 1973 SC 2407 : (1974) 3 SCC 277 : 1973 SCC (Cri) 886 (894, 895) : 1973 CrLJ 1589 : 1973 CrLR (SC) 570.

[11204] ● Administration of justice in criminal cases.—"Another golden thread which runs through the web of the administration of justice in criminal cases is that if two views are possible on the evidence adduced in the case, one pointing to the guilt of the accused and the other to his innocence, the view which is favourable to the accused should be adopted. This principle has a special relevance in cases wherein the guilt of the accused is sought to by established by circumstantial evidence. Rule has accordingly been laid down that unless the evidence adduced is consistent only with. With the hypothesis of the guilt of the accused and in inconsistent with that of his innocence the Court should refrain from recording a finding of guilt of the accused. It is also an accepted rule that in case the Court entertain reasonable doubt regarding the guilt of the accused, the accused must have the benefit of that doubt of course, the doubt regarding the guilt of the accused should be reasonable; it is not the doubt of a mind which is either so vacillating that it is incapable of reaching a firm conclusion or so timid that it is hesitant and afraid to take things to their natural consequences. The rule regarding the benefit of doubt also does not warrant acquittal of the accused by resort to surmises, conjectures or fanciful considerations." Kali Ram v. State of Himachal Pradesh, AIR 1973 SC 2773 : (1973) 2 SCC 808 : 1973 SCC (Cri) 1048 (1060) : 1974 CrLJ 1 : 1973 CrLR (SC) 705 : (1974) 1 SCR 722.

[11205] ● State as party entitled to equal treatment.—Ends of justice are not satisfied only when the accused in a criminal case is acquitted. The community acting through the State and the Public Prosecutor is also entitled to justice. The cause of the community deserves equal treatment at the hands of the Court in the discharge of its judicial functions. The community or the State is not a persona-non-grata whose cause may be treated with disdain. The entire community is aggrieved if the economic offenders who ruin the economy of the State are not brought to book. A murder may be committed in the heat of moment upon passion being aroused. An economic offence is committed with cool calculation and deliberate design with an eye on personal profit regardless of the consequence to the community. A disregard for the interest of the community can be manifested only at the cost of forfeiting the trust and faith of the community in the system to administer justice in an even-handed manner without fear of criticism from the quarters which view white collar crimes with a permissive eye unmindful of the damage done to the National economy and National interest. State of Gujarat v. Mohanlal Jitarralji Porwal, AIR 1987 SC 1321 : 1987 CrLJ 1061 : (1987) 2 SCC 364 : 1987 SCC (Cri) 364 (370, 371).

[11206] ● Accused cannot assert any right to joint trial with co-accused.—An accused person cannot assert any right to joint trial with his to co-accused. Normally it is the right of the prosecution to decide whom its prosecutes. It can decline to array a person as a co-accused and instead examine him as a witness for the prosecution. What weight is to be attached to that evidence as it smack of the testimony of a guilty partner in crime is a different matter. Prosecution can enter rolle proseque against an accused person. A.R. Antulay v. R. S. Nayak, AIR 1988 SC 1531 : (1988) 2 SCC 602 : 1988 SCC (Cri) 372 (467) : 1988 CrLJ 1661 : 1988 CrLR (SC) 366 : JT 1988 (2) SC 325.

[11207] ● Purity of public life one of cardinal principles.—'….. purity of public life is one of the cardinal principles which must be upheld as a matter of public policy. Allegations of legal infractions and criminal infractions must be investigated in accordance with law and procedure established under the Constitution. Even if he has been wronged, if he is allowed to be left in doubt that would cause more serious damage to the appellant. Public confidence in public administration should not be eroded any further. One wrong cannot be remedied by another wrong.' A.R. Antulay v. R.S. Nayak, AIR 1988 SC 1531 : (1988) 2 SCC 602 : 1988 SCC (Cri) 372 (443) : 1988 CrLJ 1661 : 1988 CrLR (SC) 366 : JT 1988 (2) SC 325.

[11208] ● Criminal trial—Importance and object.—The criminal trial cannot be equated with a mock scene from a stunt film. The legal trial is conducted to ascertain the guilt or innocence of the accused arraigned. In arriving at a conclusion about the truth, the Courts are required to adopt rational approach and judge the evidence by its intrinsic worth and the animus of the witnesses. The hyper-technicalities or figment of imagination should not be allowed to divest the Court of its responsibility of sifting and weighing the evidence to arrive at the conclusion regarding the existence or otherwise of a particular circumstances keeping in view the peculiar facts of each case, the social position of the victim and the accused, the larger interests of the society particularly the law and order problem and degrading values of the life inherent in the prevalent system. The realities of life have to be kept in mind while appreciating the evidence for arriving at the truth. The Courts are not obliged to make efforts either to give latitude to the prosecution or loosely construe the law in favour of the accused. The traditional dogmatic hyper-technical approach has to be replaced by rational, realistic and genuine approach for administering justice in a criminal trial. Criminal jurisprudence cannot be considered to be a Utopian thought but have to be considered as part and parcel of the human civilization and the realities of life. The Courts cannot ignore the erosion in values of life which are a common feature of the present system. Such erosions cannot be given a bonus in favour of those who are guilty of polluting society and the mankind. State of Himachal Pradesh v. Lekhraj, AIR 1999 SC 3916 : (2000) 1 SCC 247 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 147 : 2000 CrLJ 44.

[11209] ● Findings must be based on evidence produced before Court.—The Court is not permitted to conjecture and surmise. It must base its findings on the evidence produced before it by the parties. The enquiry by the Court is restricted to the evidence on record and the case pleaded by the parties. It is not permissible to the Court to conjecture and surmise and make out a third case not pleaded by the parties only to answer the query such as the one posed to us. Deb Narayan Halder v. Anushree Haldar, AIR 2003 SC 3174 : 2004 SCC (Cri) 164 : 2003 CrLJ 4470 : 2003 (4) Crimes 74 (SC).

[11210] ● Adding a new story in criminal prosecution.—By introducing or adding a new story in a criminal prosecution, in most of the cases, it adversely affects or destroys the prosecution case. Not only it creates doubts with regard to that part of the prosecution version but on occasions casts doubt about the motive. Result is, under our criminal jurisprudence, benefit of doubt may go to the accused. Ram Narain Poply v. CBI, AIR 2003 SC 4748 : (2003) 3 SCC 641 : 2003 SCC (Cri) 869 : 2003 CrLJ 4801.

[11211] ● How a person reacts in a given case is determinative factor.—How a person reacts in a given case may be the determinative factor so far as that case is concerned. That cannot be applied as a rule of universal application to all cases irrespective of the fact situation in that particular case. There can be no empirical formula as to how one reacts in a given situation and its effect and impact. It would be almost like trying to put a square peg on a round hole. To imprint fact situation of one decided case upon another of observations made in the peculiar facts of a given case to any or every other case notwithstanding dissimilarity in effect and the distinctive features, is legally impermissible. Each case, more particularly a criminal case depends on its own facts and a close similarity between one case and another is not enough to warrant like treatment because a significant detail may alter the entire aspect. In deciding such cases, one should avoid the temptation to decide cases by matching the colour of one case against the colour of another. To decide, therefore, on which side of the line a case falls, the broad resemblance to another case is not at all decisive. Parasa Raja Manikyala Rao v. State of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 2004 SC 132 :

(2003) 12 SCC 306 : 2004 CrLJ 390 : 2003 (4) Crimes 375.

[11212] ● Criminal Trial—Meaning and Scope.—A criminal trial is a judicial examination of the issues in the case and its purpose is to arrive at a judgment on an issue as a fact or relevant facts which may lead to the discovery of the fact issue and obtain proof of such facts at which the prosecution and the accused have arrived by their pleadings; the controlling question being the guilt or innocence of the accused. Since the object is to mete out justice and to convict the guilty and protect the innocent, the trial should be a search for the truth and not a bout over technicalities, and must be conducted under such rules as will protect the innocent, and punish the guilty. The proof of charge which has to be beyond reasonable doubt must depend upon judicial evaluation of the totality of the evidence, oral and circumstantial and not by an isolated scrutiny. Himanshu Singh Sabharwal v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 2008 SC 1943 : (2008) 3 SCC 602 : 2008 (4) SCR 783 : JT 2008 (3) 550 : 2008 (4) Scale 93 : 2008 (2) Supreme 718. To the same effect : Zahira Habibullah Sheikh v. State of Gujarat, AIR 2006 SC 1367 : (2006) 3 SCC 374 : 2006 (2) SCC (Cri) 8 : 2006 CrLJ 1694 (SC) : 2006 (2) Crimes 36 (SC).

[11213] ● Role of Court in Criminal Trial.—If a criminal Court is to be an effective instrument in dispensing justice, the Presiding Judge must cease to be a spectator and a mere recording machine by becoming a participant in the trial evincing intelligence, active interest and elicit all relevant materials necessary for reaching the correct conclusion, to find out the truth, and administer justice with fairness and impartiality both to the parties and to the community it serves. Courts administering criminal justice cannot turn a blind eye to vexatious or oppressive conduct that has occurred in relation to proceedings, even if a fair trial is still possible, except at the risk of undermining the fair name and standing of the judges as impartial and independent adjudicators. Himanshu Singh Sabharwal v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 2008 SC 1943 (1946, 1947) : (2008) 3 SCC 602 : 2008 (2) SCC (Cri) 106 : 2008 (2) Crimes 127 (SC).

[11214] ● Criminal Trial has to be fair to all concerned.—It has to be unmistakably understood that a trial which is primarily aimed at ascertaining truth has to be fair to all concerned. There can be no analytical, all comprehensive or exhaustive definition of the concept of a fair trial, and it may have to be determined in seemingly infinite variety of actual situations with the ultimate object in mind viz. whether something that was done or said either before or at the trial deprived the quality of fairness to a degree where a miscarriage of justice has resulted. It will not be correct to say that it is only the accused who must be fairly dealt with. That would be turning Nelson's eyes to the needs of the society at large and the victims or their family members and relatives. Each one has an inbuilt right to be dealt with fairly in a criminal trial. Denial of a fair trial is as much injustice to the accused as is to the victim and the society. Fair trial obviously would mean a trial before an impartial Judge, a fair prosecutor and atmosphere of judicial calm. Fair trial means a trial in which bias or prejudice for or against the accused, the witnesses, or the cause which is being tried is eliminated. If the witnesses get threatened or are forced to give false evidence that also would not result in a fair trial. The failure to hear material witnesses is certainly denial of fair trial. Himanshu Singh Sabharwal v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 2008 SC 1943 (1947) : (2008) 3 SCC 602 : 2008 (2) SCC (Cri) 106 : 2008 (2) Crimes 127 (SC).

[11215] ● Failure to accord fair trial.—Failure to accord fair hearing either to the accused or the prosecution violates even minimum standards of due process of law. It is inherent in the concept of due process of law, that condemnation should be rendered only after the trial in which the hearing is a real one, not sham or a mere farce and pretence. Since the fair hearing requires an opportunity to preserve the process, it may be vitiated and violated by an overhasty stage-managed, tailored and partisan trial.

The fair trial for a criminal offence consists not only in technical observance of the frame and forms of law, but also in recognition and just application of its principles in substance, to find out the truth and prevent miscarriage of justice. Himanshu Singh Sabharwal v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 2008 SC 1943 (1948, 1949) : (2008) 3 SCC 602 : 2008 (2) SCC (Cri) 106 : 2008 (2) Crimes 127 (SC).

[11216] ● Role of Court.—The Courts have to take a participatory role in a trial. They are no expected to be tape recorders to record whatever is being stated by the witnesses. Section 311 of the Code and Section 165 of the Evidence Act confer vast and wide powers on Presiding Officers of Court to elicit all necessary materials by playing an active role in the evidence collecting process. They have to monitor the proceedings in aid of justice in a manner that something, which is not relevant, is not unnecessarily brought into record. Even of the prosecutor is remiss in some ways, it can control the proceedings effectively so that ultimate objective i.e. truth is arrived at. This become more necessary where the Court has reasons to believe that prosecuting agency on the prosecutor is not acting in the requisite manner. Himanshu Singh Sabharwal v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 2008 SC 1943 (1949, 1950) : (2008) 3 SCC 602 : 2008 (2) SCC (Cri) 106 : 2008 (2) Crimes 127 (SC).

[11218] ● Objectives of criminal Trial.—One of the objectives of a criminal trial is that delay should be arounded. Jawahar Singh v. State of G.N.C.T. of Delhi, AIR 2009 SC 2391 : (2009) 6 SCC 490 : 2009 CrLJ 2860 (2863) : JT 2009 (11) SC 268.

[11219] ● Criminology.—Initiation of a criminal trial is a process which carries an implicit degree of coercion and it should not be triggered by false and powerless complaints amounting to harassment and humiliation to the accused. S. Khushboo v. Kanniammal, AIR 2010 SC 3196 : (2010) 5 SCC 600.

[11220] ● Burden of proof.—Burden of proof in a criminal trial is always the burden of prosecution to prove its case beyond reasonable doubt. It never shifts. Paramjeet Singh v. State of Uttrakhand, (2010) 10 SCC 439 : 2010 (4) Crimes 165 (SC).

[11221] ● Criminal trial—Meaning.—A criminal trial is a judicial examination of evidence with the object of punishing the offenders or appropriate proof of relevant facts, the core question being the guilt or innocence of the accused. Nahar Singh Yadav v. Union of India, JT 2010 (12) SC 641 : 2010 (12) Scale 199.

[11222] ● Conviction—Nature of evidence required.—Law does not permit the Court to punish the accused on the basis of a moral conviction or suspicion alone. Though an offence may be gruesome and revolt the human conscience, the punishment of accused can be based on legal evidence and not on surmises and conjectures. Paramjeet Singh v. State of Uttrakhand, (2010) 10 SCC 439 : 2010 (4) Crimes 165 (SC).

[11223] ● Duty of Court in serious offence of brutal nature.—In a criminal trial involving a serious offence of a brutal nature, the Court should be wary of the fact that it is human instinct to react adversely to the commission of the offence and make an effort to see that such an instinctive reaction does not prejudice the accused in any way. In a case where the offence alleged to have been committed is a serious one, the prosecution must provide greater assurance to the Court that its case has been proved beyond reasonable doubt. Paramjeet Singh v. State of Uttrakhand, (2010) 10 SCC 439 : JT 2010 (10) 260 : 2010 (10) Scale 258 : 2010 (4) Crimes 165 (SC).

[11224] ● False implication of persons.—In a case of deep-rooted group rivalry and animosity between the rival parties and in the face of the fact that a large member of accused have been involved. Possibility of false implication cannot be entirely ruled out. Prahlad Mahto v. State of Jharkhand, AIR 2010 SC 3740 (3741).

CRIMINOLOGY

[11225] ● Criminology.—Crime is a pathological aberration, that the criminal can ordinarily be redeemed, that the State has to rehabilitate rather than avenge. The sub-culture that leads to anti-social behavior has to be countered not by undue cruelty but by reculturisation. Therefore, the focus of interest in penology is the individual, and the goal is salvaging him for society. The infliction of harsh and savage punishment is thus a relic of past and regressive times. The human today views sentencing as a process of reshaping a person who has deteriorated into criminality and the modern community has a primary stake in the rehabilitation of the offender as a means of social defence. We therefore, consider a therapeutic, rather than an 'in terrorem' outlook, should prevail in our criminal Courts. Since brutal incarceration of the person merely produces laceration of his mind. In the words of George Bernard Shaw : If you are to punish a man retributively, you must injure him. If you are to reform him, you must improve him and, men are not improved by injuries. We may permit ourselves the liberty to quote from judge SIR JEOFFREY STREATFIELD : "If you are going to have anything to do with the criminal Courts, you should see for yourself the conditions under which prisoners serve their sentences".

It will be seen that there is a great discretion vested in the Judge, especially when pluralistic factors enter his calculations. Even so, the Judge must exercise this discretionary power, drawing his inspiration from the humanitarian spirit of the law, and living down the traditional precedents which have winked at the personality of the crime-doer and been swept away by the features of the crime. What is dated has to be discarded. What is current has to be incorporated. Therefore innovation, in all conscience, is in the field of judicial discretion. Unfortunately, the Indian Penal Code still lingers in the some-what compartmentalised system of punishment viz, imprisonment, simple or rigorous, fine and, of course, capital sentence. There is a wide range of choice and flexible treatment which must be available with the Judge if he is to fulfil his tryst with curing the criminal in a hospital setting. May be in an appropriate case actual hospital treatment may have to be prescribed as part of the sentence. In another case, liberal parole may have to be suggested and, yet in a third category, engaging in certain types of occupation or even going through meditational drills or other courses may be part of the sentencing prescription. The perspective having changed, the legal strategies and judicial resources, in their variety, also have to change. Rule of thumb sentences of rigorous imprisonment or other are too insensitive to the highly delicate and subtle operation expected of a sentencing Judge. Release on probation, conditional sentences, visits to healing centres, are all on the cards. We do not wish to be exhaustive. Indeed, we cannot be. Sentencing justice is a facet of social justice, even as redemption of a crime-doer is an aspect of restoration of a whole personality. Till the new Code recognised statutorily that punishment required considerations beyond the nature of the crime and circumstances surrounding the crime and provided a second stage for bringing in such additional materials, the Indian Courts had, by and large, assigned an obsolescent backseat to the sophisticated judgment on sentencing. Now this judicial skill has to come of age.

The sentencing stance of the Court has been outlined by us and the next question is what 'hospitalization' techniques will best serve the sentence, having due regard to his just deserts, blending a feeling for a man behind the crime, defence of society by a deterrent component and a scientific therapeutic attitude at once correctional and realistic. The available resources for achieving these ends within the prison campus also has to be considered in this context. Noticing the scant regard paid by the Courts below to the soul of Section 248(2) of the Code and compelled to gather information having sentencing relevancy, we permitted Counsel on both sides in the present appeal to file affidavits and other materials to help the Court make a judicious choice of the appropriate 'penal' treatment. Both sides have filed affidavits which disclose some facts pertinent to the project. The social abhorrence of the crime is an input, since the emphatic denunciation of a crime by the community must be reflected in the punishment. From this angle we agree with the trial Court that unconscionable exploitation of unfortunately unemployed young men by heartless deception, compounded by pretension to political influence, calls for punitive severity to serve as deterrent. The crime here is doubly bad and throws light on how gullible, young men part with hard money in the hope that political influence, indirectly purchased through money, can secure jobs obliquely. But then the victims of the crime must be commiserated with and in such white-collar offences it is proper to insist upon reparation of the victims, apart from any other sentence. In the present case, four young men have been wheedled out of their little fortunes by two convicts and so, to drive home a sense of moral responsibility to repair the injury inflicted, we think it right to direct the appellant to pay a fine of Rs. 1200 which will be made over by the trial Court to PW 1 (whose case alone is the subject of the prosecution) under Section 357 of the code. That is to say, a fine of Rs. 1200 is imposed will be paid over to the aforesaid PW-1. Mohammad Giasuddin v. State of A.P., AIR 1977 SC 1926 : (1977) 3 SCC 287 : 1977 SCC (Cri) 496 : 1977 CrLJ 1557 : 1977 CrLR (SC) 285 : (1978) 1 SCR 153.

[11226] ● Award of sentence—Need to personalize sentence formative angle.—What are the other circumstances which we may look into? The appellant is a young man of 28 years. He has a degree in Bachelor of Oriental Languages and another in Commerce, which suggests that he may respond to new cultural impact. He was working as a Junior Assistant in the Government Secretariat and has now lost the post consequent on the conviction. This is a hard lesson in life. The socio-economic circumstances of the man deserve to be noticed. His parents are old and financially weak, since they and the appellant's sisters and younger brother are his dependents. The younger brother also is unemployed. These factors suggest that the economic blow, if the appellant is imprisoned for long, will be upon his brother at college and the other members of his family. Extenuation is implicit in this fact. He prays for release on probation or under Section 360 of the Code because he has no blemish by way of previous crime or bad official record. Having regard to his age (not immature) and the deliberate plan behind the crime operated in partnership upon four – perhaps more – persons, we reject his request as over-ambitious. At the same time, a contrite convict, yet in his twenties, may deserve clement treatment. A just reduction of the sentence is justified and we think that incarceration for 18 months may be adequate. But this long period has to be converted into a spell of healing spent in an intensive care ward of the penitentiary, if we may say so figuratively. How can this be achieved ? First, by congenial work which gives job satisfaction – not jail frustration, nor further criminalisation. We therefore direct the State Government to see that within the framework of the Jail Rules, the appellant is assigned work not of a monotonous, mechanical, degrading type, but of a mental, intellectual, or like type mixed with a little manual labour. This will ensure that the prisoner does work more or less of the kind he is used to. The jail, certainly, must be able to find this kind of work for him, even on its own administrative side–under proper safe guards though. Mohammad Giasuddin v. State of A.P., AIR 1977 SC 1926 : (1977) 3 SCC 287 : 1977 SCC (Cri) 496 (499, 500, 503, 504, 506) : 1977 CrLJ 1557 : 1977 CrLR (SC) 285 : (1978) 1 SCR 153.

CROSS-APPEALS

[11227] ● Cross-appeals.—We are quite amazed as to why the two appeals, which arose out of the same incident and in fact resulted in cross-sessions cases could not have been heard together. Kulwant Singh v. Amarjit Singh, AIR 2000 SC 1212 : (2000) 3 SCC 290 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 627 (630) : 2000 CrLJ 1722 : 2000 CrLR (SC) 420.

CROSS-CASE

[11228] ● Cross-case.—It is difficult to comprehend as to how the High Court could decide the appeal before it by taking into account evidence recorded in another case, even though it might be what is loosely called a cross-case. It is elementary that each case must be decided on the evidence recorded in it and evidence recorded in another case cannot be taken into account in arriving at the decision. Even in civil cases this cannot be done unless the parties are agreed that the evidence in one case may be treated as evidence in the other. Much more so in criminal cases would this be impermissible. It is doubtful whether the evidence recorded in one criminal case can be treated as evidence in the other, even with the consent of the accused. But here there was clearly no consent of the appellants to treat the evidence recorded in the cross case against Ganpat and Rajdhar as evidence in the case against them. The High Court was, therefore, clearly in error in taking into consideration the evidence recorded in the cross-case against Ganpat and Rajdhar. The High Court ought to have decided the appeal before it only on the basis of the evidence recorded in the present case and ought not to have allowed itself to be influenced by the evidence recorded in the cross-case against Ganpat and Rajdhar. Mitthulal v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1975 SC 149 : (1975) 3 SCC 529 : 1975 CrLJ 236 : 1974 CrLR (SC) 702 : 1975 MPLJ 137.

[11229] ● Counter cases exclusively triable by Sessions Court.—The witnesses examined under Sections 200 and 202, CrPC, 1973 in the preliminary inquiry did state that it was Suraj Bhan who had shot dead Banta Singh and had also caused the serious gunshot injury to Kewal Krishan complainant. The question as to in what circumstances Banta Singh received the fatal gunshot injuries was an issue in the cross-case also, which was instituted on a police report under Section 173, CrPC against Kewal Krishan and others, and had been committed to the Court of Session for trial. That is to say the story set up by Kewal Krishan in his complaint in regard to the death of Banta Singh, was likely to be his defence version in the counter-case in which he was being tried for the murder of Banta Singh. In short both these cases exclusively triable by the Court of Session, one instituted on a Police report under S. 173, CrPC and the other initiated on a criminal complaint, arose out of the same transaction. There was, thus, a risk of two Courts coming to conflicting findings. To obviate such a risk, it is ordinarily desirable that the two cases should be tried separately, but by the same Court. Kewal Krishan v. Suraj Bhan, AIR 1980 SC 1780 : 1980 Supp SCC 499 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 438 (442) : 1980 CrLJ 1271 : 1980 CrLR (SC) 534.

[11230] ● Cross-cases—Trial of by same Judge one after other.—"We think that the fair procedure to be adopted in a matter like the present where there are cross-cases to direct that the same learned judge must try both the cross-cases one after the other. After the recording of evidence in one case is completed, he must hear the arguments, but he must reserve the judgment. Thereafter, he must proceed to hear the cross-case and after recording all the evidence he must hear the arguments but he must reserve the judgment in that case. The same learned Judge must, therefore, dispose of the matters by two separate judgments. In deciding each of the case, he can rely only on the evidence accorded in that particular case. The evidence recorded in the cross-case cannot be looked into Nor can the Judge be influenced by whatever is argued in the cross-case. Each case must be decided on the basis of the evidence which has been placed on record on that particular case without being influenced in any manner by the evidence or arguments urged in the cross-case. But both the judgments must be pronounced by the same learned judge one after the other". Nathi Lal v. State of U.P., 1990 SCC (Cri) 638 : 1990 Supp SCC 145 (145-146).

[11231] ● Power of Sessions Judge to try offence under IPC.—"A Sessions Judge has the power to try any offence under the Indian Penal Code. It is not necessary for the Sessions Court that the offence should be one exclusively triabale by a Court of Sessions. This power of the Sessions Court can be discerned from a reading of S.26 of the IPC. When it is realized that the Sessions Judge has the power to try any offence under the Indian Penal Code and when a case involving offence not exclusively triabale by such Court is committed to the Court of Sessions, the Sessions Judge has to exercise a discretion regarding the case which he has to continue for trial in his Court and the case which he has to transfer to the Chief Judicial Magistrate. The employment of the word "may" at one place in S.228(1) of CrPC, and the word "shall" at another place in the same sub-section unmistakably indicates that when the offence is not triabale exclusively by the Sessions Court, it is not mandatory that he should order transfer of the case to the Chief Judicial Magistrate after framing a charge. In situations where it is advisable for him to try such offence in his Court, there is no legal obligation to transfer the case to the Chief Judicial Magistrate. One of the instances for not making the transfer is when a case and counter case have been committed to the Sessions Court and one of those cases involves an offence exclusively triable by the Sessions Court and the other does not involve any such offence." Sudhir v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 2001 SC 826 : (2001) 2 SCC 688 : 2001 SCC (Cri) 387 (392, 393) : 2001 CrLR (SC) 212.

[11232] ● Cross-cases—Trial of by same Court.—"We are unable to understand why the Legislature is still parrying to incorporate such a salubrious practice as a statutory requirement in the code. The practical reasons for adopting a procedure that such cross-cases shall be tried by the same Court can be summarised thus : (1) It staves off the danger of an accused being convicted before his whole case is before the Court (2) It deters conflicting judgments being belowered upon similar facts. (3) In reality the case and the counter-case are to all interests and purposes, different or conflicting versions of one incident." Sudhir v. State of M.P., AIR 2001 SC 826 : (2001) 2 SCC 688 : 2001 SCC (Cri) 387 (391) : 2001 CrLR (SC) 212.

[11233] ● Cross-cases—Procedure to be adopted.—In the instant case, it is undisputed, that the Investigating Officer submitted the challan on the basis of the complaint lodged by the accused—Mishrilal in respect of the same incident. It would have been just fair and proper to decide both the cases together by the same Court in view of the guidelines devised by this Court in Nathilal v. State of U.P, 1990 (Supp) SCC 145 : 1990 SCC (Cri) 638. The cross-cases should be tried together by the same Court irrespective of the nature of the offence involved. The rational behind this is to avoid the conflicting judgments over the same incident because if cross-cases are allowed to be tried by two Courts separately there is likelihood of conflicting judgments. In the instant case, the Investigating Officer submitted the challan against both the parties. Both the complainants cannot be said to be right. Either of them must be false. In such a situation, legal obligation is cast upon the Investigating Officer to make an endeavour to find out the truth and to cull out the truth from the falsehood. Unfortunately, the Investigating Officer has failed to discharge the obligation, resulting in grave miscarriage of justice. State of M.P. v. Mishrilal, AIR 2003 SC 4089 : (2003) 9 SCC 426 : 2003 SCC (Cri) 1829 : 2003 CrLJ 2312 (SC).

1. CROSS-EXAMINATION OF WITNESSES

[11234] ● Cross-examination of witnesses.—When a witness has been examined-in-chief, the other party has a right to cross-examine him. The power of cross-examination has been justly said to be one of the principle, as it certainly is one of the most efficacious, tests, which the law has devised for the discovery of truth. By means of it the situation of the witness with respect to the parties, and to the subject of litigation, his interest, his motives, his inclination and prejudices, his means of obtaining a correct and certain knowledge of the facts to which he bears testimony, the manner in which he has used those means, his powers of discernment, memory and description, are all fully investigated and ascertained, and submitted to the consideration of the jury, before whom he has testified, and who have thus had an opportunity of observing his demeanour, and of determining the just weight and value of his testimony. It is not easy for a witness who is subjected to this test, to impose on a Court of jury; for, however, artful the fabrication of falsehood may be, it cannot embrace all the circumstances to which a cross-examination may be extended. Greenleaf Evidence, p, 446.

[11235] ● Witness—Cross examination of.— The fundamental feature is that a witness, on his direct examination, discloses but a part of the necessary facts. That which remains suppressed or undeveloped may be of two sorts : (a) the remaining and qualifying circumstances of the subject of testimony, as known to the witness, and (b) the facts which diminish and impeach the personal trust worthiness of the witness. (a) the remaining and qualifying circumstances of the subjects of testimony will probably remain suppressed or undisclosed, not merely because his testimony is commonly given only by way of answer to specific interrogatories, and the counsel producing him will usually ask for nothing but the facts favourable to his party. If nothing more were done to unveil all the facts known to his witness, his testimony (for all that we could surmise) might present half truths only. Someone must probe for the possible (and usual) remainder. The best person to do this is the one most vitally interested, namely, the opponent. Cross-examination, then, i.e. further examination by the opponent, has for its first utility the extraction of the remaining and qualifying circumstances, if any, known to the witness, but hitherto undisclosed by him. (b) The facts which diminish and impeach the personal trustworthiness or credit of the witness will also, in every likehood, have remained undisclosed on the direct examination. There it is the further function of the opponent's examination to extract. Some of them, no doubt, could be as well or sometimes the witness himself. Particularly those which concern his personal conduct and his sources of knowledge for the case in hand. To this extent, again, cross-examination is vital, i.e., it does what must be done and what nothing else can do. Wigmore, p. 1368.

[11236] ● Cross-examination of witness—Skillful interrogation.—If cross-examination is a powerful engine, it is likewise an extremely dangerous one, very apt to recoil even on those who know how to use it. If the transaction to which a witness speaks really occurred, so constant is the operation of the natural sanction of truth that he is almost sure to recollect every material circumstance by which it was accompanied; and the more his memory is probed on the subject, the more of the circumstances will come to light, thus corroborating instead of shaking his testimony.

In dealing with a witness who is to be compelled to speak the truth against his will, the greatest success consists in drawing out what he wishes to keep back. This can only be done by repeating the interrogation in greater detail. He will give answers which he thinks do not hurt his cause; and afterwards from many things which he will have confessed, he may be led into such a strait that what he will not say, he cannot deny. For as in an oration, we generally collect scattered proofs, which singly do not appear to press on the accused, yet, by being put together prove the charge, so a witness of this sort should be asked many things as to what went before—what came after—as to place, time, and persons, and other things, so that he must fall upon some answer after which he must necessarily either confess what is desired, or contradict his former statements. If this does not happen, it may become apparent that he will not speak, or he may be drawn out and detected in some falsehood foreign to the cause; or by being led on to say more than the matter requires in favour of the accused, the judge may be led to suspect him, which will damage his cause not less than if he had spoken the truth against the accused. It sometimes happens that the testimony given by a witness is inconsistent with itself. Sometimes (and that is the more frequent case) one witness contradicts another. A skilful interrogation may produce by art that which usually happens accidentally. Apart from the cause, witnesses are usually asked many questions which may be useful, as to the lives of other witnesses, as to their own character and position, any crimes they have committed, their friendship or enmity to the parties—in the answers to which, they may either make some useful admission, or be detected either in a falsehood or the desire of injuring the opposite party." Meer Sujad Ali v. Kashee Nath Dass, 6 WR Cr 181.

[11237] ● Examination of witness—In-chief.— One of the important branches of advocacy is the examination of a witness-in-chief. One fact should be remembered to start with, and it is this : the witness whom he has to examine has probably a plain straightforward story to tell, and that upon the telling it depends the belief or disbelief of the jury, and their consequent verdict. If it were to be told amid social circle of friends, it would be narrated with more or less circumlocution; and considerable exactness. But all the facts would come out; and that is the first thing to insure, if the case be, as I must all along assume it to be, an honest one, I have often known half a story told, and that the worst half, too, the rest having to be got out by the leader in re-examination if he has the opportunity. If the story were being told, as I have. suggested, in private, all the company would understand it, and, if the narrator were known as a man of truth, all would believe him. It would require no advocate to elicit the facts or to confuse the dates; the events would flow putting much in the natural order. Now change the audience, let the same man attempt to tell the same story in a Court of Justice. His first feeling is that he must not tell it in his own way. He is going to be examined upon it; he is to have it dragged out of him piecemeal, disjointedly, by a series of questions – in fact, he is to be interrupted at every point in a worse manner than if everybody in the room, one after another, had questioned him about. What he was going to tell, instead of waiting till he had told it. It is not unlike a post-mortem; only the witness is alive, and keenly sensitive to the painful operation........ Now the best thing the advocate can do under these circumstances is to remember that the witness has something to tell, and that but for him, the advocate, would probably tell it very well, in his own way. The fewer interruptions, therefore, the better; and the fewer interruptions, the less questions will be needed. Watching should be the chief work; specially to see that the story be not confused with extraneous and irrelevant matter." Harris on Hints on Advocacy, p. 29.

[11238] ● Delay in holding identification parade.—In the instant case, there was delay of three months in holding the identification parade. But there was no cross examination of the police officer or the Magistrate on the point of delay. Validity of test identification parade cannot be challenged. Bharat Singh v. State of H.P., AIR 1972 SC 2478 : (1973) 3 SCC 896 : 1972 CrLJ 1704 : 1973 CrLR (SC) 317.

[11239] ● Failure to cross-examine witness.—Failure to cross examine the witness to explain omission in previous statement to police does not amount to contradiction and therefore cannot be confronted to the witness. Laxman v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1974 SC 308 : (1974) 3 SCC 704 : 1974 CrLJ 369 : 1974 Mah LJ 229.

[11240] ● Cross-examination not only method of discrediting witness.—Cross-examination is not the only method of discrediting a witness. Court is not bound to accept the testimony of a witness which on the face of it is not acceptable merely because there was no cross-examination. Juwar Singh v. State of M.P., AIR 1981 SC 373 : 1980 Supp SCC 417 : 1980 CrLJ 1418 : 1980 CrLR (SC) 605 : 1980 Cr AppR (SC) 362.

[11241] ● Appreciation of evidence FIR mentioning names of seven out of thirteen.—In this case the prosecution beyond reasonable doubt established the prosecution case that the miscreants broke open the front door of the house of one G, inflicted injuries on the person of G's wife and G's brother's wife : out of fear the inmates of the house left the house which was set to fire by the miscreants. The only dent in the proof was that the names of seven out of thirteen miscreants were not mentioned in the FIR. The accused examined three defence witnesses who admitted of the house being gutted by fire but deposed to the effect that they did not see any of the accused persons there and none prevented anyone from trying to extinguish the fire. The DW's were not subjected to any cross-examination. Defence case as proved cannot be accepted; cross-examination is not the only method of discrediting a witness. If the oral testimony of certain witnesses is contrary to proved facts their evidence might be discarded on this ground. Jawar Singh v. State of M.P., AIR 1981 SC 373 (375) : 1980 Supp SCC 417 : 1980 CrLJ 1418 (1420) (SC) : 1980 CrLR (SC) 605 : 1980 Cr AppR (SC) 362.

[11242] ● Property when in custody of Head Constable not tampered with.—PW-15, the Muharrir Head Constable of Police Station, who was in charge of the property stated that the empty cartridges were deposited with him on January 11, 1973 and the pistol was deposited with him on January 16, 1973 and that when the property was in his custody nobody tampered with them. He was offered for cross-examination but no question was put in cross-examination.

There was, therefore, no basis for the High Court to suspect that the empty cartridges were those which must have been fired from the pistol after it was produced by Bakshish Singh. Gurnam Kaur v. Bakshish Singh, AIR 1981 SC 631 : 1980 Supp SCC 567 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 496 (501) : 1981 CrLJ 34 : 1980 CrLR (SC) 686.

[11243] ● Witness admitting in cross-examination that he had gone to hospital after deceased taken there.—True, that in cross-examination, the witness admitted that he had also gone to the Hospital on a cycle after Mahaderao (deceased) had been taken there; but he asserted that he did not see the Police Sub-Inspector there. Nothing was brought out further in cross-examination to show that he had met the police Sub-Inspector in the Hospital. The Police Sub-Inspector also was not asked as to whether he had met this witness in the Hospital. There was absolutely no reason to reject his sworn word on this point. The witness had, thus, no opportunity of making a statement to the Police in the Hospital, about the occurrence. The mere fact that he did not, of his own accord, go forthwith to the Police Station and tell them that he had also seen the occurrence, was no ground to brush aside his evidence. State of Maharashtra v. Krishnamurti Laxmipati Naidu, AIR 1981 SC 617 : 1980 Supp SCC 455 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 364 (370) : 1981 CrLJ 9 : 1981 CrLR (SC) 145.

[11244] ● Evidence of Prosecution witness that he received amounts not from accused but from other person not challenged in cross-examination.—The defence of this respondent in this case was that the three amounts alleged to have been misappropriated by him had been paid to PW 2, Executive officer of the Bank to be deposited with the Bank, but according to the evidence of PW 2 these amounts had been received by him not from the accused but from other person. The evidence of PW 2 was not challenged in cross-examination. No suggestion was made to him and there is no justification to reach the conclusion that these amounts were the very amounts which the accused was alleged to have misappropriated. State of Karnataka v. Marigowda, AIR 1982 SC 1171 : (1981) 4 SCC 429 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 849 (850) : 1982 CrLJ 1397 : 1982 CrLR (SC) 39.

[11245] ● Sample of milk found deficient in fat contents.—The Public Analyst found the sample of milk deficient in fat contents to the extent of the 0.5 per cent. The appellant submits that it was not possible to detect 0.5 percent deficiency of fat content in the milk. It was not put to the Food Inspector or the Public Analyst who would have been the proper person to answer the question. Amathabhai Arjanbhai v. C.D. Patel, AIR 1982 SC 782 : (1982) 3 SCC 234 : 1983 SCC (Cri) 17 (18) : 1982 CrLJ 628 (1) : 1983 CrLR (SC) 523.

[11246] ● Identification of ornaments and clothes belonging to deceased—Testimony of witness admissible.—The prosecution witnesses categorically stated that the seized ornaments belonged to the deceased. There is no reason why the testimony of these witnesses should not be relied upon particularly when PW-2 was not cross-examined at all as regards her identification of the seized ornaments and clothes as belonging to the deceased. Earabhadrappa v. State of Karnataka, AIR 1983 SC 446 : (1983) 1 SCC 330 : 1983 SCC (Cri) 447 (457) : 1983 CrLJ 846 : 1983 CrLR (SC) 268 : (1983) 2 SCR 552 : (1983) 1 Crimes 784.

[11247] ● Question put to witness in cross-examination misleading question.—In cross-examination, it was elicited from Syed Abbas that he did not tell the Police that Parubai came to the Durgah and told him that the accused had killed Janabai and her daughter, Shashikala in the field of Nana with an axe, the statement made by Syed Abbas to the Police is part of the record. Before us and we find that Syed Abbas had in fact told the Police that Parubai had come to the Durgah and told him that the accused had killed Janabai and her daughter Shashikala by assaulting them with an axe and that he had also chased her. It is clear that the question put to the witness, Syed Abbas in cross-examination was a misleading question and it is a pity that the learned Additional Sessions Judge was not more watchful and allowed such a misleading question to be put to the witness. Amruta v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1983 SC 629 : (1983) 3 SCC 50 : 1983 SCC (Cri) 570, 571 : 1983 CrLJ 1057 : 1983 CrLR (SC) 325 : 1983 UJ (SC) 570.

[11248] ● Prosecution witness examined for proving inquest Panchnama.—In this connection it is also necessary to refer to the evidence of PW 11 who was examined to prove the inquest Panchnama. In the cross-examination a suggestion was made to him that the respondent was keen to take his wife to Kerala and, therefore, he had got the pass issued and obtained reservation. He deposed that on February 27, 1973 at about 6-6.30 a.m. a quarrel had taken place between respondent and the ticket collector about the time when the application was presented. It is very surprising that this witness should have been asked these questions though obviously he was not a witness called by the prosecution to prove anything with regard to the reservation obtained by the respondent. State of U.P. v. M.K. Anthony, AIR 1985 SC 48 (58) : (1985) 1 SCC 505 : 1985 SCC (Cri) 105 : 1985 CrLJ 493 : 1985 CrLR (SC) 41.

[11249] ● Failure of prosecution to examine Inspector as witness.—Some comments was made during the course of trial about the failure of prosecution to examine Inspector Sharma, the prosecution offered him for cross-examination and kept Inspector Sharma ready in Court. The counsel for the accused stated that since witness had already been dropped by the prosecution, he did not want to examine him unless the Court directed him to do so. After the failure of the Counsel of the accused to take advantage of the offer made by the prosecution we do not think that it is open to comment upon the so called failure of the prosecution to examine Inspector Sharma a witness. Nor can we draw any adverse inference against the prosecution. State of Gujarat v. Raghunath Vamanrao Baxi, AIR 1985 SC 1092 (1095) : (1985) 3 SCC 45 : 1985 SCC (Cri) 304 : 1985 CrLJ 1357 : 1985 CrLR (SC) 260.

[11250] ● Testimony of prosecution witness totally inconsistent with medical evidence.—In his examination-in-chief PW-6 sought to support the prosecution case, but in cross-examination he stated in clear and unequivocal term that he did not see deceased receiving any injury at the hands of the accused. No reliance, therefore, can be placed on the evidence of PW-6. Amar Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1987 SC 826 : (1987) 1 SCC 679 : 1987 SCC (Cri) 232 (236) : 1987 CrLJ 706 : 1987 CrLR (SC) 225 : (1987) 1 UJ (SC) 671.

[11251] ● Identification of accused at night.—PW-4, Sube Singh, stated in his cross-examination that the accused-Dharam Vir was wearing a shirt of white colour. It was suggested to him on behalf of the accused that Dharam Vir was wearing a shirt of cream colour. In answer to that suggestion, PW-4 said "It is not correct that Dharam Vir-accused was wearing a shirt of cream colour and not a white colour at that time." The learned Sessions Judge has rightly observed that the above suggestion at least proves the presence of accused-Dharam Vir, on the spot at the time of occurrence. Rakesh Kumar alias Babli v. State of Haryana, AIR 1987 SC 690 : (1987) 2 SCC 34 : 1987 SCC (Cri) 256 (258) : 1987 CrLJ 535 : 1987 CrLR (SC) 184 : JT 1987 (1) SC 305 : (1987) 1 UJ (SC) 490 : (1987) 1 Crimes 386.

[11252] ● Witness stating in cross-examination that he identified accused.—"PW-3, Bhagat Singh, stated in his examination-in-chief that he had identified the accused at the time of occurrence. But curiously enough, he was not cross-examined as to how and in what manner he could identify the accused. No suggestion was also given to him that the place was dark and it was not possible to identify the assailants of the deceased". Rakesh Kumar Alias Babli v. State of Haryana, AIR 1987 SC 690 : (1987) 2 SCC 34 : 1987 SCC (Cri) 256 (258) : 1987 CrLJ 535 : 1987 CrLR (SC) 184 : JT 1987 (1) SC 305 : (1987) 1 UJ (SC) 490 : (1987) 1 Crimes 386.

[11253] ● Action of committee in asking witnesses to be cross-examined at beginning of enquiry discretionary.—If three persons to whom notice under S.8-B of the Commission of Inquiry Act, 1952 have been issued are to be examined even according to the Committee at the end of the inquiry there is no justifiable reason to deny the same treatment to the petitioners Ms. Kiran Bedi and Jinder Singh who are in the same position as those three persons. The action of the Committee in asking them to be cross-examined at the beginning of the inquiry appears to be discriminatory. Mere non-issue of notices to them under S. 8-B ought not to make any difference if they otherwise satisfy the conditions mentioned in S. 8-B. The issue of such a notice is not contemplated under S. 8-B of the Act. It is enough if at any stage the Commission considers it necessary to inquire into the conduct of any person. Such person would thereafter be governed by S.8-B of the Act. . . . If the Committee had found that the petitioners were covered under S. 8-B, then perhaps they would not have been asked to get into the witness-box for being cross-examined till the end of the inquiry. The committee would have then asked them to give evidence alongwith others who were similarly placed at the end of the inquiry. Taking into consideration all the aspects of the case we feel the Committee should not have in the circumstances of the case directed the filing of a complaint against either of the petitioners for an offence punishable under s. 178, IPC. Kiran Bedi v. Committee of Inquiry, AIR 1988 SC 2252 : (1988) 4 SCC 49 : 1988 SCC (Cri) 895 (899) : 1989 CrLJ 303 : 1988 CrLR (SC) 796 : JT 1988 (2) SC 372 : (1988) 2 UJ (SC) 731.

[11254] ● Witnesses filing affidavit first be examined-in-chief before cross-examined.—Even those witnesses who may have filed affidavits already may first be examined-in-chief before they are cross-examined, since it is stated that when the affidavits were filed the deponents did not know what the other parties who have also filed affidavits had stated in their affidavits. Kiran Bedi v. Committee of Inquiry, AIR 1988 SC 2252 : (1988) 4 SCC 49 : 1988 SCC (Cri) 895 : 1989 CrLJ 303 : 1988 CrLR (SC) 796 : JT 1988 (3) SC 372.

[11255] ● Packets containing cartridges received properly sealed.—According to the Ballistic Expert, PW-11, the packets when received by him were properly sealed and the seals were intact and tallied with the specimen of the seal sent to him. None of these witnesses were at all cross-examined. No suggestion even was made to anyone of them that the sealed packets had allegedly been tampered with while in their custody. No such suggestion was even made to SHO, PW-6, that he had either substituted the cartridges sent to the Ballistic Expert or otherwise tampered with the sealed packets. It is, therefore, futile to contend that the possibility of the substitution of the cartridges could not be ruled out. Mani Ram v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1993 SC 2453 : 1993 SCC (Cri) 853 (859) : 1993 CrLJ 2530 : JT 1993

(4) SC 520 : (1993) 1 Crimes 1144 : (1993) 2 UJ (SC) 9.

[11256] ● Witness in examination stating whole report in correct.—The witness in the examination itself stated that the whole of the report is not correct. In the cross-examination by the accused, it is clearly stated that PW-7 did not tell anything to the Police patel in the presence of PW-5 This is a serious infirmity regarding the present version that has been put forward. Jaising Wamar Patil v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1994 SC 1683 (1685).

[11257] ● Food-Inspector deposing in cross-examination that report of analyst sent to accused by registered post.—When the Food Inspector was examined, he deposed in his chief-examination that the report of the Analyst was sent to the accused by registered post. He was not cross-examined. The only inference that can be drawn is that the accused received the report. In such a case the question whether it was sent by registered post or otherwise, does not assume importance. Khem Chand v. State of Himachal Pradesh, AIR 1994 SC 226 (227) : (1994) Supp (1) SCC 7 : 1994 SCC (Cri) 212 : 1994 CrLJ 253.

[11258] ● Tendering witness for cross-examination without he being examined-in-chief.—To permit the prosecution to tender a witness for cross-examination only would be wrong and the effect of their being tendered only for cross-examination amounts to the failure of the prosecution to examine them at the trial. Tej Prakash v. State of Haryana, 1996 SCC (Cri) 412 : (1996) 7 SCC 322 : 1996 CrLJ 394 : 1995 (4) CCR 132.

[11259] ● Absence of cross-examination.—In the present case part of the statement of PW-1 was not cross-examined by the accused. In the absence of cross-examination on the explanation of delay, the evidence of PW-1 remained unchallenged and ought to have been believed by the High Court. S. 138 of the Evidence Act confers a valuable right of cross-examining the witness tendered in evidence by the opposite party. The scope of that provision is enlarged by S. 146 of the Evidence Act by allowing a witness to be questioned:

(1) to test his veracity;

(2) to discover who is and what is his position in life; or

(3) to shake his credit, by injuring his character, although the answer to such questions might tend directly or indirectly to criminate him or might expose or tend directly or indirectly to expose him to a penalty or forfeiture.

The of quoted observation of LORD HERSCHELL, L.C. in Browne v. Dunn, (1893) 6 The Reports 67, clearly elucidates the principle underlying those provisions. It reads thus:

> "I cannot help saying, that it seems to me to be absolutely essential to the proper conduct of a cause, where it is intended to suggest that a witness is not speaking the truth on a particular point, to direct his attention to the fact by some questions put in cross-examination showing that that imputation is intended to be made, and not to take his evidence and pass it by as a matter altogether unchallenged, and then, when it is impossible for him to explain, and perhaps he might have been able to do if such questions had been put to him, the circumstances which, it is suggested, indicate that the story he tells ought not to be believed, to argue that he is a witness unworthy of credit. My Lords, I have always understood that if you intend to impeach a witness, you are bound, whilst he is in the box, to give any opportunity of making any explanation which is open to him; and as it seems to me, that is not only a rule of professional practice in the conduct of a case, but it is essential to fair play and fair dealing with witnesses."

This aspect was unfortunately missed by the High Court when it came to the conclusion that explanation for the delay is not at all convincing. State of Uttar Pradesh v. Nahar Singh, AIR 1998 SC 1328 (1331) : (1998) 3 SCC 561 : 1998 SCC (Cri) 850 : 1998 CrLJ 2006 : 1998 CrLR (SC) 224 : JT 1998 (2) SC 41.

[11260] ● No cross-examination regarding workability of firearm.—"We have gone through the evidence of both these witnesses. Nothing was brought out in the cross-examination to create any doubt regarding the identity of the weapon. There was no cross-examination regarding working condition of the pistol. Considering the fact that the two Police Officers were competent enough to depose about the condition of the weapon and the circumstances that the pistol was loaded with cartridges, it can be said with reasonable certainty that it was in working condition. Harnek Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1999 SC 316 : (1999) 1 SCC 132 : 1999 SCC (Cri) 25 : 1999 CrLJ 452 : 1999 CrLR (SC) 14.

[11261] ● Contraband seized if was "Charas".—The Analyst who tested the contraband in the laboratory, to a question in cross-examination has said that he could not answer whether the contra band contained cowdung also. In the certificate which he issued after analysis, as well as in the examination-in-chief, the witness has stated in definite terms that the contraband was "charas". Hence, the aforesaid isolated answer is hardly sufficient to destroy the probative value of the evidence of that witness. Joseph Fernandez v. State of Goa, AIR 2000 SC 3502 : (2000) 1 SCC 707 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 300 : 2000 CrLJ 3485.

[11262] ● Deceased son—Non-cross-examination of.—Hardip Singh was not cross-examined if he was not telling the truth that his deceased father had an account in the Bank in Jagatpur. He was not questioned if he was not going on the cycle with has father (deceased) sitting on the carrier. He was asked a question about the passbook of the Bank and his reply was that the passbook was in the bag which was slung on the handle of the cycle and that he did not produce the passbook before the Police. No. question was asked from the Investigation Officer, as to why he did not take into possession the cycle or the passbook. In fact, there has been no cross-examination by the appellant of the statement of Investigating Officer. Narinder Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 2000 SC 2212 : (2000) 4 SCC 603 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 855 : 2000 CrLJ 3462 : 2000 CrLR (SC) 581.

[11263] ● Search and seizure—Non-availability of independent witness—Effect.—The opium was not found from the person of the appellant but from the bedding which he was carrying. The evidence of the Investigating Officer and other witnesses discloses that he had requested many independent witnesses to witness the search but they all refused and, therefore, he had to search the accused in the absence of any independent witness. Though they were cross-examined on this point, the evidence has remained unshaken and worthy of acceptance. In that view of the matter, the evidence regarding the search could not have been discarded. Jal Singh v. State of Haryana, (2000) 2 SCC 119 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 337 (338).

[11264] ● Contradiction if elicited in course of cross-examination—Duty of Court.—If any contradiction is elicited in the course of the cross-examination, it cannot be stated that it is the duty of the Court to get the same clarified. Of course the proviso of the Court in this regard are wide but there is a duty cast on the prosecution also to elicit appropriate answers on any aspect of the matter. Jagdish v. State of M.P., AIR 2000 SC 2059 : (2000) 9 SCC 155 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 1188 (1192) : 2000 CrLJ 2955.

[11265] ● Non-completion of cross-examination of witness due to passing away defers—Counsel midway of trial.—"Normally at this late stage, we would be disinclined to open up a closed trial once again. But we are persuaded to consider it in this case on account of the unfortunate development that took place during the trial of passing away of the defence counsel midway of the trial. The Counsel who was engaged for defending the appellant had cross-examined the witnesses but he could not complete the trial because of his death. When the new Counsel took up the matter, he would certainly be under the disadvantage that he could not ascertain from the erstwhile Counsel as to the scheme of the defence strategy which the pre-deceased Advocate had in mind or as to why he had not put further questions on certain aspects. In such circumstances, if the new Counsel thought to have the material witnesses further examined, the Court could adopt latitude and a liberal view in the interest of justice, particularly when the Court has unbridled powers in the matter as enshrined in S. 311 of the CrPC. After all the trial is basically for the prisoners and Courts would afford the opportunity to them in the fairest manner possible. We think that the plea of the defence that a further opportunity to put more question to the three prosecution witnesses can be permitted on account of the unfortunate death of the defence Counsel pendente lite, and a new Counsel has to evolve his defence strategy afresh." Hoffman Andreas v. Inspector of Customs, Amritsar, (2000) 10 SCC 430.

[11266] ● Recalling of witnesses already examined.—As the prosecution evidence was closed the trial Judge proceeded to question the accused under Section 313 of the CrPC. On completion thereof, the trial Court posted the case for defence evidence. As the appellant did not produce any defence evidence nor presented any list of defence witnesses, the case again to a future date. On that day also the appellant did not produce any defence witness nor any list of defence witnesses to be examined. It was hence posted on the next day for the same purpose. As nothing happened on that day, the Court closed the evidence for defence. In the meanwhile appellant filed an application for recalling some of the witnesses already examined for the prosecution under S. 311 of the CrPC. The Trial Court did not find the necessity for recalling such witnesses for a just decision of the case. The order dismissing the application for recalling prosecution witnesses as well as the order closing the defence evidence had been challenged by the appellant before the High Court of Madras under S. 482 of the CrPC. True, the appellant was given opportunities to present the defence evidence or to produce the list of defence witnesses and the appellant has not availed herself of those opportunities. Yet as a Court of justice we are of the view that one more opportunity can be granted to the appellant for examining the defence witnesses if she proposes to do so. . . The trial Court should afford an opportunity to the appellant to examine those witnesses. As the 1st among the witnesses shown in the list is the appellant herself, permission need by granted only if a separate application in that behalf is filed under S. 315 of the Code because it has to be done at the risk of the appellant herself. Selvi J. Jayalalitha v. State by Deputy Supdt. of Police/Chennai, (2000) 9 SCC 754 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 1480 (1480, 1481).

[11267] ● Extra-judicial confession cross-examination of appellant.—In his examination-in-chief the witness after vividly explaining the manner in which the extra-judicial confession was made, stated that after walking on foot for about 4 kilometers he, in the company of others, reached Police Station Karanpur at about 12.00 noon and lodged the report but the Police Station did not register a case on the pretext that it was a family matter and that the report would be registered only after making an enquiry in the village. Finding such a statement to be resiling from the earlier testimony, the Public Prosecutor sought the permission of the Court to declare the witness hostile and "cross-examine him on the ground that he had not stated that Ex P-2 was not registered at once". The Trial Court obliged the Public Prosecutor by permitting him to cross-examine to that extent. The cross-examination by the Public Prosecutor is restricted to the lodging of the first information report and not with respect to the factum of his deposition in so far as it relates to the making of extra-judicial confession by the appellant. The defence also appears to be conscious of the fact that the Public Prosecutor had sought the permission to cross-examine the witness to a limited extent. The witness was subjected to lengthy and detailed cross-examination with respect to the making of extra-judicial confession by the appellant. The trial as well as the High Court rightly relied upon his testimony to hold that the appellant had voluntarily made the extra-judicial confession to the aforesaid witness. Gura Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 2001 SC 330 : (2001) 2 SCC 205 : 2001 SCC (Cri) 323 (330-331) : 2001 CrLJ 487 : 2001 CrLR (SC) 22.

[11268] ● Cross-examination of witness not completed—Court did not cross-examine him for one or other reason—Effect.—Jiyawoo was examined as PW-1, but his cross-examination was not completed on the same day. Hence, the Trial Court adjourned the case to some other day and then to some other day and like that to so many days. PW-1, Jiyawoo, had appeared in Court on 9th and 15th of November, 1994, 8th December, 1994, and then on 12th January, 7th February, 24th June, 25th August and 25th September of 1995, In spite of the fact that the witness turned upon on those days, he was not cross-examined due to one reason or the other for which the witness is not at fault.

The provision of Section 309, CrPC has not been complied with so in this case a miscarriage of justice has occasioned due to the failure of the Trial Court to comply with the mandatory directions contained in the Code. Criminal justice cannot be allowed to be defeated solely on account of inaction of lapses of the Court in adhering to the mandates of law.

The Supreme Court setting aside the order of acquittal directed the trial Court to proceed with the further examination of PW-1 and examination of other witnesses to whom the Court should issue process, if so requested by the prosecution. State of Uttar Pradesh v. Shambhu Nath Singh, AIR 2001 SC 1403 : (2001) 4 SCC 667 : 2001 SCC (Cri) 798 : 2001 CrLJ 1740.

[11269] ● Cross-examination of witness who had come down from New York unnecessary harassment to witness by unreasonable demand.—As per the version of the appellant, he had to come down from New York for being cross-examined on that day, but the second respondent advocate sought for an adjournment on the ground that it was not possible to conduct the cross-examination unless all the other witnesses for the prosecution were also present in Court. We have no doubt that such a demand was not made with good faith. It was aimed at causing unnecessary harassment to witnesses. M.G. Dastane v. Shrikant S. Shinde, AIR 2001 SC 2028 : (2001) 6 SCC 135.

[11270] ● Evidence of witness—No question put to him in cross-examination—Value of evidence.—The evidence of PW-1, Dr. Basant Lal, was not even controverted by the defence as no question was put to him in cross-examination by the defence Counsel. His testimony ought to have been given due probative value particularly when nothing was shown to doubt the evidence of that medical practitioner. Defence Counsel was not able to pick out even a single answer from his evidence which could at least throw a modicum of doubt about the correctness of his evidence. State Government of NCT of Delhi v. Sunil, 2001 CrLJ 504 : (2001) 1 SCC 652 : (2001) 1 Crimes 176.

[11271] ● Expunging adverse remarks.—Both the Trial Court and the High Court should have avoided making such unsavoury comments against a witness in such a manner as to entail serious implications on his career, merely because the answers which were extracted from him through cross questions contained contradictions or inconsistencies. It should have been remembered that PW-30 (Devendra Kumar Sharma) was cited by the prosecution and the chief examination was conducted by a Public Prosecutor. Once the witness was cross-examined, the Public Prosecutor had an opportunity under law to put such questions as were necessary for "explanation of matters referred to in cross-examination". It is ununderstandable to us why the Public Prosecutor did not put a single question at re-examination stage, at least for the purpose of giving him opportunity to explain such incongruities which fell from his mouth during cross-examination. If the Trial Court felt that some of the answers given by that witness during cross-examination were so inconsistent or contradictory and that such answers per se required judicial castigation the Court also had a duty to invoke its powers envisaged in S.165 of the Evidence Act. The width of the powers of the Court to put questions is almost plenary and no party can possibly raise an objection thereto. This can be discerned from the language employed in the first limb of the section. In the present case, when the Public Prosecutor failed to utilize the opportunity afforded by law to ask PW-30 (Devendra Kumar Sharma) such questions as are necessary for explanation of the matters referred to in cross-examination, and when the Trial Judge also failed to invoke the plenary powers to put such questions as he should have put regarding the answers given in cross-examination, it was unfair, and we may say uncharitable to a witness to shower him with judicial reprobations in the judgment. Such disparaging remarks and the direction to initiate departmental action against him could have very serious impact on his official career. Manish Dixit v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 2001 SC 93 : (2001) 1 SCC 596 : 2001 SCC (Cri) 235 (246) : 2001 CrLJ 133.

[11272] ● Court witnesses required to state about certain documents.—If the Court has permitted the accused to lead the evidence, the mere denial of cross-examining the man by the accused cannot per se be a vulnerable factor. In the present case, the three Police officials were not required to speak about the case at hand in general. They were in fact required to state about certain documents in terms of Section 174 of the Code. It is of course true that when the permission had been granted to cross-examine, the accused could have produced some materials to support his case. Shakila Abdul Gafar Khan v. Vasant Raghunath Dhoble, AIR 2003 SC 4567 : (2003) 7 SCC 749 : 2003 SCC (Cri) 1918 (1932-33) : 2003 CrLJ 4548 : (2003) 4 Crimes 106.

[11273] ● Cross-examination—Questions which cannot be put to witness therein.—Surprisingly, to PW-3 a suggestion was made by the cross-examining counsel that the appellant was in love with her daughter-in-law and that is why he used to go to her house. This was of course stoutly denied by PW-3. This fact has been noticed by the learned Magistrate but counsel for the respondent in the course of his argument before the Magistrate did not pursue this line any further and stated that the respondent had no grievance about the character of the appellant. This Court is surprised that the counsel for the respondent put such a question to the witness when such was not the complaint in the application under Section 125, CrPC nor had the respondent as PW-1 or her mother as PW-2 stated anything to the effect that the appellant had an affair with any other lady. Without there being any basis in the pleadings, or even in the evidence examined by the applicant, the learned Magistrate should not have permitted such a question to be put to the witness, particularly when it reflected not only on the character of the appellant but also on another lady who was not a party to the proceedings. The learned Magistrate was remiss in permitting such a question to be put to the witness and in recording the answer given by the witness. He should not have permitted such matters to go on record. Deb Narayan Halder v. Anushree Halder, AIR 2003 SC 3174 : (2003) 11 SCC 303 : 2004 SCC (Cri) 164 (173) : 2003 CrLJ 4470.

[11274] ● Statement recorded under Section 3(3), CrPC not evidence.—The statement recorded under Section 313, CrPC is not evidence. It is only the accused's stand or version by way of explanation, when incriminating materials appearing against him are brought to his notice. Absence of any suggestion during cross-examination cannot be made up by a statement under Section 313, CrPC. At that stage, the prosecution does not get an opportunity to question the accused about his stand in the statement under Section 313, CrPC. Devender Kumar Singla v. Baldev Krishan Singla, 2004 CrLJ 1774 : JT 2004 (2) SC 539 : (2004) 2 Crimes 100.

[11275] ● Section 145, Evidence Act—Applicability.—Section 145 of the Indian Evidence Act applies when the same person makes two contradictory statements. It is not permissible in law to draw adverse inference because of alleged contradictions between one prosecution witness vis-a-vis statement of other witnesses. It is not open to the Court to completely demolish the evidence of one witness by referring to the evidence of other witnesses. Witness can only be contradicted of Section 145 of the Evidence Act by his own previous statement and not with the statement of any other witness. Section 145 applies only to cases where the same person makes two contradictory statements either in different proceedings or in two different stages of a proceeding. If the maker of a statement is sought to be contradicted, his attention should be drawn to his previous statement under Section 145 of the Evidence Act only. Section 145 has no application where a witness is sought to be contradicted not by his own statement but by the statement of another witness. Chaudhari Ramjibhai Narasingbhai v. State of Gujarat, AIR 2004 SC 313 : (2004) 1 SCC 184 : 2004 CrLJ 280.

[11276] ● Application for recalling victim for further cross-examination rejected.—In the instant case under Section 376 IPC, after the evidence of the parties had been recorded and the case was posted for arguments, an application purported to be under Section 311 of the Code was filed for recalling of the victim for further cross-examination on the ground that the parties have settled the dispute outside the Court at the intervention of the well wishers and also the informant could not identify the persons who allegedly committed the offence due to darkness. The trial Court rejected the application. The trial Court was of the view that in view of the circumstances indicated it would not be proper to allow the application of the accused for recalling the victim. The order of rejection was confirmed by the High Court and the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court held that since Section 376 IPC is not compoundable in terms of Section 320 of the Code, the trial "Court and the High Court rightly rejected the prayer." Rama Paswan v. State of Jharkhand, (2007) 11 SCC 191 : 2007 CrLJ 2750 (2752) : 2007 (5) SCR 83.

[11277] ● Witness called by Court for giving evidence against complainant—opportunity to cross-examine.—If a witness is called by the Court to give evidence against the complainant, he should be allowed an opportunity to cross-examine. The right to cross-examine a witness who is called by a Court arises not under the provision of Section 311, CrPC, but under the Evidence Act, which gives a party a right to cross-examine a witness who is not his own witness. Rama Paswan v. State of Jharkhand, (2007) 11 SCC 191 : 2007 CrLJ 2750 (2752) : 2007 (5) SCR 191.

[11278] ● Questions put in cross-examination—Relevancy.—The questions put in the cross-examination to a great extent probabilise the prosecution version. Though questions put in cross-examination are not always determinative in finding an accused guilty, they are certainly relevant. Jesar Asir Singh v. State, AIR 2007 SC 3015 : (2007) 12 SCC 19 : 2007 CrLJ 4310 (4313) : 2007 (3) Crimes 333.

[11279] ● Testimony of eye-witness not challenged in cross-examination.—"PW-1, the informant was not an eye-witness. He was informed about the occurrence by PW-2. PW-2 in his evidence has categorically stated that when they were going together, he walked ahead of the deceased and was talking with one Giyasuddin who had been coming from opposite direction. When he looked behind he found that the appellant had stabbed the deceased with a knife on his chest and he had been fleeing away. PW-3 in his deposition substantially corroborated the statement of PW-2 stating that while he was talking to Samir Seikh Alimat (the deceased) was standing about 60 cubits, away from him near the house of Surat Dewan, the incident occurred and he saw the appellant stabbing the deceased, whereafter the appellant fled away.

We may furthermore notice that the veracity of the testimony of PW-2 had not been questioned in the cross-examination. There has hardly been any cross-examination of the said witnesses. Except making some stray suggestions that the appellant did not stab the deceased, no other question in regard to the veracity of his statement had been put. Nothing has elicited by the defence from the cross-examination of PW-2.

When the testimonies of two eye-witnesses had been believed by the learned Trial Judge as also by the High Court and in view of the fact that we did not see any reason to differ with the findings of the two Courts, in our opinion, the fact whether the bloodstains collected from the place of occurrence by the Investigating Officer had been sent to the Forensic Expert for chemical examination or not, pales into insignificance. We are furthermore of the opinion that whether the knife was recovered or not is also not of much importance.

Our attention was drawn to the statement of Dr. Chakrabarty (PW-9) to the fact that according to the said witness, the injury suffered by the deceased could be caused if anybody falls on iron railing. Such a statement made by PW-9 does not lead us anywhere. It was not the case of the defence that there was any iron railing or the deceased had fallen on any iron railing. Even such a question was not put to PW-2 and PW-3 in the cross examination.

For the aforementioned reasons, we are of the opinion that there is no merit in this appeal. It is dismissed accordingly." Tamo v. State of West Bengal, AIR 2008 SC 12 : (2007) 10 SCC 493 : 2007 CrLJ 4724 (4725) : 2007 (9) SCR 917.

2. OBJECT OF CROSS-EXAMINATION

[11280] ● Object of cross-examination.—By means of cross-examination the situation of the witness with respect to the parties and to the subject of the litigation, his interests, his motives, his inclination, his prejudices, his character, his means of obtaining a correct and certain knowledge of the facts to which he bears testimony, the manner in which he has used those means, his powers of discernment, memory and description, are all fully investigated and ascertained and submitted to the consideration of the jury, who have an opportunity of observing his demeanour and of determining the just value of his testimony.—Taylor.

[11281] ● The objects of cross-examination are to impeach the accuracy, credibility and general value of the evidence given in-chief; to sift the facts already stated by the witness, to detect and expose discrepancies, or to elicit suppressed facts which will support the case of the cross-examinating party. Powell Evidence, 532.

[11282] ● Cross-examining the witness—Tantamount to.—The fallacy underlying this view stems from the assumption that the only purpose of cross-examination of a witness is to discredit him; it ignores the hard truth that another equally important object of cross-examination is to elicit admissions of facts which would help build the case of the cross-examiner. When a party with the leave of the Court, confronts his witness with his previous inconsistent statement, he does so in the hope that the witness might revert to what he had stated previously. If the departure from the prior statement is not deliberate but is due to faulty memory or a like cause, there is every possibility of the witness veering round to his former statement. Thus, showing faultiness of the memory in the case of such a witness would be another object of cross- examining and contradicting him by a party calling the witness. In short, the rule prohibiting a party to put questions in the manner of cross-examination or in a leading form to his own witness is relaxed not because the witness has already forfeited all right to credit but because from his antipathetic attitude or otherwise, the Court feels that for doing justice, his evidence will be more fully given, the truth more effectively extricated and his credit more adequately tested by questions put in a more pointed, penetrating and searching way. The matter can be viewed yet from another angle. Section 154 speaks of permitting a party to put to his own witness "questions which might be put in cross-examination". It is not necessarily tantamount to "cross-examining" the witness. Cross-examination', strictly speaking means cross-examination by the adverse party as distinct from the party calling the witness. (Section 137, Evidence Act). That is why Section 154 uses the phrase "put any questions to him which might be put in cross-examination by the adverse party". Therefore, neither the party calling him, nor the adverse party is, in law, precluded from relying on any part of the statement of such a witness. Sat Paul v. Delhi Administration, AIR 1976 SC 294 : (1976) 1 SCC 727 : 1976 SCC (Cri) 160 : 1976 CrLJ 295 : 1975 CrLR (SC) 597.

3. RIGHT OF ACCUSED TO CROSS-EXAMINE

[11283] ● Right of accused to cross-examine.—There can be no doubt that each accused is entitled in law to test the evidence given against him by a prosecution witness by cross-examination. Section 137 does not say that such cross-examination has to be limited only to what has been stated by the prosecution witness in examination-in-chief. Indeed Section 138 mentions categorically that "the cross-examination need not be confined to the facts to which the witness testified on his examination-in-chief" nor is there anything to justify the conclusion that once the right of cross-examination has been exercised after charge it cannot be exercised again. While it is true that Section 137 and Section138 do not in words speak of a further rounds of cross-examination there is neither in these sections nor anywhere else in the Evidence Act anything to bar the accused from exercising his right of cross-examination afresh if and when the prosecution witness makes a further statement of facts prejudicial to him. C.T. Muniappan v. State of Madras, AIR 1961 SC 175 : 1961 (1) CrLJ 315 : 1962 All WR (SC) 31.

[11284] ● Accused right to call Public Analyst to be examined and cross-examined.—It is true that sub-section (2) of Section 13 of the Act has given a right both to the accused as well as the complainant on payment of the prescribed fee to apply to the Court after the prosecution has been instituted to send part of the sample preserved as required under sub-clause (i) or sub-clause (iii) of Clause (c) of sub-section (1) of Section 11 to the Director of the Central Laboratory for a certificate and the Court is bound to send it under its seal to the said director who has to submit a report within one month from the date of the receipt. This certificate under sub-section (3) supersedes the Public Analyst's certificate and is conclusive and final under sub-section (5). But nothing contained in these sub-sections relating to certificate of the Director of the Central Food Laboratory in any way limits the right of the accused under Section 257 of the Code of Criminal Procedure to require the Public Analyst to be produced. The Court may, reject the prayer for good and sufficient reasons such as for instance where it is made for the purpose of vexation or delay or for defeating the ends of justice. Ram Dayal v. Municipal Corporation of Delhi, AIR 1970 SC 366 : (1969) 3 SCC 35 : 1970 CrLJ 515 : 1970 (2) SCR 682.

[11285] ● When person accused alongwith others voluntarily steps in witness box.—When a person accused along with others voluntarily steps in the witness, box as a witness in defence, he is in the same position as an ordinary witness and is, therefore subject to cross-examination by the prosecution counsel and evidence brought out in such cross-examination can be used against his co-accused. If such a witness incriminates his co-accused, the other accused jointly tried with him, has the right to cross- examine him if he wants so to do. This has been the position in England after 1898 when accused persons were made competent witnesses. The same consequences must also flow after accused person have been made competent witnesses for the defence under Section 342-A of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Tribhuvan Nath v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1973 SC 450 : (1972) 3 SCC 511 : 1972 SCC (Cri) 604 (616) : 1972 CrLJ 1277 : 1972 UJ (SC) 826.

[11286] ● Deposition before committing Court—Admissibility of at Session Trial.—The true reading of Section 33 of the Evidence Act is that the adverse party must have had both the right and the opportunity of cross-examining. Mere opportunity without the right of cross-examination cannot bring the case within the term of Section 33. But Sections 207 and 207-A, CrPC Show that the accused has the right to cross-examine the witness examined by the prosecution in the Committing Court. In the present case the appellant declined to cross-examine the witness in the Committing Court and stated that he would reserve the cross-examination of the witness for Sessions Court. There is no substance in the appellants contention that it was the Committing Magistrate who had reserved the cross-examination of the witness for the Court of Sessions and that thereby the appellant was deprived of an opportunity to cross-examine the witness. Mulkha Raj Sikka v. Delhi Administration, AIR 1974 SC 1723 : (1975) 3 SCC 2 : 1974 SCC (Cri) 698 (703) : 1974 CrLJ 1171 : 1974 CrLR (SC) 512.

[11287] ● Witness neither examined by Police nor cited in charge-sheet.—In a grave charge it will not be proper to place reliance on a witness who never figured during the investigation and was not named in the charge-sheet. The accused who are entitled to know his earlier version to the Police are naturally deprived of an opportunity of effective cross-examination and it will be difficult to give any credence to a statement which was given for the first time in Court after about a year of the occurrence. The High Court was wrong in accepting the evidence of this witness as leading assurance to the testimony of other witnesses. Ram Lakhan Singh v. State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1977 SC 1936 : (1977) 3 SCC 268 : 1977 SCC (Cri) 474 (485) : 1977 CrLJ 1566 : 1977 CrLR (SC) 294 : (1978) 1 SCR 125.

[11288] ● Witnesses on behalf of detaining authority cannot be cross-examined by detenu.—The witnesses on behalf of the detaining authority cannot be cross-examined by the detenue. It is not stated in any judgment of this Court that the witnesses on behalf of the detenue produced in rebuttal of the allegation against him cannot be cross-examined. Cross-examination of such witnesses has to be by the detaining authority and that right cannot be denied to them. Harbans Lal v. M.L. Madhwan, AIR 1987 SC 217 : (1987) 1 SCC 151 : 1987 SCC (Cri) 47 (54) : 1987 CrLJ 324 : 1987 CrLR (SC) 23 : 1987 (1) Crimes 89.

[11289] ● Opponent declining to avail himself of opportunity to put his case in cross-examination.—It is a rule of essential justice that wherever the opponent has declined to avail himself of the opportunity to put his case in cross-examination, it must follow that the evidence tendered on that issue ought to be accepted. Sarwan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 2002 SC 3652 : (2003) 1 SCC 240 : 2003 SCC (Cri) 282 : 2003 CrLJ 21 : 2002 (4) Crimes 414.

4. CROSS-EXAMINATION AS TO PREVIOUS STATEMENT

[11291] ● Cross-examination as to previous statement.—Any statement made in the Panchanama cannot be used in evidence except for the purposes of contradicting the witness whose statement is contained in Panchnama but if it is intended to contradict him by the writing, his attention must before the writing can be proved, be called to those parts of it which are to be used for contradicting him. This is what is required under Section 145 of the Evidence Act but even where a witness is confronted by his previous statement and given an opportunity to explain, that part of the statement that is put to him does not constitute substantive evidence. Kanu Ambu Vish v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1971 SC 2256 : (1971) 1 SCC 503 : 1971 CrLJ 1547.

[11292] ● Statement made by witness to Police—Court not allowing cross-examination.—When a witness is not allowed to be cross-examined with reference to his earlier statement to Police he remains untested in cross-examination and he cannot be taken as corroborating the evidence of other. Badri v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1976 SC 560 : (1976) 1 SCC 442 : 1976 CrLJ 496.

[11293] ● Statement of witness under Section 161, CrPC contradictions or omissions in.—One curious practice not known to law adopted by him was that whenever a witness was asked about an omission with reference to the statement of the witness recorded by the investigating officer under Section 161, CrPC, the learned Public Prosecutor would make a statement whether the statement referred to in evidence was to be found or was not to be found in the statement under Section 161, CrPC and no attempt was made to prove the omission. Such concession for proof of contradiction or omission lacks support of law and is likely to be unfair to the witness in that when the investigating officer is questioned with regard to the contradiction or omission, a further opportunity will be available to him to explain the contradiction or omission. Muthu Naicker v. State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 1978 SC 1647 : (1978) 4 SCC 385 : 1978 SCC (Cri) 14 : 1978 CrLJ 1713.

[11294] ● Statements by witnesses made during investigation cannot be used as substantive evidence.—Section 162 of the Code of Criminal Procedure imposes a bar on the use of any statement made by any person to a Police Officer in the course of investigation at any enquiry or trial in respect of any offence under investigation at the time when such statement was made, except for the purpose of contradicting the witness in the manner provided by Section 145 of the Indian Evidence Act. Where any part of such statement is so used any part thereof may also be used in the re-examination of the witness for the limited purpose of explaining any matter referred to in his cross-examination. The only other exception to this embargo on the use of statements made in the course of an investigation relates to the statements falling within the provisions of Section 32(1) of the Indian Evidence Act or permitted to be proved under Section 27 of the Indian Evidence Act. Section 145 of the Evidence At provides that a witness may be cross-examined as to previous statements made by him in writing and reduced into writing and relevant to matters in question, without such writing being shown to him or being proved but, that if it is intended to contradict him by the writing, his attention must, before the writing can be proved, be called to those parts of it which are to be used for the purpose of contradicting him. The Court below were clearly wrong in using as substantive evidence statements made by witnesses in the Court of investigation. Hazari Lal v. State (Delhi Admn.), AIR 1980 SC 873 : (1980) 2 SCC 390 : 1980 SCC (Cri) 452 : 1980 CrLJ 564 : 1980 CrLR (SC) 242 : 1980 Mad LJ (Cri) 756.

[11295] ● Two contradictory statement made by one person.—It is obvious from a perusal of Section 145 that it applies only to cases where the same person makes two contradictory statements either in different proceedings or in two different stages of a proceeding. If the maker of a statement is sought to be contradicted, his attention should be drawn to his previous statement under Section 145. In other words, where the statement made by a person or witness is contradicted not by his own statement but by the statement of another prosecution witness, the question of the application of Section 145 does not arise. To illustrate, we might give an instance—suppose A, a prosecution witness, makes a particular statement regarding the part played by an accused but another witness B makes a statement which is inconsistent with the statement made by A, in such a case Section 145 of the Evidence Act is not at all attracted. Indeed, if the interpretation placed by the High Court is accepted, then it will be extremely difficult for an accused or a party to rely on the inter se contradiction of various witnesses and every time when the contradiction is made, the previous witness would have to be recalled for the purpose of contradiction. This was neither the purport nor the object of Section 145 of the Evidence Act. Mohanlal Gangaram Gehani v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1982 SC 839 : 1980 Supp SCC 467 : 1982 SCC (Cri) 334 : 1982 CrLJ 630 (2) : 1982 CrLR (SC) 77.

[11296] ● Copies of statements made before Police not supplied to defence.—Even the statements made before the Police were recorded four months after the occurrence. Copies of these statements were not made available to the defence on the spacious plea that the prosecution did not seek to rely on these statements. The Trial Court was wholly wrong in taking the view that it was not necessary to make available these statements to the defence for the purposes of cross-examination inasmuch as the prosecution did not wish to rely on these statements. The defence cannot be deprived of or denied the right to avail of these statements in order to test the evidence of the concerned witness or confront him with his earlier version in case the evidence in Court is inconsistent with the earlier statements made before the Police. Evidently the High Court did not realise that the defence had been wrongly deprived of a very valuable right. Even though a grievance was made in this behalf. The High Court might have directed the prosecution to make available the copies to the defence. Failing compliance the High Court could have drawn an adverse inference. In case the copies were furnished, the High Court upon a request being made in this behalf could have directed the learned Sessions Judge to record additional evidence by recalling PW-5 for cross-examination in the light of the said statements if the High Court was satisfied that the ends of justice so demanded. Lalchand v. State of Haryana, AIR 1984 SC 226 : (1984) 1 SCC 686 : 1984 SCC (Cri) 355 (358) : 1984 CrLJ 164 : (1984) 1 Crimes 337.

[11297] ● Statement of accused—Recording of under Section 161, CrPC.—Section 162, CrPC, 1973 permits the cross-examination of the witness in any trial, with reference to his previous statement, to establish a contradiction and the manner in which such contradiction can be established. Section 155 of the Evidence Act provides that the previous statement of a witness can be made use of during the cross-examination of that witness for the purpose of impeaching the credit of the witness. Thus, it is seen it is the right of a party in a trial to use the previous statements of a witness either for the purpose of establishing a contradiction in his evidence or for the purpose of impeaching the credit of the witness. This right given to a party in a trial under Section 145 of the Evidence Act is some what controlled in criminal trials by the provisions made in the Code. Section 161 of the Code provides that the Police Officer investigating a case is entitled to examine any person and reduce the statement of such person in writing. This statement recorded by a Police Officer under Section 161 even though is a previous statement for the purpose of Section 145 of the Evidence Act, such statement can be used for the purpose of establishing a contradiction or impeaching the credit of the witness only in the manner provided for in Section 162 of in Code. State of Kerala v. Babu, AIR 1999 SC 2161 : 1999 SCC (Cri) 611 : 1999 CrLJ 3491 : 1999 (3) Crimes 27.

5. CONTRADICTION WITH REFERENCE TO PREVIOUS TAPE-RECORDED STATEMENT

[11298] ● Contradiction with reference to previous tape-recorded statement.—A tape recorded statement is neither a statement in writing nor reduced to writing. In the present it has been contended that such statement can be utilised only for corroboration and not for contradiction. This contention is liable to be rejected. The tape recording of a former statement of a witness can be admitted in evidence to shake the credit of a witness under Section 155(3) of the Evidence Act. It is clear that a previous statement made by a person and recorded on tape can be used only to corroborate the evidence given by the witness in Court but also to contradict the evidence given before the Court as well as to test the veracity of the witness and also to impeach his impartiality. Apart from being used for corroboration the evidence is admissible in respect of the other three matters mentioned under Section 161(1) Exception 2 to Section 153 and Section 155(3) of the Evidence Act. Therefore, it is not possible to accept the contention that the previous statement can be used only for the purpose of corroboration but not for the purpose of contradicting the evidence before the Court. If a previous statement made by a person can be used to corroborate his evidence given before the Court on principle there is not reason why such previous statement cannot be used to contradict and also for the other purpose referred to above. As to contradict the witness with reference to earlier tape recorded statement resort should be taken to Section 145, Evidence Act. N. Rama Reddy v. V.V. Giri, AIR 1971

SC 1162 : (1970) 2 SCC 340 : (1971) SCR 399 : (1971) 1 SCA 394 : (1971) 1 SC J 483 : 1971 SCD 546.

[11299] ● Evidence of witness—Impeachment.—It is provided in the first limb of Section 145 that a witness may be cross-examined as to previous statement made by him without such writing being shown to him. But the second limb provides that "if it is intended to contradict him by the writing his attention must, before the writing can be proved, be called to those parts of it which are to be used for the purpose of contradicting him." There is thus a distinction between the two vivid limbs, though subtle it may be. The first limb does not envisage impeaching the credit of a witness, but it merely enables the opposite party to cross-examine the witness with reference to the previous statements made by him. He may at that stage succeed in eliciting materials to his benefit through such cross-examination even without resorting to the procedure laid down in the second limb. But if the witness disowns having made any statement which is inconsistent with his present stand his testimony in Court on that score would not be vitiated until the cross-examiner proceeds to comply with the procedure prescribed in the second limb of Section 145. Binay Kumar Singh v. State of Bihar, AIR 1997 SC 322 : 1997 SCC (Cri) 333 : 1997 CrLJ 362 : 1997 (100) Bom LR 159.

[11300] ● Previous statement not substantive evidence.—The previous statement cannot be treated as substantive evidence. The contradictions with earlier statement should be considered only if these have been brought or recorded by confronting the witnesses. Chinnamal v. State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 1997 SC 145 : 1997 (4) Crimes 211 (SC).

6. CROSS-EXAMINATION AS TO IDENTIFICATION

[11301] ● Cross-examination as to identification.—In the present case there was delay in holding Test Identification Parade. Police officer or the Magistrate was not offered on the point of delay. Validity of Test Identification Parade cannot be challenged. Bharat Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1972 SC 2478 : (1973) 3 SCC 896 : 1972 CrLJ 1704 : 1973 CrLR (SC) 317.

[11302] ● Appellants identification unchallenged.—The evidence of Magistrate (PW-1) shows that he held the parade on March 11, 1966 at which several witnesses identified the appellant, accused-Lal Singh and accused- Bhagwan Singh. Some questions were asked to him in cross-examination regarding the identification of Bhagwan Singh and Lal Singh, but none was asked regarding the appellant's identification. That must mean that the appellant had no grievance to make regarding the manner in which the parade had been held. Chander Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1973 SC 1200 : (1973) 3 SCC 55 : 1973 SCC (Cri)133 (136) : 1973 CrLJ 926 : 1973 UJ (SC) 254.

[11303] ● Evidence of witness participating in test identification parade but not examined at trial.—In the present case, it was contended by the learned counsel for the respondent that the son of the deceased is not examined at the trial but he had identified articles at the identification parade, and the learned counsel attempted to contend that this evidence could be used as a piece of corroboration. Unfortunately this evidence, could not be looked into because. . . (i) What he identified and stated to the Magistrate who conducted the identification parade is only a hearsay evidence as that evidence could only be used to corroborate his testimony if he was examined at the trial, and (ii) what he stated to the Magistrate at the time of the test identification parade is not subjected to cross examination and was at the back of the accused and could not be used as evidence against the accused. Chandan v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1988 SC 599 : (1988) 1 SCC 696 : 1988 SCC (Cri) 238 (242) : 1988 CrLJ 842 : 1988 CrLR (SC) 163 : JT 1988 (1) SC 141 : (1988) 1 Crimes 582.

[11304] ● Statement of appellant on question of identity to wriggle out of what he stated earlier.—The High Court came to the conclusion and in our opinion rightly that during the one month period that elapsed since recording of examination-in-chief something transpired which made him shift his evidence on the question of identity to help the appellant. We are satisfied on a reading of his entire evidence that his statement in cross-examination on the question of identity of the appellant and his companion is a clear attempt to wriggle out of what he had stated earlier in his examination-in-chief. Khujji alias Surendra Tiwari v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1991 SC 1853 : (1991) 3 SCC 627 : 1991 SCC (Cri) 916 (925) : 1991 CrLJ 2653.

7. HOSTILE WITNESS

[11305] ● Hostile witness.—When a witness is cross-examined and contradicted with the leave of the Court, by the party calling him, his evidence cannot, as a matter of law, be treated as washed off the record altogether. It is for the Judge of fact to consider in each case whether as a result of such cross-examination and contradiction the witness stands thoroughly discredited or can still be believed in regard to a part of his testimony. If the Judge finds that in the process, the credit of the witness has not been completely shaken, he may, after reading and considering the evidence of the witness, as a whole, with due caution and care, accept, in the light of the other evidence on the record, that part of his testimony which he finds to be creditworthy and act upon it. If in a given case, the whole of the testimony of the witness is impugned, and in the process, the witness stands squarely and totally discredited, the Judge should, as matter of prudence, discard his evidence in toto. Sat Paul v. Delhi Administration, AIR 1976 SC 294 : 1976 SCC (Cri) 160 : 1976 CrLJ 295 : 1975 CrLR (SC) 579 : 1976 Mah LJ 174.

[11306] ● Cross-examination of his own witness by party.—In India, the grant of permission to cross-examine his own witness by a party is not conditional on the witness being declared 'adverse' or 'hostile'. Whether it be the grant of permission under Section 142 to put leading questions, or the leave under Section 154 to ask questions which might be put in cross-examination by the adverse party, the Indian Evidence Act leaves the matter entirely to the discretion of the Court.

The discretion conferred by Section 154 on the Court is unqualified and untrammeled, and is apart from any question of "hostility". It is to be liberally exercised whenever the Court from the witness's demeanour, temper, attitude, bearing, or the tenor and tendency of his answers, or from a perusal of his previous inconsistent statement, or otherwise, thinks that the grant of such permission is expedient to extract the truth and to do justice. The grant of such permission does not amount to an adjudication by the Court as to the veracity of the witness. Therefore, in the order granting such permission, it is preferable to avoid the use of such expressions, such as "declared hostile", "declared unfavourable", the significance of which is still not free from the historical cobwebs which, in their wake bring a misleading legacy of confusion and conflict that had so long vexed the English Courts. Sat Paul v. Delhi Administration, AIR 1976 SC 294 : 1976 SCC (Cri) 160 : 1976 CrLJ 295 : 1975 CrLR (SC) 579 : 1975 CAR 387.

[11307] ● Hostile witnesses—Cross-examination—Value of his evidence.—The prosecution could have even avoided requesting for permission to cross-examine the witness under Section 154 of the Evidence Act. But the fact that the Court gave permission to the Prosecutor to cross-examine his own witness, thus characterising him as, what is described as a hostile witness, does not completely efface his evidence. The evidence remains admissible in the trial and there is no legal bar to base a conviction upon his testimony if corroborated by other reliable evidence. We are satisfied in this case that the evidence of Jagat Singh, but for whose prompt assistance the case would not have seen the light of day and whose statement had immediately been recorded by the DSP, is amply corroborated by other evidence mentioned above to inspire confidence in his testimony. Apart from that the fact of recovery of the gold coins in the pocket of the appellant gave a seal of finality to the truth of the charge against the appellant. If Jagat Singh had accepted the bribe he would have been guilty under Section 161, IPC. There is, therefore, clear abetment by the appellant of the offence under Section 161, IPC and the ingredients of Section 165-A, IPC are established against him. Bhagwan Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 1976 SC 202 : (1976) 1 SCC 389 : 1976 SCC (Cri) 7 : 1976 CrLJ 203 : 1976 CrLR (SC) 48.

[11308] ● Cross-examination of his own witness—Judicial discretion of Court to permit.—The section confers a judicial discretion on the Court to permit cross-examination and does not contain any conditions or principles which may govern the exercise of such discretion. It is, however, well-settled that the discretion must be judiciously and properly exercised in the interests of justice. The law on the subject is well settled that a party will not normally be allowed to cross-examine its own witness and declare the same hostile, unless the Court is satisfied that the statement of the witness exhibits an element of hostility or that he has resiled from a material statement which he made before an earlier authority or where the Court is satisfied that the witness is not speaking the truth and it may be necessary to cross-examine him to get out the truth. Before a witness can be declared hostile and the party examining the witness is allowed to cross-examine him, there must be some material to show that the witness is not speaking the truth or has exhibited an element of hostility to the party for whom he is deposing. Merely because a witness in an unguarded moment speaks the truth which may not suit the prosecution or which may be favourable to the accused, the discretion to allow the party concerned to cross-examine its own witnesses cannot be allowed. In other words a witness should be regarded as adverse and liable to be cross-examined by the party calling him only when the Court is satisfied that the witness bears hostile animus against the party for whom he is deposing or that he does not appear to be willing to tell the truth. In order to ascertain the intention of the witness or his conduct, the Judge concerned may lock into the statements made by the witness before the Investigating Officer or the previous authorities to find out as to whether or not there is any indication of the witness making a statement inconsistent on a most material point with the one which he gave before the pervious authorities. The Court must, however, distinguish between a statement made by the witness by way of an unfriendly act and one which lets out the truth without any hostile intention. Rabindra Kumar Dey v. State of Orissa, AIR 1977 SC 170 : (1976) 4 SCC 233 : 1977 CrLJ 173 : 1976 CrLR (SC) 436 : 1976 CAR 266.

[11309] ● Evidence of witness—Unreliable in cross-examination.—PW-18, was examined for proving the recovery of "ballam" and "lathis". But during their cross-examination they tried to support the accused and had gone out of their way in deposing that the accused were not present on the scene of offence at the relevant time. The evidence of witness-Badley in his cross-examination was clearly unreliable and was rightly rejected by the High Court. The High Court was equally justified in taking the view that witness, PW-18, was required to be cross- examined by the prosecution as he had turned hostile to the prosecution and that request was wrongly rejected by the Trial Court. Hari Chand v. State of Delhi, AIR 1996 SC 1477 : (1996) 9 SCC 113 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 950 (968) : 1996 CrLJ 1701 : JT 1996 (2) SC 140 : (1996) 1 Crimes 109.

[11310] ● Examination of approver as witness object.—On 4.11.1992 both the accused were present in the chamber of the learned Magistrate and in their presence the statement of Sudipa was recorded under Section 306(4) till 5 p.m. and the police was directed to keep all of them present on 9.11.1992 for recording her further statement on 9.11.1992 her further statement was recorded and copies of the evidence of Sudipa were supplied to both the accused and that fact was ascertained by the Learned Magistrate on 25.11.1992 when all of them were produced before him. The learned Magistrate has therefore fixed 6.1.93 as the date for cross-examination of approver Sudipa. On that day, and application was given on behalf of the appellant for local inspection of the place of offence before cross-examining Sudipa. That application was granted and the accused were directed to be produced on 3.2.93 for further cross examination. The cross-examination of Sudipa was then for different reasons adjourned from time to time and last date fixed for that purpose was 30.3.1993. On that day the Advocate of the appellant did not remain present. The appellant Krishnanandu also declined to cross-examine her. The lawyer representing accused also declined to cross-examine her. Therefore there is no justification in the grievance made by the learned Counsel that Sudipa was examined by the Magistrate in the absence of the appellant and the appellant was not afforded an opportunity to cross-examine her. For this reason it is also not possible to agree with the conditions raised by him that the mandatory requirement of S. 306(4), CrPC was not complied with. Ranadhir Basu v. State of West Bengal, AIR 2000 SC 908 : (2000) 3 SCC 161 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 587 (598) : 2000 CrLJ 1417 : 2000 CrLR (SC) 364.

[11311] ● Cross-examination—Right of.—At the stage of investigation, inquiry or trial of the offence, the person to whom pardon is to be granted, is to be examined for collection the evidence of a person who is directly or indirectly concerned in or privy to an offence. At the time of investigation or inquiry into an offence, the accused cannot claim any right under law to cross-examine the witness. The right to cross-examination would arise only at the time of trial. During the course of investigation by the Police, question of cross-examination by the accused does not arise. Further the person to whom pardon is granted in examined but is not offered for cross- examination and thereafter during trial if he is examined and cross-examined then there is no question of any prejudice caused to the accused. In such cases, at the most, the accused may lose the chance to cross-examine the approver twice, that is to say, one before the committal and other at the time of trial. State of H.P. v. Surender Mohan, AIR 2000 SC 1862 : (2000) 2 SCC 396 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 400 (407) : 2000 CrLJ 1429 : 2000 CrLR (SC) 328 : 2000 (1) Crimes 218.

[11313] ● Non-examination of approver—Trial not vitiated.—By not examining the approver, the trial would not get vitiated. Such evidence may have to be scrutinised with great circumspection. If in such scrutiny, the evidence is found reliable the Court cannot be inhibited from using the evidence. State of H.P. v. Surender Mohan, AIR 2000 SC 1862 : (2000) 2 SCC 396 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 400 (410) : 2000 CrLJ 1429 : 2000 CrLR (SC) 328 : (2000) 1 Crimes 218.

[11314] ● Hostile witness—Permission for cross-examination in terms of Section 154 of Evidence Act.—Permission for cross-examination in terms of Section 154 of the Evidence Act cannot and should not be granted at the mere asking of the party calling the witness. Even in a criminal prosecution when a witness is cross-examined and contradicted with the leave of the Court, by the party calling him, his evidence, cannot as a matter of law be treated as washed off the record altogether. It is for the Judge of fact to consider in each case whether as a result of such cross-examination and contradiction, the witness stand thoroughly discredited or case still be believed on regard to a part of his testimony. If he Judge finds that in the process, the credit of the witness has not been completely shaken, he may, after reading and considering the evidence of the witness, as a whole, with due caution and care, accept, in the light of the other evidence on the record that part of his testimony which he finds to the creditworthy and act upon it. It in a given case, the whole of the testimony of the witness is impugned, and in the process, the witness stands squarely and totally discredited, the Judge should, as a matter of prudence discard his evidence in toto. Gura Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 2001 SC 330 : (2001) 1 SCC 205 : 2001 SCC (Cri) 323 : 2001 CrLJ 487.

[11315] ● Cross-examination and contradiction of his own witness by party.—It is important to note that the English Statute differs materially from the law contained in the Indian Evidence Act in regard to cross-examination and contradiction of his own witness by a party. Under the English Law, a party is not permitted to impeach the credit of his own witness by general evidence of his bad character, shady antecedents or previous conviction. In India, this can be done with the consent of the Court under S. 155, Evidence Act. Under the English law a party calling the witness can cross-examine and contradict a witness in respect of his previous inconsistent statements. With the leave of the Court, only when the Court considers the witness to be adverse are such condition has been laid down under Sections 154, 155 of Indian Evidence Act and the grant of such leave has been left completely to the discretion of the Court. Gura Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 2001 SC 330 : (2001) 2 SCC 205 : 2001 SCC (Cri) 323 : 2001 CrLJ 487.

8. DYING DECLARATION

[11316] ● Dying declaration.—It is true that the Doctor who had recorded the dying declaration had stated that the deceased was in a state of shock because he had received a serious injury in the abdomen which had to be stitched. The Doctor was, however, not cross-examined as to the facts whether or not despite the shock, the deceased had retained his mental faculties. Kusa v. State of Orissa, AIR 1980 SC 559 : (1980) 2 SCC 207 : 1980 SCC (Cri) 389 (391) : 1980 CrLJ 408 : 1980 CrLR (SC) 200 : 1980 Cr App R (SC) 66 : (1980) 2 SCR 801.

[11317] ● View of medical expert not put to Doctor in cross-examination.—We are unable to place any reliance on the observation in the books on medical jurisprudence in absence of any question put to the doctor by the accused in his cross-examination regarding the view expressed by the author regarding the state of mind of the deceased. Kusa v. State of Orissa, AIR 1980 SC 559 : (1980) 2 SCC 207 : 1980 SCC (Cri) 389 (391) : 1980 CrLJ 408 : 1980 CrLR (SC) 200 : (1980) 2 SCR 801.

9. RAPE VICTIM

[11318] ● Rape victim.—There has been lately, lot of criticism of the treatment of the victims of sexual assault in the Court during their cross-examination. The provisions of Evidence Act regarding relevancy of facts not withstanding, some defence counsel adopt the strategy of continual questioning of the prosecutrix as to the details of the rape. The victim is required to repeat again and again the details of the rape incident not so much as to bring out the facts on record or the test her credibility but to test her story for inconsistencies with a view to attempt to twist the interpretation of events given by her so as to make them appear inconsistent with her allegations. The Court, therefore, should not sit as a silent spectator while the victim of crime is being cross-examined by the defense. It must effectively control the recording of evidence in the Court. While every latitude should be given to the accused to test the veracity of the prosecutrix and the credibility of her version through cross-examination. The Court must also ensure that cross-examination, not made a means of harassment or causing humiliation to the victim of crime. A victim of rape, it must be remembered, has already undergone a traumatic experience and if she is made to repeat again and again, in unfamiliar surroundings, what she had been subjected to, she may be too ashamed and even nervous or confused to speak and her silence or a confused stray sentence may be wrongly interpreted as "discrepancies and contradictions" in her evidence. State of Punjab v. Gurmit Singh, AIR 1996 SC 1393 (1404-1405) : (1996) 3 SCC 289.

10. TENDERING WITNESS FOR CROSS-EXAMINATION WITHOUT HIS BEING EXAMINED IN CHIEF

[11319] ● Tendering witness for cross-examination without his being examined in chief.—Section 138 Evidence Act envisages that a witness would first be examined-in-chief and then subjected to cross-examination and for seeking any clarification, the witness may be re-examined by the prosecution. There is no meaning in tendering a witness for cross-examination only. Tendering of witness for cross-examination as a matter of fact, amounts to giving up of the witness by the prosecution as it does not choose to examine him in chief. There is no procedure whereby the prosecution is permitted to tender a witness for cross-examination only without there being any examination-in-chief in relation to which such a witness can be cross-examined. The effect of their being tendered only for cross-examination amounts to the failure of the prosecution to examine them at the trial. Their non-examination seriously affects the credibility of the prosecution case and detracts materially from its reliability. Sukhwant Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1995 SC 1601 (1603, 1605, 1606) : (1995) 3 SCC 367.

CRUEL MANNER

[11320] ● Offender acting in a cruel manner.—For the application of Exception 4, it is not sufficient to show that there was a sudden quarrel and there was no premeditation. It must further be shown that the offender has not taken undue advantage or acted in a cruel or unusual manner. The expression 'undue advantage" as used in the provision means "unfair advantage". Sachchey Lal Tiwari v. State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 2004 SC 5039 : (2004) 11 SCC 410 : 2004 CrLJ 4660 (4663). TO THE SAME EFFECT : Sridhar Bhuyan v. State of Orissa, AIR 2004 SC 4100 : (2004) 11 SCC 395 : 2004 CrLJ 3875 (3876, 3877) : 2004 (3) Crimes 277.

[11321] ● Thrusting spear in abdomen of deceased in a cruel manner.—In the instant case the accused thrust the spear in the abdomen of deceased. PW-1, father of the deceased disposed that when his son was cutting banana leaves, the accused came there and picked up a quarrel with him and he saw the accused thrusting the spear in the abdomen of his son. PW-2, brother of PW-1 also came to the place of incident and saw the accused causing injury to the deceased. The accused was convicted by the Sessions Court under Sections 302/34, IPC but the High Court converted the same to one under section 304, IPC without specifying, whether it comes under Part I and II of Section 304, IPC. The evidence of the prosecution showed that the appellant caused death of the young boy in a cruel and brutal manner. The Supreme Court declined to interfere with the sentence of seven years' imprisonment imposed on him. Naval Kishore Singh v. State of Bihar, AIR 2004 SC 4421 : (2004) 7 SCC 502 : 2004 CrLJ 4252 (4254) : 2004 (3) Crimes 373.

CRUELTY

[11322] ● Cruelty.—The accused was alleged to have treated the deceased with cruelty and harassed her and his behaviour and ill-treatment compelled her to commit suicide by consuming poison. The evidence, when scrupulously examined, showed that the deceased was not subjected to cruelty or harassment by the accused for or in connection with any demand of dowry. The letters written by the family members of the deceased to her after her marriage showed that the relations between the accused and the deceased and the relatives of accused were cordial. The prosecution failed to produce any letters written by the deceased to her family members and this was fatal to the prosecution case and supported the defence case. In view of the above facts of the case, no offence under Section 304-B is made out. Rajnesh Tandon v. State of Punjab, 1955 SCC (Cri) 817.

[11323] ● Impotency of husband amounts to cruelty.—Where it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court that a husband is impotent and is unable to discharge his marital obligations, this would amount to both legal and mental cruelty which would undoubtedly be a just ground as contemplated by the second proviso to sub-s. (3) of S. 125 of the CrPC, 1973, for the wife's refusal to live with her husband and the wife would be entitled to maintenance from her husband according to his means. Sirajmohmedkhan Janmohamadkhan v. Hafizunnisa Yasinkhan, AIR 1981 SC 1972 : (1981) 4 SCC 250 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 829 : 1981 CrLJ 1430 : 1981 CrLR (SC) 554 : (1982) 1 SCR 695.

[11324] ● Dowry death by burning.—In this case, the deceased became a victim of constant ill treatment by her mother in law. Ten months after her marriage, the dead body of the bride with burns from kerosene fire was found. In a case such as this, the death of a young wife must be attributed either to the commission of a crime or to the fact that, mentally tortured, by the suffocating circumstance surrounding her, she committed suicide, young women of education, intelligence and character do not set fire to themselves to welcome the embrace of death unless provoked and compelled to be that desperate by to intolerance of their misery. Bhagwant Singh v. Commissioner of Police, AIR 1983 SC 826 : (1983) 3 SCC 344 : 1983 CrLJ 1081.

[11325] ● Cruelty on wife—Persistent demand of Television scooter etc.—Persistent demand by husband for television, scooter etc. coupled with the fact that the wife was rehabilitated in her matrimonial home on certain amount of money being paid to her husband reflects cruelty on the wife. Ramesh Kumar v. State of Punjab, 1986 CrLJ 2087 : (1987) 1 DMC 108 (Punj).

[11326] ● Ill-treating of wife—Burning by pouring kerosene.—In the present case the accused was in the habit of ill-treating her and that on the morning in question he had abused her and beat her and or the top of everything he had also poured kerosene oil over her and set fire to her Surinder Kumar v. State (Delhi Administration), AIR 1987 SC 692 : (1987) 1 SCC 467 : 1987 CrLJ 537.

[11327] ● Suicide—Presumption under Section 113-A—Evidence Act.—In case of suicide caused by abetment, committed prior to November 11, 1986, Section 113-A, Evidence Act is attracted. Section 113-A, Evidence Act introduced by the Dowry Prohibition (Amendment) Act, 1983 (Act 45 of 1983) lays down that (a) if a married lady commits suicide within seven years of her marriage; (b) if her husband or his relative had subjected her during her converter to cruelty within the meaning of the term as defined in Section 498-A, IPC, then the Court may raise the presumption of fact that the husband or such relative of her husband abetted the suicide. Although the section came into force on 25-12-1983, since the Evidence Act which is an adjective law is retrospective in operation, the presumption can be raised even when the suicide was committed before 25-12-1983. Gurbachan Singh v. Satpal Singh, AIR 1990 SC 209 : (1990) 1 SCC 371 : 1990 CrLJ 562 : (1989) 3 Crimes 526.

[11328] ● Death of deceased within seven years of marriage.—When the wife dies within seven years of marriage and the dead body is cremated hurriedly even without informing the parents of the bride and particularly when the father and brother of the bride earlier were driven out by the husband and his relatives, the conduct indicates the death was unnatural and the cruelty related to demand of dowry, the accused husband was convicted under Section 304-B, IPC. Shanti v. State of Haryana, AIR 1991 SC 1226 : (1991) 1 SCC 371 : 1991 CrLJ 1713 (SC).

[11329] ● Dowry death.—Inserted by the Dowry Prohibition (Amendment) Act, 1986 with a view to combat the increasing menace of dowry deaths, Section 304-B lays down that where the death of a woman is caused by burns or bodily injury or occurs otherwise than under normal circumstances within seven years of marriage and it is shown that soon before the death of the woman she was subjected to cruelty or harassment by her husband or his relations for or in connection with any demand for dowry, such death shall be called "dowry death" and the husband or relatives shall be deemed to have caused her death. Shanti v. State of Haryana, AIR 1991 SC 1226 : (1991) 1 SCC 371 : 1991 SCC (Cri) 191 : 1991 CrLJ 1713.

[11330] ● Dowry death—Civil treatment to deceased.—Section 304-B and Section 498-A are mutually exclusive : These provisions deal with distinct offences. It is true that "cruelty" is a common essential to both the sections and that has to be proved. The explanation to Section 498-A gives the meaning of "cruelty". In Section 304-B there is no such explanation about the meaning of "cruelty" but having regard to the common background to these offences the meaning of "cruelty of harassment" will be the same as given in explanation to Section 498-A under which "cruelty" by itself amounts to an offence and is punishable. Under Section 304-B it is the "dowry death" that is punishable and such death should have occurred within seven years of the marriage. No such period is mentioned in Section 498-A and the husband or his relative would be liable for subjecting the woman to "cruelty" any time after the marriage. Further a person charged and acquitted u/s. 304-B can be convicted u/s. 498-A without charge being there, if such a case is made out. But from the point of view of practice and procedure and to avoid technical defects it is necessary in such cases to frame charges under both the Sections and if the case is established they can be convicted under both the Sections but no separate sentence need be awarded u/s. 498-A in view of the substantive sentence being awarded for the major offence u/s. 304-B, IPC. Shanti v State of Haryana, AIR 1991 SC 1226 : (1991) 1 SCC 37 : 1991 SCC (Cri) 191 : 1991 CrLJ 1713

[11331] ● Suicide by wife—Relationship between spouses strained over dowry.—The relations between the husband and the wife were strained. The husband had consistently been keeping up the pressure of extra dowry since her marriage. The demand for dowry was stepped up after the death of his father-in-law when his mother-in-law received the settlement dues. The husband also tried to frustrate the efforts of his wife to seek transfer from the school where she was serving. The wife also apprehended harm to her children. She was severely beaten up on the day prior to the day of occurrence. This all provoked her into taking extreme step to kill herself and her children. In the circumstances of the case, the trial Court has rightly convicted the husband under Section 306, IPC. State of Punjab v. Iqbal Singh, AIR 1991 SC 1532 : (1991) 3 SCC 1 : 1991 CrLJ 1897.

[11332] ● Demand of dowry not supported by evidence.—A newly wed bride died one and half years after her wedding. It was alleged that her husband, her sister-in-law, mother-in-law and maternal uncle-at-law had murdered her by throttling. On receipt of information of her death when women folk reached Jaitu the deceased was dead. When the body was being taken to the cremation ground, in the way when her face was seen by the women folk her eyes and tongue were bulging out and were in an indifferent manner. Even on the insistence of the women folk the husband did not accede to their wish and hurriedly burnt her in the cremation ground without informing the police, not even informing the father of the deceased bride. The FIR was recorded long after the incident. The alleged demand for dowry as mentioned in FIR was not supported by evidence. There was no evidence to prove that the victim before her death was subjected to ill-treatment of torture. Nobody took objection to her cremation. The Supreme Court held that no adverse inference of guilt can be drawn for not having informed her father about death, who lived away. The prosecution failed and the accused acquitted. Lekh Ram v. State of Punjab, AIR 1992 SCW 1292 : 1992 CrLJ 1930 (SC) : (1992) 2 Crimes 66 (SC).

[11333] ● Malicious and vexatious litigation instituted against wife.—Cruelty has no definable parameters. It involves acts the result of which cause hurt and often agony to the opposite party, be it mental or physical, which in turn has further damaging consequences, the most serious of which is an ultimate suicide. In the instant case, in the supercharged atmosphere of hostility, malicious and vexatious litigation were instituted against wife out of a sense of vindictiveness. As the wife was at the receiving end, she would be justified in presenting the husband for an offence under Section 498-A, IPC if the harassment and torture, which she went through in the course of those unjustified proceedings were so serious as to drive into a fit of desperation or push her to suicide. Madhuri Mukund Chitnis v. Mukund Martand Chitnis , 1992 CrLJ 111 (Bom) : (1991) 1 Bom Cr 683 : (1991) 93 Bom LR 157.

[11334] ● Bride burning—Husband and in-laws unhappy over dowry.—A young woman in a case aged about 24 years was burnt to death that the house of her husband within one year of her marriage. It was proved that the accused persons namely, deceased's husband and his father and sister, were unhappy about the cash and articles given by way of dowry at the time of the 'tilak' ceremony. The accused taunted, tormented and tortured the deceased for the insufficiency of the dowry amount. A few days before the incident while at their home town there was heated argument and then the husband of the deceased returned to the place of his posting without deceased. Deceased entreated her father-in-law to permit her to join her husband but the latter refused saying she will have to rot alone unless the dowry amount was made good. Ignoring her father-in-law's refusal the deceased went to her husband. The father-in-law and his daughter followed her. Then all the three ill-treated her. The deceased was found on fire at about 2.30 a.m. or 2.45. a.m. on the fateful day. While she was burning the three accused who alone were inside came out of the room and stood in the verandah chitchatting unconcerned about her plight. None of them tried to help the deceased. Soon after that the house was locked and the accused absconded. The witnesses to the incident were persons living in the same building in which the deceased lived with her husband. However their names were not mentioned in the FIR filed by the father of deceased. It was held that the witnesses had no reason to falsely implicate the accused. There was no reason to disbelieve their testimony. Absence of their names in FIR was also of no consequence. That was quite natural because the father was rushed to the place of incident had not enquired of their names having regard to the strain, stress and tension in which he was at the relevant point of time. The witnesses could not be said to be falsely set up by father of deceased. Supreme Court upheld the conviction of the accused namely the husband and the in-laws of the deceased. State of U.P. v. Ashok Kumar Srivastava, AIR 1992 SC 840 : (1992) 2 SCC 86 : 1992 SCC (Cri) 241 : 1992 CrLJ 1104 (SC) : (1992) 1 Crimes 576 (SC) : 1992 All LJ 1115.

[11335] ● Bride burning—Failure to bring sufficient dowry.—The positive case of the prosecution is that both the accused sprinkled kerosene oil and set fire. The motive is that the deceased did not bring sufficient dowry. PW-4 has given a clear and cogent evidence in this regard. There is absolutely no reason to doubt the same. His evidence establishes that the accused were ill-treating her in a cruel manner. Of course, this by itself is not clinching for such treatment might have led her to commit suicide also. Harbans Lal v. State of Haryana, AIR 1993 SC 819 (822) : 1993 Supp (4) SCC 641 : 1993 CrLJ 75 : (1992) 3 Crimes 758.

[11336] ● Suicide—Abetting wife to commit.—The wife was ill treated and mother-in-law used to call her lady of ill luck and husband used to assault her for bringing the bridal presents of inferior quality. However wife did not make any complaint of this treatment to others except her own mother and one day committed suicide. It was held by the Session Judge that the accused were guilty of offence u/s. 306/498A but High Court in the absence of sufficient proof acquitted all of them. Thereupon State went in appeal to Supreme Court where it was held that prosecution had failed to prove its case u/s. 406. However on the basis of available evidence accused were convicted u/s. 498A as it was their wilful conduct which had compelled the deceased to end her life. State of West Bengal v. Orilal Jaiswal, AIR 1994 SC 1418 : (1994) 1 SCC 73 : 1994 CrLJ 2104 (SC).

[11337] ● Dowry demand—Abetment of suicide.—If the wife had been subjected to cruelty, as defined in Section 498-A. Its the Court may presume having regard to all the circumstances that the suicide has been abetted by husband or any of his relatives. A reference to Explanation (b) of S. 498-A, I.P.Code shows that if there be harassment of the woman with a view to coerce her or any person related to her to meet any unlawful demand for any property or valuable security, the same would amount to cruelty. The case of the prosecution being that the accused party had demanded television, electric fan, etc., let us see whether there is reliable evidence to establish the same. The learned Trial Court has dealt with this matter in Para 25 of the Judgment and it has been observed that neither PW-5 nor PW-8 has stated about any of the alleged demands and though PW-1 deposed that Batholi and Kamala had made illegal demands of electric fan and television, etc. from PW-4, Sant Ram, the father of Roshani, the latter did not say anything about the same. The Court, therefore, rightly disbelieved this part of the prosecution case. There is thus no reliable evidence to hold that Roshani was being harassed within the meaning of Explanation (b) of Section 498-A. State of Himachal Pradesh v. Nikku Ram, AIR 1996 SC 67 (69-70) : (1995) 6 SCC 219 : 1995 SCC (Cri) 1090 : 1995 CrLJ 4184.

[11338] ● Demand of dowry—Abetting wife to commit suicide.—In a case the accused was alleged to have abetted the wife to commit suicide by ill-treating her and subjecting her to cruelly. The evidence of one of the brothers of deceased was that there was enmity or ill will between the spouses. Convicting the accused on weak evidence is not proper and acquittal is justified as point raised by parents of deceased about demand of dowry was not found reliable and death was caused due to accidental fall in the well. State of Haryana v. Rajinder Singh, AIR 1996 SC 2978 : (1996) 8 SCC 77 : 1996 CrLJ 1875 (SC).

[11339] ● Appellant's impotence—Amounted to cruelty.—Appellant was impotent and he was not capable of giving sexual satisfaction to the respondent, in consequence, it amounts to cruelty and that, therefore, the respondent is entitled to live separately from the appellant. Since she was unable to maintain herself, she is entitled to seek maintenance from the appellant. The woman would go to the marital home of her husband, with a fond hope and expectation that she would have not only a happy but also peaceful conjugal society with her husband. When she found that her husband is unable to perform sexual obligation, which is one of the important factors to cement bondage of affection and cordial relationship in marital home, it would be perpetual agony for the wife to continue to live in peace in the conjugal home. Cruelty is a ground for divorce or judicial separation in civil law. Under these circumstances, she would be well justified to live separately from the husband and at the same time keep maintaining married status. The respondent had not immediately rushed to sever her marital relations with the appellant. She had sufficiently waited for long time to see whether there would be any improvement in the potency of the appellant. Having found no hope, she chose to live separately from the appellant. Therefore, it could safely be concluded that the respondent having tried all means to sustain the marital relations but having found that it was impossible for the appellant to gain potency, she had chosen to live apart from the appellant. Therefore, there was sufficient ground for the wife to live separately. Ashok Kumar Singh v. VIth Additional Sessions Judge, Varanasi, AIR 1996 SC 333 (333, 334) : (1996) 1 SCC 554 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 361 : 1996 CrLJ 392 : JT 1995 (7) SC 151

[11340] ● Death of deceased wife by burning within seven years of her marriage.—The primary requirements for finding the accused guilty of the offence under Section 304-B, IPC are that death of the deceased was caused by burns within seven years of her marriage and that since before the death she was subjected to cruelty or harassment by the accused for or in connection with any demand for dowry. It is imperative for the legal presumption under Section 113-B to prove that soon after her death. She was subjected to such cruelty or harassment. In the instant case the prosecution achieved in proving at the most was that there was persisting dispute between the two sides regarding the dowry paid or to be paid, both in kind and cash, and on account of the failure to meet the demand for dowry the deceased was taken by her parent to their house about one and a half years before her death. An attempt was made to patch up between the two sides for which a panchayat was held in which it was resolved that she would go back to the nuptial home pursuant to which she was taken by the husband to his house. This happened about 10 to 15 days prior to the occurrence. There was nothing on record to show that she was either treated with cruelty or harassed with the demand for dowry during the period between her having been taken to the parental home and her tragic end. It was held that in the absence of any such evidence it was not permissible to take recourse to the logical presumption envisaged in Section 113-B of the evidence. That rule of the evidence is prescribed in law to obviate the prosecution of the difficulty to further prove that the offence was perpetrated by the husband, as then it would be burden on the accused to rebut the presumption. However the accused was covered under Section 498-A, IPC for which there was overwhelming evidence. Sham Lal v. State of Haryana, AIR 1997 SC 1873 : 1997 CrLJ 1927 : JT 1997 (3) SC 91 : 1997 (1) CCR 231 (SC) : 1997 (2) Scale 328 : 1997 (1) Crimes 245 (SC) : 1997 (2) Supreme 614.

[11341] ● Act of coming late at night by husband not amount to cruelty.—The act of coming late at night by the husband cannot be said to amount to an act of cruelty. Meka Ramaswamy v. Dasari Mohan, AIR 1998 SC 774 (775) : 1998 SCC (Cri) 604 : 1998 CrLJ 1105 : JT 1998 (1) SC 161.

[11342] ● Dowry death—Cruelty and harassment.—Since before the date of marriage the appellant had been insisting upon dowry and on the betrothal day itself certain land had to be transferred in his favour. The evidence further establishes that at the time of marriage some gold ornaments were given to the deceased. Then again, it is the concurrent finding of the Courts below that since the 3rd day after marriage the appellant was making further demands of dowry which ultimately compelled PWs-1 and 2 to give him a sum of Rs. 50,000 on September 10. 1986. The evidence on record also demonstrates that from before marriage and even till two years thereafter the appellant was continuing with his demand for dowry and that the deceased was subjected to cruelty, both mental and physical, on that score since marriage. If in the background of the above facts and circumstances, the relevant evidence of PWs-1 and 2 and PW-5 a cousin of the deceased, is read there cannot be escape from the conclusion that the appellant continued with his demands for dowry and ill-treated the deceased till the month of September 1987. Having analysed the entire evidence on record we are in complete agreement with the High Court that the deceased was subjected to cruelty by the appellant for payment of dowry soon before her death for which she committed suicide. The conviction of the appellant under S. 304-B, IPC Code must, therefore, be upheld. Rajayyan v. State of Kerala, AIR 1998 SC 1211 (1213) : (1998) 4 SCC 85 : 1998 SCC (Cri) 811 : 1998 CrLJ 1633 : 1998 CrLR (SC) 345 : JT 1998 (2) SC 248.

[11343] ● Dowry death with seven years of marriage.—In a case of dowry death within seven years of marriage, no effort was made by the accused (husband) to send a message to deceased parental family informing of the death. He did not even report the matter to the Magistrate. The mother and brother of deceased in their evidence stated that she was subjected to cruelty by her husband for demand of dowry. The defence of the accused that she had died a natural death was not accepted in the circumstances of the case in the absence of any evidence and he was held guilty of offence under Section 304-B, IPC. The sentence of life imprisonment was reduced to seven years. Sant Raj v. State of Haryana, (1998) 8 SCC 605 : 1998 SCC (Cri)1600.

[11344] ● Demand for dowry—Ill-treatment of wife.—Even before the marriage there was demand for dowry of jewels and Rs. 50,000 in cash and only a part thereof was paid. The remaining part was being paid in instalments. The appellant was repeatedly demanding payment of dowry in cash and also jewels. He was treating his wife with cruelty as evident from letters written by her to her relations. Though there were two children, the appellant did not stop the ill-treatment of his wife. C.V. Govindappa v. State of Karnataka, AIR 1998 SC 792 (793) : (1998) 2

SCC 763 : 1998 SCC (Cri) 683 : 1998 CrLJ 1107 : 1998 CrLR (SC)79 : JT 1998 (1) SC 193.

[11345] ● Additional demand for dowry—Death of deceased due to burn injuries.—The accused had ill treated the deceased and evidence of witnesses regarding demand of additional amount of dowry by accused was consistent and corroborated. Mere fact that accused took deceased to hospital does not demolish prosecution case as regards unnatural death of the deceased. It was held that conviction of accused was proper as his guilt was proved beyond doubt. However, accused mother-in-law of deceased was given benefit of doubt as she was living separate from her son. Prem Singh and Shanti v. State of Haryana, AIR 1998 SC 2628 : (1998) 8 SCC 70 : 1998 CrLJ 4019 (SC).

[11346] ● Cruelty proved.—The respondent was never interested in living with his wife. He was not only making demands for various household things but also insisting on resigning her job. There is ample evidence to show that he was treating her cruelly. The respondent was responsible for Nagammal's suffering. It is in this background that the evidence relating to her death should be appreciated. State of Tamil Nadu v. P. Muneappan, AIR 1998 SC 504 : 1998 SCC (Cri) 417 : 1998 CrLJ 694 : (1998) 1 Crimes 74 : (1998) 1 SCC 515.

[11347] ● Dowry death—Evidence in rebuttal.— The fact that "Muklawa" ceremony of the younger sister of deceased who was married to the brother of husband of deceased was performed about 1-1/2 months, before the occurrence does not belie the evidence of harassment for demand of dowry. Ram Kumar v. State of Haryana, AIR 1999 SC 1491 : (1998) 9 SCC 1 : 1999 CrLJ 462.

[11348] ● Dowry death—Appreciation of evidence.—The deceased wife was not only harassed by the appellant but was also ill treated and beaten many times. Sometime before the incident which led to her death there was a quarrel between husband and the wife and therefore she wanted to leave his house but because of persuasion by a neighbour not to leave at midnight she had agreed to remain there till next day morning. Ten minutes after deceased had returned to her room the witness heard some noise coming from the appellant's room and when a witness went there and enquired as to what had happened the appellant said 'Sorry Sister' and closed the door. After sometime the witnesses again heard more noise coming from the appellant's room and therefore, the witness again went there. At that time they found that some other neighbours had also gathered there. The appellant then opened the door. It was noticed that the deceased was sitting under a tap with her body fully burnt. Their evidence thus clearly established that soon before her death she was ill treated by her husband. The defence of the appellant was that she committed suicide. The High Court accepting the version of suicide thought it fit to acquit the appellant under Section 302 and convict him under Section 304-B because harassment was proved and the death had taken place within about a year and half from her marriage with the appellant. There is nothing to disagree with the High Court. Venugopal v. State of Karnataka, AIR 1999 SC 146 : 1999 (1) SCC 216 : 1999 CrLJ 129 : 1998 (3) Crimes 116.

[11349] ● Dowry death—Wife committed suicide within seven years of marriage.—The death of wife was occasioned not on account of any demand of dowry but because of various factors. Whatever demands of dowry arose after the marriage over which there were differences between the parties were settled or got receded when the deceased resumed cohabitation with her husband. There was no whisper thereafter of any demand of dowry. The cruelty otherwise inflicted on the deceased would be a relevant circumstance to maintain the conviction of the appellant under Section 498-A of the Indian Penal Code. Unless there was evidence of dowry demand, Section 304-B of the Indian Penal Code would not be attracted. For the kind of treatment meted out to the deceased Section 304-B, Indian Penal Code could not be attracted and therefore the appellant was not held guilty for the said offence. He was accordingly acquitted and therefore the appellant was not held guilty for the said offence. He was accordingly acquitted of the charge under Section 304-B, Indian Penal Code. On the other hand his conviction and sentence under Section 498-A, Indian Penal Code was sustained. Pyare Lal v. State of Haryana, AIR 1999 SC 1563 : (1997) 11 SCC 552 : 1998 SCC (Cri) 197.

[11350] ● Wife subjected to cruelty.—The essence of the offence in S. 498-A, IPC is cruelty as defined in the Explanation appended to that section. It is a continuing offence and on each occasion on which the respondent was subjected to cruelty, she would have a new starting point of limitation. Arun Vyas v. Anita Vyas, AIR 1999 SC 2071 (2075) : (1999) 4 SCC 690 : 1999 SCC (Cri) 629 : 1999 CrLJ 3479 : 1999 CrLR (SC) 392 : JT 1999 (4) SC 421.

[11351] ● Beating of wife for want of dowry.—In the instant case the accused was alleged to have beaten the wife for want of dowry and witnesses had fully supported the prosecution version and defence plea of suicide was found unreliable. Conviction of accused under Section 304-B/ 498-A is proper. Venu Gopal v. State of Karnataka, AIR 1999 SC 146 : (1999) 1 SCC 216 : 1999 CrLJ 29 (SC).

[11352] ● Demand for dowry—Harassment and ill-treatment.—The deceased used to complain to her parents about her harassment and dowry demand of her husband. However, the younger sister of deceased was married in the same family a month before the incident and no letter written by the deceased to her parents were produced in the Court. These facts do not make the case of harassment and conviction of accused under Section 498 A is proper Ram Kumar v. State of Haryana, AIR 1999 SC 1491 : (1998) 9 SCC 1 : 1999 CrLJ 462 (SC).

[11353] ● Dowry death.—In the instant case the death of the wife had occurred within seven years of her marriage as due to persistent demand of dowry she had committed suicide. Death of wife by suicide occurring within seven years of marriage cannot be stated to have occurred in normal circumstances and conviction of accused under Section 304-B/498 is proper. Kans Raj v. State of Punjab, AIR 2000 SC 2324 : (2000) 5 SCC 207 : 2000 CrLJ 2993 (SC).

[11354] ● No evidence of cruelty—Conviction on oral testimony of younger brother of deceased not maintainable.—There is not even a slightest assertion in any of the letters complaining against the husband that either he was making any demand at any point of time or he has assaulted or treated the wife with cruelty or torture. In that view of the matter, when in so many letters (Ex 11 to 17) the deceased has not reflected any cruelty alleged to have been meted out to her by the husband. It is difficult to maintain a conviction on the oral testimony of the younger brother of the deceased. State of Maharashtra v. Ashok Narayan Dandalwar, AIR 2000 SC 3568 (2) : (2000) 9 SCC 257 : 2000 CrLJ 4993 : (2000) 4 Crimes 100.

[11355] ● Dowry death—Beating by husband and mother-in-law.—There is evidence that husband and mother-in-law used to beat the deceased for not bringing the sufficient amount of dowry, but participation of husband's brother is doubtful. He is given benefit of doubt but husband is convicted. Asokan and M. Balasubramanium v. State of Tamil Nadu, (2000) 4 SCC 68 : 2000 CrLJ 2988 (SC).

[11356] ● Cruelty—Suicide note of deceased wife.—We have gone through the entire writing contained in the suicide note. It makes a serious castigation against her husband for being an addict to narcotic drugs. Then she made a general allegation against her mother-in-law and in a lesser degree towards the appellant. But unfortunately she did not advert to any concrete instance which can be termed as cruelty as defined in S. 498-A of the I.P.Code. The utterances said to have been made by the appellant towards the deceased were to her chagrin and she had taken them very seriously in the suicide note she described such utterances as not worthy of reproduction. It is not enough that the deceased felt those words hurting, it must be subjected to judicial scrutiny and the Court must be in a position to hold that those words were sufficiently hurting enough as to amount to "cruelty" falling within the parameters fixed in S. 498-A of the IPC. The area remains grey and vague. Not a single word said to have been spoken to by the appellant as against the deceased had been put on record by the deceased in the suicide note in spite of the fact that the said note is a very lengthy letter running into several paragraphs. The tenor and language of the suicide note would reflect that she was not an illiterate lady. As the Court is rendered helpless to Judge whether the words which deceased heard from the appellant would amount to cruelty, it is far from possibility for the Criminal Court to hold that she is guilty of the offence of cruelty as envisaged in the section. It is also to be pointed out that the deceased did not mention a single deed which the appellant would have done against her. All that is said against the appellant were that she spoke something which she took objectionable. In the aforesaid circumstances, it is not possible to hold her guilty of the offence of which she was found guilty by the High Court. No offence at all has been proved against her. She is entitled to be acquitted of the charge, as well as the offence now found against her by the learned single Judge' Raj Rani v. State (Delhi Administration), AIR 2000 SC 3559 (3559, 3560) : (2000) 10 SCC 662 : 2000 CrLJ 4672.

[11358] ● Cruelty—Act of accused tantamount to.—The act of accused was alleged to have driven the deceased to railway track for ending her life. Act of accused tantamounted to cruelty which is expressly made punishable u/s. 498A. However he was not held liable under Section 511 as it was not applicable. Satvir Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 2001 SC 2828 : (2001) 8 SCC 633 : 2001 CrLJ 4625 (SC).

[11359] ● Dowry death—Wife committing suicide.—The wife committed suicide within a year of her marriage but evidence relied on was a letter written by deceased to her father in which she had mentioned that she was beaten and pushed out of the house by the accused. The cause of beating as per evidence was her forgetful nature. It was held that inference about demand for dowry by the accused was wrongly drawn as there was no evidence to show that accused had ever made demand for dowry. Therefore conviction of accused u/s. 306 for abetment to commit suicide was set aside but conviction under Section 498A was maintained by holding that merely because an accused had been held liable to be punished under Section 498A it does not follow that on some evidence he must also and necessarily be held guilty of having abetted the commission of suicide. Ramesh Kumar v. State of Chattisgarh, AIR 2001 SC 3837 : (2001) 9 SCC 618 : 2001 CrLJ 4724 (SC).

[11360] ● Death by poisoning.—The accused was alleged to have beaten his wife who deposed in clear terms that her husband had administered her poison for which she received treatment in hospital where she was taken by her brother-in-law. She told everything to her father who had come to see her at the hospital. The evidence of father and victim was found reliable even though no direct evidence in the case was ignored by the Court below. In view of direct evidence which is supported by chemical examination report the accused was liable u/s. 307, 324/498A i.e. attempt to kill, for causing injuries and subjecting the victim wife to cruelty. The acquittal order of High Court is set aside. Mangilal v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 2001 SC 2937 : (2001) 8 SCC 519 : 2001 CrLJ 4760 (SC).

[11361] ● Material omission in statement of witness recorded under Section 161, CrPC.—In the instant case, PW-1, the maid servant stated in her evidence-in-Chief that the accused used to assault the deceased almost daily on the instigation of his sister, but in her cross-examination it has been elicited that she has not stated so in her statement to the Police recorded under Section 161 CrPC. Such material omission would discredit her version in Court. If her evidence is taken out from the purview of consideration, then the evidence of PWs-2 and 5 cannot be held to be of such nature which would establish the cruelty on the part of the husband to bring home the offence under Section 498-A, IPC. Therefore, the High Court was in error in upholding the conviction under Section 498, IPC. Tarun alias Gautam Mukherjee v. State of West Bengal, (2001) 10 SCC 754 : 2001 CrLJ 4937 : (2004) 4 Crimes 260.

[11362] ● Dowry death—No notice given to accused calling upon him to entry his defence.—The accused husband, his brother and mother used to harass and ill treat the deceased and one day accused husband and his brother poured kerosene and set her on fire. The evidence produced was sufficiently connecting the accused with the offence charged for and the conviction of all three accused u/s. 498 A was held proper. Accused husband and his brother were also convicted u/s. 302 and awarded life imprisonment and a fine of rupees 200/- each but sentences imposed against the accused were to run concurrently. The accused husband in a dowry related death was acquitted for the offences u/s. 302 and 498A but was convicted for alternative charge u/s. 304B Penal Code. It was held that in the absence of notice to the accused the conviction u/s. 304B Penal Code was unjustified as it would result in failure of justice. Shawnsaheb Multani v. State of Karnataka, AIR 2001 SC 921 : (2001) 2 SCC 577 : 2001 CrLJ 1075 (SC).

[11363] ● Cruelty—Subjecting woman to.—Section 306, IPC, read with Section 113A of the Evidence Act has only enabled the Court to punish a husband or his relative who subjected a woman to cruelty as envisaged in Section 498-A, IPC if such woman committed suicide within seven years of her marriage. It is immaterial for Section 306, IPC whether the cruelty or harassment was caused "soon before her death" or earlier. If it was caused "soon before her death" the special provision in Section 304-B, IPC would be invokable, otherwise resort can be made to Section 306, IPC. Satvir Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 2001 SC 2828 : (2001) 8 SCC 633 : 2001 CrLJ 4625 (SC).

[11364] ● "Soon before her death"—Expression indicating that there must be perceptible nexus between death and dowry related harassment.—There should be a perceptible nexus between her death and the dowry related harassment or cruelty inflicted on her. If the interval elapsed between the infliction of such harassment or cruelty and her death is wide, the Court would be in a position to gauge that in all probabilities the harassment would not have been the immediate cause of her death. It is hence for the Court to decide, on the facts and circumstances of each case whether the said interval in that particular case was sufficient to snuff its cord from the concept "soon before her death". Satvir Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 2001 SC 2828 : (2001) 8 SCC 633 : 2001 CrLJ 4625 (SC).

[11365] ● Appreciation of evidence—Death by poisoning.—The appellant, father of Munki, has given evidence as PW-3. He also corroborates the fact that Munki was regularly beaten by her husband. He deposed that on hearing that she had been admitted to the hospital, he went to the hospital. he deposed that she had informed him that her husband had administered poison to her. His testimony has also not been shaken in cross-examination. This is direct evidence, which was available before the Court. The Second Additional District and Sessions Judge was wrong to have ignored this evidence. This evidence was supported by the fact that on chemical examination organo-phosphorus, i.e., an insecticide poison, was found in the gastric lavage and blood sample of Munki. The evidence showed that this substances was dangerous to life. Through the evidence of these two witnesses the prosecution had also conclusively proved that 2nd respondent had subjected Munki to cruelty. Mangilal v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 2001 SC 2937 : (2001) 8 SCC 519 : 2002 SCC (Cri) 16 (18) : 2001 CrLJ 4760 : 2001 CrLR (SC) 766.

[11366] ● Bride burning—Torture of deceased for dowry.—Further evidence records that there has been no improvement the behavioural pattern and she was subjected to dowry torture as also various abusive treatment by reason of not being able to bear a child. The evidence however tells a different story.

The torture continued and reached its peak in July 1985, by reason of a booking of a Maruti Van by the complainant which was asked to be delivered to the accused/ appellant, on refusal, however, to comply with the demand of delivery of the Van by the complainant, the relationship was further estranged and PW-3 was given a warning as regards the events to follow and it is only thereafter that this incident of burn injury took place. The death was caused by burn injuries only and having considered the nature of injuries and since one cannot but rule out an accidental death as discussed hereinbefore, the death of Ekta cannot but be attributed to be suicidal on the basis of the circumstances as are available on record. With the situation existing and having regard to statutory presumption, this Court cannot but lend concurrence to the opinion of passed by the High Court. Pawan Kumar v. State of Haryana, AIR 2001 SC 1324 : (2001) 3 SCC 628 : 2001 SCC (Cri) 594 : 2001 CrLJ 1679 : 2001 CrLR (SC) 309 : JT 2001 (3) SC 475 : (2001) 2 Crimes 1.

[11367] ● Dowry torture—Circumstantial evidence.—It was contended that the factum of the hospitalization of Ekta in any event negates any ill-treatment or torture, but to be treated as positive evidence of goodwill and affection. We are however unable to record concurrence therewith having due regard to the evidence and other materials available on record. There is thus preponderance of evidence of dowry torture. Pawan Kumar v. State of Haryana, AIR 2001 SC 1324 : (2001) 3 SCC 628 : 2001 SCC (Cri) 594 (599) : 2001 CrLJ 1679 : 2001 CrLR (SC) 309 : JT 2001 (3) SC 475 : (2001) 2 Crimes 1.

[11368] ● "Cruelty" is essentially a question of fact.—Whether one spouse has been guilty of cruelty to the other is essentially a question of fact. The impact of complaints, accusations or taunts on a person amounting to cruelty depends on various factors like the sensitivity of the individual victim concerned, the social background, the environment, education, etc. Further, mental cruelty varies from person to person depending on the intensity of sensitivity and the degree of courage or endurance to withstand such mental cruelty. In other words, each case has to be decided on its own facts to decide whether the mental cruelty was established or not. Mohd. Hoshan v. State of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 2002 SC 3270 : (2002) 7 SCC 414 : 2002 SCC (Cri) 1765 : 2002 CrLJ 4124.

[11369] ● Concept of cruelty—Varies from individual to individual.—The concept of cruelty and its effect varies from individual to individual, also depending upon the social and economic status to which such person belongs. "Cruelty" for the purposes of constituting the offence under Section 498-A, IPC need not be physical. Even mental torture or abnormal behaviour may amount to cruelty and harassment in a given case. Gananath Pattnaik v. State of Orissa, (2002) 2 SCC 619 : 2002 (1) Crimes 309.

[11370] ● Statement on record with aid of Section 32, Evidence Act not admissible in evidence for offence under Section 498, IPC.—A statement taken on record with the aid of Section 32 of the Indian Evidence Act at a time when the appellant was being tried for the offence under Section 304-B, IPC was admissible under Clause (1) of the said section as it related to the cause of death of the deceased and the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in her death. Such a statement is not admissible in evidence for the offence punishable under Section 498-A of the IPC and has to be termed as being only a hearsay evidence. Section 32 is an exception to the hearsay rule and deals with the statements or declarations by a person, since dead, relating to the cause of his or her death or the circumstances leading to such death. If a statement which otherwise is covered by the hearsay rule does not fall within the exceptions of Section 32 of the Evidence Act, the same cannot be relied upon for finding the guilt of the accused. Gananath Pattnaik v. State of Orissa, (2002) 2 SCC 619 : 2002 (1) Crimes 309.

[11371] ● Wilful act or conduct to be proximate cause to attract Section 498-A, IPC.—The wilful act or conduct ought to be the proximate cause in order to bring home the charge under Section 498-A and not de hors the same. To have an event sometime back cannot be termed to be a factum taken note of in the matter of a charge under Section 498-A. The legislative intent is clear enough to indicate in particular reference to Explanation (b) that there shall have to be a series of acts in order to be a harassment within the meaning of Explanation (b). The letters by itself though may depict a reprehensible conduct, would not, however, bring home the charge of Section 498-A against the accused. Acquittal of a charge under Section 306, though not by itself a ground for acquittal under Section 498-A, but some cogent evidence is required to bring home the charge of Section 498-A, as well, without which the charge cannot be said to be maintained. Girdhar Shankar Tawade v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 2002 SC 2078 : (2002) 5 SCC 177 : 2002 SCC (Cri) 971 : 2002 CrLJ 2814 : 2002 (2) Crimes 360.

[11372] ● No evidence that at the time of marriage there was demand of dowry.—There was no evidence against accused No. 1 that at the time of marriage, there was any demand or settlement for giving dowry in cash or by way of transfer of property. The father of the deceased has not stated that cash, ornaments and the land were given at the time of marriage pursuant to any demand of dowry by the parents of the husband. He merely stated that according to the custom of the community declaration was made of gift of five acres of land to the deceased as her "Stridhana" called in the community as pasupukumkuma. As promised and declared in the ritual at the time of marriage, the land was transferred in the name of the wife. The couple lived happily thereafter. It was only 2-3 months thereafter that the husband started harassing the wife to force her to transfer the land to him. It was held that the harassment or cruel treatment to pressurize her to transfer the land could not be said to be "in connection with any alleged dowry demand." K. Prema S. Rao v. Yadla Srinivasa Rao, AIR 2003 SC 11 : (2003) 1 SCC 217 : 2003 CrLJ 69 : JT (2002) 8 SC 502 : (2003) 1 Crimes 62.

[11373] ● Cruelty—Consequences of—Meaning of cruelty or harassment.—Consequences of cruelty which are likely to drive a woman to commit suicide or to cause grave injury or danger to life, limb or health, whether mental or physical, of the woman is required to be established in order to bring home the application of Section 498-A, IPC. Cruelty has been defined in the Explanation for the purpose of Section 498-A. Substantive Section 498-A, IPC and presumptive Section 113-B of the Evidence Act have been inserted in the respective statutes by the Criminal Law (Second Amendment) Act, 1983. It is to be noted that Sections 304-B and 498-A, IPC cannot held to be mutually inclusive. These provisions deal with two distinct offences. It is true that cruelty is a common essential to both the sections and that has to be proved. The Explanation to Section 498-A gives the meaning of "cruelty". In Section 204-B, there is no such Explanation about the meaning of "cruelty". But having regard to the common background to these offences, it has to be taken that the meaning of "cruelty" or "harassment" is the same as prescribed in the Explanation to Section 498-A under which "cruelty" by itself amounts to an offence. Under Section 304-B, it is "dowry death" that is punishable and such death should have occurred within seven years of marriage. No such period is mentioned in Section 498-A. A person charged and acquitted under Section 204-B can be convicted under Section 398-A without that charge being there, if such a case is made out. If the case is established, there can be a conviction under both the sections. Kaliyaperumal v. State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 2003 SC 3828 : (2004) 9 SCC 157 : 2004 SCC (Cri) 1417 (1423) : 2003 CrLJ 4321 : (2003) 4 Crimes 210.

[11374] ● Accused pressurising and harassing deceased to part with Stridhan.—The accused pressurised and harassed the deceased to part with the land received by her from her father as "Stridhana". As a method adopted for harassment, the Postal Mail of her relatives sent to her was suppressed by the husband who was in a position to do so being a Branch Post Master in the village. When the letters were discovered by the wife and she handed them over to her father, she was driven out of the house. This cruel conduct of the husband led the wife to commit suicide.

The Trial Court and the High Court were, therefore, perfectly justified on this evidence to hold accused No. 1 guilty of the offence of "cruelty" under Section 498-A. K. Prema S. Rao v. Yadla Srinivasa Rao, AIR 2003 SC 11 : (2003) 1 SCC 217 : 2003 CrLJ 69 : 2003 (1) Crimes 62.

[11375] ● Section 498-A, IPC.—Object and Scope.—There is no doubt that the object of introducing Chapter XX-A containing Section 498-A in the Indian Penal Code was to prevent the torture to a woman by her husband or by relatives of her husband. Section 498-A was added with a view to punishing a husband and his relatives who harass or torture the wife to coerce her or her relatives to satisfy unlawful demands of dowry. The hyper-technical view would be counter productive and would act against interests of women and against the object for which this provision was added. There is every likelihood that non-exercise of inherent power to quash the proceedings to meet the ends of justice would prevent women from settling earlier. That is not the object of Chapter XX-A of Indian Penal Code. B.S. Joshi v. State of Haryana, AIR 2003 SC 1386 : (2004) 4 SCC 675 : 2003 CrLJ 2028 : 2003 (2) Crimes 284.

[11376] ● Demand of additional dowry—Wife committing suicide.—"The evidence on record to would our attention has also been drawn by the learned counsel sufficiently makes out the case of persistent and unabated harassment and acts of cruelty meted out to the deceased by not only pestering her and her relatives to give more and more by way of additional dowry from time to time, but that she had been ill-treated physically and, consequently, the challenge made to the concurrent findings is not only bereft of substance but does not merit countenance in our hands." Moti Lal v. State of M.P. (Now Chattisgarh), (2004) 2 SCC 469 : 2004 SCC (Cri) 573 (577) : 2004 CrLJ 907 : JT 2004 (1) SC 353 : (2004) 1 Crimes 341.

[11377] ● Deceased wife's annoyance due to relative children looked after in husbands home—Not amount to cruelty or harassment.—In this case the father of the deceased, (PW-1) in his deposition, stated that misunderstandings arose between his daughter and her husband on account of the fact that the three children of the deceased sister of the appellant were being brought up, in the house of the appellant which was objected to by the deceased. If in those unfortunate circumstances, the three children of the deceased sister of the appellant were being brought up in his family, one cannot blame the appellant or his parents for having shown compassion towards the children of his deceased sister. If that is what caused annoyance to the deceased, one cannot equate such conduct with cruelty or harassment. Lella Srinivasa Rao v. State of A.P., AIR 2004 SC 1720 : (2004) 9 SCC 713 : 2004 SCC (Cri) 1479 (1483-84) : JT 2004 3 SC 12 : (2004) 1 JCC 645.

[11378] ● Agreement entered into by parties for compromise—Ex facie settlement between parties appeared genuine—wife cannot plead that she was unaware of contents of settlement.—In proceedings under Sections 406, 498-A, IPC it was settled that a sum of Rs. 2,75,000/- would be paid by the petitioner to his wife in full and final settlement of stridhan, dowry, mehr, present past and future maintenance, and Rs. 50,000/- would be paid at the time of complainant on making statement and no objection for quashing the FIR. The wife accepted the amount of Rs. 2,75,000/-. Held, the wife cannot plead that she was not aware of the contents of settlement. Ex facie the settlement between the parties appears to be genuine. If the contention of the complainant wife is to be accepted, she would not have filed an application in that behalf before the Additional Sessions Judge. What was least expected of her was that she would return the said sum of Rs. 2,25,000/- to the husband. Continuance of proceedings under Sections 498-A and 406 would be abuse of the process of the Court and therefore liable to be quashed. Mohd Shamim v. Nahid Begum, AIR 2005 SC 757 : (2005) 3 SCC 302 : 2005 CrLJ 889 (892) : 2005 (1) Crimes 108.

[11379] ● Demand of dowry—Evidence.—Where witnesses have deposed about the demand of money and cruelty by the accused respondents, the Court would not reject the prosecution evidence merely because there was no consistency as to the exact demand raised by the respondent accused. Noticing the evidence on record, the High Court opined that there was no consistency as to the exact demand made by the respondent. The High Court, therefore, found the evidence of all these witnesses to be unreliable. The Supreme Court found this approach to be wholly unreasonable. Apart from the fact that the respondent used to press the deceased to get money from her mother, there was also clear evidence on record to establish the fact the she was being ill treated by the respondent. The evidence in that regard was consistent and had been deposed to by a large number of witnesses, some of whom were family members and others were the residents of Shimoga and were family friends. Even as to the amount demanded, there could be no consistency because if the respondent demanded different amounts at different times, the witnesses could not have deposed otherwise. The evidence on record clearly established the fact that the respondent had been making demands and the quantum differed form time to time. On some occasion he had demanded Rs. 10,000/- and on other occasions Rs. 15,000/- or Rs. 1,00,000/-. It appears wholly unreasonable to reject the evidence of such witnesses merely on the ground that there is no consistency as to the exact amount demanded by the respondent. State of Karnataka v. K. Gopalakrishna, AIR 2005 SC 1014 : (2005) 9 SCC 291 : 2005 CrLJ 1436 (1439) : 2005 (1) Crimes 271.

[11380] ● Demand of dowry—Proof.—In the instant case, the High Court rejected the evidence of witnesses that the respondent had been making demands of and the amount differed from time to time, merely on the ground that there was no consistency as to the exact amount demanded by the respondent.

Another reason given by the High Court that in Exhibit D-3 a letter written by the deceased to her husband quite sometime back, there is no mention of any ill treatment meted out to her by the respondent, and no other letter has been produced to show that she had even mentioned in any such letter that she was being ill treated. This approach of the High Court is again highly unreasonable. Merely because in one of the letters written to her husband she had no complained about ill treatment, is no ground to hold that she was never ill treated. Letter from which it appeared that it was one of those letters written by her in which there was no reference to bitterness in their marital life. However it is not expected that in every letter that a wife writes to the husband, she must complain to him about his ill treatment. Merely because in one solitary letter there is no reference to ill treatment by the respondent would be no ground to arrive at the conclusion that she was never ill-treated by her husband particularly in the face of the evidence of large number of witnesses. State of Karnataka v. K. Gopalakrishna, AIR 2005 SC 1014 : (2005) 9 SCC 291 : 2005 CrLJ 1436 (1439) : 2005 (1) Crimes 271.

[11381] ● Section 498-A, IPC is not ultra vires.—Section 498-A is neither unconstitutional nor ultra vires. It cannot be said that Section 498-A has no legal basis nor constitutional foundation. Merely because the provision is constitutional and intra vires, does give a licence to unscrupulous persons to wreck personal vendetta or unleash harassment, it may, therefore, become necessary for the legislature to find out ways how the makers of frivolous complaints or allegations can be appropriately dealt with. Till then the Courts have to take care of the situation within the existing frame work. The object is to strike at the roots of dowry menace. But by misuse of the provisions a new legal terrorism can be unlashed. Sushil Kumar Sharma v. Union of India, AIR 2005 SC 3100 : (2005) 6 SCC 281 : 2005 CrLJ 3439 (3442).

[11382] ● No case under Sections 498-A, 406, 28 and Section 4, Dowry Prohibition Act made out.—In the instant case looking at the allegations in the FIR and the contents of charge-sheet, the Supreme Court held that "none of the alleged offences, viz. Sections 498-A, 406 of the IPC and Section 4 of the Dowry Prohibition Act are made out against her. She is the married sister of the informant's husband who is undisputedly living in Delhi with her family. Assuming that during relevant time, i.e. between March and October, 1997, when the 6th respondent (informant) lived in Mumbai in her marital home, the said lady stayed with them for some days, there is nothing in the complaint which connects her with an offence under Section 498-A or any other offence of which cognizance was taken. Certain acts of taunting and ill-treatment of informant by her sister-in-law (appellant) were alleged but they do not pertain to dowry demand or entrustment and misappropriation of property belonging to the informant. What was said against her in the FIR is that on some occasions, she directed the complainant to wash W.C. and she used to abuse her and use to pass remarks such as 'even if you have got much jewellery, you are our slave'. It is further stated in the report that Gowri would make wrong imputations to provoke her husband and would warn her that nobody could do anything to her family. These allegations, even if true, do not amount to harassment with a view to coercing the informant or her relation to meet an unlawful demand for any property or valuable security. At the most, the allegations reveal that her sister-in-law Gowri was insulting and making derogatory remarks against her and behaving rudely against her. Even acts of abetment in connection with unlawful demand for property/dowry are not alleged against her. The bald allegations made against her sister-in-law seem to suggest the anxiety of the informant to rope in as many of the husband's relations as possible. Neither the FIR nor the charge-sheet furnished the legal basis to the Magistrate to take cognizance of the offences alleged against the appellant Gowri Ramaswamy. The High Court ought not to have relegated her to the ordeal of trial. Accordingly, the proceedings against the appellant Gowri Ramaswamy are hereby quashed". Ramesh v. State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 2005 SC 1989 : (2005) 3 SCC 507 : 2005 CrLJ 1732 (1734) : 2005 (1) Crimes 366.

[11383] ● No material to convict accused.—The accused A1 husband was married to the deceased on 27.5.1990. On 4.10.1990, her dead body was found near a river. On next day morning at 10 AM, A1 lodged FIR at the police station to the effect that on the earlier night the deceased had gone out of the house to clean utensils but did not return, and since it was raining, the search did not yield the result. In the morning they found the dead body near the river. The autopsy revealed on the body of the deceased.

The trial Court found A1 husband guilty of charge under Section 498-A, but acquitted him of other charges and other two accused were acquitted of all other charges. Held, that there was no material to convict the appellant A1 on charge under Section 498-A. The evidence only disclosed that the accused husband A1 entertained a suspicion about her chastity and that was the reason why she was harassed by him. The conviction of the appellant accused A1 under Section 498-A was set aside. K.R. Sorachari v. State of Karnataka, AIR 2005 SC 2674 : (2005) 11 SCC 214 : 2005 CrLJ 3082 (3083, 3084) : 2005 (2) Crimes 128.

[11384] ● Difference between Sections 306 and 498-A.—The basic difference between the two sections i.e. Section 306 and Section 498-A is that of intention. Under the latter, cruelty committed by the husband or his relations drag the woman concerned to commit suicide, while under the former provision suicide is abetted and intended. Sushil Kumar Sharma v. Union of India, AIR 2005 SC 3100 : (2005) 6 SCC 281 : 2005 CrLJ 3439.

[11385] ● Consistent demand of dowry within a short period of marriage.—In the instant case, the evidence clearly established that the accused persons were consistent in their demand regarding additional amount of Rs. 10,000/- even after their initial demand of tape recorder was fulfilled. The evidence clearly establishes that the deceased was harassed at her matrimonial home and her staying there had become miserable. The deceased on several occasions, within a short span of four months of her marriage, informed her father that she was being troubled by her husband and his elder brother. They also insulted and taunted her father in her presence and asked PW-1 to take her back to his home for his inability to fulfill their unlawful demand. The reluctance shown by the deceased to go to her matrimonial home within a short period of her marriage was indicative of the fact of the treatment given to her. At her matrimonial home, she was harassed and constantly nagged for non-payment of additional amount by her father. The facts clearly established that husband and his elder brother subjected the deceased to cruelty and their conviction under Section 498-A, IPC is based on cogent reliable evidence. Subbarao v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 2006 SC 2002 : 2006 CrLJ 2881 (2885, 2886) : 2006 (2) Crimes 195.

[11386] ● Compromise in non-compoundable offences.—Though permission cannot be granted to record the compromise, the effect of compromise can be taken into consideration while awarding sentence. In the instant case, where the accused had been in an custody for a period of more than two months and the parties had amicable settled the matter, it was held that ends of justice would be met, if the sentence is reduced to already undergone. Badal Dev v. State of Assam, (2006) 10 SCC 540 : 2007 (1) SCC (Cri) 139.

[11387] ● Demand of dowry leading to suicide.—It has come in the evidence of PW-2 and PW-4 and PW-10 that the deceased had been harassed due to the demands of dowry. About six months prior to the occurrence, the accused visited the house of PW-4 (maternal uncle of deceased) and demanded Rs. 80,000/- for purchase of tractor. When PW-4 refused to pay the amount, the accused started beating the deceased and ultimately she was turned out of the matrimonial house, and went to her parents house where she stayed for about 3 months. Thereafter she was taken back by the accused but 10 days thereafter she committed suicide. It has come in evidence that the accused gave beating to his wife to such an extent that she became unable to walk. Defence plea that the deceased committed suicide due to tension of pregnancy was not accepted. Conviction under Sections 306 and 498-A was upheld. Surender v. State of Haryana, (2006) 12 SCC 375 : 2007 (2) SCC (Cri) 210 : 2007 CrLJ 779 (782) : 2006 (4) Crimes 428 (SC).

[11388] ● Cruelty—Meaning.—The Shorter Oxford Dictionary defines 'cruelty' as 'the quality of being cruel; disposition of inflicting suffering; delight in or indifference to another's pain; mercilessness; hard-heartedness'.

The term "mental cruelty" has been defined in the Black's Law Dictionary [8th Edition, 2004] as under:

"Mental Cruelty—As a ground for divorce, one spouse's course of conduct (not involving actual violence) that creates such anguish that it endangers the life, physical health, or mental health of the other spouse."

The concept of cruelty has been summarized in Halsbury's laws of England [Vol. 13, 4th Edition Para 1269] as under:

"The general rule in all cases of cruelty is that the entire matrimonial relationship must be considered, and that rule is of special value when the cruelty consists not of violent acts but of injurious reproaches, complaints, accusations or taunts. In cases where no violence is averred, it is undesirable to consider judicial pronouncements with a view to creating certain categories of acts or conduct as having or lacking the nature or quality which renders them capable or incapable in all circumstances of amounting to cruelty, for it is the effect of the conduct rather than its nature which is of paramount importance in assessing a complaint of cruelty. Whether one spouse has been guilty of cruelty to the other is essentially a question of fact and previously decided cases have little, if any, value. The Court should bear in mind the physical and mental condition of the parties as well as their social status, and should consider the impact of the personality and conduct of one spouse on the mind of the other, weighing all incidents and quarrels between the spouses from that point of view; further, the conduct alleged must be examined in the light of the complainant's capacity for endurance and the extent to which that capacity is known to the other spouse Malevolent intention is not essential to cruelty but it is an important element where it exits."

In 24 American Jurisprudence 2d, the term "mental cruelty" has been defined as under:

"Mental Cruelty as a course of unprovoked conduct toward one's spouse which causes embarrassment, humiliation, and anguish so as to render the spouse's life miserable and unendurable. The plaintiff must show a course of conduct on the part of the defendant which so endangers the physical or mental health of the plaintiff as to render continued cohabitation unsafe or improper, although the plaintiff need not establish actual instances of physical abuse." Samar Ghosh v. Jaya Ghosh, (2007) 4 SCC 511 : 2007 (4) SCR 428 : 2007 (5) Scale 1 : 2007 (3) Supreme 26.

[11389] ● Sufficient evidence for conviction.—The statements of PW-1 and PW-4, mother and brother of deceased respectively conclusively established the fact that the accused was all treating the deceased as his demand for bringing money from her parents had not been fulfilled. There witnesses had also deposed that the deceased had given a statement when she was admitted in the hospital that it was the accused who had poured Kerosene upon her and had set her on fire. A formal dying declaration was recorded by PW-10. Head constable in the presence of PW-9, Deputy Medical officer in the Hospital. There was absolutely no reason to cast any doubt on the testimony of PW-10 and PW-9. Both were Government servants and they did not at all know the accused and had absolutely to reason to fabricate a document viz., the dying declaration. The prosecution case was fully established and the charges were proved. Dayal Singh v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 12 SCC 452 : 2007 CrLJ 3265 (3268) : 2007 (3) Crimes 129.

[11390] ● Dowry death—Totality of circumstances to be considered.—The prosecution evidences brought on records clearly suggest that she had been subjected to cruelty both physical and mental. Existence of discord between the parties in regard to torture at least at one point of time is not in dispute. She had been driven out of her house. She had to come back to her parents house again and again. Her husband did not even make any enquiry about her, when she was staying with her parents. A settlement had been arrived at wherefor intervention of the members of the panchayat had been sought for. Only upon the said settlement, the deceased came back to her matrimonial home. Unnatural death of the deceased, in our opinion, must be considered from that point of view.

The deceased categorically stated that even the garments which had burn presented by her parents were not liked by her husband and she had been abused and insulted by her husband. In some of the letters, it appears that she expressed her vent that she had thought of committing suicide but then consoled her mother that she would not do so. The contents of those letters had not been dented or disputed. Even in one of the letters Ex. A-1, she made allegations against her in-laws during her stay at matrimonial home. Her mental condition during the stay at her matrimonial home can be well-imagined. For establishing a charge of cruelty, it is not necessary that the husband must always stay in the matrimonial home. Systematic torture of the deceased is evident in this case. We do not find any reason to differ from the findings of the learned Trial Judge or the High Court. Ananda Mohan Sen v. State of West Bengal, (2007) 10 SCC 774 : 2007 CrLJ 2770 (2774).

[11391] ● Insufficient evidence.—There is no evidence on record on this aspect of any such demand. Even in the letters, on which prosecution placed heavy reliance, there is no reference to any demand of dowry or for that matter of any nature. In fact in Ex. P-2, the deceased had written to her mother that she had promised to pay for some articles which the mother-in-law i.e. A-1 had purchased. She had stated that she was embarrassed that her parents were not paying the money, though A-1 had never asked for it. This was not a case of any demand for property or valuable security. On the contrary, the deceased had objected to her parents not paying for something which the A-1 had spent the money. To similar effect was letter Ex. P-3. It is evident from the evidence on record that half of the marriage expenses were borne by the accused-appellant and his family. Even Ext. P.-4 on which learned counsel for the State placed strong reliance does not speak of any demand. It only speaks of apprehension of a second marriage. Though he submitted that the demand of dowry is in the background and has to be inferred, the plea is clearly unacceptable in the absence of any maleval to substantiate that plea. The letter was also written three years prior to the occurrence. The prosecution has failed to establish its accusations so far as Section 498-A is concerned to hold the accused guilty. Shivanand Mallappa Koti v. State of Karnataka, AIR 2007 SC 2314 (2316) : 2007 (7) SCR 930 : JT 2007 (8) SC 462.

[11392] ● Scope of section 498, IPC.—Section 498-A, IPC makes "cruelty" by husband or his relatives a punishable offence. State of Andhra Pradesh v. M. Madhusudhan Rao, (2008) 14 SCC 582 : 2008 (4) Crimes 350 : JT 2008 (1) SC 454.

[11393] ● Object of Section 498-A.—The object for which Section 498-A, IPC was introduced is amply reflected in the Statement of Objects and Reasons while enacting the Criminal Law (Amendment) Act 46 of 1983. As clearly stated therein the increase in the number of dowry deaths is a matter of serious concern. The extent of the evil has been commented upon by the Joint Committee of the Houses to examine the work of the Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961. In some cases, cruelty of the husband and the relatives of the husband which culminate in suicide by or murder of the helpless woman concerned, constitute only a small fraction involving such cruelty. Therefore, it was proposed to amend IPC, the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 and the Evidence Act suitably to deal effectively not only with cases of dowry deaths but also cases of cruelty to married women by the husband, in-laws and relatives. The avowed object is to combat the menace of dowry death and cruelty. Noorjahan v. State, AIR 2008 SC 2131 : (2008) 11 SCC 55 : 2008 (3) SCC (Cri) 915 : 2008 (8) SCR 903 : JT 2008 (6) 220 : 200 (6) Scale 423 : 2008 (2) Crimes 210 (SC).

[11394] ● Ingredients of offence.—The tern cruelty has been defined in the explanatior appended to the said section, to mean: (1) any wilful conduct which is of such a nature as is likely to drive the woman to commit suicide or to cause grave injury or danger to life, limb or health whether mental or physical of the woman; or (ii harassment of the woman where such harassment is with a view to coercing her or any person related to her to meet such demand. The above consequences of "cruelty" are required to be established in order to bring home an offence under Section 498-A, IPC. Onkar Nath Mishra v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2008) 2 SCC 561 : JT 2008 (1) SC 20 : 2008 CrLJ 1391 (1394). TO THE SAME EFFECT : Shivanand Mallappa Koti v. State of Karnataka, AIR 2007 SC 2314 : 2007 (7) SCR 930 : JT 2007 (8) SC 462.

[11395] ● Cruelty—Meaning.—For purpose of Section 498-A, IPC, harassment simpliciter is not "cruelty" and it is only when harassment is committed for the purpose of coercing a woman or any other person related to her to meet an unlawful demand for property etc., that it amounts to "cruelty" punishable under Section 498-A, IPC. State of Andhra Pradesh v. M. Madhusudhan Rao, JT 2008 (11) SC 454 : 2008 (4) Crimes 350 (SC).

[11396] ● Case under Section 498-A—Parties living separately for the last more than 10 years.—Indisputably, the parties had been living separately for more than ten years. How then a case under Section 498-A, IPC can be said to have made out and that too at such a distant point of time is the question, particularly in view of the bar of limitation as contained in Section 468, CrPC. Even otherwise it is unbelievable that the appellant was really harassed by her husband or her in laws. M. Saravana Porselvi v. A.R. Chandrasekar, 2008 CrLJ 3034 (3035) (SC).

[11397] ● Compromise petition during pendency of appeal against conviction.—Pending appeal against conviction of accused under section 498-A, the parties sorted out the difference and moved an application for compromise in criminal proceedings. The compromise petition was rejected by Courts below. Held, the parties accused at a settlement and the complainant did not want to prosecute the accused. Considering the peculiar facts of the case, the continuation of criminal proceedings amounted to abuse of process of law. Criminal proceedings were quashed. Arvind Bar- saul v. State of Madhya Pradesh, (2008) 5 SCC 794 : 2008 (3) SCC (Cri) 88.

[11398] ● Trial Court discharged in-laws—High Court not set aside discharging—No reasons recorded.—Where the trial Court found no case under Section 498-A, IPC and discharged the in-laws, the High Court was not justified in setting aside the discharge order merely by observing that mother-in-law and father-in-law are persons "who could misappropriate" and "who could practice cruelty" without indicating any reason and as such the discharge order of High Court was set aside. Ram Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 2008 SC 1294 : (2008) 4 SCC 70 : 2008 CrLJ 1941 (1943).

[11399] ● Complaint by wife against her husband and in-laws.—As regards the applicability of Section 498-A, IPC, in the complaint dated 8.11.1994 there is not even a whisper of a wilful conduct of appellants No. 1 and 2 of harassment of the complainant at their hands with a view to coercing her to meet any unlawful demand by them so as to attract the provisions of Section 498-A read with Explanation thereto. The complaint refers to the talk the complainant purports to have had with her husband, appellant No. 3, who is alleged to have told her to come to Bijnore if she apologizes to his father, keeps him happy; obeys his sister and talks to her father (complainant's) to give her Rs. 50,000/- and V.C.R. and brings these articles to Bijnore. We are convinced that the allegation of misbehaviour on the part of appellant Nos. 1 and 2 and the demand of Rs. 50,000/- and V.C.R. by them made by the complainant in her subsequent statement, dated 4.4.1995, was an after thought and not bona fide. Section 498-A, IPC was introduced with the avowed object to combat the menace of dowry deaths and harassment to a woman at the hands of her husband or his relatives. Nevertheless, the provision should not be used as a device to achieve oblique motives. Having carefully glanced through the complaint, the F.I.R. and the charge-sheet, we find that charge under Section 498-A, IPC is not brought home insofar as appellant Nos. 1 and 2 are concerned.

Consequently, we allow the appeal partly; quash the charge framed against all the appellants under Section 406, IPC: quash the charge framed against appellant Nos. 1 and 2 under Section 498-A, IPC and dismiss the appeal of appellant No. 3 against framing of charge under Section 498-A, IPC. Needless to add that the trial Court shall now proceed with the trial untrammeled by any observation made by the Additional Sessions Judge and upheld by the High Court in the impugned order or by us in this judgment. Onkar Nath Mishra v. State (NCT of Delhi), (2008) 2 SCC 561 : 2008 SCC (Cri) 507 : 2008 CrLJ 1391 (1394) : 2008 (1) Crimes 42(SC).

[11400] ● Sections 304-B and 498-A, IPC.—These provisions deal with two districts offences. It is true that cruelty is common essential to both the sections and that has to be proved. The Explanation to Section 498-A gives the meaning of "cruelty". But having regard to common background to these offences it has to be taken that the meaning of "cruelty" or "harassment" is the same as prescribed in the Explanation to Section 498-A, under which "cruelty" by itself amounts to an offence. Satish Kumar Batra v. State of Haryana, AIR 2009 SC 2180 : (2009) 2 SCC 491 : 2009 CrLJ 2447 (2449) : JT 2009 (5) SC 433.

[11401] ● Section 498-A—Scope.—One of the reasons for ill-treatment to the deceased was that the deceased gave birth to a female child, which was considered to be inauspicious and after the birth of the said female child, the Rajendran's brother's wife died and the appellants thought that the birth of the said female child was the reason for various debacles in the family and consequently, she was tortured by the appellants.

Section 498-A IPC has two limbs. The first limb of Section 498-A provides that whoever, being the husband or the relative of the husband of a woman, subjects such woman to cruelty shall be punished. 'Cruelty' has been defined in Clause (a) of the Explanation to the said Section as any wilful conduct which is of such a nature as is likely to drive to a woman to commit suicide. When there is demand of dowry, the case comes under Clause (b) of the Explanation to Section 498-A. Clause (a) of the Explanation has definite application to the facts of the present case. Additionally, effect of Section 113-A of the Indian Evidence Act cannot be lost sight of.

Further as per Section 113-A of the Evidence Act when the question as to whether commission of suicide by a woman had been abetted by her husband or any relative of her husband and it is shown that she had committed suicide within a period of seven years from the date of her marriage and that her husband or such relative of her husband had subjected her to cruelty, the Court may presume that such suicide had been abetted by her husband or by such relative of her husband. This has not been rebutted by the appellants.

Above being the position we find no merit in these appeals, which are accordingly dismissed. Rajendran v. State, Assistant Commissioner of Police, AIR 2009 SC 855 : (2008) 17 SCC 501 : (2009) 1 Crimes 135 : 2008 (16) SCR 1005.

[11402] ● Demand of money—Wife and husband having no cordial relations.—In the instant case, there was demand that property in the name of wife be sold out and wife should bring more money from her parents.

The independent witnesses deposed that when they came to know that Malathi Devi had died, they reached the place of occurrence and witnessed that the room in which her dead body was found, had been opened by lifting the lever from inside. The body of the deceased was in a sitting posture on a double cot on her knees, and hanging from a fan tied with a sari. It was, therefore, inferred that it was a case of suicide as otherwise, there was no occasion to bolt the room from inside. The trial Court taking into consideration the circumstances concluded that the relations between husband and wife were not cordial and that she had been harassed to meet the unlawful demand of the appellant as he wanted to dispose of the immovable property and compel the deceased to fetch more money from her parents. The execution of the deed dated 15.6. 1999 (Ex. P-1) was enough to show that it had been executed in order to restrain the family members of the deceased to launch criminal prosecution against the appellant. The Court also took other circumstances into account, that the death of the deceased was in the house of the appellant; neither the appellant nor his mother made any attempt to inform the family members of the deceased about the death; her dead body had been cremated hurriedly without any autopsy having been conducted; there were independent witnesses like Sunkara Nagaraju (PW-5) etc. and came to the conclusion that she had been harassed/coerced to the extent that Malathi committed suicide. The Court rightly found the charge under Section 498-A fully proved against the appellant. Undavali Narayana Rao v. State of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 2010 SC 3708 : (2009) 14 SCC 588 : 2009 (11) SCR 660 : 2009 (5) Supreme 608 : 2009 (3) Crimes 265.

[11403] ● Relative of husband of a woman—Meaning.—In the absence of any statutory definition, the term 'relative' must be assigned a meaning as is commonly understood. Ordinarily it would include father, mother, husband or wife, son, daughter, brother, sister, nephew or niece, grandson or grand-daughter of an individual or the spouse of any person. The meaning of the word 'relative' would depend upon the nature of the statute. It principally includes a person related by blood, marriage or adoption.

By no stretch of imagination a girl friend or even a concubine in an etymological sense would be a 'relative'. The word 'relative' brings within its purview a status. Such a status must be conferred either by blood or marriage or adoption. If no marriage has taken place, the question of one being relative of another would not arise. U. Suvetha v. State, 2009 (6) SCC 757 : 2009 CrLJ 2974 ((2977, 2979) : 2009 (7) SCR 902 : 2009 (2) Crimes 357 (SC).

[11404] ● Insufficient evidence.—In the instant case there is no such allegation either in the FIR or in the charge sheet making out a prima facie case as narrated under Explanation (a) of Section 498-A which defines cruelty. There is no allegation that there is any such conduct on the part of the appellant which could be said to be amounting to cruelty of such a nature as is likely to cause the Respondent No. 2 to commit suicide or to cause any injury to her life. The ingredient to constitute an offence under Explanation (a) of Section 498-A, IPC are not at all mentioned either in FIR or in charge sheet and in absence thereof, no case is made out. Therefore, Explanation (a) as found in Section 498-A, IPC is clearly not attracted in the present case.

In order to constitute cruelty under the said provision there has to be harassment of the woman with a view to coercing her or any person related to her to meet any unlawful demand for any property or valuable security or a case is to be made out to the effect that there is a failure by her or any person related to her to meet such demand. When the allegation made in the FIR and charge sheet is examined in the present case in the light of the aforesaid provision, it is found that no prima facie case even under the aforesaid provision is made out to attract a case of cruelty.

The marriage between the appellant and Respondent No. 2 was performed on 23.10.1997 when it is alleged that Rs. 5 lakhs was given by the parents of Respondent No. 2 to the family of appellant as dowry. The FIR was filed in the month of April, 2002 and in the said FIR there is no allegation that subsequent thereto any harassment was made by the appellant with a view to coercing her or any person related to Respondent No. 2 to meet any unlawful demand or any property.

In that view of the matter neither Explanation (a) nor Explanation (b) of Section 498-A of IPC is attracted in the present case. It is crystal clear that neither in the FIR nor in the charge sheet there is any ingredient of Section 498-A IPC, which could prima facie constitute a case of cruelty as defined in that section.

It is thus established that on a reading of the FIR as also the charge sheet filed against the appellant no case under Section 498-A is made out on the face of the record, and therefore, both the FIR as also the charge sheet are liable to be quashed in exercise of the powers under Section 482 of the CrPC. Clearly, the High Court failed to appreciate the facts in proper perspective, and therefore, committed an error on the face of the record. Shakson Belthissor v. State of Kerala, 2009 (9) SCR 1187 : 2009 (5) Supreme 281.

[11405] ● Abetment of offence under Section 498-A, IPC.—Appellant had not been charged for abetment of a crime. Any conspiracy amongst the accused persons has also not been alleged. A woman in terms of the aforementioned provision must be subjected to cruelty by her husband and/or his relative. The word 'cruelty' has also been defined in the explanation appended thereto. It is in two parts. Clause (a) of the said explanation refers to a conduct which is likely to drive the woman to commit suicide or to cause grave injury or danger to her life, limb or health (whether mental or physical); Clause (b) provides for harassment of the woman, where such harassment, is with a view to coercing her or any person related to her to meet any unlawful demand for any property or valuable security.

It is not the case of the first informant that the appellant had any role to play with regard to demand of dowry. U. Suvetha v. State, (2009) 6 SCC 757 : 2009 CrLJ 2974 : 2009 (7) SCR 902 : 2009 (3) Supreme 797 : 2009 (2) Crimes 357 (SC).

[11406] ● Insufficient evidence.—The only evidence to bring home charge under Section 498-A, IPC, is that of PW-4 and PW-5. In their deposition PW-4 and PW-5 stated that their sister told them that accused was torturing her as he wanted that her brothers arrange a job for him or the house at Ganj Basoda is given to him or a cash of Rs. 1 lac is given to enable him to do some business. They deposed that as and when their sister come to their house, she would tell them that accused used to insert cloth in her mouth and give beatings for dowry. The trial Court as well as the High Court relied on the evidence of PW-4 and PW-5 and held that charge under Section 498-A, IPC, against the accused was proved. Apart from the statement attributed to the deceased, none of the witnesses had spoken anything which they had seen directly insofar as torture and harassment to Ranjana Rani @ Raj Kumari was concerned.

What has been deposed by PW-4 and PW-5 has no connection with any circumstance of transaction which resulted in her death. The death of Smt. Ranjana Rani @ Raj Kumari was neither homicidal nor suicidal; it was accidental. Since for an offence under Section 498-A simpliciter, the question of death is not and cannot be an issue for consideration, we are afraid the evidence of PW-4 and PW-5 is hardly an evidence in law to establish such offence. In that situation Section 32(1) of the Evidence Act does not get attracted.

Section 6 of the Evidence Act, in the facts and circumstances of the case, insofar as admissibility of a statement of PW-4 and PW-5 about what the deceased had told them against the accused of the treatment meted out to her is concerned, is not at all attracted. [Appeal allowed] Bhairon Singh v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 2009 SC 2603 : 2009 CrLJ 3738 : 2009 (3) Crimes 199 (SC) : 2009 (9) SCR 875.

[11407] ● Object of Section 498-A, IPC.—The object for which Section 498-A, IPC was introduced is amply reflected in the Statement of Objects and Reasons while enacting the Criminal Law (Second Amendment) Act 46 of 1983. As clearly stated therein the increase in the number of dowry deaths is a matter of serious concern. The extent of the evil has been commented upon by the Joint Committee of the Houses to examine the work of the Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961. In some cases, cruelty of the husband and the relatives of the husband which culminate in suicide by or murder of the helpless woman concerned, constitute only a small fraction involving such cruelty. Therefore, it was proposed to amend IPC, the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 (in short "CrPC") and the Evidence Act suitably to deal effectively not only with cases of dowry deaths but also cases of cruelty to married women by the husband, in-laws and relatives. The avowed object is to combat the menace of dowry death and cruelty. Satish Kumar Batra v. State of Haryana, AIR 2009 SC 2180 : (2009) 12 SCC 491 : 2009 CrLJ 2447 : JT 2009 (5) SC 403 : 2009 (5) SCR 451.

[11408] ● Ingredients of Section 498-A.—Section 498-A, IPC has two limbs. The first limb of Section 498-A provides that whoever, being the husband or the relative of the husband of a woman, subjects such woman to cruelty shall be punished. 'Cruelty' has been defined in Clause (a) of the Explanation to the said Section as any wilful conduct which is of such a nature as is likely to drive to a woman to commit suicide. When there is demand of dowry, the case comes under Clause (b) of the Explanation to Section 498-A. Clause (a) of the Explanation has definite application to the facts of the present case.

Additionally, effect of Section 113-A of the Indian Evidence Act cannot be lost sight of. Gopal v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 2009 SC 1928 (1929, 1930) : (2009) 11 SCC 314 : 2009 (2) SCR 423 : 2009 (2) Scale 704 : 2009 (2) SLT 193.

[11409] ● Section 498-A—Ingredients.—The following are the essential ingredients of Section 498-A, IPC: "Essentials (i) That there was a married woman; (ii) that such woman was subjected to cruelty; (iii) that such cruelty consisted of any wilful conduct of such nature as was likely to drive such woman – to commit suicide, or to cause grave injury or danger to her life, limb or health, whether mental or physical; harassment of such woman where such harassment was – with a view to coercing such woman or any person related to her to meet any unlawful demand for any property or valuable security, or on account of failure by such woman, or any person related to her to meet the unlawful demand in able and the woman was subjected to such cruelty by – the husband of that woman; or any relative of the husband of that woman." State of Uttar Pradesh v. Santosh Kumar, (2009) 9 SCC 626 : (2009) 14 SCR 106 : 2009 (6) Supreme 448 : 2009 (3) Crimes 448 (SC).

[11410] ● Demand of dowry.—PW-1 stated that his daughter and son-in-law came to his house and his daughter told that there was no ill treatment by her husband but stated that there was no ill-treatment by accused Nos. 4 to 6. Another version given by this witness is that accused No. 4-Geeta had no issues and she was insisting the deceased Ratnavva to give her son in adoption to her, to which she refused and so accused No. 4 started ill-treating her. This version is unbelievable, simply because, accused No. 4 has no issues, it does not mean that she same will insist her brother or her brother's wife to give their only son in adoption to her. Even assuming that she has demanded so, it does not mean that is demand of dowry so as to attract the provisions of Section 498-A, IPC. Bhaskar Ramappa Madar v. State of Karnataka, (2009) 11 SCC 690 : 2009 CrLJ 2422 : 2009 (5) SCR 256 : 2009 (5) Scale 100 : 2009 (3) Supreme 5 : 2009 (2) Crimes 80 (SC).

[11411] ● Demand of dowry—Scanty evidence.—So far as Section 498-A is concerned according to learned counsel for the appellants the evidence is scanty but it is to be noticed that both the trial Court and the High Court having regard to the evidence of relatives concluded that the dowry demand was made. We do not find any infirmity with the conclusions arrived at more particularly in view of the evidence of PW-1 and 2 and therefore there is no scope for interference with the conclusions relating to Section 498-A, IPC. Syed Hakkim v. State, (2009) 4 SCC 324 : 2009 CrLJ 1891 (1893) : 2009 (2) SCR 1060 : 2009 (3) Scale 277 : 2009 (2) SLT 632.

[11412] ● Sufficient proof.—From the evidence of record available before us, we find that the prosecution witnesses have in their testimonies stated that the deceased was tortured both physically and mentally by the appellant for the first time after his marriage with the deceased when he was refused permission for marriage with said Anita by the deceased. On having been refused the permission for his second marriage with Anita, the appellant again, after a few days requested the deceased to accede to his request for marriage with Anita, which request was again refused by the deceased. Consequent to the said position and due to the adamant position taken by the deceased, cruelty was meted out to her by the accused which fact is sufficiently proved from the evidence on record. Therefore, we find no reason to take a different view than what has been taken by the trial Court and the High Court as far as Section 498-A, IPC is concerned. Hence, conviction recorded under Section 498-A, IPC by Courts below is proper. Amalendu Pal v. State of West Bengal, AIR 2010 SC 512 : 2009 (13) Scale 663 : 2009 (7) Supreme 289 : 2009 (4) Crimes 190 (SC).

[11413] ● Conviction upheld by High Court—Held proper.—In the instant case, the evidence of PWs-1, 5 and 6 clearly established the offence of accused so far as accused No. 1 as concerned and, therefore, there is nothing infirm in the judgment of the High Court in upholding the conviction of accused. Satish Kumar Batra v. State of Haryana, AIR 2009 SC 2180 (2183) : (2009) 2 SCC 491 : 2009 CrLJ 2447 : 2009 (5) SCR 451.

[11414] ● Sections 498-A and 304-B.—It is true that cruelty is a common essential to both the sections and that has to be proved. The Explanation to Section 498-A gives the meaning of "cruelty". In Section 304-B there is no such explanation, about the meaning of "cruelty". But having regard to common background to these offences it has to be taken that the meaning of "cruelty" or "harassment" is the same as prescribed in the Explanation to Section 498-A under which "cruelty" by itself amounts to an offence. Satish Kumar Batra v. State of Haryana, AIR 2009 SC 2180 : 2009 (12) SCC 491 : 2009 CrLJ 2447 : 2009 (5) SCR 451.

[11415] ● Section 498-A—Applicability.—Consequences of cruelty which are likely to drive a woman to commit suicide or to cause grave injury or danger to life, limb or health, whether mental or physical of the woman are required to be established to bring home the application of Section 498-A. Rajendran v. State, Assistant Commissioner of Police, AIR 2009 SC 855 (857) : (2008) 17 SCC 501 : (2009) 1 Crimes 135 : 2008 (16) SCR 1005. TO THE SAME EFFECT : Satish Kumar Batra v. State of Haryana, AIR 2009 SC 3180 : (2009) 12 SCC 491 : 2009 CrLJ 2447.

[11416] ● Existing of valid marriage—Necessity.—The question as to who would be covered by the expression "husband" and "marriage" as given in the various law lexicons and dictionaries, the existence of valid marriage may appear to be a sine qua non for applying a penal provision. Kapiseth Subbarao v. State of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 2009 SC 2684 (2687) : (2009) 12 SCC 331 : 2009 CrLJ 3480.

[11417] ● Word "Cruelty"—Applicability.—The word "cruelty having been defined in terms of Explanation appended to Section 498-A, no other meaning can be attributed thereto. Living with another woman may be an act of cruelty on the part of the husband for the purpose of judicial separation or dissolution of marriage, but the same would not attract the wrath of Section 498-A, IPC. U. Suvetha v. State, (2009) 6 SCC 757 : 2009 CrLJ 2974 (2977) : 2009 (2) Crimes 357 (SC).

[11418] ● Petty quarrels.—Petty quarrels cannot be said as cruelty to attract provisions of Section 498-A. Manju Ram Kahta v. State of Assam, (2009) 13 SCC 330 : 2009 (9) SCR 902 : JT 2009 (7) SC 485.

[11419] ● Sufficient evidence.—In the present case there are certain material aspects which were lost sight of by the trial Court but have been noted by the High Court. The dead body was detected in the morning of 14.2.1994. Parents of the deceased informed the police and not the inmates. The parents were informed by neighbours and not by the inmates. DW2 has been disbelieved as he was nearly 70 years of age. It was highly improbable that he was in employment as a watchman. The trial Court had held that the evidence of PWs. 6 to 8 regarding pressing mark on the neck and injuries on the fore arms of the deceased are not corroborated by the medical opinion. This is factually incorrect. The doctor (PW2) had categorically stated that he was of the opinion that death was due to result of compression of the neck, and the post mortem report was accordingly issued. PW6 has stated that second opinion was sought for and then the report was given. The falsity of alibi is an additional link. Narendra v. State of Karnataka, AIR 2009 SC 1881 : (2006) 6 SCC 61 : 2009 (7) SCR 585 : 2009 (2) Crimes 415 (SC).

[11420] ● Cruelty to wife—"Husband"—Interpretation.—The concept of 'dowry' is intermittently linked with a marriage and the provisions of the Dowry Act, apply in relation to marriages. If the legality of the marriage itself is an issue further legalistic problems do arise. If the legality of the marriage itself is under legal scrutiny, the demand of dowry in respect of an invalid marriage would be legally not recognizable. Even then the purpose for which Sections 498-A and 304-B, IPC and Section 113-B of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872 (for short the 'Evidence Act') were introduced cannot be lost sight of. Legislations enacted with some policy to curb and alleviate some public evil rampant in society and effectuate a definite public purpose or benefit positively requires to be interpreted with certain element of realism too and not merely pedantically or hyper-technically. The obvious objective was to prevent harassment to a woman who enters into a marital relationship with a person and later on, becomes a victim of the greed for money. Can a person who enters into a marital arrangement be allowed to take a shelter behind a smokescreen to contend that since there was no valid marriage the question of dowry does not arise? Such legalistic niceties would destroy the purpose of the provisions. Such hairsplitting legalistic approach would encourage harassment to a woman over demand of money. The nomenclature 'dowry' does not have any magic charm written over it. It is just a lable given to demand of money in relation to martial relationship. The legislative intent is clear from the fact that it is not only the husband but also his relations who are covered by Section 498-A. Legislature has taken care of children born from invalid marriages. Section 16 of the Marriage Act deals with legitimacy of children of void and voidable marriages. Can it be said that legislature which was conscious of the social stigma attached to children of void and voidable marriages closed eyes to plight of a woman who unknowingly or unconscious of the legal consequences entered into the marital relationship. If such restricted meaning is given, it would not further the legislative intent. On the contrary, it would be against the concern shown by the legislature for avoiding harassment to a woman over demand of money in relation to marriages. The first exception to Section 494 has also some relevance. According to it, the offence of bigamy will not apply to "any person whose marriage with such husband or wife has been declared void by a Court of competent jurisdiction". It would be appropriate to construe the expression 'husband' to cover a person who enters into marital relationship and under the colour of such proclaimed or feigned status of husband subjects the woman concerned to cruelty or coerce her in any manner or for any of the purposes enumerated in the relevant provisions—Sections 304-B/498-A, whatever be the legitimacy of the marriage itself for the limited purpose of Sections 498-A and 304-B, IPC. Such an interpretation, known and recognized as purposive construction has to come into play in a case of this nature. The absence of a definition of 'husband' to specifically include such persons who contract marriages ostensibly and cohabitate with such woman, in the purported exercise of his role and status as 'husband' is no ground to exclude them from the purview of Section 304-B or 498-A, IPC, viewed in the context of the very object and aim of the legislations introducing those provisions. Koppi Seth Subbarao v. State of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 2009 SC 212 : (2009) 12 SCC 331 : 2009 CrLJ 3480 (3484, 3485).

[11421] ● Sections 304-B and 498-A—Distinction.—Consequences of cruelty which are likely to drive a woman to commit suicide or to cause grave injury or danger to life, limb or health, whether mental or physical of the woman are required to be established in order to bring home the application of section 498-A, IPC. Cruelty has been defined in the Explanation for the purpose of Section 498-A. Substantive Section 498-, IPC and presumptive Section 113-B of the evidence Act have been inserted in the respective statutes by Criminal Law (Second Amendment) Act, 1983. It is to be noted that Sections 304-B and 498-A, IPC cannot be held to be mutually inclusive. These provisions deal with two distinct offences. It is true that cruelty is a common essential to both the Sections and that has to be proved. The Explanation to Section 498-A gives the meaning of 'cruelty'. In Section 304-B there is no such explanation about the meaning of 'cruelty'. But having regard to common background to these offences it has to be taken that the meaning of 'cruelty' or 'harassment' is the same as prescribed in the Explanation to Section 498-A under which 'cruelty' by itself amounts to an offence. Gopal v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 2009 SC 1928 : (2009) 11 SCC 314 : 2009 (2) SCR 423 : JT 2009 (2) 419.

[11422] ● Dowry death—No sufficient evidence to establish the prosecution case.—"A bare reading of the letter (Ext. PF) clearly shows that there is not even a whisper about demand but the deceased had categorically stated that she had asked for the money and the articles on her own. The trial Court erroneously held that in the letter there was reference to demand of dowry. Strangely, the High Court held that even though the letter Ex. PF was inconsequential but the evidence of the relatives about the harassment for dowry cannot be brushed aside. As rightly submitted by learned counsel for the appellant there were improvements in the statements recorded in Court. The witnesses PWs 6 and 7 introduced certain aspects for the first time. Significant statement in this regard is that of Sham Lal (PW-6). In Court he stated that the deceased told him in the hospital that kerosene oil was poured on her by the accused. He accepted during his examination that no such allegation was made in his statement recorded in terms of Section 161 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 (in short the 'Code'). Similarly, Surinder Kanta (PW-7) in Court stated that the deceased informed her about the demand of Rs. 1,00,000/- by her-in-laws and about her giving Rs. 20,000/-. This was not stated during investigation under Section 161 of Code as is evident from Ex.DA. In Court PW-7 stated that the deceased was beaten and mistreated on 14.8.1992 and 15.8.2002 and no such statement was made during investigation. Additionally, no such allegation was made by PW-8 the complainant about this aspect in the FIR.

"In the statement in Court PW-7 stated that the deceased had told him that A-1 and A-2 caught hold of her and A-1 poured oil over her body and set her on fire by throwing match stick. No such statement was made during investigation. Similarly, that is not also the version of PW-6. In Court PW-7 stated that all the accused person i.e. the present appellant and the acquitted accused persons maltreated her. No such allegation was made while the witness was examined under Section 161.....

"The High Court's judgment is not only sketchy but also devoid of reasons. Various factors highlighted above would go to show that the prosecution has squarely failed to establish the accusation so far as the appellant is concerned. Therefore, the appeal deserves to be allowed which we direct. The appellant is to be set at liberty forthwith unless to be required in connection with any other case." Raman Kumar v. State of Punjab, 2009 CrLJ 3034 : 2009 (6) SCR 933 : JT 2009 (8) 422.

[11423] ● Inadequate evidence.—The deceased and her parents had never complained to him that the accused or any member of his family was raising any demand of any kind when confronted with the statement made during investigation, PW-5 accepted that he had no stated many vital things during investigation which for the first time he was speaking in Court. Similar is the position with PW-7 the brother of the deceased. He also accepted on being confronted with the statement made during investigation that he had not stated particularly certain relevant aspects. Similar is the position with the evidence of mother of deceased (PW-6).

There was no evidence towards the claim regarding any demand of dowry. That being so the High Court ought not to have interfered with the well reasoned judgment of the trial Court directing acquittal. The reasoning of the High Court that something must have happened and otherwise deceased would not have committed suicide is clearly indefensible. That certainly could not have been a reason to set aside the trial Court's judgment of acquittal. Nepal Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 2009 SC 2913 : (2009) 12 SCC 351 : 2009 (6) SCR 982 : JT 2009 (7) 172.

[11424] ● No evidence on record to establish accusation.—In the instant case, there was no material brought no record by the prosecution to establish the accusations so far as the present appellant is concerned. It is to be noted that there was a dying declaration recorded by the Executive Magistrate, Chandigarh who was present at PGI hospital. The authenticity of the dying declaration has not been questioned. It is the stand of the prosecution that police officer should have recorded it. But that cannot be a ground to discard the dying declaration recorded by the Executive Magistrate. Additionally, the prosecution laid great emphasis on the letters purported to have been written by the deceased to her relatives. Here again, handwriting expert's report clearly shows that the letters were not in the handwriting of the deceased.

Above being the position, there is no evidence brought on record by the prosecution to establish the accusations. That being so, the appeal deserves to be allowed which we direct. The conviction of the appellant is set aside. Rakesh Kumar v. State of Haryana, (2009) 11 SCC 81 : 2009 CrLJ 1895 : 2009 (3) SCR 1190 : JT 2009 (3) 377 : 2009 (2) Crimes 119 (SC).

[11425] ● Nothing on record to show that any demand of dowry was made.—No evidence was brought on record to show that the cruelty or harassment was meted out to her for bringing insufficient dowry, in absence whereof the ingredients of Section 304-B of the Indian Penal Code cannot be said to have been proved. The legal fiction sought to be created must be raised only on fulfillment of the conditions precedent therefore. All the requisite ingredients of the offence must be brought home before the presumptive evidence is put to use by the Court for holding the accused guilty of an offence under section 304-B of the Indian Penal Code.

It is true that two injuries were noticed on the person of the deceased by the Autopsy Surgeon, but we could have considered this aspect of the matter had the appellant been not accused. The FIR was lodged against others also. Three more persons being sisters and cousin of the appellant were also charged for commission of the said offence. If the deceased was forced to take poison, they must have some hand in it. As they have been acquitted, it is difficult for us to come to the conclusion that it was the appellant and the appellant alone who was responsible for her death.

For the aforementioned reasons, the impugned judgment cannot be sustained and it is set aside accordingly. The appeal is allowed. The appellant who is in custody is directed to be set at liberty and released forthwith unless wanted in connection with any other case. Tarsem Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 2009 (SC) 1454 : 2008 (17) SCR 379 : JT 2008 (13) 185.

[11426] ● Word "relative" in Section 498-A, IPC.—In order to be covered under section 498-A, IPC one has to be a "relative" of the husband by blood, marriage or adoption. U. Suvetha v. State of Inspector of Police, AIR 2009 SC 1451 : 2009 AIR SCW 3491 : (2009) 6 SCC 757. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) T. Ashok Pai v. CIT, 2007 AIR SCW 4088 : (2007) 7 SCC 1621; (2) Shivcharan Lal Verma v. State of M.P., (2007) 15 SCC 369.

[11427] ● Sections 300, 304-B, 498-A, IPC—Cruelty and murder.—The allegation against the accused persons was that they committed the murder of deceased for dowry and also subjected her to cruelty on account of demand of dowry. The trial Court acquitted Sitaram Sharma and his wife Gyatri Devi Sharma but convicted Arun Kumar Sharma of substantive offence under Section 302, IPC. The three eye witnesses did not inspire confidence. It was alleged that the deceased was being severely beaten by firsts and steps by the accused persons, but no ante-mortem injuries were found on the other hand even her glass bangles were not broken. The doctor suggested that the injury was on account of asphyxia as a result of injury No. 1 due to forcible pressure over neck. There was no mark of fingers and thumb on either side of the wind pipe. The evidence of the doctor suggested that there multiple bruises which could be due to the forcible pressure of fingers. There was no convincing evidence that it was the accused alone who throttled the deceased to death. The copy of FIR was not sent to the Magistrate. In view of the above, the accused was given benefit of doubt, and was acquitted of all the charges. Arun Kumar Sharma v. State of Bihar, (2010) 1 SCC 108 : 2010 CrLJ 428 (431, 432, 433).

[11428] ● Section 498-A, IPC—No specific allegations in complaint filed by wife against husband and his relatives.—In this case appellant No. 1 was admittedly a permanent resident of Navasari, Surat, Gujarat and had been living with her husband for more than seven years. Similarly Appellant No. 2 is a permanent resident of Goregaon, Maharashtra. They had never visited the place where the alleged incident had taken place. They had never lived with respondent No. 2 and her husband. Their implication in the complaint was meant to harass and humiliate the husband's relatives. It was held that permitting the complainant to pursue the complaint would be an abuse of process of law. Preeti Gupta v. State of Jharkhand, AIR 2010 SC 3363 : (2010) 7 SCC 667 : 2010 CrLJ 4303 (4309) : (2010) 4 Crimes 19.

[11429] ● Complaint under Section 498-A, IPC—Conduct and responsibility of advocates—Advocates Act, Section 35.—The criminal trials lead to immense sufferings for all concerned. Even ultimate acquittal in the trial may also not be able to wipe out the deep scars of suffering of ignominy. Unfortunately a large number of these complaints have not only flooded the Courts but also have led to enormous social unrest affecting peace, harmony and happiness of the society. It is high time that the legislature must take into consideration the pragmatic realities and make suitable changes in the existing law. It is imperative for the legislature to take into consideration the informed public opinion and the pragmatic realities in consideration and make necessary changes in the relevant provisions of law. We direct the Registry to send a copy of this judgment to the Law Commission and to the Union Law Secretary, Government of India who may place it before the Hon'ble Minister for Law and Justice to take appropriate steps in the larger interest of the society. Preeti Gupta v. State of Jharkhand, AIR 2010 SC 3363 : (2010) 7 SCC 667 : 2010 CrLJ 4303 (4309) : (2010) 4 Crimes 19.

[11430] ● Section 498-A, IPC—Cruelty and harassment—Serious look of entire provision of Section 498-A by Legislature warranted.—The learned members of the Bar have enormous social responsibility and obligation to ensure that the social fiber of family life is not ruined or demolished. They must ensure that exaggerated versions of small incidents should not be reflected in the criminal complaints. Majority of the complaints are filed either on their advice or with their concurrence. The learned members of the Bar who belong to a noble profession must maintain its noble traditions and should treat every complaint under Section 498-A as a basic human problem and must make serious endeavour to help the parties in arriving at an amicable resolution of that human problem. They must discharge their duties to the best of their abilities to ensure that social fiber, peace and tranquility of the society remains intact. The members of the Bar should also ensure that one complaint should not lead to multiple cases. Preeti Gupta v. State of Jharkhand, AIR 2010 SC 3363 : (2010) 7 SCC 667 : 2010 CrLJ 4303 (4309) : (2010) 4 Crimes 19.

[11431] ● Sections 498-A, 406, IPC—Cruelty to wife—Allegations against foster sister of husband—Section 498-A not attracted.—In the instant case, FIR was lodged by wife against foster sister of husband. Accused was not in any manner a relative of husband is referred to in Section 498-A, IPC. In order to be covered under Section 498-A, IPC one has to be a relative of the husband by blood, marriage or adoption. Therefore, the FIR in so far as it concerned Section 498 is if not consequence and the appellant shall not be tried for offence under Section 498-A.

The allegations made under Section 406, IPC for the offence of criminal breach of trust in respect of Jewellery are extremely wild and disgusting. However, how far those allegations can be used to meet the requirements for the offence under Section 406, IPC is a most question whatever the form in which the allegations under Section 406, IPC are made the fact is that there is an FIR and the Court concerned has taken cognizance thereof. Under these circumstances the Supreme Court would only protect the interest of the appellant by directing that she would not be required to attend the proceedings unless specifically directed by the Court to do so and that too in the case of extreme necessity. Similarly no coercive step shall be taken against her. She shall be granted bail by the Court trying the case if it decides to try the offence by framing charge. Vijeta Gajra v. State of NCT of Delhi, AIR 2010 SC 2712 : 2010 CrLJ 3841 (3843) : (2010) 3 Crimes 160.

[11432] ● Witness not describing the exact "harassment" and "tortured"—Effect.—A prosecution witness who merely uses the word "harassment" or "tortured" and does not describe the exact conduct of the accused which, according to him, to amounted to harassment and torture may not be believed by the Court in cases under Section 498A and 304, IPC. Amar Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 2010 SC 3391 (3397) : (2010) 9 SCC 64.

[11433] ● Scope of Section 498-A, IPC.—Section 498-A, IPC, as extracted hereinabove, is clear and unambiguous that only the husband or his relative could be proceeded against under the said Section for subjecting the wife to 'cruelty', which has been specially defined in the said section in the explanation thereto. The question as to who would be a relative of the husband for the purpose of Section 498-A has been considered in detail in U. Suvetha's case (supra). We are entirely in agreement with the views expressed in the said case and we agree with the submissions made on behalf of the Appellant that the learned Judge of the High Court committed an error in bestowing upon the Appellant the status of wife and, therefore, a member of Mukund Chandra Pandit's family. The doctrine of acknowledgement would not be available in the facts of this case. No doubt, there is direct allegation against the Appellant of cruelty against the Respondent No. 2, Asha Rani Pal, but as indicated in U. Suvetha's case (supra), the same would enable the Respondent No. 2 to proceed against her husband under Section 498-A, IPC and also against the Appellant under the different provisions of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, but not under Section 498-A, IPC. Sunita Jha v. State of Jharkhand, (2010) 10 SCC 190 : JT 2010 (10) 72 : 2010 (9) Scale 395 : 2010 (4) Crimes 116 (SC).

[11434] ● Cruelty—Cruel some nature of accused—Enhancement of sentence.—The deceased suffered serious burn injuries in the Kitchen of the house and ultimately died of those injuries. In the dying declaration she stated that she had a quarrel with her husband over the house-hold chores and over the feeding of the children and she had therefore, poured kerosene oil on herself and then burnt herself. The trial Court convicted the accused for offences under Section 498-A, IPC to a sentence of one year and under Section 306 IPC to a sentence of four years. In appeal filed by the State, the sentence awarded by the trial Court under Section 306, IPC was enhanced on the ground that husband was of quarrelsome nature. The Apex Court held that the enhancement of sentence was improper. Ravindra Tukaram Hiwale v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 2010 SC 3492 (3493) : 2010 (4) Crimes 10 (SC).

CULPABLE HOMICIDE

[11435] ● Culpable homicide.—In the present case, there was a violent exchange of abuses between two parties which were both armed with lathis, before they came to blows. Then in course of the fight which ensued the accused gave one lathi blow on the head of the deceased which fractured the skull and resulted in death. The opinion of the doctor was that the injury was sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death and that it was caused either by a heavy weapon used with moderate force, or by a light weapon used with great force. In view of the fact, that the accused had given only one blow, it cannot be held that he gave it with such intention as fell either under the third clause of Section 300 or the second clause of Section 299. All that can be said was that he gave it only with the knowledge that it was likely to cause death, and the offence falls under Section 304 Part II. Intention of the accused can be gathered from proved circumstances and not from medical opinion as to the seriousness of the injury. Chamsu Budhwa v. State of M.P., AIR 1954 SC 652 : 1954 CrLJ 1676.

[11436] ● Lathi blow—Knowledge of bodily injury likely to cause death.—In the present case, it was established that the accused had given six blows with a lathi on the head of the deceased, one of which, had fractured the skull. The deceased died three weeks after the incident. The medical evidence was, that the injury which broke the skull had caused a depression in the brain and that death was due to haemorrhage which had gradually developed at the site of the injury to the brain. Even though the blows given were on the head which was a vital part, and were given with a lathi which was 5 feet in length and 1 1/2 inches in diameter, in view of the fact that the lathi was not iron-shod and that the deceased was strongly built young man who had survived the injuries for three weeks, it could not be held that the intention of the accused was to cause death, nor could it be held that the bodily injury inflicted was "sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death". The accused could be held only to have had the intention to cause such injury as was "likely to cause death". Conviction under Section 302 is converted to one under Section 304, Part I, and the sentence of imprisonment for life is reduced to one of imprisonment for 10 years. Inder Singh Bagga Singh v. State of Pepsu, AIR 1955 SC 439 : 1955 CrLJ 1014 : ILR (1954) Patiala 380.

[11437] ● Death caused by single blow.—In the present case death was caused by a single blow on the head with a hockey stick which fractured the skull, but the deceased lived for ten days after the incident. It cannot be held, that the injury was caused with such intention as would bring the case either under the third clause of Section 300 or the second clause of Section 299. All that could be said was that the accused knew that his act was likely to cause death. Conviction under Section 302 was reduced to one under Section 304 Part II. Wille (William) Slaneej v. State of M.P., AIR 1956 SC 116 : 1956 CrLJ 291 : 1956 SCJ 182 : 1956 SCA 183 : (1955) 2 SCR 1140 : 1956 AWR (Sup) 38 : 1956 (1) MLJ SC 100.

[11438] ● Inference of intention from nature of injury.—In adjudging whether the injuries inflicted are sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death, the possibility that skilful and efficient medical treatment might prevent the death is wholly irrelevant. Kishore Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1958 SC 465 : 1958 CrLJ 818.

[11439] ● Culpable homicide—Conditions to be satisfied.—Under Clause 3 of Section 300, culpable homicide is murder if both the following conditions are satisfied, namely, (a) that the act which causes death is done with the intention of causing bodily injury, and (b) that the injury intended to be inflicted is sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death. Therefore, in order to bring a case under clause 3, the prosecution must establish,—

1. that the accused inflicted injury on the body of the deceased,
2. that the intention of the accused was to inflict the very injury which has been actually found on the person of the deceased,
3. that the injury was of a particular nature, that is, its spot, penetration and depth and the vital organs which have been cut, if any, and
4. that the injury was sufficiently serious to cause death in the ordinary course of nature.

Of these four elements of the offence, it is only the second element which is subjective, and so far as the intention of the assailant is concerned, all that is required to be considered under clause 3 of Section 300 is whether, he had or had not the intention to cause the very injury actually found on the body of the deceased. If such intention is established the rest of the inquiry is purely objective and has nothing to do with the intention of the offender, so that the prosecution is not required to prove that his intention was to inflict an injury of a particular serious nature. Sufficiency of the injury inflicted for causing death in the ordinary course of nature is a matter of inference and deduction from proved facts, and the inquiry into this question is entirely unrelated to the intention of the offender or the state of his mind at the time when he inflicted the injury in question. No doubt, if the circumstances of the case justify the inference that the blow intended to be inflicted was of a different and lighter nature than the one actually found on the person of the deceased, then, the offence committed cannot fall under clause 3 of the Section 300, even though it is established, that the injury caused by that blow is sufficient to cause death in the ordinary course of nature. Such cases arise when, on the facts proved in the case, the possibility that a blow which was actually aimed on a non-vital part of the body fell accidentally on a vital part, cannot be altogether ruled out. Such a thing may happen if the deceased has stumbled or has suddenly turned or bent down while the blow was being given, or has accidentally dashed against the weapons used, and as a result has been hit on the chest or the abdomen, though the assailant may actually have intended to hit him, say, on the leg or hand. In such a case, it must be noted, that the accused escapes the charge of murder, not because of any question as to his intention regarding the seriousness or otherwise of the injury which he intended to inflict, but because, on the facts and circumstances of the case, it is not clearly established that he intended to inflict the very injury which was actually inflicted, and there is a possibility that he had in mind an injury of quite a different nature. Virsa Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1958 SC 465 : 1958 CrLJ 818 : 1958 SCJ 772 : 1958 AWR (HC) 572 : 1958 ACrR 373 : (1958) MLJ (Cri) 579.

[11440] ● Culpable homicide—Preposition of law to be kept in mind.—When considering the applicability of clause 3 of Section 300, the following propositions of law must be kept in mind:

(i) The burden of proving all the four elements of the offence under clause 3 lies on the prosecution, and that burden never shifts. This burden includes the burden of proving the intention of the accused.

(ii) The intention required to be proved is the intention to inflict the very injury which was actually inflicted on the person of the deceased. It is not required to be proved that the intention of the accused was to inflict an injury of a particular serious nature. In other words the question of intention cannot be linked up with the gravity of the injury, and the prosecution does not have to establish that the accused intended to cause an injury of a kind which is sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death or that he knew that his act was of a kind which would be sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death.

(iii) If circumstances exist in the case which show that there is a possibility that the accused might have intended to inflict an injury other than the one which was actually inflicted then the accused must be given the benefit of the doubt that exists, and the charge under Section 302 based upon clause 3 of Section 300 must fail.

(iv) If the injury which results in death is of such a nature that it is sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death, and there are no circumstances in the case which would justify the inference that the accused intended to inflict any other injury, it must be presumed that the intention of the accused was to cause the very injury which has resulted in death, and the prosecution must be held to have discharged the burden of proving the intention of the accused in relation to his act.

(v) To sum up, once it is proved that the death of any person was caused by any injury inflicted by the accused, and that such injury is of a character which is sufficient to cause death in the ordinary course of nature, it must be presumed that the accused intended to cause that very injury, and the conditions of clause 3 of Section 300 must be held to have been satisfied, unless there are circumstances to show that he might have intended a different injury and that the one which was caused was inflicted accidentally.

The injury caused in the present case was the result of a blow with a knife in the stomach which was given with such force that the weapon had penetrated the abdomen and had injured the bowels. According to the doctor the injury was sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death. In the absence of any circumstances to show that the injury was caused accidentally or unintentionally, it has to be presumed that the accused had intended to cause the inflicted injury and the conditions of clause 3 of Section 300 were satisfied. Conviction under Section 302 is upheld. Virsa Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1958 SC 465 : 1958 CrLJ 818 : 1958 SCJ 772 : (1958) MLJ (Cri) 579.

[11441] ● Several offenders by assaulting deceased to death.—Conviction under Section 304, second part, read with Section 34 is perfectly legal where it is established that several accused had assaulted the victim with the common intention of doing the criminal act of giving him a beating, and that, each of them had acted with the knowledge that the beating was likely to cause death, that is, that death was the likely consequence of the criminal act of beating. What Section 304 excludes is, intention to cause death or fatal bodily injury; it does not exclude common intention shared with the other accused to commit the criminal act of giving a beating to the victim of the assault. Afrahim Sheikh v. State of W.B., AIR 1964 SC 1263 : 1964 (2) CrLJ 350 : (1964) 2 SCWR 344 : 1964 AWR (HC) 275 : 1964 ACrR 187 : 1964 BLJR 361 : 1964 CurLJ (SC) 152 : 1964 ALJ 437.

[11442] ● Several persons when beating man with heavy lathis.—When several persons beat a man with heavy lathis, each hitting his blow with the common intention of severely beating the victim, they may not have the intention specified in the first part of Section 304, and yet if each possesses the knowledge that death is the likely result of the beating, then, the conditions for the application of Section 34 are satisfied, and all the accused can be convicted under the second part of Section 304 read with Section 34. In such a case, the common intention shared by all the accused is with regard to the criminal act of beating the victim, and if the beating results in the death of the victim, and if each of the assailants possesses the knowledge that death is the likely consequence of the criminal act of beating, there is no reason why all the accused cannot be convicted under the second part of Section 304 read with Section 34. Afrahim Sheikh v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1964 SC 1263 : 1964 (2) CrLJ 350 : (1964) 2 SCWR 344.

[11443] ● Severe beating of deceased by six persons.—In the present case, it was established beyond doubt, that the six persons had chased the victim and had attacked him after throwing him down on the ground, and had given him such severe beating on various parts of his body that he had ultimately died of the injuries which he had received at their hands. In such a case, the conditions for the application of Section 34 were clearly satisfied and conviction under Section 304 read with Section 34 was justified. Afrahim Sheikh v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1964 SC 1263 : 1964 (2) CrLJ 350 : (1964) 2 SCWR 344.

[11444] ● No intention to cause death but accused having knowledge that his act likely to cause death.—Where the prosecution evidence disclosed, that the accused inflicted an injury on the victim with a weapon and ran away, which weapon was not described, though the injury was a serious one cutting the auxiliary artery and veins but was not on the vital part of the chest and had not reached the lungs and the incident itself, was as a result of a sudden quarrel, the requirements of Section 300 are not satisfied as death was not intended. The case also does not come under the first and the second part of Section 299 for the same reason but the matter falls under the third part of Section 299 since the accused had the knowledge that the act was likely to cause the death of the victim and the accused is, therefore, liable under Section 304, Part II, IPC. Laxman Kalu v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1968 SC 1390 : 1968 CrLJ 1647 : (1968) 2 SCJ 930 : (1968) 2 SCWR 557 : 1969 MLJ (Cri) 3.

[11445] ● Sudden commotion—Accused stabbing deceased with knife—Offence of culpable homicide.—There was a sudden commotion and when the deceased intervened in the fight, the accused took out a knife and stabbed the deceased and the deceased was in a crouching position presumably to intervene when he received the blow. Though the injury was found sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death, he was convicted for the offence of culpable homicide. The intention to cause that particular injury was not present. Harijinder Singh alias Jinde v. State (Delhi Administration), AIR 1968 SC 867 : 1968 CrLJ 1023 : (1968) 2 SCR 246.

[11446] ● Injury caused on vital part of body—Intention to kill.—Where the injury was on a region of the head which is a vital part and medical evidence disclosed that the injury proved fatal, the intention to kill can certainly be attributed to the assailant, even though he used only his lathi. Chahat Khan v. State of Haryana, AIR 1972 SC 2574 : (1972) 3 SCC 408 : 1973 CrLJ 36.

[11447] ● Attack pre-meditated and not accidental.—Where in a premeditated attack the accused gave only one blow with a lathi on the head of the deceased with such great force that it immediately resulted in the latter's death, he was clearly guilty of culpable homicide amounting to murder under clause 3rdly of S. 300 IPC. Ginder Duradh v. State of Bihar, AIR 1972 SC 952 : (1972) 3 SCC 505 : 1972 CrLJ 587 (SC).

[11448] ● Connection between 'act' and death caused thereby must be direct and distinct.—The connection between the 'act' and the death caused thereby must be direct and distinct; and though not immediate it must not be too remote. If the nature of the connection between the act and the death is in itself obscure, or if it is obscured by the action of concurrent causes, or if the connection is broken by the intervention of subsequent causes, or if the interval of time between the death and the act is too long, the above condition is not fulfilled. But where as many as 34 injuries had been caused to the deceased with axe and sticks and some of which has damaged the kidneys and lungs and some resulted in compound fracture the intention to kill could be easily inferred from the number and nature of injuries caused. Laxman v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1974 SC 1803 : (1974) 3 SCC 490 : 1973 SCC (Cri) 1093 : 1974 CrLJ 1271.

[11449] ● Injuries caused on abdomen of deceased sufficient to cause death in ordinary course of nature.—In the present case it was not clearly established, that the injury caused on the abdomen of the deceased was sufficient to cause death in the ordinary course of the nature. The doctor who conducted the autopsy stated in cross-examination, that the abdomen injury was only likely to cause death. The prosecution did not question him specifically as to whether all or any of the injuries found on the deceased was sufficient to cause death in the ordinary course of nature. The act of the appellant will be culpable homicide, not amounting to murder. If one of the special Exceptions in Section 300 applies the offence will be culpable homicide not amounting to murder. This is not such a case; the act of the appellant fell under Clause (b) of Section 299 and, therefore, punishable under Section 304, Part I IPC. Jayaraj v. State of T.N., AIR 1976 SC 1519 : (1976) 2 SCC 788 : 1976 SCC (Cri) 293 : 1976 CrLJ 1186 : 1976 CrLR (SC) 236 : 1976 SCCrR 261 : 1976 CrAppR (SC) 176

[11450] ● Murder—Death caused by shock and haemorrhage resulting from multiple injuries.—In the instant case, the respondents indiscriminately pounded the legs and arms of the deceased with heavy sticks till he became unconscious. The deceased had 19 injuries, out of which 9 were grievous. The doctor who conducted the autopsy was of opinion that the injuries found on the deceased were cumulatively sufficient to cause death in the ordinary course of nature. The cause of death was, according to the doctor shock and haemorrhage resulting from multiple injuries. The trial Judge convicted them under Section 302 as well as under Section 302 read with Section 34, Penal Code. On appeal by the convicts, the High Court altered their conviction to one under Section 304, Part II Penal Code. Hence this appeal by the State after obtaining Special Leave. The formidable weapons used by the accused in the beating, the savage manner of its execution, the helpless stage of the unarmed victim, the intensity of the violence caused, the callous conduct of the accused in persisting in the assault even against the protest of feeling bystanders—all, viewed against the background of previous animosity between the parties, irresistibly lead to the conclusion that the injuries were intentionally inflicted and were not accidental. Thus, the presence of the first element of clause Thirdly of Section 300 has been cogently and convincingly established. The doctor's evidence established satisfactorily, that the second element of clause (3) of S. 300 is satisfactorily established when she testified that the injuries of the deceased were cumulatively sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death. There is, therefore, no escape from the conclusion that the offence committed by the accused is 'murder' notwithstanding the fact that the intention of the accused to cause death, has not been shown beyond doubt. State of A.P. v. R. Punnayya, AIR 1977 SC 45 : (1976) 4 SCC 382 : 1976 SCC (Cri) 659 : 1977 CrLJ 1 : 1976 CrLR (SC) 485 : 1977 SCCrR 19 : (1977) 1 SCR 601 : (1976) 2 SCWR 297 : 1977 Chand LR (Cri) (SC) 65 : 1976 CrAppR (SC) 320.

[11451] ● Murder and culpable homicide not amounting to murder—Points of distinction.— Whenever a Court is confronted with the question whether the offence is 'murder' or "culpable homicide not amounting to murder" on the facts of a case, it will be convenient for it to approach the problem in three stages. The question to be considered at the first stage would be, whether the accused had done an act by doing which he has caused the death of another. Proof of such causal connection between the act of the accused and the death, leads to the second stage for considering whether that act of the accused amounts to "culpable homicide" as defined in Section 299. It the answer to this question is prima facie found in the affirmative, the stage for considering the operation of Section 300, Penal Code, is reached. This is the stage at which the Court should determine whether the facts proved by the prosecution bring the case within the ambit of any of the four Clauses of the definition of 'murder' contained in Section 300. If the answer to this question is in the negative, the offence would be "culpable homicide not amounting to murder", punishable under the first or the second part of Section 304, depending, respectively, on whether the 2nd or the 3rd clause of Section 299 in applicable. If this question is found in the positive, but the case comes within any of the Exceptions enumerated in Section 300, the offence would still be "culpable homicide not amounting to murder", punishable under the first Part of Section 304, Penal Code. The above are only broad guidelines and not cast-iron imperatives. In most cases, their observance will facilitate the task of the Court. But some times the facts are so intertwined and the 2nd and the 3rd stages so telescoped into each other, that it may not be convenient to give a separate treatment to the matters involved in the second and third stages. State of A.P. v. R. Punnayya, AIR 1977 SC 45 : (1976) 4 SCC 382 : 1976 SCC (Cri) 659 : 1977 CrLJ 1 : 1976 CrLR (SC) 485 : 1977 SCCrR 19 : (1977) 1 SCR 601 : (1976) 2 SCWR 297 : 1977 Chand LR (Cri) (SC) 65 : 1976 CrAppR (SC) 320.

[11452] ● Two stab injuries inflicted on deceased with slightest provocation.—Thus where the accused went armed with a dagger to bring his wife from his father-in-law's house but he said that she would go with him the next day morning. At this accused inflicted two stab injuries on her person, one of which cut through the liver and the colon and in the opinion of the doctor was sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death, it was held that the whole affair appears to be pre-planned and the case squarely fell within the 3rd clause of S. 300 IPC. The plea that by having recourse to proper treatment her life could be saved was of no avail to the accused in view of Explanation 2 to S. 299, IPC. Marcha v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1979 SC 80 : (1979) 1 SCC 161 : 1978 CrLJ 1710 (SC).

[11453] ● Accused deliberately caused injury with knife—Sufficient in ordinary course of nature to cause death.—Where the accused deliberately caused an injury with a knife on the chest of the deceased and on opening of the body the doctor found that the wound was going deep into the heart cutting the auricle and root of the aorta and according to the doctor that injury was certainly sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death, the case did not fall under any of the Exceptions in Section 300, IPC, and the accused's conviction under Section 302, IPC, was proper. Pappu v. State of U.P., AIR 1978 SC 1455 : 1978 CrLR (SC) 347 : 1978 UJ (SC) 595 : 1978 BLJR 595 : 1978 ALJ 669 : 1978 ACrC 332 (1) : 1978 CrAppR (SC) 272.

[11454] ● Victim jumping in will to save himself—Death not caused by act of accused.— Where a person being pursued closely on his heels in an open field by his enemies who had already killed one of his relations in the incident jumped into a well in order to save himself and in the process met with his death, it was held that the act of the accused did not constitute an act which was done with the intention or knowledge specified in S. 299, IPC and as such they had to be acquitted. Jogindra Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1979 SC 1876 : (1980) 1 SCC 493 : 1979 CrLJ 1406.

[11455] ● Murder knife injury inflicted on deceased.—In a murder case, the knife injury inflicted on the deceased was as much as 3 inches deep and manifestly and clearly intended to kill the deceased and that too on some very paltry matter, that is to say, the refusal of the deceased to supply goods to the appellant on credit. Case fell under Section 302, IPC, and not under Section 304. Abdul Waheed v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1979 SC 1828 : (1979) 3 SCC 477 : 1979 SCC (Cri) 651 : 1979 CrLJ 1196 : 1979 CrLR (SC) 450.

[11456] ● Murder—Injury sufficient in ordinary course of nature to cause death.—In a case the medical evidence disclosed an injury on the chest which cut a part of the thoracic aorta with the main portion of the heart and also fractured the 8th and 9th ribs on the right side of the chest. According to the doctor, the injury was sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death. Mariadasan v. State of T.N., AIR 1980 SC 573 : (1980) 3 SCC 68 : 1980 CrLJ 412.

[11457] ● Stabbing unarmed deceased twice in abdomen—Injuries sufficient in ordinary course of nature to cause death.—Where the evidence is that the respondent stabbed the unarmed deceased twice in his abdomen and caused such injuries as were sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death and did cause his death, it is for the respondent to establish with a balance of probability circumstances which will bring his case within any Exception. Since the deceased was unarmed and the assault could not be said to be sudden and unpremeditated, Exception II or any other Exception in Section 300, IPC will not apply. He caused those injuries before he received the stick blows given by S. It cannot be said that the deceased was the aggressor and that the respondent caused those fatal injuries to the deceased to ward off any imminent apprehension of death or grievous hurt to himself. In his statement the respondent did not even admit, that he had inflicted any wound on the deceased. He asserted that the son of the deceased had come out armed with a knife, thereby obliquely suggesting that it was the son who had stabbed his father. This was a patently false and absurd position taken by him. Appeal is allowed. State of Maharashtra v. Krishnamurti, AIR 1981 SC 617 : 1980 Supp SCC 455 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 364 : 1981 CrLJ 9 1981 CrLR (SC) 145.

[11458] ● 'Intention' and 'Knowledge' of accused subjective and invisible states of mind.—The "intention" and "knowledge" of the accused are subjective and invisible states of mind and their existence has to be gathered from the circumstances, such as the, weapon used, the ferocity of attack, multiplicity of injuries and all other surrounding circumstances. The framers of the Code designedly used the words 'intention' and 'knowledge' and it is accepted that the knowledge of the consequences which may result in doing an act is not the same thing as the intention that such consequences should ensue. Firstly, when an act is done by a person, it is presumed that he, must have been aware that certain specified harmful consequences would or could follow. But that knowledge is bare awareness and not the same thing as intention that such consequences should ensue. As compared to 'knowledge' 'intention ' requires something more than the mere foresight of the consequences, namely the purposeful doing of a thing to achieve a particular end. Jagdeep Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 1981 SC 1552 : (1981) 3 SCC 616 : 1981 CrLJ 1136 : 1981 CrLR (SC) 462.

[11460] ● Altercation arising out of minor dispute one blow given.—In a case one blow was given by the accused and that too by the blunt side of the weapon pursuant to an altercation on a minor dispute. Conviction was altered by the Supreme Court to culpable homicide not amounting to murder under Section 304, Part-II, IPC. Suba Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1982 SC 690 : (1982) 3 SCC 226 : (1982) 3 SCC (Cri) 694 : 1982 CrLJ 626.

[11461] ● No pre-meditation—No prior enmity—One blow with dagger.—In a murder case the accused was about 20 years old at the time of the offence. There was no pre-meditation and no prior enmity but a short quarrel preceded the assault. One blow given with a dagger landed in the epigastrium area and the deceased succumbed to the injury. In such a case, Section 300 cl. Thirdly would not be attracted. Conviction was altered from one under Section 302 to that under Section 304 Part II, Penal Code. Kulwant Rai v. State of Punjab, AIR 1982 SC 126 : (1981) 4 SCC 245 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 826 : 1982 CrLR (SC)

23 : 1982 (UP) CrC (SC) 54 : 1982 Bih CrC (SC) 54.

[11462] ● Murder—Proof—Offence under Section 304, Part II, IPC—Not under Section 302, IPC.—On the previous day to the occurrence, A4 cut an indecent joke with the wife of B. Next day B and his brother G went to the house of the accused to complain about A4's misbehavior. Deceased T was nowhere in the picture and nor there was animosity against him. T appeared on the scene after the accused assaulted B and G. T attempted to intervene to save B and G from further harm. Then a blow with a barchha, was given by A1 which landed on T. As there is nothing to indicate that Al intended to cause any injury to T, the offence falls under Section 304, Part II, IPC, and not under Section 302, IPC. Gurmail Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1982 SC 1466 : (1982) 3 SCC 185 : 1982 CrLJ 1946 : 1982 CrAppR (SC) 318 : 1982 BBCJ (SC) 174 : 1982 ACrR 441.

[11464] ● Accused with pre-meditation gave solitary blow on deceased head.—The accused gave a solitary blow on the deceased's head with the blunt side of the gandhala in the heat of the moment and without pre-meditation and in a sudden fight. Case is covered by Exception 4 to Section 300. Conviction is altered from one under Section 302 to one under Section 304, Part II of the IPC. Jagrup Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 1981 SC 1552 : (1981) 3 SCC 616 : 198l SCC (Cri) 768 : 1981 CrLJ 1136 : 1981 CrLR (SC) 462 : 1981 Chand CrC 163 (SC) : 1981 BBCJ (SC) 213 : 1981 CurLJ (Cri) 194.

[11465] ● Conviction under Section 304, Part II—IPC Propriety.—In a case the deceased received three contused lacerated wounds on the head, extensive subdural haematoma due to head injuries. Even accepting doctor's opinion, that injuries were not sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death, they were clearly of a nature likely to cause death. However, as there is no State appeal to the Supreme Court, it could not be held that acts of the appellants resulting in injuries to the deceased were done with knowledge that they would cause such bodily injury as was likely to cause death, conviction u/s 304, Part-II is proper. Jayappa Dutta v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1982 SC 1183 : (1982) 2 SCC 453 : 1982 SCC (Cri) 476 : 1982 CrLJ 1394.

[11466] ● Murder—Death of victim on spot by injuries.—The limited question in this appeal by special leave was whether the offence committed by the appellant would fall under Section 302, IPC. The undisputed facts in this case are that the appellant who was a constable fired several shots at another constable who came out of his office that he fired them at the victim who was trying to run away to save his life, that the victim collapsed on the floor after one shot hit him, that even after he collapsed the appellant fired another shot at him though it did not hit the victim, that the total number of used cartridges which were recovered from the scene of offence were five in number, that the Ballistic Expert opined that all the five cartridges were fired from the rifle which was seized from the appellant, that the Medical Officer noted ten injuries on the victim, that there was one entry wound but that there were four exit wounds, and that injuries Nos. 1 to 3 were sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death. It was argued that the intention of the appellant was merely to frighten the deceased or to cause grievous hurt especially in view of the fact that the bullet hit him just below the knee of his right leg and that, therefore, the offence would at the highest fall under Section 304, Part I of the Penal Code. It is naïve, to argue, that the intention was merely to frighten or to cause grievous hurt for it overlooked two salient features, namely (1) as many as five shorts were fired from his rifle and (2) the appellant fired a shot even after the victim had collapsed on the ground. The appellant should have known, that the rifle was a deadly weapon and no other inference was possible, but that he intended to cause such bodily injury as he knew to be likely to cause death of the person to whom the harm was caused. Further, it was not possible to come to any other conclusion, except that the appellant intended to inflict such bodily injuries to the deceased, which were sufficient in the ordinary course to nature to cause death. In any view of the matter, it would fall under clause 4thly, which provides, that if the person committing the act knew that it was so imminently dangerous that it should, in all probability, cause death or such bodily injury as was likely to cause death, and committed such act without any excuse for incurring the risk of causing death or such injury as aforesaid, it would amount to murder. The appeal was, therefore, dismissed. Sehaj Ram v. State of Haryana, AIR 1983 SC 614 : (1983) 3 SCC 280 : 1983 SCC (Cri) 621 : 1983 CrLJ 993 : 1983 CrLR (SC) 240 : 1983 ITJ (Cri) 122 : (1983) 2 SCJ 63 : 1983 MLJ (Cri) 587 : 1983 CrAppR (SC) 366.

[11467] ● Murder—Solitary blow of knife by accused following trivial quarrel.—The first appellant was aged 19 years at the time of the occurrence. He gave only one blow with a knife. On receipt of the blow, the deceased fell on the ground and there was not the slightest suggestion that the first appellant ever attempted to cause any more harm to the deceased. The motive was a trivial dispute and the incident occurred at about 10-00 P.M. The light available was from an electric lamp post in the street. Could it be said that the injury which was inflicted was the particular injury which was intended to be inflicted. If the answer was in the negative, and it ought to be so, the important requirement in the first part of para 3 of Section 300, IPC, would not be satisfied. Merely because the blow landed on a particular spot on the body (chest), divorced from the circumstances in which the blow was given, it would be hazardous to say that the first appellant intended to cause that particular injury. The weapon used was the usual handy weapon. A Punjabi generally carries a knife. In those circumstances, it would be difficult to say that the first appellant intended to cause that particular injury. Even if the injury proved to be fatal, the case will not be covered by para 3 of Section 300. The conviction under Section 302 cannot be sustained. He is guilty of an offence under Section 304 Part II, IPC, only. Jawahar Lal v. State of Punjab, AIR 1983 SC 284 : (1983) 4 SCC 159 : 1983 SCC (Cri) 805 : 1983 CrLJ 429 : 1983 CrLR (SC) 168 : (1983) 2 CrLC 427.

[11468] ● Verbal altercation—Accused assaulting deceased with great force.—Where the accused administered a single knife blow right on the chest of the accused with such great force that the ribs were cut and both the heart and the lung were punctured, it could not be said that the offence did not amount to culpable homicide amounting to murder under S. 302 but only amounted to culpable homicide not amounting to murder under S. 304-Part II, IPC. Vasanta v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1983 SC 361 : 1984 Supp SCC 648 : 1983 SCC (Cri) 335 : 1983 CrLJ 693 : 1983 CrLR (SC) 174 : 1983 (1) Crimes 728.

[11469] ● Accused armed with different weapons—Caused two types of head injuries.—In the instant case the accused armed with a dang and his son armed with gandasa made a joint assault on the deceased who fell down unconscious at the spot. Later he died while being taken from one Hospital to another. The accused also gave two blows to the daughter of the deceased when she laid herself on her father in order to save his life. The Doctor found a vertical lacerated wound and a transverse incised wound both on the head. While convicting the main accused the High Court acquitted the son observing that only two injuries were inflicted on the deceased and the same could have been caused by one weapon like Dang which were attributable to the main accused. The acquittal of the son caused manifest miscarriage of justice. There is no basis for the assumption made by the High Court that both the head injuries caused to the deceased can be inflicted by one weapon like a Dang and therefore could be attributed to main accused. According to the Doctor, the lacerated wound was caused by a blunt-edged weapon and the incised wound was caused by a sharp-edged weapon. The unimpeachable testimony of the three eye-witnesses clearly showed that both the accused made a joint assault on the deceased with their weapons. State of Punjab v. Mann Singh, AIR 1983 SC 172 : (1983) 1 SCC 207 : 1983 SCC (Cri) 165 : 1983 CrLJ 229 : 1983 CrLR (SC) 138 : 1983 UJ (SC) 244 : 1983 (1) Crimes 645 : 1983 CrAppR (SC) 179 : 1983 ACrR 387 : 1983 SCCrR 257.

[11470] ● Murder—Only one blow with knife.—In this case the accused started abusing certain organisers of a chit fund who had no connection with the deceased, in front of the house of the deceased. The deceased came out of his house and asked the accused to go away and cautioned him not to indulge in abusive language as the ladies were present. Both were remonstrating with each other when the accused took out knife from his waist and stabbed the deceased and pushed him to some distance and went away. He was convicted of an offence under Section 302, IPC, and sentenced to suffer imprisonment for life. In the circumstances of this case, no malice is alleged to have been entertained by the accused towards the deceased and the accused gave only one blow with a knife on the spur of the moment; the requisite intention to commit murder cannot be attributed to him. In such a situation, he would be guilty of committing an offence under Section 304 Part II, IPC and sentence of 5 years is awarded. Tholan v. State of Tamil Nadu, AIR

1984 SC 759 : (1984) 2 SCC 133 : 1984 CrLJ 478.

[11471] ● Deceased mercilessly beaten resulting in death—Conviction under Section 304, Part II, IPC.—Where a person for his audacity in complaining against the thana staff to the Superintendent of Police was falsely arrested in a dacoity case and thereafter mercilessly beaten at the police station which resulted in his death and the Doctor gave clear evidence that there were 19 injuries on various parts of the body of the deceased and these injuries caused his death, the case clearly fell within clause 2ndly of S. 300 and as such the Daroga and the constables could be held guilty under S. 302 but as the Sessions Judge convicted them only under S. 304 Part-II IPC, and the State did not file any appeal against that order of the Sessions Judge though it did file an appeal against the outright acquittal of the accused by the High Court, the Supreme Court in setting aside the order of acquittal passed by the High Court restored the conviction under S. 304 Part-II, IPC, though it felt that it was a clear case of murder. State of U.P. v. Ram Sagar Yadav, AIR 1985 SC 416 : (1985) 1 SCC 550 : 1985 SCC (Cri) 127 : 1986 CrLJ 836.

[11472] ● Blow given by accused not correlated to internal injury causing death of victims.—Where the evidence does not correlate the blow with the internal injury which according to medical evidence led to death, the accused should appropriately be convicted under Section 325, IPC, and not under Section 304, Part II. Mohinder Singh v. State (Delhi Admn.), AIR 1986 SC 309 : 1985 Supp SCC 473 : 1985 SCC (Cri) 488 : 1985 CrLJ 1903.

[11473] ● Murder—Intention.—The nature of the offence does not depend, merely on the location of the injury caused by the accused. The intention of the person causing the injury has to be gathered from a careful examination of all the facts and circumstances of each given case. In the instant case, the appellant did not merely swing his knife towards the leg of the deceased during some struggle nor did it happen by sheer misfortune to cut an artery. That the appellant had intended to cause injury to vital parts of the deceased is clear from the fact that he had administered a stab wound on the chest of the deceased on the back side. The blow on the groin of the deceased had caused a wound 8 cm. deep piercing both the femoral blood vessels. Further when PW-6 tried to intervene, the appellant inflicted two stab wounds on him which were of identical pattern, one on the back of the chest and one in the groin region but fortunately both injuries did not prove fatal. Taking into account all those circumstances, the appellant is clearly guilty of the offences under Section 302, IPC, and Section 307, IPC. Jaspal Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1986 SC 683 : (1986) 2 SCC 100 : 1986 SCC (Cri) 119 : 1986 CrLJ 488 : 1986 CrLR (SC) 111 : 1986 (1) Crimes 435.

[11474] ● Culpable homicide not amounting to murder—Accused giving lathi blow on head of deceased resulting in his death.—The accused and the deceased had bad blood between them over the grazing of cattle on the date of occurrence having heard a hue and cry raised from near the house of the accused witnesses ran there and saw the deceased lying on the ground in a pool of blood with a bleeding head injury. On questioning the accused he stated that during the day time his bell-metal utensil was stolen and he was keeping a watch for the thief. He saw a person coming inside his premises and thinking him to be a thief he dealt a lathi blow but subsequently discovered that it was the deceased. On being taken back to his house, the deceased told his wife that he had been assaulted by the respondent in the presence of the deceased's son and grandson. The doctor found in his autopsy multiple injuries on the body. The doctor deposed that the head injury, resulting in a depressed comminuted fracture over the right parietal bone and a transverse fracture extending below the left parietal prominence, could have been caused by a single stroke with a lathi used with great force. Under Section 79, if an act is done under a mistake of fact, although not justified by law, in the belief in good faith that it is justified by law, it will not be an offence. As per Section 52, IPC, the question of good faith does not require logical infallibility but due care and attention. The question of good faith is always a question of fact to be determined in accordance with the proved facts and circumstances of each case. In this case there is complete absence of good faith on the part of the accused. There were strained feelings on the part of the accused with the deceased. Apparently, the accused was waiting for an opportunity to settle the account when he assaulted him and there was no occasion for him in the circumstances proved to have believed that he was striking at a thief. This was not a case where a person being ignorant of the existence of the relevant facts or mistaken as to them, was guilty of conduct which might produce harmful result which he never intended. Even if he was a thief, that fact by itself would not justify the accused dealing a lathi blow on the head of the deceased. The deceased had not effected an entry into the house nor was he anywhere near it. It appeared that the accused stealthily followed him and took the opportunity to settle the scores by dealing him a lathi blow with great force on a vulnerable part of the body like the head resulting in his death. There was no suggestion, that he wielded the lathi in the right of self-defence. In this view of the matter the accused is guilty of culpable homicide not amounting to murder. State of Orissa v. Bhaga Barik, AIR 1987 SC 1265 : (1987) 2 SCC 498 : 1987 CrLJ 1115 : (1987) 2 SCJ 188.

[11475] ● Murder—Assistant giving repeated blows with sharp edged weapon on vital part of victim body.—Where the injuries clearly disclosed that the assailant went on giving blows after blows with his Kirpan, a sharp edged weapon, on the part of the body where vital organs are situated resulting in the death, the offence is one under Section 302, IPC. It is not a case where a blow was inflicted in the heat of passion. Hence, it could not be said that the accused committed an offence other than the one under Section 302. Narendra Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1987 SC 1337 : (1987) 2 SCC 236 : 1987 CrLJ 1070 : 1987 (1) Crimes 705 : (1987) 1 (1) IJRep 578 : 1987 East CrC 271.

[11476] ● Accused causing injuries to victim one being sufficient in ordinary course to cause death.—Where the evidence created considerable doubt, as to whether the appellant clearly intended to kill the deceased or whether his misconduct pushed them to wreak revenge against the deceased and so attacked him, the appellant would be guilty under Section 304, Part I, and not under Section 302, IPC. The conviction is accordingly altered. Gurdip Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1987 SC 1151 : (1987) 2 SCC 14 : 1987 CrLJ 987 : (1987) 1 (1) IJ Rep 521 : 1987 Raj LR 135.

[11477] ● Injuries caused by hard blunt object on hands or feet—Not fatal.—Where two of the appellants sentenced for murder, were alleged to have caused injuries to the deceased on hands or feet with lathis, at best they could be convicted under Section 325, IPC. The third appellant was carrying a barchi (spear) and two injuries found on the persons of the deceased are described as incised injuries Nos. 1 and 2. According to evidence, this appellant inflicted a barchi injury on the right arm on the upper part but there is no injury at that place. Even if any other injury could be attributed to him, it could only be either injury No. 1 or No. 2, none of which as per medical evidence is fatal, which resulted in the death of the deceased. Even if injury No. 2 is attributed to this appellant, at best he could be convicted under S. 326, or if injury No.1 is attributed to him also, he could be convicted under S. 324 only. In either case sentence of 5 years could be said to be sufficient. Even if their conviction is maintained under S. 325 and S. 326, sentence already undergone will meet the ends of justice. Rattan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1988 SC 2147 : 1988 SCC (Cri) 708 : 1989 CrLJ 287 : (1988) 2 SCWR 24 : 1988 ACrC 225 : (1988) 14 ALR 555 : 1988 Supp SCC 456 : 1988 BLJR 459 : 1988 CalCrLR (SC) 137.

[11478] ● Accused when inflicting blow with deadly weapon—Presumption as to infliction of injury.—In all the cases the approach has been to find out whether the ingredient namely the intention to cause the particular injury was present or not and it is held that circumstances like sudden quarrel in a fight or when the deceased intervenes in such a fight would create a doubt about the ingredient of intention as it cannot definitely be said in such circumstances that the accused aimed the blow at a particular part of the body. When an accused inflicts a blow with a deadly weapon the presumption is that he intended to inflict that injury but there may be circumstances like those, as mentioned above, which rebut such presumption and throw a doubt about the application of clause thirdly. The answer much depends on the facts and circumstances of each case. Jai Prakash v. State (Delhi Adm.), (1991) 2 SCC 32 : (1991) 1 Crimes 474 (481) SC.

[11479] ● Infliction of injury without premeditation.—In the instant case the accused-appellant was having an illicit relation with the wife of the deceased and his visits to her house were resented and objected. On the day of occurrence, the accused visited the house when the deceased was not there and he went there armed with a kirpan. When the deceased came and objected to his presence there was only an altercation and exchange of hot words and not a fight. Thereupon he took out the Kirpan, a knife and stabbed on the chest of the deceased resulting in instantaneous death of the deceased. It can be held that the accused intentionally inflicted that injury though it may not be premeditated one. All the above circumstances would certainly indicate such a state of mind, namely, that he aimed and inflicted that injury with a deadly weapon. The accused is guilty under Section 302, IPC. Jai Prakash v. State (Delhi Adm.), (1991) 2 SCC 32 : (1991) 1 Crimes 474 SC.

[11480] ● Common intention to cause death not proved beyond reasonable doubt.—The Court in the present case found that the two accused alone were not responsible to cause all the injuries to the deceased and that too with the common intention of causing his death. The act was found to have been committed by the accused with the knowledge that it was likely to cause death or to cause such bodily injury as was likely to cause death of deceased. The conviction of accused is altered from Section 302 to Section 304 Part II. Nadodi Jayaraman v. State, AIR 1993 SC 777 : 1992 Supp (3) SCC 161 : 1993 CrLJ 426 (SC).

[11481] ● Culpable homicide not amounting to murder—Injuries inflicted not on vital part.—In a case it has been held that though it may not be possible to attribute to appellant the necessary intention to cause death of deceased so as to hold him guilty of an offence of murder under Section 302, IPC, since the injuries inflicted by him were not found to be sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death of deceased but looking to the weapon with which he was armed and the nature, number and set of injuries inflicted by him though not on any vital part, he can certainly be attributed with the knowledge that with those injuries it was likely that death of deceased may be caused and, therefore, he can be clothed with the liability of causing culpable homicide not amounting to murder and that the case of the appellant, fell within Section 299, IPC, punishable under Section 304 Part I, IPC. Subran v. State of Kerala, (1993) 3 SCC 32 : 1993 SCC (Cri) 583 : 1993 CrLJ 1387 (SC) : 1993 (2) Crimes 15.

[11483] ● Murder—Conviction of accused for.—The conviction of accused for murder by invoking clause 1 of S. 300, IPC is proper. Venu v. State of T.N., AIR 1993 SCW 2870 : 1993 CrLJ 3671 (SC).

[11484] ● Injuries inflicted on unvital part of deceased.—The accused inflicted the injuries on unvital part of the deceased which were not found to be sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death but it was proved that he inflicted the injuries with a knowledge that with these injuries the victim was likely to die. The case will fall under Section 299 and will be punishable under Section 304, Part, I. Subran v. State of Kerala, (1993) 3 SCC 32 : 1993 CrLJ 1387 (SC).

[11485] ● Injury on accused—Only abrasion.—Where the accused was injured in an assault and medical report showed that it was only an abrasion as only one blow was inflicted with blunt side of the axe and no sharp edge of the axe was used and incident had occurred in a sudden manner during a quarrel conviction of accused would be for culpable homicide not amounting to murder. It is difficult to hold that he intended to cause the particular injury which the doctor found to be sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death. Hardev Bhanji Joshi v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1993 SC 297 : 1992 Supp (2) SCC 561 : 1993 CrLJ 64 (SC).

[11486] ● Multiple injuries caused on victim—Death caused on account of.—Multiple injuries were caused to the victim who died after a fortnight. Medical evidence gave cause of death as short supply of blood to kidneys as a result of multiple injuries suffered by the victim. Pathologist also stated that the short supply of blood can be on account of various reasons including multiple injuries in question. The death has been caused on account of injuries. Pritam Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1993 SC 2604 : 1994 SCC (Cri) 705 : 1994 Supp (1) SCC 532.

[11487] ● Two blows on chest by stick resulting in death.—The accused gave two blows on chest by stick resulting into the death of the victim and as per medical opinion injuries had ruptured spleen and liver which proved fatal. It was also revealed from other evidences that there was no intention to cause death. So having regard to the nature of the weapon used and the parts of body on which blows were dealt it was held that conviction u/s. 304 Part II, IPC would meet the ends of justice as the accused must be attributed to have the knowledge that by dealing such blows he was likely to cause the death of the deceased. Karan Singh v. State of Punjab, 1993 CrLJ 3673 (SC).

[11488] ● Injuries caused by fist and blows—Intention to cause death—Inference.—The accused without using their weapons caused injuries on the deceased by fist blows and kicks. Medical report indicated that the death was caused due to shock, hemorrhage and strangulation, and other circumstances showed that there was intention to assault and not to cause such injury which in the ordinary course of nature was sufficient to cause death of the accused. The offence committed by the accused will amount to culpable homicide not amounting to murder which is punishable u/s. 304 part II/34. An additional fine of Rs. 2500/ is imposed on each accused which on realisation is to be paid to the son of the deceased. Ramesh Kumar v. State of Bihar, AIR 1993 SC 2317 : 1994 Supp (1) SCC 116 : 1993 CrLJ 3137 (SC).

[11489] ● Death caused in free-fight between two groups forming unlawful assembly.—There was free fight between two groups which had formed unlawful assembly and accused persons, as alleged by the prosecution, had caused two deaths and some injuries to the persons of complainant side. The dispute and with regard to some landed property over which none was enjoying the possession. So there was no question of availability of any private defence to any party. Circumstances disclosed that the object was to fight only and not to cause death or grievous injury to any person. It was held that since it was well within their knowledge that at least an offence of culpable homicide was likely to be committed, the accused persons could be convicted under Section 304, Part II r/w Section 149 for offence of culpable homicide not amounting to murder. Ekhar Bahera v. State of Orissa, 1994 Supp (1) SCC 493 : 1993 CrLJ 3664 (SC).

[11490] ● Case based on circumstantial evidence.—The witness had not seen the accused beating his wife inside the house but he had simply drawn the inference that it was accused who was inside the house. The woman's shrieks were coming out of the room which was bolted from the inside and when people standing outside shouted the accused opened the door and ran away. It was held that conviction of accused based on circumstantial evidence was proper. State of M.P. v. Ratan Lal, AIR 1994 SC 458 : 1994 CrLJ 131 (SC).

[11491] ● Culpable homicide—Murder of accused.—The accused was charged of committing the murder of the deceased but in FIR it was described that the co-accused was responsible for causing the sole injury on the deceased and prosecution witness stated in Court that it was accused who had caused fatal injury. Apart from this the witnesses differed in their version and Court found them unreliable. It was held that the appellant accused's conviction was liable to be set aside as there was no reason for High Court to convict the appellant only by singling out him. Ramesh Maruti Patil v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1994 SC 28 : 1994 CrLJ 8 (SC).

[11492] ● Injuries caused by stick portion of spear and other weapon—On non-vital part.—The evidence showed that injuries were caused by stick portion of spear and other weapon and all injuries were almost on vital part of the body and injured deceased was left unattended for nearly 20 hours at the site itself. It cannot be said that intention of accused was to cause death or such bodily injuries as were sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause the death and conviction of accused is liable to be altered from Section 302 to one u/s. 304. Chuttan v. State of M.P., AIR 1994 SC 1398 : 1994 Supp (1) SCC 594 : 1994 CrLJ 2097 (SC).

[11493] ● Culpable homicide—Alteration and reduction of sentence.—In another case the accused assaulted and caused the death of the victim with Bhala and relying on the prosecution witnesses the High Court convicted him u/s. 304 part I. On appeal Supreme Court found that there was only one injury on the head that proved to be fatal and weapons used were not deadly but the accused had knowledge that injuries caused by them were likely to cause death. It was held that the accused was guilty of culpable homicide only and his conviction u/s. 304 Part II would meet the ends of justice. Madhusudan Satpathy v. State of Orissa, AIR 1994 SC 474 : 1994 CrLJ 144.

[11494] ● Framing of charge—Material relied upon by prosecution for.—In view of S. 299, IPC, the material relied upon by the prosecution for framing a charge under Section 304, Part II, IPC, must indicate that the accused had done an act which had caused death with at least such a knowledge that he was by such act likely to cause death. Keshab Mahendra v. State of M.P., (1996) 6 SCC 129 : 1996 (3) Crimes 288 (SC).

[11495] ● Death due to haemorrhage and shock caused by rupture of spleen.—Where the accused persons though armed with deadly weapons did not cause grievous injuries on vital parts and the death was due to haemorrhage and shock caused by rapture of spleen, conviction was altered to Section 304, Part II, IPC. Ranjha v. State of Punjab, AIR 1996 SC 2741 : (1996) SCC (Cri) 1163 : 1996 CrLJ 3991 : (1996) 3 Crimes 205.

[11496] ● No motive for committing offence—Only one blow in sudden quarrel.—The High Court has recorded a finding that the incident took place at the spur of a moment. There was no motive for committing the offence. The respondent had given only one blow in the sudden quarrel which took place between him and the deceased. Considering the facts and circumstances of the case it cannot be said that the High Court was wrong in acquitting him under S. 302, I.P.C and convicting him only under S. 304, Part I, IPC. State of Punjab v. Gurcharan Singh, AIR 1998 SC 3115 (3116) : (1998) 7 SCC 446 : 1998 SCC (Cri) 1682 : 1998 CrLJ 4560 : JT 1998 (6) SC 191 : (1998) 3 Crimes 229.

[11497] ● Culpable homicide or murder—Knife hitting brother of complainant causing death.— "In our opinion the prosecution had established beyond doubt that the respondent had given a knife blow to Kesar Lal and that he died as a result of the injuries caused by that blow. Though the injury was sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death, the evidence discloses that the respondent had not aimed the blow on any vital part of Ram Gopal or Kesar Lal. The blow was aimed at Ram Gopal but as he moved aside, it landed on the stomach of Kesar Lal. The dispute was not such which would have prompted the accused to cause the death of Kesar Lal, particularly when he had no dispute with Kesar Lal. The dispute was with Bhima, the brother of Kesar Lal. This aspect was not at all considered by the Trial Court or by the High Court. In our opinion view of the facts and circumstances of the case, the appellant should have been convicted under S. 304, Part I, IPC and not under S. 302.." State of Rajasthan v. Satyanarayan, AIR 1998 SC 2060 (2062) : (1998) 8 SCC 404 : 1998 SCC (Cri) 1539 : 1998 CrLJ 2911 : 1998 CrLR (SC) 183 : JT 1998 (1) SC 426 : 1998 (1) Crimes 156.

[11498] ● Sudden quarrel—Infliction of single knife injury.—The accused inflicted a single knife blow to the deceased which caused his death whereas the injury was not aimed at a particular part of body of deceased and medical evidence did not state that the injury was sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause the death. It was held that consequences were outcome of the sudden quarrel and the accused is liable to be convicted u/s. 304 and not u/s. 302 as it was culpable homicide not amounting to murder. Ram Prakash Singh v. State of Bihar, AIR 1998 SC 1190 : (1998) 9 SCC 497 : 1998 CrLJ 1622 (SC).

[11499] ● Prosecution failing to prove motive.—The prosecution has not been able to establish any motive strong enough to induce Ramnath to kill any of those five persons even if some enmity with Bishwanath Prasad Rajgaria is assumed. He did not have any enmity with others. If really his intention was to kill them, he would not have given that poisonous substance (proved) so openly and in presence of others. It is, therefore, not possible to infer from the facts and circumstances of the case that Ramnath had given the same to Bishwanath Prasad with any intention to cause his death. However, he ought to have known that as what he had given to Bishwanath Prasad Rajgaria and others was a poisonous substance, it was likely to cause grievous hurt and even death. We, therefore, hold him guilty for committing the offence punishable under Section 304, Part II, IPC for causing the death of Bishwanath Prasad Rajgaria and for the offence punishable under Section 326, IPC for causing grievous hurt to Bigu Ram, Ram Narayan Prasad, Ram Gopal Prasad Rajgaria, Jagnnath Prasad and Hari Naraya. State of Bihar v. Ram Nath Prasad, AIR 1998 SC 466 : (1998) 9 SCC 49 : 1998 SCC (Cri) 972 : 1998 CrLJ 679 : 1997 (4) Crimes 424.

[11500] ● Evidence of injured witness reliable—Corroborated by medical evidence.—Where the prosecution case was that the accused armed with lethal weapons assaulted the deceased and the members of his family, the evidence of injured eye witness was found reliable, corroborated by medical evidence, however, fatal injury was inflicted by one accused the appellant, conviction of the accused appellants under Section 304, Part 2/149 was held proper. Suresh Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 1999 SC 1773 : (1999) 9 SCC 127 : 1999 SCC (Cri) 560 : 2007 CrLJ 4717 (4721).

[11501] ● Court to decide whether death homicidal or not.—Court should be circumspective over the broader features in deciding whether death was homicidal or not. State of Maharashtra v. Damu, AIR 2000 SC 1691 : (2000) 6 SCC 269 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 1088 : 2000 CrLJ 2301.

[11502] ● No evidence for showing that accused had knowledge that by manufacturing bomb death likely consequence.—No evidence has been led in by the prosecution to show that mere manufacture of bomb was likely to cause death of any person nor any evidence for showing that accused had the knowledge that by manufacturing bombs death would possibly be caused to any human being without any other act being done. There is no scope to bring the proved facts within the ambit of Section 299, IPC. Shamsher Khan v. State(N.C.T. of Delhi), AIR 2000 SC 3662 : (2000) 8 SCC 568 : 2001 CrLJ 119 : 2000 (4) Crimes 186 (SC).

[11503] ● Sudden quarrel—No pre-meditation crude bomb used for causing injury.—The learned counsel for the appellant lastly contended before us that the entire incident had happened on a sudden quarrel and there was no premeditation or serious intention on the part of the appellant to cause death of the deceased Dama, and, therefore, the offence, if any, committed by the appellant, would only come within the purview of S. 304, Part I, IPC. It was also pointed out that the appellant has been undergoing imprisonment since 1992. Of course, the incident must have happened on a sudden quarrel but the weapon used for causing injury is a crude-bomb and in all probability, the appellant being a person residing in the village must be aware of the serious consequences of explosion of a bomb. Moreover, the bomb was thrown on the head of the deceased and it caused extensive injuries to the deceased. The head of the deceased was completely smashed and his brain part came out and it resulted in the instant death of the deceased. The bomb was thrown from a close range and the fact that appellant too sustained injuries is indicative of that fact. This being the factual scenario we do not think that the gravity of the offence committed by the appellant is not in any way lessened so as to come under S.304, Part I, IPC. Rama Mangaruji Chacherkar v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 2000 SC 283 (285) : (2002) 1 SCC 724 : 2001 CrLJ 573 : (2002) 1 Crimes 202.

[11504] ● Sudden quarrel—Lathi used to cause injury resulting in death.—As the entire incident happened pursuant to a quarrel between two groups of people and that the appellant had no deliberate intention to cause death of Sher Singh, we do not think that an offence under S. 302, IPC had been made out against the appellant. The incident was the result of a sudden quarrel between the two groups and in that melee the appellant must have used a lathi which caused injury to Sher Singh which ultimately resulted in his death. In that background, it is difficult to hold that the appellant committed the offence of murder. The offence would only come under S. 304, Part II of the IPC, Therefore we acquit the appellant of the offence under S. 302, IPC and find him guilty of offence punishable under S. 304, Part II, IPC. Addha v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 2001 SC 3973 (3975) : (2001) 9 SCC 488 : 2001 CrLJ 4675.

[11505] ● Land dispute—Culpable homicide not amounting to murder.—There was some dispute in respect of land which was in possession of the accused. When the deceased, alongwith his father, was ploughing field at the relevant time, the accused and his son attacked deceased and others in exercise of right of private defence of their property. However, they continued attack even after the deceased fell on the ground and caused his death. The High Court in regard to this incident having come to the conclusion that the possession of the disputed field was with the appellant, held that the appellant had a right to private defence to the extent of protecting the property of which he was in possession but after examining the evidence available on record., it came to the conclusion that so-far as the appellant and Bhajan son of Latel are concerned, they have exceeded this right and are liable to be punished under S. 304,' Part I, IPC for having committed the murder of Ashok Tiwari. Here we are in unison with the finding of the High Court from the evidence of the witness which have been discussed by the High Court, in regard to this incident, it is clear that the High Court was justified in coming to the conclusion that the act of these two persons, namely, the appellant and Bhajan came under Exception II to S. 300, I.PC and amounted to culpable homicide not amounting to murder because the same was done in exercise of the right of private defence of their property and taking into consideration nature of attack, it held that their act does not come under S. 302, I.P.C but only under S. 304, Part I, IPC. Latel v. State of Chattisgarh, AIR 2001 SC 3747 (3750) : (2001) 9 SCC 135.

[11506] ● Sudden fight—Act of accused amount to culpable homicide not amounting to murder.—The cause of death in the opinion of Dr. Solanki was shock due to acute peritonitis. None of the two Doctors has deposed if the injury was grievous or sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death or that the injury was so imminently dangerous that it must have in all probability resulted in death or was likely to cause death. The exact cause of peritonitis is not known. That negligence to treat the wound could be a contributing factor cannot be ruled out. In such state of medical evidence, it will not be proper to draw an inference against Magansing, accused No. 2 of his having committed murder of Sabuji Viraji punishable under S. 302, IPC. The injury dealt by him by a sharp weapon had cut into the intestine. Though, an intention to cause death or such bodily injury as is likely to cause death cannot be attributed to him, knowledge is attributable to accused No. 2 that an injury by knife into the abdomen was likely to cause death. As it was a case of sudden fight, the act of this accused would amount to culpable homicide not amounting to murder punishable under Part II of S. 304, IPC. The other injuries on the person of Sabuji are not attributed to accused No. 2, Magansing. Takhaji Hiraji v. Thakore Kubersing Chamansing, AIR 2001 SC 2328 : (2001) 6 SCC 145 : 2001 SCC (Cri) 1070 (1081) : 2001 CrLJ 2602 : JT 2001 (1) (Supp) SC 415.

[11507] ● Culpable homicide not murder—Transparent malice.—The only accused whose act needs to be determined for the purpose of finding out what offence, if any, he has committed, is accused Ramesh. Exception II to Section 300 IPC provides that culpable homicide is not murder if the offender, in the exercise in good faith of the right of private defense of person or property, exceeds the power given to him by law and causes the death of the person against whom he has exercised such right of defence without premeditation, and without any intention of doing more harm than is necessary for the purpose of such defence. We have found the deceased Brindawan having sustained injury by gunshot fired by accused Ramesh. Such injury was caused when the members of the prosecution party were fleeing away, though to begin with the accused Ramesh had available to him the right to private defence of person. The right was exceeded and therefore the act of accused Ramesh would be covered by Exception II to Section 300 IPC. The injuries caused to Brindawan show the pellets having injured the lower part of the body of Brindawan. It cannot be said that accused Ramesh intended to cause death or cause such bodily injury as was likely to cause death thought he should be attributed with the knowledge that the injury caused by him was likely to cause death. His individual act of causing injury to deceased Brindawan is therefore punishable under Section 304 Part II IPC. So also his subsequent fire aimed at complainant Sundera but which accidentally hit Jamuni Bai Dhoban would also be punishable under Section 304 Part II IPC with the aid of Section 301, IPC. If he had injured the complainant Sundera, he would have been liable to be convicted under Section 304 Part II IPC. In spite of complainant Sunder alias Sundera having escaped unhurt and yet Jamuni Bai Dhoban having been injured though not aimed at, on the doctrine of "transferred malice" as contained in Section 301 IPC the liability of the accused remains the same. In the FIR, the version of Sundera was that Jamuni Bai had intervened to rescue him when she got injured. This story was abandoned by Sundera whilst in witness box and he maintained that though the second shot by accused Ramesh was aimed at him it hit Jamuni Bai instead of him. No prosecution witness states where the gun held by accused Ramesh was aimed at. Prosecution version coming through the three eyewitnesses that accused Ramesh was in a standing posture, facing them, when he fired the gun, is not supported by, rather belied by, medical evidence. The fact remains that Jamuni Bai was neither aimed at nor intended to be harmed by accused Ramesh. In case of accidental injury attracting applicability of "transferred malice" under Section 301, IPC and having held that the act of the accused was covered by Section 304 IPC, the Court should lean in favour of convicting the accused under Part II of Section 304 if it is in doubt as to which one of the two parts of Section 304, IPC would he attracted. This would be consistent with the basic tenet of extending benefit of doubt in criminal jurisprudence. Accordingly, we hold the accused Ramesh guilty under Section 304 Part II for causing the death of Jamuni Bai. Kashiram v. State of M.P., AIR 2001 SC 2902 : 2002 (1) SCC 71 : 2002 SCC (Cri) 68 (83, 84).

[11508] ● Culpable homicide when murder.—Culpable homicide is murder if the act by which the death is caused is done with the intention of causing death and is not covered by any of the exceptions of Section 300 of the Indian Penal Code. As already noticed, in this case there is no evidence to show that the aforesaid, accused persons proved to have been involved in the occurrence, had intended to cause the offence of murder within the meaning of Section 300 as punishable under Section 302 of the Indian Penal Code. However, on proof of the commission of offence of gang rape found to have been committed in a violent manner, they are assumed to be having the knowledge that by their action it was likely that the deceased would have died. The aforesaid accused are, therefore, guilty of the offence, punishable under Part II of Section 304 of the Indian Penal Code. State of Orrisa v. Dibakar Naik, AIR 2002 SC 2148 : (2002) 5 SCC 323 : 2002 SCC (Cri) 1128 : 2002 CrLJ 2826.

[11509] ● Clause thirdly of Section 300, IPC not attracted.—In an action described by the eyewitnesses where the deceased sometimes was standing up and at other times was running and was surrounded by the assailants, one particular injury on the humerus cannot be said to be a wound which was specifically intended by the assailant at whose hand that injury was caused. If that be so, it is difficult to bring the offence within the purview of clause thirdly of Section 300, IPC. Chanda Jivanji Chelaji v. State of Gujarat, (2002) 9 SCC 576 : 2002 SCC (Cri) 437 : 2001 CrLJ 3299.

[11510] ● Pre-meditation—Culpable homicide not amounting murder.—In the instant case, the appellants went to the place of occurrence with guns and deadly weapons. This would clearly indicate that there was premeditation on the part of the appellants and from the acts committed by the appellant, it is evident that they had intention of doing more harm than was necessary for the purpose of self-defence. Therefore, the acts committed by the appellants will not come within Exception 2 of S. 300, IPC so as to make it culpable homicide not amounting to murder. There were disputes between the parties and there was also pending litigation. The appellants had also resorted to civil remedies. That apart the evidence also does not indicate that there was a serious apprehension that death or grievous hurt would be the consequence of the act allegedly committed by Surmukh Singh and others. Therefore, the assailants had no right to take away the life of Surmukh Singh in exercise of the alleged right of private defence. Jassa Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 2002 SC 520 (525) : (2002) 2 SCC 481 : 2002 CrLJ 563 : 2002 (1) Crimes 236.

[11512] ● Infliction of knife injuries on vital part of body of deceased.—There is nothing on record to show that the offence was committed without premeditation in sudden fight or in the heat of passion upon a sudden quarrel or that the accused had not taken the advantage of his position. The prosecution has successfully established that the accused alongwith others were agitating against the anti-reservation, he was preventing the students from attending the school, had physically obstructed the complainant from going to the class and upon intervention of Iliyasbhai inflicted injuries with his knife on the vital part of his body. The intention of the accused is apparent from the facts and circumstances of the case, the nature of the injuries inflicted and location of the body where the injuries are caused. The arguments for giving the benefit of Exception 4 to the appellant is misconceived. Kalpesh Kumar v. Bhajiyu Gunvantlal Seni v. State of Gujarat, (2002) 3 Crimes 197.

[11514] ● Sudden fight—Death by strangulation.—Fight between two parties started all of a sudden as a result of obstruction caused for digging of the foundation and there is no evidence to show that the accused attacked the deceased with-deadly or dangerous arms [or weapons]. It was only in a fight, hand to fist, that both Gainda Singh and the appellant have held the neck of the deceased Shishupal Singh with such force as to ultimately result in strangulation and his death. It is very difficult to conceive as to how much pressure was applied either by Gainda Singh or the appellant on the deceased's neck so as to cause death. It would be reasonable to hold that the injuries were caused by the appellant on the deceased in a sudden fight where no arms [or weapons] were used and that fight took place in a heat of passion and no common intention to kill the deceased could be inferred. We cannot definitely conclude who actually inflicted fatal injury as evidence on record discloses that Gainda Singh and the appellant both strangled the deceased, which action is part of sudden unarmed fight nor can we conclude that the appellant had an intention to cause death or cause such bodily injury as is likely to cause death, though we attributed to him knowledge that such act is likely to cause death. Thus, the appellant and Gainda Singh are guilty of culpable homicide not amounting to murder. In the circumstances, we set aside the conviction recorded by the Trial Court as affirmed by the High Court under S, 302 read with S. 34 and instead convict him under S. 304, Part II and reduce the sentence to imprisonment for a period of seven years. Uday Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 2002 SC 3143 (3144, 3145) : (2002) 7 SCC 79 : 2002 SCC (Cri) 1597 : 2002 CrLJ 4655 : 2002 (4) Crimes 427.

[11515] ● Gang rape and murder—Commission of rape established.—In this case of gang rape, there was no evidence to show that the accused persons proved to have been involved in the occurrence, had intended to cause the offence of murder within the meaning of S. 300 as punishable under S. 302 of the IPC. However, on proof of the commission of offence of gang rape found to have been committed in a violent manner, they were assumed to be having the knowledge that by their action it was likely that the deceased would have died. The aforesaid accused were, therefore, guilty of the offence, punishable under Part II of S. 304 of the IPC. State of Orissa v. Dibakar Naik, AIR 2002 SC 2148 : (2002) 5 SCC 323 : 2002 SCC (Cri) 1128 (1140) : 2002 CrLJ 2826 : JT 2002 (4) SC 303.

[11516] ● Right of private defence whether available to accused.—The right of a person to private defence of property would extend to the causing of the death only against certain crimes which are mentioned in Section 103, IPC. If the appellant's case is that PW2 and others had committed mischief, it should have been committed under such circumstances as may cause reasonable apprehension that death or grievous hurt will be the consequence and then only the right of private defence would extend to causing the death of person who committed the mischief. PW-2 was alone in the field when all the appellants came there. All the appellants were armed with gandasa, bhala, kudali and other weapons. It is evident that all the appellants came with a premeditation and the evidence also would indicate that they had done more harm than was necessary. The conduct of the appellants would indicate that they were not entitled to the benefit of Exception 2 to S. 300, so as to make the offence of murder as culpable homicide. Ram Bilas Yadav v. State of Bihar, AIR 2002 SC 530 (532, 533) : (2002) 2 SCC 131 : 2002 CrLJ 978 : JT 2001 (2) (Supp) SC 31 : 2002 (1) Crimes 225.

[11517] ● Free-fight—Knife injury—Fatal blow.—The injury sustained by the deceased, though in the ordinary course is sufficient to cause death, would not have been intended to be inflicted by the assailant. The situs at which the fatal blow fell was not chosen or intended by the assailant according to the High Court and even as per facts narrated. It happened on account of fortuitous circumstances. Therefore, the conviction to S. 304, Part I of the IPC. Valson v. State of Kerala, AIR 2002 SC 2339 (2339) : (2002) 9 SCC 727 : 2003 SCC (Cri) 1177.

[11518] ● Incident occurred all of sudden in heat of passion without pre-meditation.—A usual brawl between the persons living as husband and wife resulted in the death of the deceased. There is nothing on record to show that the accused had preplanned the execution of the offence. It is admitted even by the prosecution witnesses that the appellant had come unarmed at the residence of the parents of the deceased and after altercation he picked up a kitchen knife from that house by which he inflicted one injury on the person of the deceased. It appears that the appellant committed the offence without premeditation in a sudden fight, in the heat of passion upon a sudden quarrel which was not provoked by him. It has also come on record that the appellant was not taking any undue advantage during the occurrence. The offence cannot be said to have been committed in a cruel or unusual manner. The appellant-accused was, therefore, entitled to the benefit of Exception 4 of Section 300 of the Indian Penal Code. Keshav Lal v. State of M.P., AIR 2002 SC 1012 : 2002 SCC (Cri) 641 (644) : 2002 (3) SCC 254.

[11519] ● Murder—Charge of Scorching Woman to death.—In the present case, the appellant did not even make an effort to bring the case within any of the four exceptions enumerated in Section 300. Hence the only question to be answered is whether he did the act with the intention of causing such bodily injury as he knew "to be likely to cause death of the deceased". It is inconceivable that the appellant would not have known that setting a human being ablaze after soaking her clothes with inflammable liquid would cause her death as the type of burns resulting therefrom would at least be "likely" to cause her death (it not, they are sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause her death). The fact that she died only after a fortnight of sustaining those burn injuries cannot evacuate the act out of the contours of the 2ndly clause of Section 300 IPC. There was a little abatement of the ferocity of the flames which engulfed her as she, in the instinctive human thirst of getting extricated from the gobbling tentacles of the fire, succeeded in tracing out a waterflow. Such a reflex action performed by her had mitigated the conflagration of the flames but did not save her from the fatality of the calamity. Hence the interval of fourteen days between the attack and her death is not a cause for mitigation of the offence perpetuated by the offender. We are therefore, not impressed by the alternative argument advanced by the learned Senior Counsel for appellant. Patel Hiralal Joitram v. State of Gujarat, AIR 2002 SC 1056 : 2002 (1) SCC 22 : 2002 SCC (Cri) 1 (11).

[11520] ● Armed offender when took undue advantage of weapon against unarmed person.—In this case appellant was armed with a lethal weapon whereas the deceased was unarmed. In such a situation, when the armed offender took undue advantage of that weapon against an unarmed person, he cannot get the benefit of Exception 4 of S. 300, IPC. Virender v. State (NCT) of Delhi, (2002) 3 SCC 341.

[11521] ● Death caused by strangulation.—Fight between two parties started all of a sudden as a result of obstruction caused for digging of the foundation and there is no evidence to show that the accused attacked the deceased with deadly or dangerous arms [or weapons]. It was only in a fight, hand to fist, that both Gainda Singh and the appellant have held the neck of the deceased Shishupal Singh with such force as to ultimately result in strangulation and his death. It is very difficult to conceive as to how much pressure was applied either by Gainda Singh or the appellant on the deceased's neck so as to cause death. It would be reasonable to hold that the injuries were caused by the appellant on the deceased in a sudden fight where no arms [or weapons] were used and that fight took place in a heat of passion and no common intention to kill the deceased could be inferred. We cannot definitely conclude who actually inflicted fatal injury as evidence on record discloses that Gainda Singh and the appellant both strangled the deceased, which action is part of sudden unarmed fight nor can we conclude that the appellant had an intention to cause death or cause such bodily injury as is likely to cause death, though we attributed to him knowledge that such act is likely to cause death. Thus, the appellant and Gainda Singh are guilty of culpable homicide not amounting to murder. In the circumstances, we set aside the conviction recorded by the Trial Court as affirmed by the High Court under S. 302 read with S. 34 and instead convicted him under S. 304, Part II and reduce the sentence to imprisonment for a period of seven years. Uday Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 2002 SC 3143 (3144, 3145) : (2002) 7 SCC 79 : 2002 CrLJ 4655 : 2002 SCC (Cri) 1597 : 2002 (4) Crimes 427.

[11523] ● Unlawful assembly with object of taking possession of land.—Our independent analysis of the evidence on the record shows that the appellants had formed an unlawful assembly with the object of taking forcible possession of the land and if necessary, to give beating to the complainant party to achieve their object. During the fight, Narain, belonging to the accused party received a fatal blow at the hands of Gajraj Singh, the deceased, whereafter the complainant party was assaulted and Gajraj Singh received injuries to which he later on succumbed. Looking to the manner in which the assault took place over the land, which was in the possession of the complainant party, it appears to us that the appellants did not intend to cause the murder of deceased Gajraj Singh. The offence committed by the appellants in the established facts and circumstances of the case, resulting in the death of Gajraj Singh was only culpable homicide not amounting to murder. The appellants can definitely be clothed with the knowledge that the injuries caused by then were likely to cause death or such bodily injury as was likely to cause the death of Gajraj Singh. The offence under the circumstances, would fall under Sections 304 (Part II)/149, IPC and not under Sections 302/149, IPC. We, therefore, accept these three appeals partly and hold that the offence committed by the 13 appellants is not one under Sections 302/149, IPC but one under Sections 304 (Part II)/149, IPC. Chhidamilal v. State of M.P., (2002) 9 SCC 369 : 2003 SCC (Cri) 1198 (1200).

[11524] ● Appellant never gave blow with intention of causing murder.—To appreciate the correctness of the rival submissions we have examined the evidence of PW 4. Her evidence categorically indicates that there was some quarrel between the son of the deceased and the accused persons sometime prior to the occurrence and the son had come back home. Then the accused persons came to the front of the house of the deceased and started abusing the wife of the deceased, she protested, thereupon the deceased himself came forward and asked the accused persons to go to the house and abuse but should not abuse in front of the house of the deceased. This intervention by the deceased and altercation, ultimately enraged the appellant who gave one blow with the weapon which he was holding in his hand, namely, the axe and ultimately the deceased succumbed to the injury sustained by the said weapon. The very fact that the accused persons came to the place in front of the house of the deceased and did not enter into the house or assaulted the deceased or any family members though they had the respective weapon in the hand and merely abused the wife of the deceased but later on, on account of intervention of the deceased there was some hot exchange of words and ultimately the appellant gave the blow in question, is indicative of the fact that the appellant never gave the blow with the intention of causing murder of the deceased so as to bring the offence under Section 302. On the other hand, the appellant must be held to have known the consequence of the blow being given and since it was a single blow the offence would be one under Part I under Section 304, IPC. We, accordingly, set aside the conviction of the appellant under Section 302 and instead convict him under Section 304 Part I and sentence him to undergo rigorous imprisonment for 10 years. Pandurang Punappa Karpe v. State of Maharashtra, (2002) 9 SCC 539 : 2003 SCC (Cri) 1240 (1241, 1242).

[11525] ● No evidence as to who started aggression.—As regards the role played by A-1 to A-3 there is no satisfactory evidence as to who started the aggression. The prosecution case shows that both sides exchanged attack and counter attack. Both sides sustained injuries. The case can justifiably be brought within the ambit of Exception 4 of Section 300, IPC. The conviction of A-1 to A-3 is to be altered to Section 304, Part II. Resham Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 2002 SC 2625 : (2002) 10 SCC 151 : 2004 SCC (Cri) 452 (455).

[11526] ● Interested witness—One particular injury humorous not wound.—In an action described by the eye-witnesses where the deceased sometimes was standing up and at other times was running and was surrounded by the assailants, one particular injury on the humorous cannot be said to be a wound which was specifically intended by the assailant at whose hand that injury was caused. If that be so, it is difficult to bring the offence within the purview of clause thirdly of Section 300, IPC. Chavda Jivanji Chelaji v. State of Gujarat, (2002) 9 SCC 576 : 2004 SCC (Cri) 437 (439) : 2001 CrLJ 3299.

[11527] ● Shots fired in inebriated condition.—Keeping in view the fact that both the appellant and the deceased had consumed considerable amount of alcohol which is established from the evidence of the Doctor and the service revolver being next to the place where the fight took place and was not kept there by a planned act by the appellant, it cannot be altogether ruled out that the shots were fired not with an intention of taking any undue advantage by the appellant. It is probable that in an inebriated condition, the appellant used the service revolver because of the physical fight between the two. Having considered the material on record, the appellant could only be found guilty of an offence punishable under S.304, Part II. Manke Ram v. State of Haryana, AIR 2003 SC 4147 : (2003) 11 SCC 238 : 2003 CrLJ 2328 (SC) (2330).

[11528] ● Death due to neurogenic shock resulting from injury in testicles and scrotum.—The evidence of the eyewitnesses, namely, PWs 1, 5, 6 and 7 establishes beyond a reasonable doubt that the respondent came to the house of the deceased Amiruddin, caught hold of the deceased by his banian, lifted him up, hit him on the cheek and thereafter on the back of the neck. The evidence establishes that when he saw neighbours coming, he stated to Amiruddin that he would not leave him alive and then kicked Amiruddin with his right knee on the private parts. This resulted in the death of Amiruddin. The evidence of the doctor has also not been disbelieved. The evidence of the doctor clearly shows that the death was caused due to neurogenic shock resulting from injury to the testicles and scrotum. Thus the death is directly due to the injury caused by the respondent to the deceased. The injury was such that it was sufficient in the normal course to cause death. The injury resulted in death. The High Court was in error in stating that there was no injury. The High Court noted that death resulted from neurogenic shock but failed to note that the neurogenic shock was a result of the injury to the testicles and scrotum. The High Court omitted to note that such injury could be caused by a kick and was sufficient in normal course to cause immediate death. This was not a case where in a fit of anger or in a scuffle some act had taken place. We fail to understand how under such circumstances the High Court can conclude that the conviction can only be under Section 323, IPC. The injury caused was not event a simple injury. Section 323 would be wholly inapplicable. This was a case where the conviction should have been under Section 302, IPC. In any event, this was a case where the High Court should never have interfered with the conviction under Section 304 (Part II), IPC. State of Karnataka v. Mohamed Nazeer, AIR 2003 SC 999 : (2003) 2 SCC 444 : 2003 SCC (Cri) 556 (560) : 2003 CrLJ 1240.

[11529] ● Murder or culpable homicide—Proof—Incident happened all of sudden.—There were as many as 9 injuries on the body of deceased. Injury No. 1 was an incised wound on the top of right shoulder and injury No.2 was an incised wound on the right armpit. Injury No.3 was an incised wound on the abdomen. There were incised wounds on the left side of the head and various other abrasions and contusions on his body. It is clear that a group of people attacked deceased and caused him several injuries. Moreover, the incident happened all of a sudden when the accused persons saw deceased and PW-1 to PW-3. Having regard to the peculiar nature of the circumstances which led to the death of deceased, we are of the view that the offence committed by A-7, A-8 and A-11 would only come within the ambit of the offence punishable under S. 304, Part I. Kunhimodeenkutty v. State of Kerala, AIR 2003 SC 836 (836) : (2002) 10 SCC 352 : 2003 CrLJ 4941.

[11530] ● Single blow inflicted on head of deceased.—At the dead of night, the respondents and their father went to the house of PW-3 with a country-made pistol and with force inflicted such injuries on head which resulted in death of wife of PW 3. The mere fact that only a single blow was inflicted on the head by itself is not enough to alter the conviction from Section 302 to 304, IPC. State of U.P. v. Premi, AIR 2003 SC 1759 : (2003) 9 SCC 122 : 2003 CrLJ 1554 (SC).

[11531] ● Exception 4 to Section 300, IPC—Not applicable.—Where the deceased and his father objected to the dismantling by the accused of demarcating line between the fields of the parties, exchange of hot words ensued and the accused fired with pistol at the deceased causing instantaneous death of the deceased, it was held that Exception 4 to Section 300, IPC was not applicable. Sachchey Lal Tiwari v. State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 2004 SC 5039 : (2004) 11 SCC 410 : 2004 CrLJ 4660 : 2004 (4) Crimes 170.

[11532] ● Clause thirdly of Section 300, IPC—Culpable Homicide when murder.—Under clause thirdly of Section 300, IPC, culpable homicide is murder, if both the following conditions are satisfied, i.e., (a) that the act which causes death is done with the intention of causing death or is done with the intention of causing a bodily injury; and (b) that the injury intended to be inflicted is sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death. It must be proved that there was an intention to inflict that particular bodily injury which, in the ordinary course of nature, was sufficient to cause death, viz., that the injury found to be present was the injury that was intended to be inflicted.

Thus, even if the intention of the accused was limited to the infliction of a bodily injury sufficient to cause death in the ordinary course of nature and did not extend to the intention of causing death, the offence would be murder, Illustration (c) appended to Section 300 clearly brings out this point. State of Uttar Pradesh v. Virendra Prasad, AIR 2004 SC 1517 : (2004) 9 SCC 37 : 2004 CrLJ 1373 : 2004 (2) Crimes 30.

[11533] ● Exception 4 to Section 300, IPC—Requirements for applicability.—For bringing in operation of Exception 4 to Section 300, IPC it has to be established that the act was committed without premeditation, in a sudden fight in the heat of passion upon a sudden quarrel without the offender having taken undue advantage and not having acted in a cruel or unusual manner.

The Fourth Exception of Section 300, IPC covers acts done in a sudden fight. The said exception deals with a case of prosecution not covered by the first exception, after which its place would have been more appropriate. The exception is founded upon the same principle. But, while in the case of Exception 1 there is total deprivation of self control, in case of Exception 4, there is only that heat of passion which clouds men's sober reasons and urges them to deeds which they would not otherwise do. There is provocation in Exception 4 as in Exception 1; but the injury done is not the direct consequence of that provocation. In fact Exception 4 deals with cases in which notwithstanding that a blow may have been struck, or some provocation given in the origin of the dispute or in whatever way the quarrel may have originated, yet the subsequent conduct of both parties puts them in respect of guilt upon equal footing.

A 'sudden fight' implies mutual provocation and blows on each side. The homicide committed is then clearly not traceable to unilateral provocation, nor in such cases could the whole blame be placed on one side. For if it were so, the Exception more appropriately applicable would be Exception 1. There is no previous deliberation or determination to fight. A fight suddenly takes place, for which both parties are more or less to be blamed. It may be that one of them starts it, but if the other had not aggravated it by its own conduct it would not have taken the serious turn it did. There is then mutual provocation and aggravation, and it is difficult to apportion the share of blame which attaches to each fighter.

The help of Exception 4 can be invoked if death is caused (a) without premeditation, (b) in a sudden fight; (c) without the offender's having taken undue advantage or acted in a cruel or unusual manner; and (d) the fight must have been with the person killed. To bring a case within Exception 4 all the ingredients mentioned in it must be found. It is to be noted that the 'fight' occurring in Exception 4 to Section 300, IPC is not defined in the IPC. It takes two to make a fight.

Heat of passion requires that there must be no time for the passions to cool down and in this case, the parties have worked themselves into a fury on account of the verbal altercation in the beginning.

A fight is a combat between two or more persons whether with or without weapons. It is not possible to enunciate any general rule as to what shall be deemed to be a sudden quarrel. It is a question of fact and whether a quarrel is sudden or not must necessarily depend upon the proved facts of each case. For the application of Exception 4, it is not sufficient to show that there was a sudden quarrel and there was no premeditation. It must further be sown that the offender has not taken undue advantage or acted in cruel or unusual manner. The expression 'undue advantage' as used in the provision mean 'unfair advantage'. Sachchey Lal Tiwari v. State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 2004 SC 4100 : (2004) 11 SCC 395 : 2004 CrLJ 4660 (4663) : 2004 (3) Crimes 277.

[11534] ● Benefit of Exception 4 to Section 300, IPC.—There was an altercation followed by assault on PWs-1 and 4 and brick batting from both sides. When tempers ran high, in the heat of passion, upon sudden quarrel, the appellant assaulted the deceased though unarmed but without premeditation. He caused only one injury to the deceased by picking up the "gainti" (pick-axe) lying there, and the fact that he did not repeat the blow is indicative of the fact that he did not intend to cause the death of the deceased. The High Court gave to the appellant the benefit of Exception 4 to Section 300 and found the appellant guilty of the offence under Section 304, Part I, IPC. There is no error with the finding recorded by the High Court. Bagdi Ram v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 2004 SC 387 : (2004) 12 SCC 302 : 2004 CrLJ 632 (634) : (2004) 1 Crimes 108. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) State of Uttar Pradesh v. Virendra Prasad, AIR 2004 SC 1517 : (2004) 9 SCC 37 : 2004 CrLJ 1373 : JT (2004) 2 SC 89 : (2004) 1 JCC 370 : (2004) 2 Crimes 30. (2) State of Madhya Pradesh v. Deshraj, AIR 2004 SC 2764 : (2004) 13 SCC 199 : 2004 CrLJ 1415 : JT (2004) 2 SC 146 : (2004) 1 JCC 367 : (2004) 1 Crimes 375.

[11535] ● Murderous assault—Alteration of conviction from Section 302, IPC to Section 304, Part I.—Over a trifle issue of damage of crop by goats there was altercation between the two parties. The accused noticing that the goats of the accused had damaged part of the crop, there was exchange of hot words and the accused surrounded the deceased with the intention to kill him, started beating him with lathis and axes resulting his instantaneous death. The doctor who conducted the post-mortem found 34 injuries including several facture injuries. Accordingly, the trial Court convicted the accused persons under Section 302, IPC. In appeal the High Court noted the fact that the fracture injuries were all seen on the hands and other non-vital parts of the body and the conviction was accordingly altered to Section 304, Part I, IPC.

Held: The High Court has not recorded adequate reasons for altering conviction. The number of injuries is always not determinative of the offence. It would depend on the weapon used, place where the injuries were inflicted and the nature of the injuries. Further, the assaults appear to have been made in the course of quarrel. That being so, no serious infirmity is noticed in the High Courts' view regarding the conviction. In fact the case falls under Section 304, Part II, IPC. Adu Ram v. Mukna, AIR 2004 SC 5064 : (2005) 10 SCC 597 : 2004 CrLJ 4674 (4677) : 2004 (4) Crimes 175.

[11536] ● Culpable homicide and murder—Distinction.—In the scheme of IPC culpable homicide is the genus and "murder" its specie. All "murder" is "culpable homicide" but not vice versa. Speaking generally, "culpable homicide" sans "special characteristics of murder is culpable homicide not amounting to murder". For the purpose of fixing punishment, proportionate to the gravity of the generic offence, IPC practically recognises three degrees of culpable homicide. The first is, what may be called, "culpable homicide of the first degree". This is the gravest form of culpable homicide, which is defined in Section 300 as "murder". The second may be termed as "culpable homicide of the second degree". This is punishable under the first part of Section 304. Then, there is "culpable homicide of the third degree". This is the lowest type of culpable homicide and the punishment provided for it is also the lowest among the punishments provided for the three grades. Culpable homicide of this degree is punishable under the second part of Section 304. Thangaiya v. State of T.N., AIR 2005 SC 1142 : (2005) 9 SCC 650 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 1284 (1287) : 2005 CrLJ 684 : 2005 (1) Crimes 319. TO THE SAME EFFECT : Abdul Waheed Khan v. State of A.P., AIR 2002 SC 2961 : (2002) 7 SCC 175 : 2002 SCC (Cri) 130 (1308-09) : 2002 (4) Crimes 46.

[11537] ● Conviction for appellant for offence under Section 304, II, read with Section 34, IPC—Held proper.—The accused A3 and A4 came on cycle from Cuddalore Road and took up a quarrel with PW-1, PW-2 and deceased Nagamuni. Though the deceased and PW-1 and PW-2 ignored the assault and proceeded further, the appellants chased them towards the west on Pondy-Villianur Road and took up a quarrel again. A1 came there along with others and used violence and injuries were caused to deceased Nagamuni due to which he ultimately died. It was thus a clear case of doing of a criminal act in furtherance of the common intention. It was in the evidence of Dr. Balaraman that injury No. 5 was sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death. Taking into consideration the concession by the learned Public Prosecutor that the case would not be covered by Section 300, IPC, accused Nos. 1, 3 and 4 were convicted by the trial Court for an offence punishable under section 304, II read with Section 34, IPC. By applying Section 34, IPC and convicting appellants for an offence under Section 304, II read with Section 34, IPC, no error of law has been committed either by the trial Court or by the High Court. Saravanan v. State of Pondichery, AIR 2005 SC 57 : (2004) 13 SCC 238 : 2005 CrLJ 117 (120) : (2004) 4 Crimes 323.

[11538] ● Benefit of Exception 4 to Section 300, IPC.—The fact that the other two accused who were said to have exhorted the three appellants to attack the members of the other party were acquitted has no material bearing on the question whether the appellants could be given the benefit of Exception 4. On the facts of this case, it was held is only Section 302, IPC that was attracted. Suresh Chandra v. State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 2005 SC 3120 : 2005 6 SCC 130 : 2005 CrLJ 3449 (3451).

[11539] ● Conviction under Section 304, Part I sustained—Sentence reduced.—The case was registered on the basis of information lodged by Piara Singh (PW-6), which was recorded on 10.11.1989 at about 2.00 a.m. According to the informant, he and his son Sham Singh's wife Sito (PW-7) were sitting in the courtyard of the house of Sham Singh deceased. It was about 11.00 a.m. on 9.11.1989 when deceased was coming from the village after purchasing vegetables. When he reached near the house of Janta Singh, son of Dharam Singh, Harbans Kaur (A-1) armed with a Gandasi and Mitta Singh (A-2) armed with a lathi were present there. Mitta made an obscene gesture. At this Mitta Singh and the deceased exchanged hot words and abused each other. Harbans Kaur gave a Gandasi blow on the right hand of the deceased, which caused a grievous injury. Mitta Singh gave a lathi blow on the left foot of the deceased and also gave a thrust blow of lathi on the left side of his head. Deceased fell down on the ground. The deceased in injured condition was taken to Primary Health Centre where he expired at about 1.50 a.m. on 10.11. 1989. Placing reliance on prosecution witnesses the Additional Sessions Judge found the accused persons guilty and the High Court confirmed the conviction. Conviction under Section 304, Part I, IPC was sustained by the Apex Court but sentence was reduced from 7 years to 4 years. Harbans Kaur v. State of Haryana, AIR 2005 SC 2989 : (2005) 9 SCC 195 : 2005 CrLJ 2199 (2201) : 2005 (2) Crimes 7.

[11540] ● Acts random and not pre-planned.—Coming to the act of the 2nd accused in throwing a burning kerosene lamp soon after the attack of A1 with bottle, the Supreme Court took the view that it was a random act resorted to by the 2nd accused at the spur of the moment, apparently to cause harm to the deceased. It was not a preplanned act done with the definite intention of causing death. It was not the case of the prosecution that A2 went close to the deceased and lit up his clothes with the kerosene lamp. Hurling a small burning lamp towards a person may not definitely cause fire to the clothes. No doubt it was a dangerous act and it was likely to cause fire. But in view of the fact that the candle like lamp comes into contact with the clothes of the targeted person for a split second, it may or may not be in a position to ignite the fire. A person throwing the kerosene lamp in that fashion cannot at any rate be imputed with the intention to cause the death or causing such bodily injury as is likely to cause death. He can only be imputed with the knowledge that by such a dangerous act, he was likely to cause death. The overt act of accused N. 2 in throwing the burning kerosene lamp at the deceased would, give rise to the offence of culpable homicide not amounting to murder punishable under Part II of Section 304. Sri Vijaya Kumar v. State, (2005) 10 SCC 737 : 2005 CrLJ 3085 (3090, 3091) : 2005 (3) Crimes 55.

[11541] ● Accused acting under grave and sudden provocation—Sentence.—Where the accused respondents having acted under grave and sudden provocation were convicted and sentenced to 10 years R.I. for offence, under Section 304, Part I, and the occurrence took place 16 years ago, the sentence was not interfered with. State of Uttar Pradesh v. Shyam Veer, AIR 2005 SC 4108 : (2005) 10 SCC 611 : 2005 CrLJ 2606 (2607).

[11542] ● Absence of grievous injuries on vital parts of body.—Where the doctor found that the injuries were confined to the skin and upper level of the body, grievous injuries were not found on vital parts of the body like head, liver, spleen, heart, lungs etc., the duration of the injuries were widely variant, the right lung of the deceased was TB affected, the combined effect of alcohol and the injuries shortened the period of death and resulted in a quicker death. That being so, the conviction in terms of Section 304, Part II, IPC cannot be faulted. Munshi Singh Gautum v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 2005 SC 402 : (2005) 9 SCC 631 : 2005 CrLJ 320 (330) : (2005) 9 Crimes 631.

[11543] ● Grave and sudden provocation.—Deceased Ghamandi Lal, a dhobi by caste was also a resident of the village. At about 7.00 p.m. Rajvir Singh, who appeared to be under the influence of liquor, came in front of his house and allegedly started abusing Ghamandi Lal (deceased) calling him a dhobi, etc. To this, Indal (deceased) son of Ghamandi Lal objected. Rajvir Singh did not pay any heed and continued to abuse Ghamandi Lal by his caste. This infuriated Indal, son of Ghamandi Lal who went inside his house brought out the licensed gun of his father and fired 2/3 shots at Rajvir Singh, as a result of which Rajvir Singh died on the spot. Immediately, the message reached the family members of Rajvir Singh. Respondents 1 to 3 his brothers, and respondents 4 and 5 his cousins reached the house of Ghamandi Lal. They lifted the body from in front of the house of Ghamandi Lal and placed it under a Neem tree. They were infuriated and vowed to avenge the murder of their brother, and in that mood they approached the house of Ghamandi Lal, Ghamandi Lal apprehending death at their hands, entered his house and bolted the door from inside. The aforesaid respondents climbed on the roof of his house, broke opened a portion of the roof and threw inside the room straw and other inflammable materials. Thereafter, they set fire to the house. The admitted case is that all this took place within 15 minutes of the murder of Rajvir Singh.

Held, The time gap of only 15 minutes between the two incidents supports the case of the respondents that what they did was under grave provocation whilst deprived of their power of self-control on account of the murder of their brother by Indal. According to her the time gap of 15 minutes was not sufficient for the members of the family of the Rajvir Singh to gain their self-control particularly, when they saw the dead body of their brother who was murdered by Indal. It must have taken some time for them to reach the house of Ghamandi Lal, and within no time thereafter the second occurrence took place. The accused were convicted under Section 304, Part I, IPC and sentenced to 10 years RI 9. State of Uttar Pradesh v. Shayam Veer, AIR 2005 SC 4108 : (2005) 10 SCC 611 : 2005 CrLJ 2606 (2607) : 2005 (2) Crimes 155.

[11544] ● Exception 4 to Section 300—Requirement.—An important requirement of Exception 4 to Section 300 that the offender should not have taken undue advantage or acted in a cruel or unusual manner should be satisfied. The very fact that the accused-appellants used the fire arms in the course of a frivolous quarrel triggered off by the sarcastic remarks of RS (one of the deceased) would demonstrate beyond doubt that the appellants acted in a cruel manner and it would further demonstrate the intention to cause death or at any rate, to cause a bodily injury of the nature mentioned in clause thirdly of Section 300. Such intention was writ large on the acts done by the accused. Thus, it was a case in which Clauses I to III of Section 300, IPC were attracted and, as already observed, Exception 4 would not come to the rescue of the appellants for the reason that they have acted in a cruel and unusual manner by shooting at unarmed victims who merely indulged in a verbal duel with them. Suresh Chandra v. State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 2005 SC 3120 : (2005) 6 SCC 130 : 2005 CrLJ 3449 (3450, 3451).

[11545] ● Exception 4 to Section 300—Section 304, Part I.—The only doubt that arose was whether A-3 in causing three axe injuries to the deceased B, acted in cruel manner? In examining this point, we have to take note of the fact that A-3 (2nd appellant), in spite of having an axe with him, had suffered quite a severe injury viz., contusion of 8"x1" over chest which could have been caused, according to the Doctor, by an object like cycle chain. It was not possible to say at what stage A-3 had received such injury at any rate there was no clarification bearing on this aspect from the prosecution side. The deceased B was wielding an axe. The 2nd appellant, probably already injured, might have become apprehensive that he would be attacked by B with the axe. Though three injuries were noted, they are all on the left parietal region causing the fracture of skull bone. Looking at the nature of injuries, it is quite possible to say that all the injuries would have been caused by one or two axe blows, but not necessarily there. In fact, PW-6 stated in cross-examination that she had seen one axe blow being given by accused No. 3 on the neck of B. No doubt he had used excessive force against B by causing injury with the axe on a vital part, may be more than once. However, taking an overall picture, it could not be said beyond doubt that the 2nd appellant acted in a cruel or atrocious manner by attacking the deceased with the axe once or twice. We are, therefore, not inclined to deprive the 2nd appellant of the benefit of Exception No. 4. At the same time, we are of the view that it would be appropriate to convict him under Part I of Section 304, IPC because having regard to the gravity of the injuries caused with a dangerous weapon, each one of which was fatal, the 2nd appellant must be imputed with the intention to cause such bodily injury as was likely to cause death, if not the intention of causing death. Accordingly the Supreme Court convicted the 3rd accused appellant No. 2 under Section 304, Part I. Duttu Shamrao Valake v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 2005 SC 2331 : 2005 CrLJ 2555 (2560) : 2005 (2) Crimes 119.

[11546] ● Single blow.—It cannot be laid down as a rule of universal application that whenever death is caused by single blow, Section 302, IPC is ruled out. V. Subramani v. State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 2005 SC 1983 : (2005) 10 SCC 358 : 2005 CrLJ 1727 (1732) : 2005 (1) Crimes 379.

[11547] ● Single blow on head.—Where a single blow was given on the head of the deceased by a small wooden yoke, the dispute was relating to the grazing of the cattle on the land, considering the background facts, the conviction of the appellants under Section 302 was altered to one under Section 304, Part I, custodial sentence of ten year was found sufficient. Subramani v. State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 2005 SC 1983 : (2005) 10 SCC 358 : 2005 CrLJ 1327 (1332) : 2005 (1) Crimes 379.

[11548] ● Distinction between murder and culpable homicide not amounting to murder.— The academic distinction "murder" and "culpable homicide not amounting to murder" has always vexed the Courts. The following comparative table will be helpful in appreciating the points of distinction between the two offences "culpable homicide not amounting to murder" and murder—Distinction between

Section 299		Section 300
A person commits culpable homicide if the act by which the death is caused is done—		Subject to certain exceptions culpable homicide is murder if the act by which the death is caused is done—
INTENTION
(a)	with the intention of causing death; or	(1)	with the intention of causing death; or
(b)	With the intention of causing such bodily injury as is likely to cause death; or	(2)	with the intention of causing such bodily injury as the offender knows to be likely to cause the death of the person to whom the harm is caused; or
		(3)	with the intention of causing bodily injury to any person and the bodily injury intended to be inflicted is sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death; or
KNOWLEDGE
(c)	with the knowledge that the act is likely to cause death.	(4)	with the knowledge that the act is so imminently dangerous that it must in all probability cause death or such bodily injury as is likely to cause death, and without any excuse for incurring the risk of causing death or such injury as is mentioned above.

Thangaiya v. State of T.N., 2005 SCC (Cri) 1284 (1287). TO THE SAME EFFECT : Abdul Waheed Khan v. State of A.P., AIR 2002 SC 2961 : (2002) 7 SCC 175 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 1301 (1309) : 2002 (4) Crimes 46.

[11549] ● Conviction under Section 304, Part I instead of Section 302, IPC—Held proper.— Counsel for the appellant contended that evidence of PW 1 cannot be relied on as he was tutored by the relatives and that it was highly improbable that he has gone to the house of his uncle during the night and informed the incident. PW 1 in his evidence has given the details of the incident and he deposed that while he was in the room the appellant had a quarrel with the deceased and thereafter he hit his mother with the hammer. This witness also says that the appellant demanded earrings of the deceased and on her refusal he snatched them and put in his trouser pocket. PW 1 does not seem to have given any false statement. The bloodstained hammer was recovered. In the course of investigation earrings were also recovered from the appellant and these items of evidence clearly corroborate with the evidence pf PW 1, PW 2 supports the case of PW 1. However, it is improbable that he had seen the actual hitting made by the appellant. There is satisfactory evidence to prove the prosecution case.

The medical report shows that the deceased had injuries on her nose, chin and upper part of the face. Though there are multiple injuries, they could have been caused by a single blow and the doctor who conducted the post-mortem does not dispute this fact. PW 1 child witness speaks about the quarrel between the appellant and his wife. It is quite possible that there must have been a sudden quarrel and in the heat of passion the appellant hit the deceased which resulted in her death. Therefore offence, would only come within the purview of Section 304 Part I, IPC.Jasram v.

State of Madhya Pradesh, (2005) 12 SCC 176 : 2006 (1) SCC (Cr) 540.

[11550] ● Conviction under Section 304, Part I.—We perused the evidence of PW-1. He has given the details of the incident and he deposed that while he was in the room the appellant had a quarrel with the deceased and thereafter he hit his mother with the hammer. This witness also says that the appellant demanded earrings of the deceased and on her refusal he snatched them and put in his trouser pocket. We do not think that PW-1 had given any false statement. The blood-stained hammer was recovered. In the course of investigation earrings were also recovered from the appellant and these items of evidence clearly corroborate with the evidence of PW-1. PW-2 supports the case of PW-1. However, it is improbable that he had seen the actual hitting made by the appellant. There is satisfactory evidence to prove the prosecution case.

The medical report shows that the deceased had injuries on her nose, chin and upper part of the face. Though there are multiple injuries, they could have been caused by a single blow and the doctor who conducted the post-mortem does not dispute this fact. PW-1 child witness speaks about the quarrel between the appellant and his wife. It is quite possible that there must have been a sudden quarrel and in the heat of passion the appellant hit the deceased which resulted in her death. Therefore offence in our view, would only come within the purview of Section 304, Part I, IPC. Jasram v. State of Madhya Pradesh, (2005) 12 SCC 176 : 2006 (1) SCC (Cri) 540.

[11551] ● Pre-requisite conditions for conviction under Section 304, Part I and II.—If the offence is covered by any one of the clauses of Section 299, IPC but does not fall within the purview of clauses firstly to fourthly, of Section 300, IPC, it will not be murder. If the offence is such which is covered by Clauses (i) and (ii) of Section 299, IPC the offender would be liable to be convicted under Section 304, Part I, IPC. However, if the offence is covered by Clause (iii) of Section 299, IPC, the offender would be liable to be convicted under Section 304, Part II. Arun Nivalaji More v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 2006 SC 2886 : (2006) 12 SCC 613 : 2006 CrLJ 4057 (4060) : 2006 (3) Crimes 210.

[11552] ● Arrows shot by accused from distance.—The fact situation showed that arrows were being shot from a distance not with any accuracy, one of such arrows hit the deceased. As established by the evidence of eye-witnesses the appellant had shot the arrow. There was no sudden quarrel as stated by the appellant. The evidence showed otherwise. Considering the background of facts, the appellants had to be convicted in terms of Section 304, Part I, IPC and not under Section 302, IPC. Laxman v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 2006 SC 3240 : 2006 CrLJ 4626 (4629, 4630) : 2006 (4) Crimes 328 (SC).

[11553] ● Accused having no intention to Kill—Explanation 4 to Section 300 attracted.—In the instant case, the cattle belonging to the accused damaged the standing crop of the deceased. There had been exchange of hot words and a scuffle ensued. Rajendra Singh the elder brother of the accused allegedly exhorted that the deceased has been creating trouble and should be killed, whereupon the accused is said to have fired a shot from his gun which hit him on the left plank of the abdomen resulting into his death. The fire was not repeated and the accused fled away. The accused had no intention to kill the deceased, and the offence would fall under Section 304, Part II, IPC, and not under Section 302, IPC. The conviction of the appellant was modified as falling under Exception 4 to Section 300, IPC. Surendra Singh v. State of Uttranchal, AIR 2006 SC 1920 : (2006) 9 SCC 531 : 2006 CrLJ 2461 (2464) : 2006 (3) Crimes 167.

[11554] ● Murder or culpable Homicide—Proof.—In the instant case, the appellant No. 1 to 3 were seen standing with weapons in their hands. On seeing the deceased, the appellant No. 1, removing a knife, which he had kept concealed, cut him on the left side of the head, which caused an injury on the left eyebrow. He was also inflicted an injury on the right ear by the said appellant. The deceased fell down. The appellant No. 1, once again inflicted cut on the head of the deceased. The appellant No. 2 cut the deceased on his back as well as on his right knee. P.W. 12 intervened and he also sustained injury on account of the assault by the appellant No. 2, which warded off. P.W. 12 suffered an injury on the right wrist. The appellant No. 3 beat the deceased on the right hand causing grievous injury.

It is the prosecution case that the fatal injuries are attributable to Appellant No. 1. It is the prosecution case that the fatal injuries are attributable to him. He had assaulted the deceased with a knife which was concealed by him. Taking note of the weapon used by the appellants and the place where injuries were inflicted, appellant No. 2 has to be convicted under Section 304, Part I, IPC. So far as appellant No. 3 is concerned, he is to be convicted in terms of Section 326, IPC. The conviction of appellant No. 2 in terms of Section 324, IPC is in order. The custodial sentence of 10 years would meet the ends of justice so far as appellant No. 2 is concerned. For appellant No. 3, the custodial sentence would be three years' rigorous imprisonment. The sentence awarded by the trial Court as affirmed by the High Court so far as appellant No. 2 is concerned in respect of his conviction in terms of Section 324, IPC remains unaltered. The two sentences imposed on him shall run concurrently. The appeal is allowed to the aforesaid extent, so far as appellant Nos. 2 and 3 are concerned. Settu v. State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 2006 SC 2986 : (2006) 10 SCC 549 : 2006 CrLJ 3889 (3894) : 2006 (3) Crimes 300.

[11555] ● Exception 4 to Section 300, IPC—Applicability.—For the application of Exception 4 to Section 300, IPC it is not sufficient to show that there was a sudden quarrel and there was no premeditation. It must further be shown that the offender has not taken undue advantage or acted in cruel or unusual manner. It cannot be laid down as a rule of universal application that whenever one blow is given, Section 302, IPC is ruled out. It would defend upon the weapon used, the size of it in some cases, force with which the blow was given, part of the body it was given and several such relevant factors considering the factual background in the instant case it will be appropriate to convict the appellant under Section 304, Part II, IPC instead of Section 302, IPC. Pappu v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 2006 SC 2659 : (2006) 7 SCC 391 : 2006 CrLJ 3640 (3643).

[11556] ● Prosecution evidence reliable—Private defence plea not sustainable.—From the above evidence it is evident that the deceased Prafulla died due to the wound in his abdomen which was 4 inches deep. In our opinion this shows the intention of the assailant to kill or to cause such bodily injury as is likely to cause death. There is no reason to disbelieve the evidence of the prosecution witnesses that it was the appellant Sukumar who caused the injury on Prafulla, the deceased. The prosecution evidence of the eye-witnesses is corroborated by the medical evidence.

From the evidence it is clear that the deceased and his men were unarmed and there was no provocation on their part. It also seems that the deceased and the appellant are co-sharer in the land being plot No. 743. There is no evidence on record to show that the deceased and his men assaulted the appellant and his family members. Hence, in our opinion the conviction under Section 304, Part I read with Section 34, IPC was fully justified. Sukumar Roy v. State of West Bengal, AIR 2006 SC 3406 : (2006) 10 SCC 635 : 2006 CrLJ 4776 : 2006 (4) Crimes 245.

[11557] ● Complete chain of circumstantial evidence.—In the instant case, the Court below must be held to have correctly come to the conclusion that the prosecution case has been proved as against the accused in view of the extra-judicial confession of the Appellant before the Village Administrative Officer, recovery of the air gun from Pappannan Thottam canal, the conduct of the Appellant and that he was last seen with the deceased.

Each one of the aforementioned circumstances although may not by itself be sufficient to prove the guilt of the Appellant, we are satisfied that the cumulative effect thereof satisfies the test of proof of the guilt of the Appellant on the basis of circumstantial evidence for the commission of the offence under Section 304, Part II of the Indian Penal Code. The appeal being devoid of any merit is, thus, dismissed. Sivakumar v. State, AIR 2006 SC 653 : (2006) 1 SCC 714 : 2006 (1) SCC (Cri) 470 : 2006 CrLJ 536 : 2006 (1) Crimes 158.

[11558] ● Single fire arm—offence fell under Section 304, Part-I.—Where the accused causes single fire arm injury on the thigh of the deceased, the offence falls under Section 304, Part I and not under Section 300. AIR 2006 SC 2257 : (2006) 5 SCC 425 : 2006 CrLJ 2926 (2930, 2931).

[11559] ● Culpable Homicide and murder—Distinction.—The crucial question is as to which was the appropriate provision to be applied. In the scheme of the IPC culpable homicide is genus and 'murder' its specie. All 'murder' is 'culpable homicide' but not vice-versa. Speaking generally, 'culpable homicide' sans 'special characteristics of murder is culpable homicide not amounting to murder'. For the purpose of fixing punishment, proportionate to the gravity of the generic offence, the IPC practically recognizes three degrees of culpable homicide. The first is, what may be called, 'culpable homicide of the first degree'. This is the gravest form of culpable homicide, which is defined in Section 300 as 'murder'. The second may be termed as culpable homicide of the second degree'. This is punishable under the first part of Section 304. Then, there is 'culpable homicide of the third degree'. This is the lowest type of culpable homicide and the punishment provided for it is also the lowest among the punishments provided for the three grades. Culpable homicide of this degree is punishable under the second part of Section 304. Rajender v. State of Haryana, AIR 2006 SC 2257 : (2006) 5 SCC 425 : 2006 CrLJ 2926 (2928) : 2006 (2) Crimes 303.

[11560] ● Clause (b) of Section 299, IPC corresponds to Sections (2) and (3) of Section 300, IPC.—The academic distinction between 'murder' and 'culpable homicide not amounting to murder' has always vexed the Courts. The confusion is caused; if Courts losing sight of the true scope and meaning of the terms used by the legislature in these sections, allow themselves to be drawn into minute abstractions. The safest way of approach to the interpretation and application of these provisions seems to be to keep in focus the keywords used in the various clauses of Sections 299 and 300. The following comparative table will be helpful in appreciating the points of distinction between the two offences.

Clause (b) of Section 299 corresponds with Clauses (2) and (3) of Section 300. The distinguishing feature of the mens rea requisite under Clause (2) is the knowledge possessed by the offender regarding the particular victim being in such a peculiar condition or state of health that the internal harm caused to him is likely to be fatal, notwithstanding the fact that such harm would not in the ordinary way of nature be sufficient to cause death of a person in normal health or condition. It is noteworthy that the 'intention to cause death' is not an essential requirement of Clause (2). Only the intention of causing the bodily injury coupled with the offender's knowledge of the likelihood of such injury causing the death of the particular victim, is sufficient to bring the killing within the ambit of this clause. This aspect of Clause (2) is borne out by illustration (b) appended to Section 300. Rajender v. State of Haryana, AIR 2006 SC 2257 : (2006) 5 SCC 425 : 2006 CrLJ 2926 (2928). TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Abbas Ali v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 2007 SC 1239 : (2007) 9 SCC 129 : 2007 CrLJ 1667. (2) Sunder Lal v. State of Rajasthan, (2007) 10 SCC 371 : 2007 SCC (Cri) 601 : 2007 CrLJ 3281. [11561] ● Clause (b) of Section 299, IPC—Scope.—Clause (b) of Section 299 does not postulate any such knowledge on the part of the offender. Instances of cases falling under Clause (2) of Section 300 can be where the assailant causes death by a fist blow intentionally given knowing that the victim is suffering from an enlarged liver, or enlarged spleen or diseased heart and such blow is likely to cause death of that particular person as a result of the rupture of the liver, or spleen or the failure of the heart, as the case may be. If the assailant had no such knowledge about the disease or special frailty of the victim, nor an intention to cause death or bodily injury sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death, the offence will not be murder, even if the injury which caused the death, was intentionally given. In Clause (3) of Section 300, instead of the words 'likely to cause death' occurring in the corresponding Clause (b) of Section 299, the words "sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death" have been used. Obviously, the distinction lies between a bodily injury likely to cause death and a bodily injury sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death. The distinction is fine but real and if overlooked, may result in miscarriage of justice. The difference between Clause (b) of Section 299 and Clause (3) of Section 300 is one of the degree of probability of death resulting from the intended bodily injury. To put it more broadly, it is the degree of probability of death which determines whether a culpable homicide is of the gravest, medium or the lowest degree. The word 'likely' in Clause (b) of Section 299 conveys the sense of probable as distinguished from a mere possibility. The words "bodily injury.....sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death" mean that death will be the "most probable" result of the injury, having regard to the ordinary course of nature. Rajender Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 2006 (SC) 2257 : (2006) 5 SCC 425 : 2006 CrLJ 2926 (2929) : 2006 (2) Crimes 303. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Abbas Ali v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 2007 SC 1239 : (2007) 9 SCC 129 : 2007 CrLJ 1667. [11562] ● Sudden fight—Death as a result of single knife blow on back of deceased.—The help of Exception 4 can be invoked if death is caused (a) without premeditation, (b) in a sudden fight; (c) without the offender's having taken undue advantage or acted in a cruel or unusual manner; and (d) the fight must have been with the person killed. To bring a case within Exception 4 all the ingredients mentioned in it must be found. It is to be noted that the 'fight' occurring in Exception 4 to Section 300, IPC is not defined in the IPC. It takes two to make a fight. Heat of passion requires that there must be no time for the passions to cool down and in this case, the parties have worked themselves into a fury on account of the verbal altercation in the beginning. A fight is a combat between two and more persons whether with or without weapons. It is not possible to enunciate any general rule as to what shall be deemed to be a sudden quarrel. It is a question of fact and whether a quarrel is sudden or not must necessarily depend upon the proved facts of each case. For the application of Exception 4, it is not sufficient to show that there was a sudden quarrel and there was no premeditation. It must further be shown that the offender has not taken undue advantage or acted in cruel or unusual manner. The expression 'undue advantage' as used in the provision means 'unfair advantage'. Sandhya Jadhav v. State of Maharashtra, (2006) 4 SCC 653 : 2006 (2) SCC (Cri) 394 : 2006 CrLJ 2111 (2112, 2113) : 2006 (2) Crimes 5 (SC).

[11563] ● Occurrence taking place in the course of sudden fight—Death as a result of single knife blow.—Looking at the matter objectively, the injury, which Bunnilal Chaudhary intended to cause, did not include specifically the cutting of the left lungs but to wound Shambhu Raut in the neighbourhood of the nipple on left side of chest. Therefore, we are of the opinion that Clause (iii) of Section 300 does not cover the case. Inasmuch as death has been caused, the matter must still come within at least culpable homicide not amounting to murder. There again, Section 299 is in three parts. The first part takes in the doing of an act with the intention of causing death. As we have shown above, Bunnilal Chaudhary did not intend causing death and the first part of Section 299 does not apply. The second part deals with the intention of causing such bodily injury as is likely to cause death. Here again, the intention must be to cause the precise injury likely to cause death and that also, as we have shown above, was not the intention of Bunnilal Chaudhary. The matter, therefore, comes within the third part. The Act which was done with the knowledge that Bunnilal Chaudhary was likely by such act to cause the death of Shambhu Raut. The case falls within the third part of Section 299 and will be punishable under the second part of Section 304, IPC as culpable homicide not amounting to murder.

"We, accordingly, alter the conviction of Bunnilal Chaudhary from Section 302 to Section 304, Part II, IPC and in lieu of the sentence of imprisonment for life imposed on him, we impose a sentence of rigorous imprisonment for five years and to pay a fine of Rs. 1,000/- with default stipulation of two months simple imprisonment. Criminal Appeal No. 605/2005 preferred by Bunnilal Chaudhary (A-1) is partly allowed to the extent indicated above". Bunni Lal Chaudhary v. State of Bihar, AIR 2006 SC 2531 : (2006) 10 SCC 639 : (2006) 3 Crimes 46 : 2006 CrLJ 3297 (3300, 3301).

[11564] ● Conviction under Section 304, Part II held justified.—Looking at the matter objectively, the injury, which Bunnilal Chaudhary intended to cause, did not include specifically the cutting of the left lungs but to wound Shambhu Raut in the neighbourhood of the nipple on left side of chest. [11565] ● Conviction under Section 304, Part I, IP instead of under Section 302, IPC held proper.—The statements of the prosecution witnesses in regard to the genesis of occurrence and the presence of the prosecution witnesses at different stages are not uniform. It is, therefore, a case where it is likely that sudden fight between the parties erupted which would attract Section 304 of the Indian Penal Code and not Section 302 thereof. It is also a case where an inference can safely be drawn that the blows were initially not hurled on the deceased by the Appellants. They did so at a later stage. But, Appellant No. 1 suffered minor injuries. He had not been able to show that the situation was such that he could reasonably apprehend his death. They have exceeded their right of private defence in using more force upon the deceased than was necessary.

For the reasons aforementioned, we are of the opinion the conviction of the Appellants under Section 302 read with Section 34 of the Indian Penal Code cannot be sustained. They are held guilty for commission of an offence under Part I, Section 304 of the Indian Penal Code. Surendra v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 2006 SC 3063 : (2006) 11 SCC 434 : 2006 (3) Crimes 330 (SC) : JT 2006 (8) SC 445.

[11567] ● Plea of private defence—Not sustainable.—From the facts it is evident that the deceased Prafulla died an unnatural death which was homicidal due to injuries which were anti mortem in nature and it is the appellant. Sukumar who inflicted injury upon the body of the deceased with bhali (ballam) causing his death.

It is evident that there is no dispute that the deceased Prafulla was assaulted by the appellant Sukumar Roy with a bhali (ballam) which pierced the abdomen of Prafulla as a result of which his intestine and omentum came out through the wound.

It is also evident that the deceased Prafulla died due to the wound in his abdomen which was 4 inches deep. This shows the intention of the assailant to kill or to cause such bodily injury as is likely to cause death. There is no reason to disbelieve the evidence of the prosecution witnesses that it was the appellant Sukumar who caused the injury on Prafulla, the deceased. The prosecution evidence of the eye-witnesses is corroborated by the medical evidence.

Counsel for the appellant submitted that it was a case of self-defence because the appellant had purchased the land in question from the deceased who had entered into his land in spite of warning and as a result an altercation ensued. He contended that the deceased and his men assaulted the accused person and the injury on Prafulla was an accidental one in the scuffle which followed. We do not agree.

It is clear from evidence that the deceased and his men were unarmed and there was no provocation on their part. It also seems that the deceased and the appellant are co-sharer in the land being plot No. 743. There is no evidence on record to show that the deceased and his men assaulted the appellant and his family members. Hence the conviction under Section 304, Part I read with Section 34, IPC was fully justified. Sukumar Roy v. State of West Bengal, AIR 2006 SC 3406 : (2006) 10 SCC 635 : 2006 CrLJ 4776 : 2006 (4) Crimes 245 (SC).

[11568] ● Culpable homicide and murder.—In the scheme of IPC, culpable homicide is genus and murder its specie. All murder is culpable homicide but not vice versa. Culpable homicide sans special characteristics of murder is culpable homicide not amounting to murder. Rajender v. State of Haryana, AIR 2006 SC 2257 : (2006) 5 SCC 425 : 2006 (2) SCC (Cr) 469 : 2006 CrLJ 2926 : 2006 (2) Crimes 303.

[11569] ● Types of culpable homicide.—The first is, what may be called, culpable homicide of the first degree. This is the greatest from of culpable homicide, which is defined in Section

300 as 'murder'. The second may be termed as culpable homicide of the second degree. This is punishable under the first part of section 304. Then, there is culpable homicide of the third degree. This is the lowest type of culpable homicide and the punishment provided for it is, also the lowest among the punishment for the three grades. Culpable homicide of this degree is punishable under the second part of Section 304. Settu v. State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 2006 SC 2986 : (2006) 10 SCC 549 : 2006 CrLJ 3889 : JT 2006 (7) 524 : 2006 (8) Scale 382 : 2006 (3) Crimes 300.

[11570] ● Circumstantial evidence—Complete chain—Guilt under Section 304, Part II proved.—The Courts below must be proved to have correctly come to the conclusion that the prosecution case has been proved as against the accused in view of the extra-judicial confession of the Appellant before the Village Administrative Officer, recovery of the air gun from Pappannan Thottam canal, the conduct of the Appellant and that he was last seen with the deceased.

Each one of the aforementioned circumstances although may not by itself be sufficient to prove the guilt of the Appellant, we are satisfied that the cumulative effect thereof satisfies the test of proof of the guilt of the Appellant on the basis of circumstantial evidence for the commission of the offence under Section 304, Part II of the Indian Penal Code. The appeal being devoid of any merit is, thus, dismissed.Sivakumar v. State, AIR 2006 SC 653 : (2006) 1 SCC 714 : 2006 (1) SCC (Cr) 470 : 2006 CrLJ 536 : JT 2005 (10) 379 : 2006 (1) Crimes 158 (SC).

[11571] ● Murder and culpable homicide—Distinction.—The academic distinction between 'murder' and 'culpable homicide not amounting to murder' has always vexed the Courts. The confusion is caused, if Courts losing sight of the true scope and meaning of the terms used by the legislature in these sections, allow themselves to be drawn into minute abstractions. The safest way of approach to the interpretation and application of these provisions seems to be to keep in focus the keywords used in the various clause of Sections 299 and 300. Rajinder v. State of Haryana, AIR 2006 SC 2257 : (2006) 5 SCC 425 : 2006 CrLJ 2926 (2928) : 2006 (2) Crimes 303. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Shakti Dan v. State of Rajasthan, 2007 CrLJ 3426 (3428) (SC) : 2007 (5) SCR 673 : JT 2007 (6) SC 503. [11572] ● Clause fourthly of Section 300, IPC.—Clause fourthly of Section 300, IPC would be attributed if the person committing the act knows that it is so imminently dangerous that it must, in all probability, cause death or such bodily injury as is likely to cause death and commits such act without any excuse for incurring the risk of causing death or such injury as aforesaid that will attract Section 300 of the Code. Vadla Chandraiah v. State of Andhra Pradesh, 2007 (3) SCC (Cri) 709 : 2007 CrLJ 770 : 2006 (14) Scale 108.

[11573] ● Culpable Homicide—Degrees.—For the purpose of fixing punishment, proportionate to the gravity of the generic offence, the IPC practically recognizes three degrees of culpable homicide. The first is, what may be called, 'culpable homicide of the first degree'. This is the gravest form of culpable homicide, which is defined in Section 300 as 'murder'. The second may be termed as 'culpable homicide of the second degree'. This is punishable under the first part of Section 304. Then, there is 'culpable homicide of the third degree'. This is the lowest type of culpable homicide and the punishment provided for it is also the lowest among the punishments provided for the three grades. Culpable homicide of this degree is punishable under the second part of Section 304. Abbas Ali v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 2007 SC 1239 : 2007 (3) SCC (Cri) 80 : 2007 CrLJ 1667 (1668) : 2007 (3) Crimes 164 (SC). TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Kalegura Padma Rao v. State of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 2007 SC 1299 : 2007 (2) Crimes 217 (SC). [11574] ● Expression "undue advantage".—The expression "undue advantage" as used in the provisions means "unfair advantage". Where the offender takes undue advantage or has acted in cruel or unusual manner, benefit of Exception 4 cannot be given to him. If the weapon used or the manner of attack by the assailant is out of all proportion, that circumstances must be taken into consideration to decide whether undue advantage has been taken. Naveen Chandra v. State of Uttranchal, 2007 CrLJ 874 : 2007 (1) Crimes 207 (SC). TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Ram Krishan v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 2007 SC 761 : (2007) 3 SCC 89 : 2007 (2) SCC (Cri) 39 : 2007 (1) Crimes 141. [11575] ● Conviction under Section 302 converted to one under Section 304, Part I, IPC.—The prosecution case was that in the morning i.e. at about 7 a.m. accused started beating his wife at his house so she ran away from there and reached to the house of Idan (PW-6), the younger brother of the accused. The mother of the accused also followed her and she also reached the house of one I which was near the house of the accused. The deceased advised her son accused that he should not quarrel with his wife. On hearing this, accused caught hold of his mother and dragged her out from the house and took her in front of the temple of deity Karni Mata, where he throttled her neck, on account of which she died. The trial Court and the High Court convicted the accused for offence under Section 302, IPC. The Supreme Court held that conviction would be appropriate in terms of Section 304, Part I and custodial sentence of ten years RI would meet the ends of justice and ordered accordingly. Shakti Dan v. State of Rajasthan, 2007 CrLJ 3426 (3430) : JT 2007 (6) SC 503 : 2007 (5) SCR 673.

[11576] ● Deceased came intoxicated and abused his son and beat wife—Accused and his mother beat him to death.—In the instant case the deceased came intoxicated and started abusing his son and also beat his mother (wife of the deceased. Both the son and wife of deceased (mother of accused) beat the deceased to death. The mother was acquitted by the trial Court. Held, the son, accused was entitled to the benefit of Exception 4 to Section 300 and his conviction was altered to one under Section 304, Part I, custodial sentence of 10 years RI was awarded. Byvarapu Raju v. State of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 2007 SC 1904 : (2007) 11 SCC 218 : 2007 CrLJ 3204 (3206) : 2007 (7) SCR 815.

[11577] ● Inconsistencies in prosecution version.—The High Court noticed several inconsistencies in the prosecution version. Apart from the fact that PW-2's conduct was unusual, the version he supposedly stated to his mother was at variance with what the mother PW-1 stated. Evidence of PW-1 was rightly discarded by the High Court. The version given in the FIR varied from the evidence given in the Court. The informant Dropadi Bai stated in her evidence that her son told her that her husband was hanged by the accused persons. Arun Das (PW-2) gives an entirely different version. Dropadi Bai had deposed that she went to the police station, and lodged the report and then she returned along with police and found dead body of her husband. This was at variance with the evidence of Kashidas (PW-12) and Ram Singh (PW-13) who had deposed that Dropadi Bai (PW-11) told them that accused had murdered her husband after seeing the dead body and then they went to the police station to lodge the report along with Dropadi Bai. Ram Singh (PW-13) had further deposed that when police returned along with Dropadi her son Banti (PW-2) had shown the hanged dead body to the police. The judgment of the High Court setting aside the conviction of the accused under Section 304, Part II, recorded by the trial Court was justified. State of Madhya Pradesh v. Bacchudas, AIR 2007 SC 1236 : (2007) 9 SCC 135 : 2007 SCC (Cri) 87 : 2007 CrLJ 1661 (1662, 1663) : 2007 (2) Crimes 58 (SC).

[11578] ● Culpable Homicide—Meaning.—Doing an act with intent to kill a person or knowledge that doing an act likely to cause death of person is Culpable Homicide. State of Rajasthan v. Chettarmal, (2007) 10 SCC 792 : 2007 (3) Crimes 153 (SC) : 2007 (3) SCC (Cri) 696; Naresh Giri v. State of Madhya Pradesh, (2008) 1 SCC 791 : JT 2007 (12) SC 433.

[11579] ● Culpable Homicide and murder.—In the scheme of Indian Penal Code, the legal status of culpable homicide is the genus and murder is its, specie. All murder is culpable homicide but not Vice Versa. Culpable homicide sans special characteristic of murder is culpable homicide not amounting to murder. Shakti Dan v. State of Rajasthan, (2007) 15 SCC 68 : 2007 CrLJ 3426 : 2007 (5) SCR 673 : JT 2007 (6) SC 503. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Bhagwan Bahadure v. State of Maharashtra, 2007 (4) Crimes 170 (SC) : 2007 (10) SCR 397 : JT 2007 (11) SC 417. [11580] ● First and Fourth Exception of Section 300, IPC—Distinction.—The Fourth Exception of Section 300, IPC covers acts done in a sudden fight. The said exception deals with a case of prosecution not covered by the first exception. after which its place would have been more appropriate. The exception is founded upon the same principle, for in both there is absence of premeditation. But, while in the case of Exception 1 there is total deprivation of self-control, in case of Exception 4, there is only that heat of passion which clouds men's sober reasons and urges them to deeds which they would not otherwise do. There is provocation in Exception 4 as in Exception 1; but the injury done is not the direct consequence of that provocation. In fact Exception 4 deals with cases in which notwithstanding that a blow may have been struck, or some provocation given in the origin of the dispute or in whatever way the quarrel may have originated, yet the subsequent conduct of both parties puts them in respect of guilt upon equal footing. A 'sudden fight' implies mutual provocation and blows on each side. The homicide committed is then clearly not traceable to unilateral provocation, nor in such cases could the whole blame be placed on one side. For if it were so, the Exception more appropriately applicable would be Exception 1. There is no previous deliberation or determination to fight. A fight suddenly takes place, for which both parties are more or less to be blamed. It may be that one of them starts it, but if the other had not aggravated it by his own conduct it would not have taken the serious turn it did. There is then mutual provocation and aggravation, and it is difficult to apportion the share of blame which attaches to each fighter. The help of Exception 4 can be invoked if death is caused (a) without premeditation, (b) in a sudden fight; (c) without the offender's having taken undue advantage or acted in a cruel or unusual manner, and (d) the fight must have been with the person killed. To bring a case within Exception 4 all the ingredients mentioned in it must be found. It is to be noted that the 'fight' occurring in Exception 4 to Section 300, IPC is not defined in the IPC. It takes two to make a fight. Heat of passion requires that there must be no time for the passions to cool down and in this case, the parties have worked themselves into a fury on account of the verbal altercation in the beginning. A fight is a combat between two and more persons whether with or without weapons. It is not possible to enunciate any general rule as to what shall be deemed to be a sudden quarrel. It is a question of fact and whether a quarrel is sudden or not must necessarily depend upon the proved facts of each case. For the application of Exception 4, it is not sufficient to show that there was a sudden quarrel and there was no premeditation. It must further be shown that the offender has not taken undue advantage or acted in cruel or unusual manner. The expression 'undue advantage' as used in the provision means 'unfair advantage'. Byvarapu Raju v. State of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 2007 SC 1904 : 2007 CrLJ 3204 (3205, 3206) : JT 2007 (8) SC 177. [11581] ● Accused beating deceased with stick on head twice—Deceased fell down and accused ran away leaving the stick.—The deceased left the house to bring agricultural labourers and, while he was on his way, the appellant armed with a stick, the accused S armed with an aruval, appeared before him. On seeing them the deceased became panicky and shouted saying that they are about to beat him. Accused S threw the aruval, which he had in his hand at the deceased and the deceased side stepped. At that time, the appellant with the stick, which he had in his hand, beat the deceased on the head twice. The deceased fell down. The appellant leaving the stick, ran away from the place followed by accused S, who took away the aruval with him. The Supreme Court held that the offence committed by the accused appellant fell under Section 304, Part 2, and not under Section 302, IPC. Sellappan v. State of Tamil Nadu, (2007) 15 SCC 327 : 2007 CrLJ 1442 (1445) (SC) : 2007 (2) SCR 46 : 2007 (1) Crimes 289.

[11582] ● Sections 299(b) and 300(2), IPC—Distinction.—The distinguishing feature of the mens rea requisite under Clause (2) is the knowledge possessed by the offender regarding the particular victim being in such a peculiar condition or state of health that the internal harm caused to him is likely to be fatal, notwithstanding the fact that such harm would not in the ordinary way of nature be sufficient to cause death of a person in normal health or condition. It is noteworthy that the 'intention to cause death' is not an essential requirement of Clause (2). Only the intention of causing the bodily injury coupled with the offender's knowledge of the likelihood of such injury causing the death of the particular victim, is sufficient to bring the killing within the ambit of this clause. This aspect of Clause (2) is borne out by illustration (b) appended to Section 300. Bhagwan Bahadure v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 14 SCC 728 : 2007 (4) Crimes 170 (SC) : JT 2007 (11) SC 417.

[11583] ● "Likely"—Meaning.—The word "likely" conveys the sense of probability as distinguished from a mere possibility. Abbas Ali v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 2007 SC 1239 : 2007 (3) SCC (Cri) 80 : 2007 CrLJ 1667 : 2007 (2) Crimes

164 (SC). To the same effect : (1) Bhagwan Bahadur v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 14 SCC 728 : 2007 (4) Crimes 170. (2) Phuha Tudu v. State of Bihar, AIR 2007 SC 3215 : (2007) 14 SCC 588 : 2007 CrLJ 4690.

[11584] ● Distinction between Sections 299(b) and 300(3).—In Section 300(3), instead of words "likely to cause death" occurring in Section 299(b), the words "sufficient in the ordinary course of nature" have been used. Thus a distinction lies between a bodily injury likely to cause death and a bodily injury sufficient in ordinary course of nature, to cause death. Bhagwan Bahadure v. State of Maharashtra, (2007) 14 SCC 728 : 2007 (4) Crimes 170.

[11585] ● Benefit of sudden provocation under Exception 1 of Section 300, IPC.—For taking the benefit of sudden provocation under Exception 1 of Section 300, IPC, it is incumbent upon the accused to prove beyond doubt that the complainant or any person of his party abused or used any other provocative words which were sufficient to provoke a reasonable person in ordinary circumstances. Imtiaz v. State of Uttar Pradesh, (2007) 15 SCC 299 : 2007 CrLJ 1663 (1666) : 2007 (2) Crimes 159 (SC).

[11586] ● Sudden provocation—Nineteen injuries caused in quick succession.—Nineteen injuries inflicted on the body of deceased in quick succession cannot be said as a result of grave and sudden provocation. Sheek Rafi v. State of Andhra Pradesh, (2007) 13 SCC 76 : 2007 CrLJ 2746.

[11587] ● Clause fourthly of Section 300—Applicability.—The help of Exception 4 can be invoked if death is caused (a) without premeditation, (b) in a sudden fight; (c) without the offender's having taken undue advantage or acted in a cruel or unusual manner; and (d) the fight must have been with the person killed. To bring a case within Exception 4 all the ingredients mentioned in it must be found. It is to be noted that the 'fight' occurring in Exception 4 to Section 300, IPC is not defined in the IPC. It takes two to make a fight. Heat of passion requires that there must be no time for the passions to cool down and in this case, the parties have worked themselves into a fury on account of the verbal altercation in the beginning. A fight is a combat between two and more persons whether with or without weapons. It is not possible to enunciate any general rule as to what shall be deemed to be a sudden quarrel. It is a question of fact and whether a quarrel is sudden or not must necessarily depend upon the proved facts of each case. For the application of Exception 4, it is not sufficient to show that there was a sudden quarrel and there was no premediation. It must further be shown that the offender has not taken undue advantage or acted in cruel or unusual manner. Salim Sahab v. State of Madhya Pradesh, 2007 (1) SCC 699 : 2007 (1) SCC (Cri) 425 : 2006 (Supp-10) SCR 51 : 2006 (13) Scale 228 : 2007 (1) Crimes 251 (SC). To the same effect : (1) Thankachan v. State of Kerala, 2007 (3) Scale 69. [11588] ● Exception 4 of Section 300, IPC—Applicability.—Clause (4) of Section 300 would be applicable where the knowledge of the offender as to the probability of death of a person or persons in general as distinguished from particular person or persons being caused from his imminently dangerous act, approximates to a practical certainty. Such knowledge on the part of the offender must be of the highest degree of probability, the act having been committed by the offender without any excuse for incurring the risk of causing death or such injury as aforesaid. Sunder Lal v. State of Rajasthan, 2007 (3) SCC (Cri) 601 : 2007 CrLJ 3281 : 2007 (6) SCR 76 : 2007 (6) Scale 649 : 2007 (3) Supreme 984 : JT 2007 (6) SC 451. To the same effect : (1) Goli Venkataiah v. State of Andhra Pradesh, JT 2007 (12) 452. [11589] ● Accused got enraged on decead's advice in a matter between accused and a woman and killed him by lifting plank of wood and hitting him on his head.—According to prosecution case, the accused wanted to keep K, the widow of his brother V. as his mistress, but she refused to be his mistress, on the day of the incident the appellant was forcibly trying to drag k to his house. At that very time, he was told by his brother M (the deceased) that he could not force and drag K to his house. At this intervention, the accused got enraged by such unwarranted advice and therefore lifted a wooden plank (pat) and hit M with it on his head, and also kicked and punched him. M died on the spot. Since the incident occurred in a sudden fit of anger, the conviction of the accused under Section 302 by the Courts below was converted into Section 304, Part 2. As the accused appellant had undergone eleven years imprisonment, the sentence was reduced to the period already undergone. Krishnamorthy v. State, AIR 2007 SC

[11590] ● Single blow.—It cannot be said as a rule of universal application that whenever one blow is given Section 302, IPC is ruled out. It would be depend upon the facts of each case. The weapon used, size of the weapon, place where the assault took place, background facts leading to the assault, part of the body where the blow was given are some of the factors to be considered. In the instant case admittedly one blow was given with a small stick and place was dimly lit. Inevitable conclusion is that the case is covered by Section 304, Part I, IPC and not Section 302, IPC. The conviction of the accused persons under Sections 302/34 was altered to one under Section 304, Part I. Phulia Tudu v. State of Bihar, AIR 2007 SC 3215 : (2007) 14 SCC 588 : 2007 CrLJ 4690 (4694) : 2007 (9) SCR 997.

[11591] ● Section 300, Exception (4)—Applicability.—Section 300(4), IPC would be applicable where the knowledge of the offender as to probability of death of a person or persons in general as distinguished from a particular person or persons being caused from his eminently dangerous act, approximates to a practical certainty. Phulia Tudu v. State of Bihar, AIR 2007 SC 3215 : (2007) 14 SCC 588 : 2007 CrLJ 4690 : 2007 (9) SCR 997. To the same effect : Bhagwan Bahadure v. State of Maharashtra, 2007 (4) Crimes 170 (SC) : 2007 (10) SCR 397.

[11592] ● Section 300, Exception 4—Applicability.—The accused fired a gun shot from the gun, which he was carrying. There was no provocation. The shot was fired on a vital part of the body. The deceased was not carrying any arm. He merely came out probably to ascertain what was happening. The accused had taken undue advantage of his position and thus was rightly convicted under Section 302, IPC. Anil v. State of Haryana, 2007 (3) SCC (Cri) 641 : (2007) 10 SCC 274 : 2007 CrLJ 4294 : 2007 (3) Crimes 15. To the same effect : Kulesh Mondal v. State of West Bengal, AIR 2007 SC 3228 : 2008 CrLJ 325 : (2007) 8 SCC 578 : 2007 (3) SCC (Cri) 741 : 2007 (3) Crimes 382.

[11593] ● Section 300, Exception 4—"Fight".—A fight is a combat between two or more persons whether with or without weapons. It is not possible to enunciate any general rule as to what shall be deemed to be a sudden quarrel. It is a question of fact and whether a quarrel is sudden or not must necessarily depend upon the proved facts of each case. Kulesh Mondal v. State of West Bengal, AIR 2007 SC 3228 (3231) : (2007) 8 SCC 578 : 2007 (3) SCC (Cri) 741 : 2007 (3) Crimes 382 (SC). To the same effect : (1) *D. (3) Naveen Chandra v. State of Uttranchal, AIR 2007 SC 363 : (2009) 16 SCC 449 : 2007 CrLJ 874 : 2007 (1) Crimes 207.

[11594] ● Injuries caused in heat of passion.—A bare perusal of the said findings of the High Court would clearly show that there has been a total misappreciation of evidence on its part and a wrong question had been posed. Participation of the appellant was not in dispute. Presence of motive was. Once it was found that there had been no clear evidence with regard to 'grudge' the Court should have taken the same to its logical end.

The question which was thus required to be posed and answered was whether in the absence of any motive and in particular the fact that the appellant was not even known to the deceased, the fight which took place was a sudden one and the injuries were inflicted in heat of passion and thus a case under Section 304, Part-II, IPC was made out or not......

"Keeping in view the peculiar facts and circumstances of this case, we are of the opinion that the conviction of the appellant should be altered from Section 302 IPC to one under Section 304 Part-II thereof. It is stated by the learned counsel that the appellant has continuously been in jail from 17.10.2000 till date. In view of the statement made by learned counsel for the appellant, we are of the opinion that the ends of justice would be met if we modify the sentence awarded to the appellant as the period already undergone by him. The appeal is allowed to the above extent.

The appellant shall be set at liberty forthwith, if not wanted in connection with any other case. Vadla Chandraiah v. State of Andhra Pradesh, 2007 (3) SCC (Cr) 709 : 2007 CrLJ 770 : 2006 (Supp-10) SCR 343.

[11595] ● Injuries not inflicted with intention to cause death of deceased.—The injury, which proved to be fatal, is 10cm x 3cm x 3cm on left parietal bone which fractured the underlying bone and pierced the brain matter. We do not propose to hold that such an injury, if caused, would not attract the provisions of Section 302 IPC. Nevertheless, the question which requires serious consideration is whether having regard to the peculiar circumstances in which the incident took place and the fact that the deceased and the appellants happened to be blood relations, this particular injury, which was found to be sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death in the instant case, was an injury intended by the appellants. Having regard to the nature of the injuries sustained by both the closely related parties, we are of the view that the fatal injury was not inflicted with the intention to cause death or an injury likely to cause death of the deceased. We feel that in the very nature of things, the appellants could not have entertained any intention to cause death of their brother/uncle. We are, therefore, of the opinion that the offence committed by the appellants would fall within the ambit of Section 304, Part-II, IPC.

Consequently, we partly allow the appeal; set aside the conviction of the appellants under Section 302 IPC and instead convict them under Section 304, Part II, IPC. Sentence or rigorous imprisonment for seven years would meet the ends of justice. Dharam v. State of Haryana, AIR 2007 SC 397 : 2007 CrLJ 791 : JT 2007 (1) 299 : 2007 (1) Crimes 363 (SC).

[11596] ● Minor contradictions in testimony of witnesses.—The occurrence took place on 05.07.1995 and the witnesses were examined in the Court after about a gap of almost five years. The evidence on record further shows that the injured witnesses had been subjected to searching lengthy cross-examination and in such type of cross-examination, some improvements, contradictions, and omissions are bound to occur in their evidence, which cannot be treated very serious, vital and significant so as to disbelieve and discard the substratum of the prosecution case. The evidence of the injured witnesses and other eye-witnesses has been rightly re-appreciated and accepted by the High Court and we find no cogent and sound reason to differ from the well-reasoned judgment upholding the order of the trial Court. There is therefore, no merit in the argument of the learned counsel for the appellants that the evidence of the injured witnesses and other eye-witnesses should be labelled as the evidence of the interested witnesses. On the other hand, we find that the evidence of all the eye-witnesses including injured persons is quite natural, convincing and trust-worthy. There is no material on record from which an inference can be drawn that the material witnesses have implicated the appellants Karibasappa (A-2), Halanaika (A-3), B.K. Manjunathaa (A-17), B.K. Parmeshwarappa (A-19) and B.K. Shivarajappa (A-20) in a false case. B.K. Channappa v. State of Karnataka, AIR 2007 SC 432 : (2006) 12 SCC 57 : 2007 (2) SCC (Cr) 374 : 2006 (Supp-8) SCR 810 : 2007 (2) Crimes 171 (SC).

[11597] ● Concurrent findings of Courts—Having heard the learned counsel for the parties.—In our opinion, it cannot be said that by recording a finding of guilt against the appellants, any illegality can be said to have been committed either by the trial Court or by the appellant Court. Both the Courts considered the evidence on record, including substantive evidence of two injured eye-witnesses, PW-3 Daryav Singh and PW-5-Gaje Singh and believed them. Injuries have been established through the evidence of PW 11-Dr. S.C. Gupta. We are, therefore, of the opinion that both the Courts were right in recording a finding of guilt against the appellants. Suresh Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 2007 SC 3093 : 2007 CrLJ 4717 : 2007 (10) SCR 495 : JT 2007 (11) 431 : 2007 (4) Crimes 125 (SC).

[11598] ● Inconsistencies in prosecution version.—In view several inconsistencies in prosecution version, the accused was acquitted. State of M.P. v. Bacchndas, AIR 2007 SC 1236 : 2007 (3) SCC (Cr) 89 : 2007 CrLJ 1661 : 2007 (2) Crimes 58 (SC).

[11599] ● Sudden quarrel—Accused attacking deceased with pair of scissors.—Where the offender takes undue advantage or has acted in a cruel or unusual manner, the benefit of Exception 4 cannot be given to him. If the weapon used or the manner of attack by the assailant is out of all proportion, that circumstances must be taken into consideration to decide whether undue advantage has been taken. In the instant case, scenario shows that during a quarrel between the deceased and the accused, they were grapping and during that quarrel, accused attacked the deceased with a pair of scissors. It was not a very big sized weapon though it was certainly having a sharp edged point.

In view of the factual position the applicable provision would be Section 304, part II, IPC and not Section 302, IPC. The conviction is accordingly altered. Custodial sentence of seven years rigorous imprisonment would suffice. Salim Sahab v. State of Madhya Pradesh, 2007 (1) SCC 699 : 2007 (1) SCC (Cr) 425 : 2007 (1) Crimes 251.

[11601] ● Accused hitting deceased on his head with gandasa and attack made indiscriminately.—Considering the fact that the accused hit the deceased on his head with gandasa when the latter was sleeping in his house in the night in almost dark conditions with feeble light and attack was made indiscriminately, the appropriate conviction, would be under Section 304, Part I, IPC. Sunder Lal v. State of Rajasthan, (2007) 10 SCC 371 : 2007 (3) SCC (Cr) 601 : 2007 CrLJ 3281.

[11602] ● Section 300, Exception 4—Applicability.—The Fourth Exception of Section 300 IPC covers acts done in a sudden fight. The said exception deals with a case of prosecution not covered by the first exception, after which its place would have been more appropriate. The exception is founded upon the same principle, for in both there is absence of premeditation. But, while in the case of Exception 1 there is total deprivation of self-control, in case of Exception 4, there is only that heat of passion which clouds men's sober reason and urges them to deeds which they would not otherwise do. There is provocation in Exception 4 as in Exception 1; but the injury done is not the direct consequence of that provocation. In fact Exception 4 deals with cases in which notwithstanding that a blow may have been struck, or some provocation given in the origin of the dispute or in whatever way the quarrel may have originated, yet the subsequent conduct of both parties puts them in respect of guilt upon equal footing. A 'sudden fight' implies mutual provocation and blows on each side. The homicide committed is then clearly not traceable to unilateral provocation, nor in such cases could the whole blame be placed on one side. For if it were so, the Exception more appropriately applicable would be Exception 1. there is no previous deliberation or determination to fight. A fight suddenly takes place, for which both parties are more or less to be blamed. It may be that one of them starts it, but if the other had not aggravated it by his own conduct it would not have taken the serious turn it did. Kulesh Mondal v. State of West Bengal, AIR 2007 (SC) 3228 : (2007) 8 SCC 578 : 2007 (3) SCC (Cr) 741 : 2007 (9) SCR 799 : JT 2007 (11) 65 : 2007 (3) Crimes 382 (SC). TO THE SAME EFFECT : Byvarapu Raju v. State of A.P., AIR 2007 SC 1904 : (2007) 11 SCC 218 : 2007 CrLJ 3204.

[11603] ● Appropriate conviction—Determination.—Even according to the prosecution there were frequent quarrels between the husband and wife. The wife left the matrimonial home and was staying with her parents. An application was filed with Women Cell and due to intervention of Rajvinder Kaur, Assistant Sub-Inspector, Incharge of Women Cell, compromise had been recorded and Rajani Bala had gone to matrimonial home. Thereafter, she had again gone to her parental home and on the date of incident, because of telephonic call by the appellant that he was not well that she along with her mother and brother's wife, went to see the appellant-accused. There also was altercation between the parties. According to the evidence of PW 5-Dr. Tejwant Singh, three injuries were sustained by the deceased. Out of three injuries, injury Nos. 1 and 2 were sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death. The High Court, in the impugned judgment, has observed that both the injuries could be caused "with one blow". If it is so, in our opinion, taking into account totality of facts and circumstances, it can be said that the appellant had committed an offence punishable under Section 304, Part I, IPC. His conviction, therefore, ought to have been under the said provision and not for an offence of murder, punishable under Section 302, IPC. Held, "For the foregoing reasons, the appeal deserves to be partly allowed. So far as conviction recorded against the appellant for causing death of deceased Bhushan Lata is concerned, there is no infirmity and both the Courts were right in coming to the conclusion that it was the appellant who had caused the death of the deceased. But, in view of totality of circumstances, in our opinion, the appellant ought to have been convicted by the Courts below for an offence punishable under Section 304, Part I and not under Section 302, IPC. The appeal is, therefore, partly allowed and conviction of the appellant for an offence punishable under Section 302, IPC is converted to an offence punishable under Section 304, Part I, IPC and he is, therefore, ordered to undergo rigorous imprisonment for ten years." Gurdev Raj v. State of Punjab, (2007) 13 SCC 380 : 2007 (10) SCR 835 : JT 2007 (11) 555 : 2007 (4) Crimes 198 (SC) : 2008 Crimes 382.

[11604] ● Vital contradictions in statement of prosecution witness.—The defence has been able to bring on records vital omissions and contradictions in her statement made before the Police and her statement before the Court but we need not to go into the details thereof. Suffice, it to say that according to the defence the deceased had committed many thefts. He was accused of stealing buffalos of somebody in the previous right and only on such suspicion he had been assaulted. In view of the contradictions and inconsistencies in the depositions of Ganeshi Bai-PW-1, we are of the opinion that the learned trial Court as also the High Court committed a manifest error in relying upon her testimony as an eye witness.

So far as Kallu-PW 3 is concerned, he was not named as a witness in the First Information Report, but the same in itself may not be of much significance. But what is important is that in his evidence he categorically stated that the investigating officer had called him to the Police Station once five days after the incident and the second time 10-11 days after the incident. He was called for the third time 1 month after the incident. Girish Bohre-the Investigating Officer P.W. 9 in his deposition denied that PW-3 was called for the first two times. According to the said witness the evidence of PW-3 was recorded for the first time after 1 month.

It is not possible for us to arrive at a definite finding by taking aid of Section 34 of the Indian Penal Code that appellants herein could be convicted for commission of an offence under Section 304(II) but having regard to the fact that both PW 1 and PW 3 had made common allegations against all the accused persons, and as despite the same, accused Nos. 5 and 6 were acquitted by the learned trial Court and accused Nos. 2 and 4 were acquitted by the High Court, we are not in a position to do so. Accused Nos. 5 and 6 were not named in the First Information Report at all. Accused Nos. 2 and 4 were not named by PW 3. If PW 3 watched the entire incident from a close distance, as he claims to have; we fail to reason as to why no overt act was attributed by him so far as accused nos. 2 and 4 are concerned. Prem Narain v. State of Madhya Pradesh, (2007) 15 SCC 485 : 2007 CrLJ 774 : 2006 (Supp-9) SCR 844 : 2006 (13) Scale 463 : 2007 (1) SLT 500 : 2007 (2) SRJ 296 : 2007 (1) Crimes 223.

[11605] ● Culpable homicide—Degrees.—For the purpose of fixing punishment, proportionate to the gravity of the generic offence, the Indian Penal Code practically recognises three degrees of culpable homicide. The first is what may be called "culpable homicide of the first degree". This is the gravest form of culpable homicide, which is defined in Section 300 as "murder". The second may be termed as culpable homicide of the second degree. This is punishable under the first part of Section 304 IPC. Thus there is culpable homicide of the third degree. This is the lowest among the punishments provided for the three grades. Culpable homicide of this degree is punishable under second part of Section 304, IPC. Shellappan v. State of Tamil Nadu, (2007) 15 SCC 327 : 2007 CrLJ 1442 (1445) : 2007 (1) Crimes 289.

[11606] ● Injuries found sufficient in ordinary course of nature.—Where according to the doctor two injuries caused by the accused to the deceased were sufficient in the ordinary course of nature, and both the injuries could be caused "with one blow", looking to the circumstances of the case, the Supreme Court converted the conviction under Section 302, IPC to one under Section 304, Part I, IPC, and passed ten years RI as sentence. Gurdev Raj v. State of Punjab, (2007) 13 SCC 380 : 2008 CrLJ 382 (386) : 2007 (4) Crimes 198 (SC).

[11607] ● Murder or culpable homicide.—It stands proved that there being a direct causal connection between the hitting of the bullet, fired by the appellant, to the deceased and her death, the death of the deceased was caused by the appellant. However, having regard to the circumstances, briefly enumerated above, particularly the manner in which the appellant fired the shots, in our view, the appellant could not be attributed the mens rea requisite for bringing the case under clause (3) of Section 300 IPC. Concededly, there was no enmity between the parties and there is no allegation of the prosecution that before the occurrence, the appellant had pre-meditated the crime of murder. We are inclined to think that having faced some sort of hostile attitude from the family of the deceased over the cable connection, a sudden quarrel took place between the appellant and the son of the deceased, on account of heat of passion, the appellant went home, took out his father's revolver and started firing indiscriminately, and unfortunately one of the bullets hit the deceased on her chin. At the most, it can be said that he had the knowledge that the use of revolver was likely to cause death and, as such the present case would fall within the third clause of Section 299 IPC. Thus, in our opinion, the offence committed by the appellant was only "culpable homicide not amounting to murder". Under these circumstances, we are inclined to bring down the offence from first degree "murder" to "culpable homicide not amounting to murder", punishable under the second part of Section 304 IPC.

Consequently, we partly allow the appeal, set aside the conviction of the appellant under Section 302 IPC and instead convict him under Section 304, Part II IPC. The sentence of rigorous imprisonment for five years would meet the ends of justice. Vineet Kumar Chauhan v. State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 2008 SC 780 : 2008 CrLJ 1367 : 2007 (13) SCR 727 : 2007 (8) Supreme 502 : 2008 (1) SRJ 467 : 2008 (1) Crimes 66 (SC).

[11608] ● Culpable homicide not amounting to murder.—Ten days prior to the occurrence, the accused sold his auto-rickshaw and cleared his debts and asked his wife to get money from her parents to purchase another auto-rikshaw. But the parents of the deceased did not comply with the demand. While deceased was in the house, there was exchange of hot words and quarrel between the accused and the deceased. Suddenly accused hacked the deceased on her back with a sickle and, the deceased fell down and the accused once again hacked on the neck and left car of the deceased causing severe bleeding injuries. The accused was held guilty and convicted under Section 304, Part I and sentenced ten years Rule 9. Golla Yelugu Govindu v. State of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 2008 SC 1842 : (2008) 16 SCC 769 : 2008 CrLJ 2607 (2610) : (2008) 2 Crimes 100.

[11609] ● Section 304, Part I—Exchange of abuses and altercation in marriage party on trivial issue—Accused struck knife below on stomach of deceased.—Most of the boys participating in both the marriage parties were singing and dancing. There was some protest giving rise to exchange of abuses and altercation between the accused and Sanjeev Kumar (deceased) on a trivial issue. The accused took out knife from the pocket of his trouser and struck a blow on the stomach of Sanjeev Kumar. The deceased Sanjeev Kumar died on way to hospital. Held, the case fell under Section 304, Part I, the conviction of the accused appellant under Section 302, IPC was altered into one under Section 304, Part I. Suresh Kumar v. State of Himachal Pradesh, AIR 2008 SC 1973 : (2008) 13 SCC 459 : 2008 CrLJ 2247 (2249) : (2008) 2 Crimes 141.

[11610] ● Murder and culpable homicide—Distinction.—The academic distinction between 'murder' and 'culpable' homicide not amounting to murder' has always vexed the Courts. The confusion is caused, if Courts losing sight of the true scope and meaning of the terms used by the legislature in these sections, allow themselves to be drawn into minute abstractions. The safest way of approach to the interpretation and application of these provisions seems to be to keep in focus the keywords used in the various clauses of Sections 299 and 300. Daya Nand v. State of Haryana, AIR 2008 SC 1823 : (2008) 15 SCC 717 : 2008 CrLJ 2975 (2977) : (2008) 2 Crime 235.

[11611] ● Conviction under Section 302 altere to one under Section 304, Part 2.—On 9.9.199 Shankar (PW-5) and his brother Nain Sukh an deceased Chhajju Ram went to their fields fo irrigating the land. Amar Singh (who faced tria and was acquitted) and Daya Nand (appellan were already irrigating their fields. Shankar an others were to take turn of irrigation at 8.00 a.m from the accused. At 8.00 a.m. deceased Chhajj Ram diverted the irrigation water to his fiel Accused Daya Nand objected that his turn o water had not yet started. Chhajju Ram retorte that their turn started from 8.00 a.m. onwards. A altercation took place between Shankar and th deceased on one side and the accused on th other. Accused threatened that they will see then and both of them left towards the village. Shanka and others also went to supervise the flow o irrigation water through the water courses. In th meantime, both the accused came from the side o village. Accused Daya Nand was armed with a gun. Accused Amar Singh exhorted his so accused-Daya Nand to fire a shot. Accused Day Nand then fired a shot from his gun toward Chhajju Ram who took a turn but was hit on th right side of the waist and fell down. Bloo started oozing out from the fire shot injury Thereafter accused fled away. The deceased wa admitted to hospital where he was declared dead As it was a case of single gun shot injury, th conviction of the accused under Section 302 wa altered to one under Section 304, Part 2. Th accused had already undergone custody for 8½ years, the sentence was reduced to the perio already undergone. Daya Nand v. State o Haryana, AIR 2008 (SC) 1823 : (2008) 15 SC 717 : 2008 CrLJ 2975 (2980) (SC) : 2008 (2 Crimes 235 (SC).

[11613] ● Sudden fight.—The appellant wa working in that shop and after opening the sho he was arranging the articles kept inside the shop At that time, the deceased Siva who used t collect waste papers from the roadside, collecte the waste paper and cardboard boxes and threw them inside the shop of the accused. On seein this the accused got angry and shouted at Siva "why do you do this everyday?" and pulled his hair. The deceased thereupon pushed the accused. Then the accused took a knife from the top of a table in the shop and stabbed Siva in the chest. Siva fell down due to this injury and died. Held, "The incident in question occurred in a sudden fight and a heat of passion by a sudden quarrel without the appellant having taken undue advantage and acted in a cruel or unusual manner. Hence the appellant is entitled to the benefit of Exceptions 1 and 4 and the case comes under Section 304, IPC." Muthu v. State, AIR 2008 SC 1 : 2008 CrLJ 442 (443) (SC) : (2007) 4 Crimes 240.

[11614] ● Accused indiscriminately attacking deceased causing his death.—Where the case of the prosecution was that all the seven accused indiscriminately attacked the deceased causing his death, three accused 6, 4 and 7 were acquitted by the High Court by giving benefit of doubt on the ground of the name of the accused 6 in dying declaration and minor and superficial injuries said to have been caused by accused Nos. 4 and 7, the Supreme Court considered it proper to convict the remaining accused 1, 2, 3 and 5 for offence of culpable homicide not amounting to murder under Section 304, Part I. Harimuthu v. State of Tamil Nadu, (2008) 3 SCC 205 : 2008 CrLJ 1055 (1058) : (2008) 1 Crimes 263.

[11615] ● Distinction between murder and culpable homicide.—For cases to fall within clause (3), it is not necessary that the offender intended to cause death, so long as the death ensues from the intentional bodily injury or injuries sufficient to cause death in the ordinary course of nature . ..

Clause (c) of Section 299 and clause (4) of Section 300 both require knowledge of the probability of the act causing death. It is not necessary for the purpose of this case to dilate much on the distinction between these corresponding clauses. It will be sufficient to say the clause (4) of Section 300 would be applicable where the knowledge of the offender as to the probability of death of a person or persons in general as distinguished from a particular person or persons-being caused from his imminently dangerous act, approximates to a practical certainty. Such knowledge on the part of the offender must be of the highest degree of probability, the act having been committed by the offender without any excuse for incurring the risk of causing death or such injury as aforesaid. Daya Nand v. State of Haryana, AIR 2008 SC 1823 : 2008 CrLJ 2975 (2978) : 2008 (5) SCR 1043 : JT 2008 (5) 336 : 2008 (6) Scale 62. [11616] ● Murder of wife—Accused ill-treating deceased due to addiction habits—In a sudden quarrel exchange of hot words leading to murder of wife.—Due to addiction habits, the accused ill-treated his wife demanding her to get money from her parents. About six months prior to the occurrence, the accused beat and caused fracture to the hand of the deceased and sent her alongwith her children to her parents house. The accused again asked his wife to get money from her parents to purchase auto-rickshaw but the parents did not comply with the demand. In the night on 20-6-2002 there was hot exchange of words and quarrel between the accused and the deceased in presence of children. Suddenly accused hacked the deceased on her back with a sickle and deceased fell down. The accused once again hacked on the neck and left ear of the deceased causing severe bleeding injuries. Accused was held liable to be convicted under Section 304, Part I, IPC. Golla Yelugu v. State of A.P., AIR 2008 SC 1842 : (2008) 16 SCC 769 : 2008 CrLJ 2607 (2608, 2610) : 2008 (2) Crimes 100.

[11617] ● Single stick blow on head of deceased resulting in unconsciousness of deceased and death.—In this case the accused inflicted single stick blow on the head of deceased. The deceased fell down and became unconscious. The accused did not cause any other injury. It was held that the accused had no intention to cause death or knowledge that injury inflicted by him shall cause death in ordinary course of nature. Conviction was converted from Section 302 to Section 304, Part I. Kallu v. State of Maharashtra, (2008) 13 SCC 438 : 2008 CrLJ 4574.

[11618] ● Conviction altered from Section 300 to Section 304, Part I.—Though the accused were attributed overt acts of beating the deceased with sticks there were no corresponding injuries on the deceased. The motive was absence and the complaint was filed after 5 hours. The conviction was altered to Section 304, Part I read with Section 149 IPC. Pagula Komuraiah v. State of A.P., AIR 2008 SC 1226 : (2008) 3 SCC 686 : 2008 (2) SCC (Cr) 718 : 2008 CrLJ 1644 (1645) : 2008 (1) Crimes 253.

[11619] ● Culpable homicide and rash and negligent driving.—If a person willfully drives a motor vehicle into the midst of a crowd and thereby causes death to some person, it will not be a case of mere rash and negligent driving and the act will amount to culpable homicide. Doing an act with the intent to kill a person or knowledge that doing an act is likely to cause a person death is culpable homicide. Kuldeep Singh v. State of H.P., AIR 2008 SC 3062 : (2008) 14 SCC 795 : 2008 CrLJ 3932 (3933) : JT 2008 (8) SC 219.

[11620] ● Section 300, Exceptions 4, 1, IPC—Conviction under Section 304, Part I, IPC.—In this case there was an altercation on the point of switching off the light between accused and deceased who were working in a hotel and residing in a staff room. The accused inflicted two blows on head with a wooden log. There was no previous deliberation or determination to fight, considering the factual background the inevitable conclusion was that the appropriate conviction could be under Section 304, Part I, IPC and not Section 302, IPC. Ramesh Krishna Modhusudan Nayar v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 2008 SC 927 : (2008) 14 SCC 491 : 2008 CrLJ 1023 (1024, 1025) : 2008 (1) Crimes 141.

[11621] ● Altercation between accused and deceased party in regard to diversion of irrigation water—Accused causing death of deceased by firing a shot.—There was an altercation between accused and deceased party on the point of diversion of irrigation water from the field of accused by the deceased party. The accused and his father threatened the deceased and left for village and thereafter returned with gun on exportation by father, the accused fired shot towards deceased. The shot hit on right side of waist resulting in death of deceased. The conviction was altered to one under Section 304, Part II. Daya Nand v. State of Haryana, AIR 2008 SC 1823 : 2008 CrLJ 2975 : 2008 (2) Crimes 235 (SC) : JT 2008 (5) 336.

[11622] ● Quantum of sentence.—As held earlier there was no pre-meditation or pre-plan on the part of the appellant to cause death of the deceased, and the occurrence had taken place when the deceased, with another had entered the field of the appellant and engaged himself in an altercation with the appellant when the appellant had refused to part with bitterguard. Having regard to the attending circumstances in which the incident had taken place, this Court is of the opinion that the interest of justice would be served if the appellant is sentenced to rigorous imprisonment for five years for commission of offence punishable under Section 304, Part II, IPC. Chinnathaman v. State, AIR 2008 SC 784 . 2008 CrLJ 1372 : 2007 (8) Supreme 417 : 2008 (1) Crimes 48 (SC) : 2008 (1) SRJ 556.

[11623] ● Absence of intention to cause death.—The High Court observed that the accused did not have any intention of causing the death of Rajpal nor were the injuries caused with the intention of causing such bodily injuries as the accused knew were likely to cause death. The High Court further observed that the knowledge that death was likely to be caused could be inferred as the accused gave the blow on the head. Let us now see whether the aforesaid act would warrant a punishment under Section 302 or Section 304 of the IPC. In our view, the facts disclose that there was no premeditation and the fight resulted on drinking of water from the hand pipe after an exchange of abuses. There appeared no intention on the part of the appellants to cause the death of the deceased Rajpal. Therefore, the offence committed by the appellants, in our view, is culpable homicide not amounting to murder because it in our view falls within Section 4 to Section 300. . . .We have already gone through the evidence and the other materials on record. From the evidence on record, we cannot find any ground to discard the finding of the High Court that it cannot be said that the accused had any intention of causing the death of Rajpal, the deceased, nor were the injuries caused with the intention of causing such bodily injuries as the accused knew were likely to cause death. Therefore, in the absence of any intention of causing the death of the deceased Rajpal, we are in agreement with the High Court that the accused must be convicted of the offence under Section 304, Part II of the IPC and not under Section 302 of the IPC.

For the reasons aforesaid, we do not find any cogent reason to interfere with the judgment of the High Court converting the offence to Section 304, Part II of the IPC from Section 302 of the IPC. Accordingly, the appeal fails and is dismissed with no order as to costs. Dharam Pal v. State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 2008 SC 920 : 2008 CrLJ 1016 : 2008 (1) SCR 65 : JT 2008 (1) 172 : 2008 (1) Supreme 242 : 2008 (1) Crimes 201 (SC).

[11624] ● No premeditation or preplan.—In spite of knowing that the appellant was nurturing a feeling that the deceased and his own sister's son had facilitated elopement of Punitha with her teacher, the deceased in the company of Senthil Kumar had gone to the field of the appellant on the pretext of getting bitterguard. The appellant never knew and anticipated that the deceased would enter his field nor had prepared himself in advance to attack the deceased. Thus there was no premeditation or pre-plan on the part of the appellant, to cause the death of the deceased. The evidence led by the prosecution clearly establishes that after verbal duel, which had lasted for pretty long time, the appellant had picked up a sickle which is an agricultural implement, lying on the ground and delivered a blow on the neck of the deceased. By entering the field of the appellant on the pretext of getting bitterguard, though he was knowing fully well that the appellant was nurturing a feeling that he had played a role in the elopement of Punitha with her teacher as well as engaging himself in an altercation with the appellant, and advising the appellant to behave the deceased had offered grave and sudden provocation to the appellant as a result of which the appellant, in the heat of the moment had delivered a blow with sickle to the deceased. The medical officer who had performed autopsy on the dead body of the deceased has not stated that the injuries sustained by the deceased were sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause his death. It is not the case of the prosecution that the appellant had acted cruelly, in the sense that he had delivered successive blows to the deceased. There was sufficient time and opportunity to the appellant to give repeated blows. It is not the case of the prosecution that the appellant wanted to deliver other blows and that he was prevented from doing so, by any person. So, there is reasonable ground to believe that after giving the blow, the appellant had stopped and not acted cruelty. As noticed earlier, the appellant was doing his work and was not waiting for the deceased to come. On the facts and in the circumstances of the case, this Court is of the opinion that Exception 1 to Section 300 IPC would apply to the facts of the case and the offence committed by the appellant would be one punishable under Section 304 IPC. There is nothing on record to indicate that the appellant had committed culpable homicide amounting to murder by causing death of the deceased with the intention of causing death of the deceased or the causing such bodily injury as was likely to cause his death. Therefore, the provisions of Part II of Section 304 IPC would apply to the facts of the case on hand. Thus, the appeal will have to be allowed by converting the conviction of the appellant under Section 302 IPC to one punishable under Section 304, Part II, IPC. Chinnathaman v. State, AIR 2008 SC 784 : 2008 CrLJ 1372 : 2007 (14) Scale 357 : 2007 (8) Supreme 417 : 2008 (1) Crimes 48 (SC).

[11625] ● Sudden fight, exchange of abuses and altercation in marriage party—No previous deliberation.—In the instant case two marriage parties reached at particular place. Most of the boys participating in both the marriages parties were singing and dancing. There was protest giving rise to exchange of abuses and altercation between the accused and deceased on a trivial issue. The accused took out knife from the pocket of his trouser and struck a blow on the stomach of deceased. As a result of blood injury he fell down on the ground and became unconscious. [11626] ● Sudden fight between Hindus and Muslims.—"A sudden fight implies mutual provocation and blows on each side. The homicide committed is then clearly not traceable to unilateral provocation nor in such cases could the whole blame be placed on one side. For if it were so, the exception more appropriately applicable would be Exception 1. There is no previous deliberation or determination to fight. A fight suddenly takes place for which both parties are more or less to be blamed. It may be that one of them starts it, but if the other had not aggravated it by his own conduct it would not have taken the serious turn it did. There is then mutual provocation and aggravation, and it is difficult to apportion the share of blame which attaches to each fighter. . . .

In the instant case considering the background facts and the nature of the weapon used i.e. small knife the appropriate conviction would be under Section 304, Part I, IPC and not Section 302 IPC. Accordingly the conviction is altered, custodial sentence of ten years would suffice. Shaikh Majid v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 2008 SC 1091 : (2008) 11 SCC 131 : 2008 CrLJ 1062 : 2008 (1) SCR 964 : JT 2008 (1) 640 : 2008 (1) Scale 561. TO THE SAME EFFECT : Shambhoo Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 2008 SC 3200 : (2008) 11 SCC 637 : 2008 (3) SCC (Cr) 976.

[11627] ● Undue advantage taken by offender—Benefit of Exception 4 to Section 300.—Where the offenders takes advantage or has acted in cruel or unusual manner. The benefit of Exception 4 cannot be given to him. If the weapon used or the manner of attack by the assailants is out of all proportion, that circumstance must be taken into consideration to decide whether undue advantage has been taken. In the instant case blows on vital parts of unarmed persons were given with brutality. The abdomens of two deceased persons were ripped open and internal organs came out. In view of the aforesaid factual position Exception 4 to Section 300, IPC would not be applicable. The appropriate conviction would be under Section 304, Part I, IPC. Bangaru Venkatarao v. State of [11628] ● Case based on dying declaration.—In a bride burning case, the deceased made two dying declarations. The first included husband, mother-in-law and father-in-law. In the other dying declaration, only mother-in-law was inculpated. Held, even of the so called interpolations are kept out of consideration, the effect of the statement made in the dying declaration cannot be lost sight of. [11629] ● Three degrees of culpable homicide.—Indian Penal Code recognizes three degrees of culpable homicide-First as murder degree is gravest from punishable under Section 300, IPC culpable homicide of second degree is punishable under Section 304, I. The third degree of culpable homicide is the lowest type of culpable homicide and is punishable under Section 304-II. Daya Nand v. State of Haryana, AIR 2008 SC 1823 : 2008 CrLJ 2975 : 2008 (2) Crimes 235 (SC). To the same effect : (1) Kesar Singh v. State of Haryana, JT 2008 (5) SC 407 : 2008 (6) SCR 1196. [11630] ● Exceeding right of self defence.—"The deceased had received 20 incised injuries caused on various parts of the body in general and on vital parts of the body in particular. The deceased was killed mercilessly by inflicting twenty incised injuries and mostly on the vital parts of the body.

Even if we accept the version of the High Court that the accused had the right of private defence, in the facts and circumstances of the case, but he had exceeded his right so he was convicted under Section 304, Part I, IPC.

On examination of the injuries on the accused it is clearly borne out that those injuries are very minor and superficial in nature whereas twenty incised injuries inflicted on the deceased were of very serious nature and character. The Sessions Court has gravely erred in acquitting the accused on the face of the testimony of the witnesses in the case. We have to examine the evidence in proper perspective why should ordinarily PW 1, mother of the deceased would falsely implicate the accused and let off the real assailant? Similarly, why PW 2, nephew of the deceased would save the real assailant and falsely name the accused? The High Court in the impugned judgment while reversing the judgment of the Sessions Court convicted the accused under Section 304, Part I, IPC. . .

"The appellant must be convicted at least under Section 304, Part I, IPC. No interference is called for. The appeal being devoid of any merit is accordingly dismissed. Moorthy v. State of Tamil Nadu, (2009) 16 SCC 443 : 2009 CrLJ 1104 (1107) : 2008 (16) SCR 271 : JT 2008 (13) 265.

[11631] ● Section 304, Parts I and II—Scope.—When and if there is intent and knowledge then the same would be a case of Section 304, Part I and if it is only a case of knowledge and not the intention to cause murder and bodily injury, then the same would be a case of Section 304, Part II. Satish Narayan Sawant v. State of Goa, 2009 CrLJ 4655 (4664) : 2009 (4) Crimes 39 (SC).

[11632] ● Sudden quarrel—Plea of self defence.—Merely because there was a quarrel and some of the accused persons sustained injuries, that does not confer a right of private defence extending to the extent of causing death as in this case. Though such right cannot be weighed in golden scales, it has to be established that the accused persons were under such grave apprehension about the safety, of their life and property that retaliation to the extent done was absolutely necessary. No evidence much less cogent and credible was adduced in this regard. The right of private defence as claimed by the accused persons have been rightly discarded. . . .

"For the application of Exception 4, it is not sufficient to show that there was a sudden quarrel and there was no premeditation. It must further be shown that the offender has not taken undue advantage or acted in cruel or unusual manner. The expression 'undue advantage' as used in the provision means 'unfair advantage' . . . .

"Considering the background facts it is clear that the appellant cannot be said to have exercised the right of private defence. However, there is substance in the plea that the occurrence took place in the course of a sudden quarrel. That being so the conviction is altered from Section 302 IPC to 304, Part I, IPC, custodial sentence of ten years would meet the ends of justice." Santokh Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 2009 SC 1923

(1926, 1927) : (2009) 11 SCC 197 : 2009 (2) SCR 412 : 2009 (2) JT 468.

[11633] ● Release on probation in case of conviction under Section 304, Part I—Not permissible.—Section 4 of the Probation of offenders Act empowers the Court to release a person on probation of good conduct, subject to the conditions that the offence is not punishable with death or imprisonment for life. Only in the event, the provisions of the said Act are applicable, Section 6 of the Act can be taken recourse to.

Appellant was charged with commission of an offence under Section 302 of the Indian Penal Code. He has been found guilty under Section 304, Part I thereof which provides for imprisonment for life or imprisonment for either description of a term which may extend to imprisonment for life. In this view of the matter, the provisions of the Act are not applicable.

Mr. Anand submits that the learned Trial Judge has not heard the appellant on the question of sentence as is provided for under sub-section (2) of Section 235 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Although the learned counsel is correct, but keeping in view the fact that the conviction of the appellant was under Section 304, Part I of the Indian Penal Code, we are of the opinion that even otherwise the sentence imposed on him is just and proper. Bala Baine Linga Raju v. State of Andhra Pradesh, (2009) 6 SCC 706 : 2009 CrLJ 3426 : 2009 (7) SCR 595 : JT 2009 (13) 657 : 2009 (2) Crimes 394 (SC).

[11634] ● Single lathi blow on head causing death.—There was a clear grudge of the employee of the contractor, accused-appellant against the deceased. When on the very next day morning i.e. 14.10.1979, the accused-appellant saw the face of the deceased he simply picked up his lathi and with that gave one blow on the head of the deceased. The said blow was so forceful that as a consequence of which the deceased died within an hour and before he could be taken to the hospital. There is a direct nexus between the blow of lathi and death of the deceased which is immediately caused after giving the blow.

Although it is a case of culpable homicide not amounting to murder, but considering the nature of the injuries which was caused on vital part of the body, we are of the considered view that there was intention on the part of the accused-appellant to cause death of the deceased.

We, therefore, alter the conviction of the appellant from Section 302, IPC to Section 304, Part I, IPC. In our considered opinion, custody and sentence of 10 years would be appropriate and sufficient. Indrasan v. State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 2009 SC 2760 : 2009 (9) SCR 1127 : JT 2009 (8) 680 : 2009 (9) Scale 58 : 2009 (5) Supreme 198 : 2009 (3) Crimes 217.

[11635] ● Alteration of conviction from Section 302 to Section 304, Part I, IPC.—Clause (b) of Section 299 corresponds with clauses (2) and (3) of Section 300. The distinguishing feature of the mens rea requisite under clause (2) is the knowledge possessed by the offender regarding the particular victim being in such a peculiar condition or state of health that the internal harm caused to him is likely to be fatal, notwithstanding the fact that such harm would not in the ordinary way of nature be sufficient to cause death of a person in normal health or condition. It is noteworthy that the 'intention to cause death' is not an essential requirement of clause (2). Only the intention of causing the bodily injury coupled with the offender's knowledge of the likelihood of such injury causing the death of the particular victim, is sufficient to bring the killing within the ambit of this clause. This aspect of clause (2) is borne out by illustration (b) appended to Section 300, IPC.

Clause (b) of Section 299 does not postulate any such knowledge on the part of the offender. Instances of cases falling under clause (2) of Section 300 can be where the assailant causes death by a fist blow intentionally given knowing that the victim is suffering from an enlarged liver, or enlarged spleen or diseased heat and such blow is likely to cause death of that particular person as a result of the rupture of the liver, or spleen or the failure of the heart, as the case may be. If the assailant had no such knowledge about the disease or special frailty of the victim, nor an intention to cause death or bodily injury sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death, the offence will not be murder, even if the injury which caused the death, was intentionally given. In clause (3) of Section 300, instead of the words 'likely to cause death' occurring in the corresponding clause (b) of Section 299, the words "sufficient in the ordinary course of nature" have been used. Obviously, the distinction lies between a bodily injury likely to cause death and a bodily injury sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death. The distinction is fine but real and if overlooked, may result in miscarriage of justice.

Considering the factual scenario and the facts that one arrow was shot the offence is covered by Section 304, Part I, IPC and not Section 302, IPC. Though it cannot be laid down that whenever one arrow is shot Section 302, IPC will not apply, on the facts of the present case it appears to be so.

Therefore conviction is altered from Section 302, IPC to Section 304, Part I, IPC. Custodial sentence of eight years would meet the ends of justice. Laxminath v. State of Chhatisgarh, AIR 2009 SC 1383 : 2009 (3) SCC 519 : 2009 (1) SCR 348 : JT 2009 (1) 365.

[11636] ● Stabbing of deceased following an altercation between accused and deceased inside car in night—Solitary eye-witness.—In the first information report PW 7 stated that initially a knife blow was given by the deceased to the accused and thereafter the accused gave two knife blows to the deceased which resulted in his death and consequently his body came out of the window. The aforesaid was however altered when PW 7 deposed in the Court, that the deceased after giving two knife blows attempted to commit suicide by plunging the knife in his chest. In support of the said contention reliance was placed on the evidence of the doctor who stated during his examination that injury on the accused could have been self inflicted also PW 7 is said to be the eye-witness who allegedly saw the entire occurrence including the exchange of hot words between the accused and the deceased in a winter night and that also when it was totally dark. According to him, he could see the entire incident in the light of the head light of the car.

The aforesaid statement of PW-7 does not appear to be trustworthy and reliable for the simple reason that even though the headlight of the car was on, it would be lighting only the front portion and not the side of the car and may not even have lighted sufficiently to enable PW 7 to see as to what had happened inside the car.

The entire story sought to be put forth by the prosecution and by PW 7 particularly appears to be doubtful and full of contradictions. It will be unsafe to convict a person on the basis of such unreliable and untrustworthy evidence particularly when such statements are full of embellishment and contradictions, without corroboration in material particulars by reliable testimony, direct or circumstantial. Consequently, we set aside the order of conviction and sentence passed against the appellant and give him benefit of doubt. He stands acquitted of the charges. He shall be set free immediately, unless required in any other matter. Jarnail Singh v. State of Punjab, (2009) 3 SCC 391 : 2009 CrLJ 1141 (144, 1145, 1146) : JT 2009 (1) SC 644 : 2009 (1) SCR 311.

[11637] ● Single lathi blow on head of deceased causing his death.—The cattle of deceased were found grazing in pasture of land. Deceased was permitted to take away his cattle. The accused one who was the employee of the contractor o pasture land had grudge against deceased.

On a careful consideration of the cross-examination of PW-1, PW-11 and PW-13, the possibility of the complainant party being aggressors cannot be ruled out. The defence has been able to probablise that complainant party attacked first. As a matter of fact, A-5 received six injuries and few of these injuries was grievous. A-8 sustained eight injuries while A-7 received nine injuries some of which were grievous. A-6 also received injuries. When we observe this, we are not oblivious of the fact that number of injuries on the accused side by itself may not be sufficient to establish right of private defence.

The appellant are, thus, held guilty of the offence punishable under Section 304, Part I read with 34 IPC. Their conviction under Section 302 read with Section 34 IPC is altered to Section 304, Part I read with Section 34 IPC. Ranbir Singh v. State of Haryana, 2009 CrLJ 3051 : 2009 (7) SCR 212 : 2009 (7) JT 298 : 2009 (7) Scale 310 : 2009 (4) Supreme 105 : 2009 (4) SLT 767 : 2009 (2) Crimes 418 (SC).

[11638] ● Appropriate punishment—Exchange of hot words and quarrel.—In the instant case though the witnesses stated that after initial exchange of hot words and quarrel the accused persons went inside and came back, it is to be noted that they fairly accepted that while the exchange of hot words, quarrel was continuing and immediately i.e. in less than two and three minutes they came back.

That being so, in the peculiar facts of the case that appropriate conviction would be under Section 304, Part I read with Section 149 IPC. Ramjit v. State of Uttar Pradesh, (2009) 11 SCC 373 : 2009 CrLJ 1139 : 2009 (1) SCR 184 : JT 2009 (1) 342.

[11639] ● Altering of conviction under S. 304, Part I from S. 304-II, IPC without filing appeal by prosecution—Not proper.—It is established fact that the offence of Section 304, Part 1, IPC is of a higher degree than that of the offence under Section 304, Part II, IPC, as also held in Ruli Ram v. State of Haryana, [(2002) 7 SCC 691, Para 8]. The learned Single Judge, therefore, was not justified in converting the order of conviction and altering the same from Section 304, Part II, IPC to Section 304, Part I, IPC, particularly when the prosecution did not file any appeal. By virtue of the order passed by the learned Single Judge the appellant stood convicted of higher degree of offence than that of Section 304, Part II, IPC, although the learned Single Judge altered the sentence from eight years to five years. Jarnail Singh v. State of Punjab, (2009) 3 SCC 391 : 2009 CrLJ 1141 : 2009 (1) SCR 311.

[11640] ● Section 304, Part I—Dying declaration.—"The deceased in clear and categorical terms stated that she poured kerosene on herself and it was the appellant who lit the match stick resulting in fire and causing 60% burns which ultimately led to her death. The appellant instead of preventing the deceased pouring kerosene upon herself lit the match stick resulting in fire and causing burns. The appellant knew very well that the body of the deceased was drenched with kerosene yet he indulged in the cruel act of lighting the match stick. In the circumstances, we find it difficult to accept the submission that the contents of dying declaration (Ex. P-4) do not disclose the commission of any offence by the appellant. Can it be said that the appellant was not aware that his act was likely cause serious burn injuries to the deceased. The appellant was in fact charged for the offences punishable under Section 498-A and 302 IPC. We do not know what view the Court would have taken had there been an appeal by the State as against the acquittal of the appellant under Section 302 IPC? Suffice it to say that the High Court took a very lenient view in convicting the appellant for the offence punishable under Section 304, Part I, IPC and sentencing him to undergo rigorous imprisonment only for a period of seven years.

For the aforesaid reasons we confirm the conviction of the appellant for the offence punishable under Section 304, Part I of IPC and the sentence awarded by the High Court". Ongole Ravikanth v. State of A.P., AIR 2009 SC 2129 : (2009) 13 SCC 647 : 2009 CrLJ 3944 : JT 2009 (8) SC 88.

[11641] ● Minor omissions, contradictions and discrepancies in testimony of eye-witnesses—Entire evidence cannot be discarded.—Undue importance should not be attached to omissions, contradictions and discrepancies which do not go to the root of the matter and shake the basic version of the prosecution witnesses. A witness cannot be accepted to possess a photographic memory and to recall the deals of an incident verbatim. Ordinarily, it so happens that a witness is overtaken by events. A witness could have been anticipated the occurrence which very often has an element of surprise. The mental faculties cannot, therefore, be expected to be attuned to absorb all the details. Thus minor discrepancies are bound to occur in the statement of witnesses. Bhola v. State of H.P., AIR 2009 SC 1338 : (2009) 11 SCC 460 : 2009 (2) SCR 750. TO THE SAME EFFECT : Prithu v. State of H.P., AIR 2009 SC 2070 : (2009) 11 SCC 88 : JT 2009 (3) SC 440.

[11642] ● Distinction between culpable homicide and murder—Intent and knowledge.—Section 299 and Section 300 IPC deals with the definition of culpable homicide and murder respectively. Section 299 defines culpable homicide as the act of causing death : (i) with the intention of causing death or (ii) with the intention of causing such bodily injury as is likely to cause death or (iii) with the knowledge that such act is likely to cause death. The bare reading of the section makes it crystal clear that the first and the second clause of the section refer to intention apart from the knowledge and the third clause refers to knowledge alone and not intention. Both the expression "intent" and "knowledge" postulate the existence of a positive mental attitude which is of different degrees. The mental element in culpable homicide i.e. mental attitude towards the consequences of conduct is one of intention and knowledge. If that is caused in any of the aforesaid three circumstances, the offence of culpable homicide is said to have been committed. Section 300, IPC however deals with murder although there is no clear definition of murder provided in Section 300, IPC. Section 300, IPC provides for exception which will constitute culpable homicide not amounting to murder and punishable under Section 304, IPC, when if there is intent and knowledge then the same would be a case of Section 304, Part I, and if it is only a case of knowledge and not the intention to cause murder and bodily injury, then the same would be a case of Section 304, Part II. Jagriti Devi v. State of Himachal Pradesh, AIR 2009 SC 2869 (2872) : 2009 (3) Crimes 289 (SC) : 2009 (10) SCR 167 : JT 2009 (8) SC 648.

[11643] ● Sections 299(b) and 300(3), IPC—Distinction.—In Clause (3) of Section 300, IPC instead of the words "likely to cause death" occurring in the corresponding Clause (b) of %Section 299, IPC the words "sufficient in the ordinary course of nature" have been used. Obviously the distinction lies between a bodily injury sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death. The distinction is fine but real and, if overlooked, may result in miscarriage of justice. The difference between Clause (b) of Section 299 and Clause (3) of Section 300 is one of degree of probability of death resulting from the intended bodily injury. To put it more broadly, it is the degree of probability of death which determines whether a culpable is of gravest, medium or the lowest degree. The word "likely" in Clause (b) of Section 299 conveys the sense of probable as distinguished from mere probability. The words "bodily injury ….. sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death" means the death will be "most probable" result of the injury, having regard to the ordinary course of nature. Balkar Singh v. State of Uttarakhand, 2009 CrLJ 2980 (2983) : 2009 (2) Crimes 73 (SC) : JT 2009 (5) SC 1. To be same effect: Santhanam v. State of Tamil Nadu, (2009) 12 SCC 531 : 2009 (2) Crimes 286 (SC) : JT 2009 (7) SC 12; Pappu v. State of Madhya Pradesh, (2009) 11 SCC 472 : 2009 (5) SCR 230; Siri Kishan v. State of Haryana, (2009) 12 SCC 757 : (2009) 6 SCR 1184.

The question with regard to finding out the intention on the part of the accused to cause death depends upon the facts and circumstances of each case. No hard and fast rule can be laid down therefor. Mohammed Asif v. State of Uttranchal, (2009) 11 SCC 497 : 2009 CrLJ 2789 (2794) : JT 2009 (4) SC 1 (2).

[11644] ● Sections 299 and 300, IPC—Intention and knowledge.—Section 299 and Section 300, IPC deals with the definition of culpable homicide and murder respectively. Section 299 defines culpable homicide as the act of causing death; (i) with the intention of causing death or (ii) with the intention of causing such bodily injury as is likely to cause death or (iii) with the knowledge that such act is likely to cause death. The bare reading of the section makes it crystal clear that the first and the second clause of the section refer to intention apart from the knowledge and the third clause refers to knowledge alone and not intention. Both the expression "intent" and "knowledge" postulate the existence of a positive mental attitude which is of different degrees. The mental element in culpable homicide i.e. mental attitude towards the consequences of conduct is one of intention and knowledge. If that is caused in any of the aforesaid three circumstances, the offence of culpable homicide is said to have been committed. Section 300, IPC, however, deals with murder although there is no clear definition of murder provided in Section 300, IPC. It has been repeatedly held by this Court that culpable homicide is the genus and murder is species and that all murders are culpable homicide but not vice versa. Section 300, IPC further provides for the exceptions which will constitute culpable homicide not amounting to murder and punishable under Section 304. When and if there is intent and knowledge then the same would be a case of Section 304, Part I and if it is only a case of knowledge and not the intention to cause murder and bodily injury, then the same would be a case of Section 304, Part II. The aforesaid distinction between an act amounting to murder and an act not amounting to murder has been brought out in the numerous decisions of this Court. Jagriti Devi v. State of Himachal Pradesh, AIR 2009 SC 2869 (2872) : 2009 (3) Crimes 289 (SC) : 2009 (1) SCR 167 : JT 2009 (8) SC 648.

[11645] ● Culpable homicide—Degrees.—For the purpose of fixing punishment, proportionate to the gravity of the generic offence, the IPC practically recognizes three degrees of culpable homicide. The first is, what may be called, 'culpable homicide of the first degree'. This is the gravest form of culpable homicide, which is defined in Section 300 as 'murder'. The second may be termed as 'culpable homicide of the second degree'. This is punishable under the first part of Section 304. Then, there is 'culpable homicide of the third degree'. This is the lowest type of culpable homicide and the punishment provided for it is also the lowest among the punishments provided for the three grades. Culpable homicide of this degree is punishable under the second part of Section 304. Laxminath v. State of Chhattisgarh, AIR 2009 SC 1383 (1384) : (2009) 3 SCC 519 : JT 2009 (1) SC 365. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Balkar Singh v. State of Uttrakhand, 2009 (2) Crimes 73 (SC) : JT 2009 (5) SC 1 : 2009 (5) SCR 242. (2) Santhanam v. State of Tamil Nadu, (2009) 12 SCC 531 : 2009 (2) Crimes 286 (SC). (3) Pappu v. State of Madhya Pradesh, (2009) 11 SCC 472 : (2007) 15 SCC 249 : 2009 (5) SCR 230 : 2009 (2) Crimes 388.

[11646] ● Section 299, IPC—Scope and applicability.—Section 299 defines culpable homicide as the act of causing death; (i) with the intention of causing death or (ii) with the intention of causing such bodily injury as is likely to cause death or (iii) with the knowledge that such act is likely to cause death. The bare reading of the section makes it crystal clear that the first and the second clause of the section refer to intention apart from the knowledge and the third clause refers to knowledge alone and not intention. Both the expression "intent" and "knowledge" postulate the existence of a positive mental attitude which is of different degrees. The mental element in culpable homicide i.e. mental attitude towards the consequences of conduct is one of the intention and knowledge. If that is caused in any of the aforesaid three circumstances, the offence of culpable homicide is said to have been committed. Salesh Narayan Sawant v. State of Goa, 2009 CrLJ 4655 : (2009) 4 Crimes 39 (SC) : 2009 (14) SCR 464.

[11647] ● Culpable homicide and murder—Distinction.—In scheme of Indian Penal Code, culpable homicide is genus and murder its specie. All murders are culpable homicide but not vice versa—culpable homicide sans special characteristics of murder is culpable homicide not amounting to murder. Balkar Singh v. State of Uttrakhand, (2009) 15 SCC 366 : 2009 CrLJ 2980 : 2009 (5) SCR 242 : JT 2009 (5) SC 1; Pappu v. State of Madhya Pradesh, (2009) 11 SCC 472 : 2009 (5) SCR 230 : 2009 (2) Crimes 388 (SC). To the same effect : (1) Santhanam v. State of Tamil Nadu, (2009) 12 SCC 531 : 2009 (6) SCR 964 : 2009 (2) Crimes 286 (SC). (2) Laxminath v. State of Chattisgarh, AIR 2009 SC 1383 : (2009) 3 SCC 519 : 2009 (1) SCR 348 : JT 2009 (1) SC 365.

[11648] ● Culpable homicide and murder.—Safest way of approach to interpretation and application of provisions of Section 299 and 300, IPC seems to be to keep in focus keywords used in various clauses of Sections 299 and 300, IPC. Bakar Singh v. State of Uttarakhand, 2009 CrLJ 2980 (2982) : 2009 (2) Crimes 73 (SC) : 2009 (5) SCR 242 : JT 2009 (5) SC 1. To the same effect : (1) Santhanan v. State of Tamil Nadu, (2009) 12 SCC 531 : JT 2009 (7) 12. (2) Shri Kishan v. State of Haryana, (2009) 12 SCC 757 : 2009 (6) SCR 1184 : JT 2009 (8) SC 305.

[11649] ● Murder or culpable homicide.—It was clearly established from the evidence of prosecution witness that acid was thrown over the deceased which caused blisters and rashes on her body and later led to her death. This fact found corroboration in the dying declaration given by deceased after careful reading of dying declaration what came out to the fore was that it was accused. No. 1 who had carried the vessal containing the acid and who had actually thrown its contents i.e. acid on the deceased. She accused both the accused persons of demanding illicit relations with her as also entering her house. No overt act, save as mentioned above, had been attributed to the appellant (accused No. 2). Held, keeping in mind the facts that the deceased had turned down the sexual advances made by them and that he had accompanied the accused No. 1 who was carrying a vessal containing acid in his hand at the dead of night and in an unearthly hour it can be said with certainty that the appellant had the intention to inflict bodily harm on the deceased otherwise the appellant would not have accompanied the accused No. 1 to the house of deceased. Since the appellant was present at the scene of occurrence and simply watched the accused No. 1 throwing acid on the deceased without preventing the accused No. 1 from doing so, establishes that the appellant had intention to cause injury to and also disfigurement of decease and as such by liable be punished under Section 326, IPC and Section 304, Part II and not under Section 300, IPC. Bengai Mandal v. State of Bihar, AIR 2010 SC 686 : (2010) 2 SCC 91 : 2010 CrLJ 1420 (1423) (SC) : (2010) 1 Crimes 49.

CUSTODIAL CRIMES

[11650] ● Custodial crimes.—Consequent to an alleged theft some of the suspects were brought to police station which at the relevant time was in charge of an Astt. Sub-Inspector of Police. The suspects were picked up and suffered, as part of the process of investigation, severe flagellation. One of the suspects, a victim of torture succumbed to his injuries. This triggered an investigation, Medical examination revealed the cruel cause of death as asphyxiation. One of the injuries which, according to the doctor, made the deceased unconscious was torture on both the soles of the foot of the victim. A trial for murder followed, a conviction under Section 302 was entered and eventually the High Court confirmed the conviction and sentence of life imprisonment so far as the petitioner was concerned. A false explanation of suicidal hanging was put up by the police officer-accused but this was rejected and eventually, on a study of the circumstances and the incontrovertible facts of flagellation and asphyxiation within police station premises and the testimony or eye witness about nocturnal detention within the police station and beating up of the victim, the Courts below concurrently found the guilt of the petitioner proved beyond reasonable doubt. "We are deeply disturbed by the diabolical recurrence of police torture resulting in a terrible scare in the minds of common citizens that their lives and liberty are under a new peril when the guardians of the law gore human rights to death. The vulnerability of human rights assumes a traumatic, torturesome poignancy (when) the violent violation is perpetrated by the police arm of the State whose function is to protect the citizen and not to commit gruesome offences against them as has happened in this case. Police lock-ups if reports in newspapers have a streak of credence, are becoming more and more awesome cells. This development is disastrous to our human rights awareness and humanist constitutional order. The State, at the highest administrative and political levels, we hope, will organise special strategies to prevent and punish brutality by police methodology. Otherwise the credibility of the rule of law in our Republic vis-a vis the people of the country will deteriorate". Raghuvir Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 1980 SC 1087 : (1980) 3 SCC 70 : 1980 SCC (Cri) 526 : 1980 CrLJ 801 : 1980 CrAppR (SC) 125 : 1980 CurLJ (Cri) 89 : (1980) 2 SCJ 261 : 1980 UJ (SC) 424.

[11651] ● Atrocities perpetrated by Police in Police Station—Law as to burden of proof to be re-examined.—We would like to impress upon the Government the need to amend the law appropriately so that policemen who commit atrocities on persons who are in their custody are not allowed to escape by reason of paucity or absence of evidence. Police Officers alone, and none else, can give evidence as regards the circumstances in which a person in their custody comes to receive injuries while in their custody. Bound by ties of a kind of brotherhood, they often prefer to remain silent in such situations and when they choose to speak, they put their own gloss upon facts and pervert the truth. The result is that persons, on whom atrocities are perpetrated by the police in the sanctum sanctorum of the police station are left without any evidence to prove who the offenders are. The law as to the burden of proof in such cases may be re-examined by the legislature so that handmaids of law and order do not use their authority and opportunities for oppressing the innocent citizens who look to them for protection. State of Uttar Pradesh v. Ram Sagar Yadav, AIR 1985 (SC) 416 : (1985) 1 SCC 552 : 1985 SCC (Cri) 552 : 1986 CrLJ 836 : 1985 CrLR (SC) 73 : 1985 (1) Crimes 344 : 1985 (1) Rec CrR 600.

[11652] ● Resort to third degree methods by Police Officer.—Resort to third degree methods by police officers resulting in death of the person in police custody is an offence of a serious nature aggravated by the fact that it is committed by a person who is supposed to protect the citizens and not misuse his uniform and authority to brutally assault them while in his custody. Death in police custody must be seriously viewed for otherwise it will be taking a stride in the direction of police raj. It must be curbed with a heavy hand. There can be no room for leniency. Gouri Shankar Sharma v. State of U.P., AIR 1990 SC 709 : 1990 Supp SCC 656.

[11653] ● Death in Police custody—Difficult to secure evidence.—It is generally difficult in cases of deaths in police custody to secure evidence against the policemen responsible for resorting to third degree methods since they are incharge of police station records which they do not find difficult to manipulate. It is only in a few cases that some direct evidence is available. Gouri Shankar Sharma v. State of U.P., AIR 1990 SC 709 : 1990 Supp SCC 656.

[11654] ● Custodial death.—When once it is established that the deceased was taken into custody on September 8, 1986 second time then it is their responsibility to show as to how the deceased went out of their custody. There is not even a whisper from the side of the accused as to what happened to the deceased who was taken into custody by them. The evidence of these PWs. would show that on Sept. 9, 1986, they went to the CIA staff room early in the morning and they were not allowed to enter the office. Within half an hour they came to know that the deceased had died and his dead body was thrown under the bus. It is established beyond reasonable doubt that the deceased was taken into custody. The evidence of PWs-3, 4 and 5 also establishes that the deceased was beaten up by these accused in the Police staff room and the deceased also was found chained. Therefore, there is no question of the deceased going out of the Police Post or escaping by himself. The evidence of these witnesses, therefore, shows that these accused must have tried to create a story that the deceased met his death by the bus accident by throwing the dead body of the deceased under a running bus. The doctor also gave an opinion but he did not rule out the death being due to beating. Dalip Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 1993 SC 2119 : 1993 SCC (Cri) 1005 (1010, 1011) : 1993 CrLJ 2092 : 1993 CrLR (SC) 335 : JT 1993 (3) SC 682 : (1993) 2 UJ (SC) 2421.

[11655] ● Custodial death or police torture.—Tortures in police custody, which of late are on the increase receive encouragement by this type of unrealistic approach of the Courts because it reinforces the belief in the mind of the police that no harm would come to them, if an odd prisoner dies in the lock-up, because there would hardly be any evidence available to the prosecution to directly implicate them with the torture. The exaggerated adherence to and insistence upon the establishment of proof beyond every reasonable doubt, by the prosecution, ignoring the ground realities, the fact situation and the peculiar circumstances of a given case often results in miscarriage of justice and makes justice delivery system a suspect. In the ultimate analysis the society suffers and criminals get act encouraged. State of M.P. v. Shyamsunder Trivedi, (1995) 4 SCC 262 (725) : 1995 SCC (Cri) 715.

[11656] ● Police excesses and maltreatment of detainees—Court to adopt realistic rather than narrow technical approach.—Police excesses and the maltreatment of detainees/undertrial prisoners or suspects tarnishes the image of any civilised nation and encourages the men in "khaki" to consider themselves to be above the law and sometimes even to become law unto themselves. Unless stern measures are taken to check the malady, the foundations of the criminal justice delivery system would be shaken and the civilization itself would risk the consequence of heading towards perishing. The Courts must, therefore, deal with such cases in a realistic manner and with the sensitivity which they deserve otherwise the common man may lose faith in the judiciary itself, which will be a sad day. State of Madhya Pradesh v. Shyamsunder Trivedi, (1995) 4 SCC 262 : 1995 SCC (Cri) 715 (725).

[11657] ● Custodial crimes—Courts to have charge in their outlook.—The Courts are also required to have a change in their outlook and attitude, particularly in cases involving custodial crimes and they should exhibit more sensitivity and adopt a realistic rather than a narrow technical approach, while dealing with the cases of custodial crime so that as far as possible within their powers, the guilty should not escape so that the victim of the crime has the satisfaction that ultimately the Majesty of Law has prevailed. State of Madhya Pradesh v. Shyamsunder Trivedi, (1995) 4 SCC 262 : 1995 SCC (Cri) 715 (725).

[11658] ● Custodial death—One of worst crime.—Custodial death is perhaps one of the worst crimes in a civilised society governed by the Rule of Law. The rights inherent in Articles 21 and 22(1) of the Constitution require to be zealously and scrupulously protected. We cannot whisk away the problem of any form of torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment would fall within the inhibition of Article 21, whether it occurs during investigation, interrogation or otherwise. If the functionaries of the Government become law breakers it is bound to breed contempt for law and would encourage lawlessness and every man would have the tendency to become law unto himself thereby leading to anarchanism. The precious right guaranteed by Art. 21 cannot be denied to convicts undertrials detenue and other prisoners except according to the procedure established by Law. Ashok K. Johri v. State of H.P., AIR 1997 SC 610 : (1997) 1 SCC 416 : 1997 CrLJ 743 (SC).

[11659] ● Custodial death-cause of death—Shock and haemorrhage due to ante-mortem injuries.—In the present case, the report of the Medical Board to which the medical record and the post-mortem report were referred to is not produced by the respondents. Instead the expert medical evidence of police officers has been produced before us. They tell us that Rishipal died of jaundice and liver failure and that the post-mortem report which lists the cause of death as shock and haemorrhage due to ante-mortem injuries is rather misleading. They state that the bandages tied to Rishipal's wrists and ankles because he was throwing his legs and hands about while in semi-conscious condition caused the injuries referred to in the post-mortem report. The injuries on Rishipal's belly mentioned in the post-mortem report according to that expert opinion can also be caused by bursting of liver inside the body. There are desperate attempts to avoid responsibility for acts committed while Rishipal was in judicial custody. There can be no doubt that the respondents have not investigated the cause of death of Rishipal as they ought to have done or that, at any rate, they have not placed all relevant material before this Court. We do not appreciate the death of persons in judicial custody.

When such deaths occur, it is not only to the public at large that those holding custody are responsible; they are responsible also to the Courts under whose orders they hold such custody. It is appropriate, therefore, that the cause of Rishipal's death should be investigated by the Central Bureau of Investigation. CBI shall register a case and conduct an investigation into the circumstances of Rishipal's death. Ajab Singh v. State of U. P., AIR 2000 SC 3421 : (2000) 3 SCC 521 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 718 (720, 721) : 2000 CrLJ 1809 : 2000 CrLR (SC) 340.

[11660] ● Custodial death—Direction to pay compensation.—In the present case the State of Uttar Pradesh is responsible in public law for the death of Rishipal and must pay compensation to the petitioners for the same. D.K. Basu v. State of W.B. (1997) 1 SCC 416 : 1997 SCC (Cri) 912. It is appropriate in the circumstances of the case to order the State of Uttar Pradesh to pay to the petitioners compensation for the death of Rishipal in the sum of rupees five lakhs within three months. Ajab Singh v. State of U. P., AIR 2000 SC 3421 : (2000) 3 SCC 521 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 718 (720, 721) : 2000 CrLJ 1809 : 2000 CrLR (SC) 340.

[11661] ● Custodial death—Death during course of deceased being brought to police station and being put in lockup.—In the present case there was allegation that the deceased who was apprehended by the police and was in their custody died during the course of his being brought to the police station and being put up in the lock-up. People of the village were agitated on the death of deceased whilst in police custody and so the record was manipulated by the Police and false story cooked up to hush up the incident. The High Court found the testimony of all the three witnesses not reliable and conflicting with each other. The direction of the High Court regarding thorough examination of the record of the police station by holding a departmental enquiry so as to bring to book such of police personnel who may be found guilty of misconduct or negligence or derelictions of duty resulting into the death of deceased whilst he was in the custody of police is valid. The judgment of the High Court acquitting all the accused is upheld. State of U.P. v. Mundrika, (2001) 9 SCC 346 : 2001 CrLJ 742 : 2001 CrLR (SC) 92 : JT 2001(1) SC 120.

[11662] ● Sub-Inspector allegedly beat prisoner to death.—The appellant, a sub-inspector allegedly beat a prisoner to death. The contention that charge cannot go beyond Section 304 Part II, IPC in view of Exception 3 of Section 300 IPC is worthy to be considered. The Appellant deserves to be released on bail. Laxman Mahadeo Sariputra v. State of Maharashtra, 2001 (3) Crimes 183 : (2) (SC) (2001) 4 Supreme 483 (1).

[11663] ● Police atrocities/Custodial violence or deaths—Proof—Onus and standard of.—Rarely in cases of police torture or custodial death, direct ocular evidence is available of the complicity of the police personnel, who alone can only explain the circumstances in which a person in their custody had died. Bound as they are by the ties of brotherhood, it is not unknown that police personnel prefer to remain silent and more often than not even pervert the truth to save their colleagues—And the present case is an apt illustration—As to how one after the other police witnesses feigned ignorance about the whole matter. The exaggerated adherence to and insistence upon the establishment of proof beyond every reasonable doubt by the prosecution, at times even when the prosecuting agencies are themselves fixed in the dock, ignoring the ground realities, the fact situation and the peculiar circumstances of a given case, as in the present case, often results in miscarriage of justice and makes the justice-delivery system suspect and vulnerable. In the ultimate analysis society suffers and a criminal gets encouraged. Tortures in police custody, which of late are on the increase, receive encouragement by this type of an unrealistic approach at times of the Courts as well, because it reinforces the belief in the mind of the police that no harm would come to them if one prisoner dies in the lock-up because there would hardly be any evidence available to the prosecution to directly implicate them in the torture. The Courts must not lose sight of the fact that death in police custody is perhaps one of the worst kinds of crime in a civilised society governed by the rule of law and poses a serious threat to an orderly civilised society. Torture in custody flouts the basic rights of the citizens recognised by the Indian Constitution and is an affront to human dignity. Police excesses and the maltreatment of detainees/undertrial prisoners or suspects tarnishes the image of any civilised nation and encourages the men in "khaki" to consider themselves to be above the law and sometimes even to become a law unto themselves. Unless stern measures are taken to check the malady of the very fence eating the crop, the foundations of the criminal justice-delivery system would be shaken and civilisation itself would risk the consequence of heading towards total decay resulting in anarchy and authoritarianism reminiscent of barbarism. The Courts must, therefore, deal with such cases in a realistic manner and with the sensitivity which they deserve, otherwise the common man may tend to gradually lose faith in the efficacy of the system of the judiciary itself, which if it happens, will be a sad day, for anyone to reckon with. Munishi Singh Gautam v. State of M.P., AIR 2005 SC 402 : (2005) 9 SCC 631 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 1269 (1275) : 2005 CrLJ 320 : 2004 (4) Crimes 294.

[11664] ● Govt. and Legislature to implement recommendations made in 113th report of Law Commission for amendment of Evidence Act to raise rebuttable presumptions in respect of such offences against police officers concerned.—Disturbed by this situation the Law Commission in its 113th Report recommended amendments to the Evidence Act, 1872 so as to provide that in the prosecution of a police officer for an alleged offence of having caused bodily injuries to a person while in police custody, if there is evidence that the injury was caused during the period when the person was in the police custody, the Court may presume that the injury was caused by the police officer having the custody of that person during that period unless the police officer proves to the contrary. The onus to prove the contrary must be discharged by the police official concerned. Keeping in view the dehumanising aspect of the crime, the flagrant violation of the fundamental rights of the victim of the crime and the growing rise in crimes of this type, where only a few come to light and others do not, the Government and the legislature must give serious thought to the recommendation of the Law Commission and bring about appropriate changes in the law not only to curb the custodial crime but also to see that the custodial crime does not go unpunished.

The Courts are also required to have a change in their outlook, approach, appreciation and attitude, particularly in cases involving custodial crimes and they should exhibit more sensitivity and adopt a realistic rather than a narrow technical approach, while dealing with the cases of custodial crime so that as far as possible within their powers, the truth is found and the guilty should not escape so that the victim of the crime has the satisfaction, and that ultimately the majesty of law has prevailed.

But at the same time there seems to be a disturbing trend of increase in cases where false accusations of custodial torture are made, trying to take advantage of the serious concern shown and the stern attitude reflected by the Courts while dealing with custodial violence. It needs to be carefully examined whether the allegations of custodial violence are genuine or are sham attempts to gain undeserved benefit masquerading as victims of custodial violence. The case in hand is a unique case in the sense that the complainant filed a complaint alleging custodial torture while the accused alleged false implication because of oblique motives.

It is the duty of the police, when a crime is reported, to collect evidence to be placed during trial to arrive at the truth. That certainly would not include torturing a person, be he an accused or a witness to extract information. The duty should be done within the four corners of law. Law-enforcers cannot take law into their hands in the name of collecting evidence. Munshi Singh Gautam v. State of M.P., AIR 2005 SC 402 : (2005) 9 SCC 631 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 1269 (1275, 1276) : 2005 CrLJ 320 : 2004 (4) Crimes 294.

[11665] ● Custodial torture—No incontrovertible evidence.—In the instant case there was no clear or in-controvertible evidence about custodial torture nor any medical report of any injury or disability. The grievance of the petitioner and his relatives was against different officers in different police stations at different points of time. More importantly, several of the allegations are proved to be exaggerated and false. It was held to be not fit case for award of compensation. Sube Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 2006 SC 1117 : (2006) 2 SCC 178 : 2006 CrLJ 1242 (1258).

[11666] ● Remedial and preventive measures to prevent custodial violence.—Custodial violence requires to be tackled from two ends, that is, by taking measures that are remedial and preventive. Award of compensation is one of the remedial measures after the event. Effort should be made to remove the very causes, which lead to custodial violence, so as to prevent such occurrences. Following steps, if taken, many prove to be effective preventive measures:

(a) Police training should be re-oriented, to bring in a change in the mindset and attitude of the Police personnel in regard to investigations, so that they will recognize and respect human rights, and adopt thorough and scientific investigation methods.

(b) The functioning of lower level Police Officers should be continuously monitored and supervised by their superiors to prevent custodial violence and adherence to lawful standard methods of investigation.

(c) Compliance with the eleven requirements enumerated in D.K. Basu (1997 AIR SCW 233) should be ensured in all cases of arrest and detention.

(d) Simple and fool-proof procedures should be introduced for prompt registration of first information reports relating to all crimes.

(e) Computerization, video-recording, and modern methods of records maintenance should be introduced to avoid manipulations, insertions, substitutions and antedating in regard to FIRs, Mahazars, inquest proceedings, Post-mortem Reports and Statements of witnesses etc. and to bring in transparency in action.

(f) An independent investigating agency (preferably the respective Human Rights Commissioners or CBI) may be entrusted with adequate power, to investigate complaints of custodial violence against Police personnel and take stern and speedy action followed by prosecution, wherever necessary. The endeavour should be to achieve a balanced level of functioning, where police respect human rights, adhere to law, and take confidence building measures (CBMs), and at the same time, firmly deal with organized crime, terrorism, white-collared crime, deteriorating law and order situation etc. Sube Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 2006 SC 1117 : (2006) 2 SCC 178 : 2006 CrLJ 1242 (1257, 1258).

[11667] ● Every arrest and detention does not lead to custodial crime.—Cases where violation of Article 21 involving custodial death or torture is established or is incontrovertible stand on a different footing when compared to cases where such violation is doubtful or not established. Where there is no independent evidence of custodial torture and where there is neither medical evidence about any injury or disability, resulting from custodial torture, nor any mark/scar, it may not be prudent to accept claims of human right violation, by persons having criminal records in a routine manner for awarding compensation. That may open the floodgates for false claims, either to mulct money from the State or as to prevent or thwart further investigation. Courts should, therefore, while jealously protecting the fundamental rights of those who are illegally detailed or subjected to custodial violence, should also stand guard against false, motivated and frivolous claims in the interests of the society and to enable Police to discharge their duties fearlessly and effectively. While custodial torture is not infrequent, it should be borne in mind that every arrest and detention does not lead to custodial torture.

In cases where custodial death or custodial torture or other violation of the rights guaranteed under Article 21 is established, Courts may award compensation in a proceeding under Article 32 or 226. However, before awarding compensation, the Court will have to pose to itself the following questions : (a) whether the violation of Article 21 is patent and incontrovertible, (b) whether the violation is gross and of a magnitude to shock the conscience of the Court, (c) whether the custodial torture alleged has resulted in death or whether custodial torture is supported by medical report or visible marks or scars or disability. Where there is no evidence of custodial torture of a person except his own statement, and where such allegation is not supported by any medical report or other corroboration evidence, or where there are false or exaggerated fully or in part, Courts may not award compensation as a public law remedy under Article 32 or 226, but relegate the aggrieved party to the traditional remedies by way of appropriate civil/criminal action.

We should not, however, be understood as holding that harassment and custodial violence is not serious or worthy of consideration, where there is no medical report or visible marks or independent evidence. We are conscious of the fact that harassment or custodial violence cannot always be supported by a medical report or independent evidence or proved by marks of scars. Every illegal detention irrespective of its duration, and every custodial violence, irrespective of its degree or magnitude, is outright condemnable and per se actionable. Remedy for such violation is available in civil law and criminal law. The public law remedy is additionally available where the conditions mentioned in the earlier para are satisfied. Sube Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 2006 SC 1117 : (2006) 3 SCC 178 : 2006 CrLJ 1242 (1256).

[11668] ● Cause of death unknown—No external/internal injury found—Accused acquitted of charge under Section 300, IPC.—It was alleged that the accused SHO caused the death of the deceased by kicking on his testicles and slapping him. In post-mortem examination cause of death was unknown. No external/internal injury was found. Evidence of PW-6 was found reliable. Acquittal of the charge under Section 302, IPC was held proper. State of Madhya Pradesh v. Sawa Singh, AIR 2007 SC 2263 : (2007) 11 SCC 295 : (2008) 1 SCC (Cri) 141.

[11669] ● Murder—Death in police custody—Police officer beating accused to death.—In this case a police constable (DW-1) was stabbed by the deceased. The police thereafter launched a man hunt to trace culprits but were unable to do so and enraged by the turn of events the police officers picked up the family members and neighbours of the deceased and confined them in the police station where they were beaten and humiliated. It was a case of prosecution that two persons were produced in the police station and were administered a very severe beating by the accused and by some of the others present at his instance, on account of severe beating. Ram Kumar and Mahender sustained serious injuries and were taken to the hospital where Mahender died the next day. Conviction of accused under Section 304, Part II, IPC was held proper, but the sentence was reduced from 8 years to five years. Fine of Rs. 2 lacs was increased to 5 lacs. R.P. Tyagi v. State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi), 2010 CrLJ 609 (611) : (2009) 15 SCR 1147.

[11670] ● Custodial death and tortures on increase—Condemnable.—There is no manner of doubt that the incidents of custodial torture and deaths are most heinous crimes committed by persons, who claim to be the protectors of the citizens. What is distressing to note is that the incidents of torture and death in the police custody take place under the shield of uniform and authority in the four walls of a police station or in the lock up, where the victims are totally helpless. K.H. Shekarappa v. State of Karnataka, 2010 (3) Scale 681 : JT 2010 (3) SC 660.

CUSTODIAL DEATH

CUSTODIAL INTERROGATION

[11671] ● Custodial interrogation.—Custodial interrogation exposes the suspect to the risk of abuse of his person or dignity as well as distortion or manipulation of his self-incrimination in the crime. No one should be subjected to physical violence of the person as well as to torture. Infringement thereof undermines the people's faith in the efficacy of criminal justice system. Interrogation in Police lock-up are often done under conditions of pressure and tension and the suspect could be exposed to great strain even if he is an innocent, while the culprit in custody to hide or suppress may be doubly susceptible to confusion and manipulation. A delicate balance has, therefore, to be maintained to protect the innocent from conviction and the need of the society to see the offender punished. Equally, every one has right against self-incrimination and a right to be silent under Art. 20(3) which implies his freedom from Police or anybody else. But when the Police interrogates a suspect, they abuse their authority having unbridled opportunity to exploit this moral position and authority inducing the captive to confess against his better judgment. The very fact that the person in authority puts the questions and exerts pressure on the captive to comply (sic). Silence on the part of the frightened captive seems to his ears to call for vengeance and induces a belief that confession holds out a chance to avoid torture or to get bail or a promise of lesser punishment. The resourceful investigator adopts all successful tactics to elicit confession. Kartar Singh v. State of Punjab, (1994) 3 SCC 569 : 1994 SCC (Cri) 899 (1041, 1042) : 1994 CrLJ 3139.

CUSTODIAL LEGIS

[11672] ● Custodial legis.—A production before the Court does not mean physical custody or possession by the Court but includes even control exercised by the Court by passing an order regarding the custody of the articles. In the instant case when once the Magistrate, after having been informed that the articles were produced before the Court, directed the Sub-Inspector to keep them with him in safe custody, to get them verified and valued by a goldsmith, the articles were undoubtedly produced before the Court and became custodia legis. Basava Kom Dyamogouda Patil v. State of Mysore, AIR 1977 (SC) 1749 : (1977) 4 SCC 358 : 1977 SCC (Cri) 598 : 1977 CrLJ 1141 : 1977 CrLR (SC) 257 : 1977 All CrR 337.

[11673] ● Property lost or destroyed during pendency of trial.—Where the property is stolen, lost or destroyed and there is no prima facie defence made out that the State or its officers had taken due care and caution to protect the property, the Magistrate may, in an appropriate case, where the ends of justice so require, order payment of the value of the property. We do not agree with the view of the High Court that once the articles are not available with the Court, the Court has no power to do anything in the matter and is utterly helpless. Basava Kom Dyamogouda Patil v. State of Mysore, AIR 1977 (SC) 1749 : (1977) 4 SCC 358 : 1977 SCC (Cri) 598 : 1977 CrLJ 1141 : 1977 CrLR (SC) 257 : 1977 All CrR 337.

[11674] ● Section 195(1)(b)(ii)—Applicability.—Section 195(1)(b)(ii), CrPC would be attracted only when the offences enumerated in the said provision have been committed with respect to a document after it has been produced or given in evidence in a proceeding in any Court i.e. during the time when the document was in custodia legis. Iqbal Singh Marwah v. Meenakshi Marwah, AIR 2005 SC 2119 : (2005) 4 SCC 370 : 2005 CrLJ 2161 (2173) : 2005 (2) Crimes 11. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Sachida Nand Singh v. State of Bihar, AIR 1998 SC 121 : (1996) 3 SCC 533 : 1998 CrLJ 1565. (2) Surjit Singh v. Balbir Singh, AIR 1996 SC 1592 : (1996) 3 SCC 533 : 1996 CrLJ 2304.

CUSTODIAL RAPE
§ (See also "RAPE")

[11675] ● Custodial rape.—The prosecutrix was married to PW-4 and had been residing at Chandigarh wherefrom the couple had been fetched to Rajgarh in Himachal Pradesh by PW-1. On the fateful night, the prosecutrix and her husband were sleeping in the house of PW-4 where around midnight they were rudely awakened by the two appellants, one of whom was an Investigating Head Constable and the other just a Constable posted at Rajgarh Police Station. On the ostensible but false plea that a wireless message had been received from Chandigarh indicating the prosecutrix to be an abducted girl, she and PW-1 were forcibly taken by the appellants to the Police Station. There they were kept in separate rooms. In one of the rooms, one appellant, first brutally hit her, then molested her, and finally raped her. The prosecutrix is not only a reliable witness but her word directed against the appellants bears a ring of truth for no explanation whatsoever as to why the appellants have been accused of the offence has been rendered. Her word is corroborated by the evidence of not only her husband PW-4 but her brother-in-law PW-1. Besides this evidence we have the evidence of local people who had seen the prosecutrix being led to the Police Station and that PW-6 who was approached by PW-1 to seek help because of the illegal confinement of the prosecutrix and her husband. Ram Kumar v. State of Himachal Pradesh, AIR 1995 SC 1965 (1965, 1966) : 1995 Supp 4 SCC 67 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 100 : 1995 CrLJ 3621.

[11676] ● Custodial rape by co-accused forcibly.—The shrieks of the prosecutrix were heard in the room where her husband PW-4 was confined. Guarding him kept sitting Ram Kumar appellant. He did not react to it. His conduct right from the act of his forcibly taking separately the prosecutrix by arm to the Police Station, her separate confinement in a room, Nain Singh misusing his position and having forcibly raped her and Ram Kumar-appellant not doing anything about it while keeping a watch over the husband, reflected a mind of consistency in aiding and abetting the commission of crime of rape.

The conduct and consistency of Ram Singh were towards facilitating that crime as otherwise he would have reacted on the hearing of the shrieks of the hapless prosecutrix who was a young girl aged about 19 years at that time. His turning deaf ears to her cries was the finale on his conduct and he must be assumed to have had this end in mind when he dragged the prosecutrix forcibly to the Police Station. Having to this view, we unhesitatingly uphold the judgment and order of the High Court. Ram Kumar v. State of Himachal Pradesh, AIR 1995 SC 1965 (1965, 1966) : 1995 Supp (4) SCC 67 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 100 : 1995 CrLJ 3621.

[11677] ● Violation of fundamental rights—Contention that matter should not have been considered in petition under Article 226, Constitution not accepted.—The contention that Smt. Hanuffa Khatton (victim of gang rape in Railways Yatri Niwas should have approached the Civil Court for damages and the matter should not have been considered in a petition under Article 226 of the Constitution, cannot be accepted. Where public functionaries are involved and the matter relates to the violation of fundamental rights or the enforcement of public duties, the remedy would still be available under the Public Law notwithstanding that a suit could be filed for damages under Private Law.

It is not a mere matter of violation of an ordinary right of a person but the violation of fundamental rights which is involved. Smt. Hanuffa Khatoon was a victim of rape. "Rape" is an offence which is violative of the fundamental right of a person guaranteed under Article 21 of the Constitution. Chairman Railway Board v. Chandrima Das, AIR 2000 SC 988 : (2000) 2 SCC 465 : 2000 CrLJ 1473.

CUSTODY

[11678] ● Custody.—In a writ of habeas corpus for recovery of illegitimate female infant of an unmarried Sunni Muslim mother it may be noted that under the Mohammedan Law the mother of an illegitimate female infant is entitled to its custody and the refusal to restore such a child to the custody of its mother would result in an illegal detention of the child within the meaning of Section 491, CrPC.

The dispute as to the paternity of the child is irrelevant for the purpose of the application and the Supreme Court will interfere with the discretionary powers of the High Court if the discretion was not judicially exercised. In issuing writ of habeas corpus the Courts have power in the case of an infant to direct its custody to be placed with certain person. Gohar Begum v. Suggar, AIR 1960 SC 93 : 1960 CrLJ 164 : (1960) 1 SCR 597.

[11679] ● "Custody"—Meaning of.—"Custody" in the context of Section 439 is physical control or at least physical presence of the accused in Court coupled with submission to the jurisdiction and orders of the Court. He can be in custody not merely when the police arrests him, produces him before a Magistrate and gets a remand to judicial or other custody. He can be stated to be in judicial custody when he surrenders before the Court and submits to its directions. Niranjan Singh v. Prabhakar, AIR 1980 SC 785 : (1980) 2 SCC 559 : 1980 SCC (Cri) 508 : 1980 CrLR (SC) 265 : 1980 2 SCJ 133 : 1980 SCCrR 384 : 1980 CrAppR (SC) 140 : 1980 UJ (SC) 428 : ILR (1980) HP 51 (SC) : 1980 MLJ (Cri) 573.

[11680] ● Term "Custody"—Meaning of.—While interpreting the expression "in custody" within the meaning of S. 439, Cr. P. Code, KRISHNA IYER, J. in Narain Singh v. Prabhakar Rajaram Kharote, AIR 1980 SC 785 : (1980) 2 SCC 559 observed that "He can be in custody not merely when the Police arrests him, produces him before a Magistrate and gets a remand to judicial or other custody. He can be stated to be in judicial custody when he surrenders before the Court and submits to its directions" Narain Singh v. Prabhakar Rajaram Kharote, AIR 1980 SC 785 : (1980) 2 SCC 559 : 1980 CrLJ 426.

[11681] ● Custody of minor children—Paramount consideration—Welfare of child.—Guar- dian and Wards Act, 1890.—It is well settled that in matters concerning the custody of minor children, the paramount consideration is the welfare of the minor and not the legal right of this or that particular party. The High Court, without adverting to this aspect of the matter, has dismissed the petition on the narrow ground that the custody of child with the respondent cannot be said to be illegal. Veena Kapoor v. Varinder Kumar Kapoor, AIR 1982 SC 792 : (1981) 3 SCC 92 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 650 (651) : 1982 CrLJ 580 : 1982 CrLR (SC) 11(2).

[11682] ● Custody of minor—Relevant consideration welfare of child.—Guardian and Wards Act, 1890, Ss. 7, 17.—When the atmosphere in a house, vitiated and rendered surcharged with tension as a result of bitter squabbles between husband and wife, causes misery and unhappiness to a child, who has to live in constant psychological strain in such a broken home in view of the bitter relationship between her parents for each of whom she has great affection, the healthy and normal growth of the child is bound to be seriously affected. In the interest and for the welfare of the child in such a case, the child is necessarily to be removed from such unhealthy environment of a broken home surcharged with tension. In such a case the proper and best way of serving the interest and welfare of the child will be to remove the child from such atmosphere of acrimony and tension and to put the child in a place where the embittered relationship between her parents does not easily and constantly affect her tender mind.

The facts and circumstances of the present case and bearing in mind the paramount consideration of the welfare of the child we are of the opinion that the child's interest and welfare shall be best served by keeping her in a Boarding School away from the unhealthy atmosphere of strain and tension which she had been undergoing at home, the question of custody has to be judged in this background. The mother is very anxious that the child should continue to remain in Boarding School. The girl now aged about 11 years, is reaching an age when she will need the guidance of her mother. We are, therefore, of the opinion that the custody of the girl should be given to the mother. Thrity Hoshie Dolikuka v. Hoshiam Shavaksha Dolikuka, AIR 1982 SC 1276 (1294, 1295) : (1982) 2 SCC 544 : 1982 SCC (Cri) 505 : (1983) 1 SCR 49.

[11683] ● Petitioners enlarged on bail but subsequently arrested.—The petitioners were enlarged on bail in pursuance of the order passed by this Court on March 2, 1981, but they were subsequently arrested for some other offences alleged to have been committed by them para to March 2, 1981. If after the order of bail passed by us, the authorities of the State considered it fit to arrest any of the petitioners for any other offences, it was their bounden duty to apprise this Court before taking these persons in custody, especially when no disclosure was made to us when we passed the order of bail that any case or cases were under investigation against any of the petitioners. We regret that this elementary courtesy to this Court was not shown. Uday Chand v. Sheikh Mohd. Abdullah, Chief Minister J. & K., (1983) 2 SCC 417 : 1983 SCC (Cri) 529 (530) : 1983 CrLR (SC) 573.

[11684] ● Custody and guardianship of child.—(Guardian and Wards Act, 1890, Ss. 7, 17).— Whenever a question arises before a Court pertaining to the custody of a minor child, the matter is to be decided not on considerations of the legal rights of parties but on the sole and predominant criterion of what would best serve the interest and welfare of the minor. We have twice interviewed the child in our chamber. We found him to be too tender in age and totally immature to be able to form any independent opinion of his own as to which parent he should stay with. The child is an American citizen. Excepting for the last few months that have elapsed since his being brought to India by the process of illegal abduction by the father, he has spent the rest of his life in the United States of America and he was doing well in the school there. In our considered opinion it will be in the best interests and welfare of child that he should go back to the United States of America and continue his education there under the custody and guardianship of the mother to whom such custody and guardianship have been entrusted by a competent Court in that country. We are also satisfied that the petitioner who is the mother is full of genuine love and affection for the child and she can be safely trusted to look after him, educate him and attend in every possible way to his proper upbringing. The child has not taken root in this country and he is still accustomed and acclimatized to the conditions and environments obtaining in the place of his origin in the United States of America. The child's presence in India is the result of an illegal act of abduction and the father who is guilty of the said act cannot claim any advantage by stating that he has already put the child in some school in Pune. The conduct of the father has not been such as to inspire confidence in us that he is a fit and suitable person to be entrusted with the custody and guardianship of the child for the present. Elizabeth Dinshaw v.

Arvand M. Dinshaw, AIR 1987 SC 3 (17, 18) : (1987)1 SCC 42 : 1987 SCC (Cri) 13 : 1987 CrLR (SC) 117 : JT 1986 SC 795 : (1987) 1 SCR 175 : 1987 (1) Crimes 71.

[11685] ● Period during which detenu on parole not find during which held in custody.—The period during which the detenu is on parole cannot be said to be a period during which he has been held in custody pursuant to the order of his detention, for in such a case he was not in actual custody. The order of detention prescribes the place where the detenu is to be detained. Parole brings him out of confinement from that place. Poonam Lata v. M.L. Wadhawan, AIR 1987 SC 1383 : (1987) 3 SCC 347 : 1987 SCC (Cri) 506 (516) : 1987 CrLJ 1130 : 1987 CrLR (SC) 410.

[11686] ● Murder—Appreciation of evidence—Probability of prosecution version.—Where according to prosecution the four deceased and two witnesses who were inside a house the roof of which was set on fire by the accused came out of the house one by one and had run in different directions and were chased by different sets of accused and other two stayed in the house, the prosecution version could not be said to be an artificial or improbable version when four dead bodies were found lying at different places. The deceased who were inside the house would have felt afraid to come out in a body lest they became easy targets for attack by the accused. They may have thought that they would have better chances of escape if they came out of the house one by one instead of all of them coming out together. For the same reason they should also have run in different directions. Two witnesses who stayed inside might have thought that since the fire had not spread beyond the chapper portion, they could safely remain inside the house rather then go out and face an attack. The fact that four dead bodies were found lying at different places show that the house was set to fire causing death to four and two escaping witnesses were chased and attacked. The accused persons were convicted for murder. Pattad Amerappa v. State of Karnataka, AIR 1989 SC 2004 : 1989 Supp (2) SCC 389 : 1989 CrLJ 2167.

[11687] ● Subsisting custody of detenu not invalidate order of detention.—Subsisting custody of the detenu by itself does not invalidate an order of his preventive detention and the decision must depend on the facts of the particular case, preventive detention being necessary to prevent the detenue from acting in any manner prejudicial to the security of the state or to the maintenance of public order etc. Ordinarily it is not needed when the detenue is already in jail the detaining authority must show its awareness to the fact of subsisting custody of the detenue and the factor take into account while making the order, but even so, if the detaining authority is reasonably satisfied on cogent material that there is likelihood of his release and in view of his antecedent activities which are proximate in point of time he must be detained in order to prevent him from indulging in such prejudicial activities, the detention order can be validly made even in anticipation to operate on his release. Meera Rani v. Government of Tamil Nadu, AIR 1989 SC 2027 : (1989) 4 SCC 418 : 1989 SCC (Cri) 732 (749) : 1989 CrLJ 2190 : 1989 CrLR (SC) 697. To the same effect : (1) Rameshwar Shaw v. Distt. Magistrate, Burdwan, AIR 1964 SC 334 : 1964 (1) CrLJ 257 : (1964) 4 SCR 921.

[11688] ● Order of detention against person in custody—Validity of.—An order of detention can be validly passed against a person in custody and for that purpose it is necessary that the grounds of detention must show that (i) the detaining authority was aware of the fact that the detenue is already in detention. and (ii) there were compelling reasons justifying such detention despite the fact that the detenue is already in detention. The expression "Compelling reasons" in the context of making an order for detention of a person already in custody implies that there must be cogent materials before the detaining authority on the basis of which it may be satisfied that (a) the detenue is likely to be released from custody in the near future and (b) taking into account the nature of the antecedent activities of the detenue it is likely that after his release from custody he would indulge in prejudicial activities and it is necessary to detain him in order to prevent him from engaging in such activities. Dharmendra Sugaanchand Chelawat v. Union of India, AIR 1990 SC 1196 : (1990) 1 SCC 746 : 1990 CrLJ 1232.

[11689] ● Detenu already in jail—Detention order—Validity.—No decision of this Court has gone to the extent of holding that no order of detention can validly be passed against a person in custody under any circumstances. Therefore the facts and circumstances of each case have to be taken into consideration in the context of considering the order of detention passed in the case of a detenue who is already in jail. Sanjay Kumar Agarwal v. Union of India, AIR 1990 SC 1202 (1243) : (1990) 3 SCC 309 : 1990 CrLJ 1238.

[11690] ● Detenu in custody at time of passing order of detention.—Where the detenu was in custody at the time of passing an order of detention what is strictly required is whether the detaining authority was aware of the fact that the detenu was in custody and if so was there any material to show that there were compelling reasons to order detention in spite of his being in custody. These aspects assume importance because of the fact that a person who is already in custody is disabled from indulging in any prejudicial activities and as such the detention order may not normally be necessary. Therefore, the law requires that these two tests have to be satisfied in the case of such detention of a person in custody. Abdul Sathar Ibrahim Manik v. Union of India, AIR 1991 SC 2261 : (1992) 1 SCC 1 : 1991 CrLJ 3291 (3299). TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Kamarunnissa v. Union of India, AIR 1991 SC 1640 : (1991) 1 SCC 128 : 1991 CrLJ 2058.

[11691] ● No detention in Police Custody after expiry of period of first fifteen days.—There cannot be any detention in the Police custody after the expiry of first fifteen days even in a case where some more offences either serious or otherwise committed by him in the same transaction come to light at a later stage. But this bar does not apply if the same arrested accused is involved in a different case arising out of a different transaction. Even if he is in judicial custody in connection with the investigation of the earlier case he can formally be arrested regarding his involvement in the different case and associate him with the investigation of that other case and the Magistrate can act as provided under S. 167(2), proviso, and can remand him to such custody as mentioned therein during the first period of fifteen days and thereafter in accordance with the proviso. If the investigation is not complete within the period of ninety days or sixty days then the accused has to be released on bail as provided under the proviso to S. 167(2). The period of ninety days or sixty days has to be computed from the date of detention as per the orders of the Magistrate and not from the date of arrest by the Police. Consequently the first period of fifteen days mentioned in S. 167(2) has to be computed from the date of such detention and after the expiry of the period of first fifteen days It should be only judicial custody. Central Bureau of Investigation, Special Investigation Cell-1 v. Anupam J. Kulkarni, AIR 1992 SC 1768 : (1992) 3 SCC 141 : 1992 SCC (Cri) 554 (571) : 1992 CrLJ 2768.

[11692] ● Arrest and custody—Powers under CrPC.—CrPC gives power of arrest not only to a Police Officer and a Magistrate but also under certain circumstances or given situations to private persons. Further, when an accused person appears before a Magistrate or surrenders voluntarily, the Magistrate is empowered to take that accused person into custody and deal with him according to law. Needless to emphasize that the arrest of a person is a condition precedent for taking him into judicial custody thereof. To put it differently, the taking of the person into judicial custody is followed after the arrest of the person concerned by the Magistrate on appearance or surrender. In every arrest, there is custody but no vice versa and that both the words "custody" and "arrest" are not synonymous terms. Though "custody" may amount to an arrest in certain circumstances but not under all circumstances. If these two terms are interpreted as synonymous, it is nothing but an ultra legalist interpretation which if under all circumstances accepted and adopted, would lead to a startling anomaly resulting in serious consequences. Directorate of Enforcement v. Deepak Mahajan, AIR 1994 SC 1775 : (1994) 3 SCC 440 : 1994 SCC (Cri) 785 : 1994 CrLJ 2269.

[11693] ● Change of custody—Validity.—That a person held in judicial custody could, if circumstances justify, be transferred to Police custody or vice versa within a period of 15 days referred to in S. 167(2) of the CrPC, 1973 — which by virtue of S. 20 of the Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, 1987 is to be read as 60 days in this case—cannot be disputed. There must, of course, be sufficient grounds for such a change of custody. In the present case, having regard to the nature of offence and the stage of the investigations it cannot be said that grounds for such custody do not exist. Kosanapur Ramreddy v. State of A.P., AIR 1994 SC 1447 (1447) : 1994 CrLJ 2121.

[11694] ● Custody of children—Paramount consideration welfare of children.—In view of the facts and circumstances of the case the divorce decree passed by the American Court though a relevant factor, cannot override the consideration of welfare of the minor children. In U.S.A. the husband (respondent) is staying alongwith his mother aged about 80 years. There is no one else in the family. The respondent appears to be in the habit of taking excessive alcohol. Though it is true that both the children have the American citizenship and there is a possibility that in U.S.A. they may be able to get better education, it is doubtful if the respondent will be in a position to take proper care of the children when they are so young. Out of them one is a female child. She is aged about 5 years. Ordinarily, a female child should be allowed to remain with the mother so that she can be properly looked after. It is also not desirable that two children are separated from each other. If a female child has to stay with the mother it will be in the interest of both the children that they both stay with the mother. Here in India also proper care of the children is taken and they are at present studying in good schools. We have found that appellant was not found wanting in taking proper care of the children. Both the children have a desire to stay with the mother. At the same time, it must be said that the son, who is elder than daughter has good feelings for his father also. Considering all the aspects relating to the welfare of the children we are of the opinion that in spite of the order passed by the Court in U.S.A. It was not proper for the High Court to have allowed the habeas corpus writ petition and directed the appellant to hand over custody of the children to the respondent and permit him to take them away to U.S.A. what would be in the interest of the children requires a full and through inquiry and, therefore, the High Court should have directed the respondent to initiate appropriate proceedings in which such as inquiry can be held. Still there is some possibility of mother returning to U.S.A. in the interest of children. Therefore, we do not desire to say anything more regarding entitlement of the custody of the children. Sarita Sharma v. Sushil Sharma, AIR 2000 SC 1019 : (2000) 3 SCC 14 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 568 (574, 575) : 2000 CrLJ 1459 : 2000 CrLR (SC) 260.

[11695] ● Detention of accused in police custody—Power of Magistrate.—From the relevant part of Section 167(2), CrPC and Section 386, IPC, it is apparent that pending investigation relating to an offence punishable with imprisonment for a term "not less than 10 years", the Magistrate is empowered to authorize the detention of the accused in custody for not more than 90 days. For rest of the offences, period prescribed is 60 days. Hence, in case where offence is punishable with imprisonment for 10 years or more, accused could be detained up to a period of 90 days. In this context, the expression "not less than" would mean imprisonment should be 10 years or more and would cover only those offences for which punishment could be imprisonment for a clear period of 10 years or more. Under Section 386, punishment provided is imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to 10 years and also fine. That means, imprisonment can be for a clear period of 10 years or less. Hence, it could not be said that minimum sentence would be 10 years or more. Further, in context also if we consider Clause (i) of proviso (a) to Section 167(2), it would be applicable in case where investigation relates to an offence punishable (1) with death; (2) imprisonment for life; and (3) imprisonment for a term of not less than ten years. It would not cover the offence for which punishment could be imprisonment for less than 10 years. Under Section 386 of the IPC imprisonment can vary from minimum to maximum of 10 years and it cannot be said that imprisonment prescribed is not less than 10 years. Rajeev Chaudhary v. State (NCT) of Delhi, AIR 2001 SC 2369 : (2001) 5 SCC 34 : 2001 SCC (Cri) 819.

[11696] ● Habeas corpus petition—Seeking transfer of custody of minor children.—From the principle laid down in cases decided by this Court it is clear that in an application seeking a writ of habeas corpus for custody of minor children, the principal consideration for the Court is to ascertain, whether the custody of the children can be said to be unlawful or illegal and whether the welfare of the children requires that present custody should be changed and the children should be left in care and custody of somebody else. The principle is well settled that in a matter of custody of a child, the welfare of the child is of paramount consideration of the Court. The High Court has not considered whether the custody of the children with their father can, in the facts and circumstances, be said to be unlawful. The Court has also not adverted to the question whether for the welfare of the children they should be taken out of the custody of their father and left in the care of their mother. However, it is not necessary for us to consider this question in view of the fair concession made by Shri M.N. Rao that the appellant has no objection if the children remain in the custody of the mother with the right of the father to visit them as noted in the judgment of the High Court till the family Court disposes of the petition filed by the appellant for custody of his children. Syed Saleemuddin v. Rukhsana, AIR 2001 SC 2172 : (2001) 5 SCC 247 : 2001 SCC (Cri) 841 (845, 846).

[11697] ● Expression "Custody"—Meaning of.—Since the expression "custody", though used in various provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code, including Section 439, has not been defined in the Code, it has to be understood in the setting in which it is used and the provisions contained in Section 437 which relate to jurisdiction of the Magistrate to release an accused on bail under certain circumstances which can be characterized as "in custody" in a generic sense. The expression "custody" as used in Section 439, must be taken to be a compendious expression referring to the events on the happening of which the Magistrate can entertain a bail petition of an accused. Section 437, CrPC envisages, inter alia, that the Magistrate may release an accused on bail, if such accused appears before the Magistrate. There cannot be any doubt that such appearance before the Magistrate must be physical appearance and the consequential surrender to the jurisdiction of the Court of the Magistrate. Nirmal Jeet Kaur v. State of M.P., (2004) 7 SCC 558 : 2004 SCC (Cri) 1989 (1994-1995) : (2004) 3 Crimes 331 : JT 2004 (7) SC 161.

[11698] ● "Custody" under Control of Court or physical hold of officer with coercive power.—He who is under the control of the Court or is in the physical hold of an officer with coercive power is in custody for the purpose of Section 439. The word is of elastic semantics but its core meaning is that the law has taken control of the person. The equivocatory quibblings and hide-and-seek niceties sometimes heard in Court that the police have taken a man into informal custody but not arrested him, have detained him for interrogation but not taken him into formal custody and other like terminological dubieties are unfair evasions of the straightforwardness of the law.

Since the expression "custody" though used in various provisions of the Code, including Section 439, has not been defined in the Code, it has to be understood in the setting in which it is used and the provisions contained in Section 437 which relate to jurisdiction of the Magistrate to release an accused on bail under certain circumstances which can be characterised as "in custody" in a generic sense. The expression "custody" as used in Section 439, must be taken to be a compendious expression referring to the events on the happening of which the Magistrate can entertain a bail petition of an accused. Section 437 envisages, inter alia, that the Magistrate may release an accused on bail, if such accused appears before the Magistrate. There cannot be any doubt that such appearance before the Magistrate must be physical appearance and the consequential surrender to the jurisdiction of the Court of the Magistrate. Unless the applicant is in custody, his making an application only under Section 439 of the Code will not confer jurisdiction on the Court to which the application is made. The view regarding extension of time to "move" the higher Court as culled out from the decision in K.L. Verma Case, shall have to be treated as having been rendered per incuriam, as no reference was made to the prescription in Section 439 requiring the accused to be in custody. Where in a case the decision has been rendered without reference to statutory basis, the same cannot have any precedent value and shall have to be treated as having been rendered per in curium. Sunita Devi v. State of Bihar, AIR 2005 SC 498 : (2005) 1 SCC 608 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 435 (440-41).

[11699] ● Writ of habeas corpus for custody of minor child.—It is well settled that in an application seeking a writ of habeas corpus for custody of minor child the principal consideration for the Court is to ascertain whether the custody of the child can be said to be lawful or illegal and whether the welfare of the child requires that the present custody should be changed and the child should be left in the care and custody of someone else. It is equally well settled that in case of dispute between the mother and father regarding the custody of their child, the paramount consideration is welfare of the child and not the legal right of either of the parties.

It is important to note that the appellant is in the profession of law being an Advocate-on-Record in the Supreme Court. A lawyer's profession is very exacting and busy profession and requires lot of time. The appellant has submitted that his mother will come and stay with him, who will look after the child. It is admitted that currently Smt. Aruna Gupta is living with her parents. Her father Shri Ram Gopal Agarwala did his Doctorate in Econometrics from Manchester University, U.K. in the year 1966 and joined the World Bank in 1971 where he held very senior positions. He is, therefore, a well-educated and financially sound person who can look after the needs of his daughter and also the granddaughter. The mother of Smt. Aruna Gupta, namely, Smt. Bimala Agarwala, aged about 60 years, is also there to look after the child if an occasion arises. The learned Judges of the High Court before whom Smt. Aruna Gupta appeared along with Rose Mala and had also talked to her, have recorded that the child was in good and perfect condition and Smt. Aruna Gupta could be allowed to retain her custody. Rajesh K. Gupta v. Ram Gopal Agarwal, AIR 2005 SC 2426 : (2005) 5 SCC 359 : 2005 CrLJ 2581 (2582) : 2005 (3) Crimes 161. TO THE SAME EFFECT : Syed Saleemuddin v. Rukhsana, AIR 2001 SC 2172 : (2001) 5 SCC 247 : 2001 SCC (Cri) 841.

[11700] ● Expression "custody" 376(2)(b), IPC.—The expression "custody" in Section 376(2)(b), IPC implies guardianship. A Custody must be a lawful custody. The same may arise within the provisions of the statute or actual custody conferred by reason of an order of a Court of law or otherwise. Onkar Prasad Verma v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 2007 SC 1381 : (2007) 4 SCC 323 : 2007 (2) SCC (Cri) 293 : 2007 CrLJ 1831 (1833) : 2007 (2) Crimes 364.

[11701] ● Cancellation of bail on ground that police custody was necessary for recovery of dowry articles—Improper.—In the instant case, the bail was granted on 10-10-2008. There was no allegation that the same had been misused or that any attempt was had been made after the accused-appellants were granted bail to recover the articles alleged to have been given to the appellant No. 1 at the time of marriage with the complainant. The reason given by the High Court for cancellation of the orders granting bail and directing the arrest of the appellants on the ground that disclosures had been made by the appellants and that their police custody was necessary for recovery of the same was held not sufficient for the purpose of cancellation of bail. Devendra Kumar v. State of Delhi, 2010 CrLJ 3849 (3851) (SC).

1. GENERAL

[11702] ● General.—A Magistrate has jurisdiction the moment an application for warrant under Section 172, Sea Customs Act is made before him, and proceedings on that application can be said to have started under the Criminal P.C. Section 172 of the Sea Customs Act by its second paragraph brings into operation the provisions of the Criminal P.C. land, therefore, the Magistrate's jurisdiction is both under Section 172 of the Sea Customs Act and the Criminal Procedure Code. There can be no doubt also that, unlike Section 96, Criminal P.C., the Magistrate is to be guided by the belief of the Customs authorities, though he may prevent undue harassment in cases, where it can be seen that the belief is not entertained by the Customs Officer or his action is mala fide. The Magistrate is entitled to satisfy himself about the belief of the Customs Officer, but is not required to make up his own mind independently of that belief. To this extent only is the mater in the control of the Magistrate, before he issues the warrant. After the warrant is issued, it is an order of the Magistrate enabling the Customs authorities to take action, for without warrant, they cannot enter any house or premises. The warrant of the Magistrate, so to speak, opens the door for entry into a house or premises, and the authority to do so is based upon the Magistrate's order. The forms prescribed under the Code require that articles seized as a result of the warrant should be brought into Court, and a Magistrate, who issues a search warrant, is entitled to see that his warrant is not abused, and has been properly executed. In a suitable case, of course, a Magistrate may amend the warrant dispensing with the production of the goods or documents before him. That, however, would be in a clear case only; but if the Magistrate so desires, he need not armed the form, and may keep the control of the goods or documents in himself. This he may find necessary to do, so that the warrant issued by him is not abused or made the instrument of harassment. A condition, therefore, in the warrant that the goods or documents should be produced before the Magistrate must be complied with, and once the goods or documents have been produced before the Magistrate, it is for him to decide, in the circumstances of each case, whether he would make them over to the Customs authorities or not. Where the Customs authorities have been somewhat indiscriminate in their seizure, the Magistrate may find it necessary to have the goods or documents scrutinised under his control, so that goods or documents not really subject to the Sea Customs Act are not retained for an unduly long period.

Where goods or documents are seized by the Customs authorities in execution of a search warrant issued in the form prescribed under Criminal P.C., by the Magistrate under Section 172, Sea Customs Act, the Customs authorities are not entitled to the custody of the records seized by them. The ultimate disposal of the books and papers must be under the Magistrate's order. Mohammad Serajuddin v. R.C. Mishra, AIR 1962 SC 759 : (1962) 1 CrLJ 692 : (1962) 1 SCJ 56 : 1963 Mad LJ (Cri) 40.

[11703] ● Absolute liability not to be lightly presumed.—Unless the statute either clearly or by necessary implication rules out mens rea as a constituent part of a crime an accused should not be found guilty of an offence unless he has a guilty mind. Absolute liability is not to be lightly presumed, but has to be clearly established. State of Maharashtra v. Mayer, AIR 1965 SC 722 : (1965) 1 CrLJ 641.

[11704] ● Contempt of Court—What amounts to.—Where a criminal prosecution of the appellant on the basis of FIR in respect of offences in conviction with smuggling of gold under Section 120B, IPC read with Section 135, Sea Customs Act, Rule 131B, Defence of India Rules and Section 8, Foreign Exchange Regulation Act was imminent and the Collector of Customs initiated proceedings under Sections 111 and 112, Sear Customs Act against the appellant on the same facts such initiation of proceeding bona fide by the Custom Officer and in discharge of his statutory duty did not amount to contempt of criminal Court even though identical issues might arise in the imminent prosecution. To constitute contempt of Court, there must be involved some act done or writing published calculated to bring a Court or a judge of the Court into contempt or to lower his authority or something calculated to obstruct or interfere with the due course of justice or the lawful process of the Courts. Tukaram G. Gaokar v. R.N. Shukla, AIR 1968 SC 1050 : 1968 CrLJ 1234 (SC) : 70 Bom LR 718.

[11705] ● Custom officer not Police Officer.—Although a Customs Officer has been invested with many powers which were not to be found in the provisions of the old Sea Customs Act of 1878, he cannot be regarded as a "police officer" within the meaning of Section 25 of the Evidence Act and the statements made before him by a person who is arrested or against whom an inquiry is made are not covered by Section 25 of the Evidence Act. Illias v. Collector of Custom, AIR 1970 SC 1065 : 1970 CrLJ 998 (SC) : (1970) 1 SCJ 701 : (1970) 2 SCA 165 : (1970) 1 Mad LJ (SC) 133 : (1970) 1 Andh WR 133.

[11706] ● Customs officer having sane power as that of officer incharge of Police station for releasing person on bail.—As to procedure after the arrest this Act provides that where an officer of Customs has arrested any person under Section 104 (1) he for the purpose of releasing the person on bail shall have the same power as that of an officer in charge of a police station. This Sec. 107 authorises a Customs Officer to examine any person in connection with the smuggling of gold—thus Customs Officer has now been invested with many powers which heretofore were non-existent, yet a Customs Officer is not a police officer because he has no power to file charge-sheet under Sec. 173, CrPC. Illias v. Collector of Customs, AIR 1970 SC 1065 : 1970 CrLJ 998 : (1970) 1 SCJ 701 : 1970 Mad LJ (Cri) 325 : 1970 Mad LJ (SC) 133 : (1970) 1 Andh WR (SC) 133 : (1970) 2 SCA 165 : (1969) 2 SCR 613.

[11707] ● "Otherwise"—Meaning—As regard the procedure after arrest a significant change which has been made in the new Act is contained in sub-section (3) of Section 104. It is provided thereby that where an officer of customs has arrested any person under sub-section (1) he shall, for the purpose of releasing such person, on bail or otherwise have the same power and be subject to the same provisions as the officer-in charge of a police station has and is subject to under the Code of CrPC sub-section (4), however, makes an offence under the new Act non-cognizable notwithstanding anything contained in the Code of Criminal Procedure (the offences under the old Act were also non-cognizable). In the old Act there was no provision conferring the power of releasing a person on bail or otherwise on a Customs Officer and only a Magistrate could grant bail. It may be observed at once that the word "otherwise" clearly relates to releasing a person who has been arrested and cannot possibly be construed in the manner suggested by the learned counsel. Illias v. Collector of Customs, AIR 1970 SC 1065 : 1970 CrLJ 998 (SC) : (1970) 1 SCJ 701 : (1970) 2 SCA 165 : (1970) 1 Mad LJ (SC) 133 : (1970) 1 Andh WR 133.

[11708] ● Power of custom officer to search on reasonable suspicion.—Under the old Act Section 173 provided that persons reasonably suspected of offences under that Act might be arrested by any officer of Customs or other persons duly employed for the prevention of smuggling. Under the new Act according to Section 104 if an officer of customs empowered in this behalf by general or special order of the Collector of Customs has reason to believe that any person has been guilty of an offence punishable under Section 135, he may arrest such person. As regards the power to search, Chapter XVII of the old Act contained the relevant provisions. Section 169 conferred the power on a Customs Officer to search, on a reasonable suspicion. Under Section 170 when any officer of customs was about to search any person under the provisions of Section 169 such person could require that officer to take him, previous to search, before the nearest magistrate or customs collector. Section 172 conferred power on a Magistrate to issue search warrants on an application by the customs-collector. In the new Act Section 100 confers the power to search suspected persons entering or leaving India. Section 102 contains provision analogous to Section 170 of the old Act with some minor differences. Under the old Act every person arrested on the ground that he had been guilty of an offence under that Act had to be forthwith taken to the nearest Magistrate or customs-collector, (Section 174). Under the new Act Section 104(2) provides that every person arrested shall, without unnecessary delay, be taken to a Magistrate. Lastly Section 171-A of the old Act conferred power on Customs Officer to summon persons to give evidence and produce documents. Under the new Act Section 107 gives the power to Customs Officers empowered by general or special order of collector of customs to examine persons acquainted with the facts and circumstances of the case or to require any person to produce or deliver any document. Section 108 confers power on a gazetted officer of customs to summon persons for giving evidence or producing documents. The substantial difference, however, between the two enactments as relates to (1) the procedure after arrest; (2) the procedure for enquiry or investigation and (3) the procedure for search. Illias v. Collector of Customs, AIR 1970 SC 1065 : 1970 CrLJ 998 (SC) : (1970) 1 SCJ 701 : (1970) 2 SCA 165 : (1970) 1 Mad LJ (SC) 133 : (1970) 1 Andh WR 133.

[11709] ● Offence of possessing or keeping contraband gold.—Smuggling, particularly of gold, into India affects the public economy and financial stability of the country. The provisions of Section 135(1) and like statutes which are designed to suppress smuggling have to be construed in accordance with the Mischief Rule first enunciated in Heydon's case. Accordingly, the words 'acquires possession or keeping' in clause (b) of Section 135(1) are not to be restricted to 'possession' or 'keeping' acquired as an owner or a purchase of the goods. Such a narrow construction which has been erroneously adopted by the High Court would defeat the object of these provisions and undermine their efficacy as instruments for suppression of the mischief which the Legislature had in view. Construed in consonance with the scheme of the statute, the purpose of these provisions and the context, the expression 'acquired possession' is of very wide amplitude and will certainly include the acquisition of possession by a person in a capacity other than as owner or purchaser. This expression takes its colour from the succeeding phrase commencing with the word 'or', which is so widely worded that even the temporary control or custody of a carrier, remover, depositor, harbourer, keeper, or dealer of any goods which he knows or has reason to believe to be smuggled goods or prohibited goods (liable to confiscation under Section 111), cannot escape the tentacles of clause (b) State of Maharashtra v. Natwarlal, AIR 1980 SC 593 : (1980) 4 SCC 669 : 1980 CrLJ 429 : 1980 CrLR (SC) 105 : 1980 CR App R (SC) 46 : 1980 UJ (SC) 171 : (1980) 2 SCR 340 : 1981 Mah LR (SC) 1.

[11711] ● No statutory definition when provided in respect of an item in custom or Central Excise Act.—When no statutory definition is provided in respect of an item in the Customs Act or the Central Excises Act, the trade understanding meaning thereby the understanding in the opinion of those who deal with the goods in question is the safest guide. Collector of Customs, Bombay v. *Swastic Woolen (P.) [11712] ● Classification of entries on basis of Trade parlance.—No specific technical definition provided in the statute or notification. Thus, in such cases it should be analysed and classified on basis of their use in trade, industry or market and understood in its popular or commonsense. United Offset Process Pvt. Ltd. v. Asstt. Collector of Customs, Bombay, AIR 1989 SC 622 : 1989 CrLJ 108 : JT 1988 (4) SC SC 198 : 1988 (38) ELT 568 : 1989 Supp (1) SCC 131.

[11713] ● Person arrested under Section 35 of Foreign Exchange Regulation Act and Section 104 of Customs Act assimilated with characteristics of accused person within range of Section 167(1), CrPC.—The words 'accused' or 'accused person' is used only in a generic sense in Section 167(1) and (2) denoting the "person" whose liberty is actually restrained on his arrest by a competent authority on well-founded information or formal accusation or indictment. Therefore, the word 'accused' limited to the scope of Section 167(1) and (2) - particularly in the light of Explanation to Section 273 of the Code includes 'any person arrested'. The inevitable consequence that follows is that 'any person is arrested' occurring in the first limb of Section 167(1) of the Code takes within its ambit 'every per son arrested'under Section 35 of FERA or Section 104 of the Customs Act also as the case may be and the 'person arrestee' can be detained by the Magistrate in exercise of his power under Section 167(2) of the Code. In other words, the 'person arrested' under FERA or Customs Act is assimilated with the characteristics of an 'accused' within the range of Section 167 91) and as such liable to be detained under Section 167(2) by a Magistrate when produced before him. A Magistrate before whom a person arrested by the competent authority under the FERA or Customs Act is produced, can authorise detention in exercise of his powers under Section 167. Otherwise the mandatory direction under the provision of Section 35(2) of F.E.R.A. or Section 104(2) of the Customs Act, to take every person arrested before the Magistrate without unnecessary delay when the arrestee was not released on bail under sub-section (3) of those special Acts, will become purposeless and meaningless and to say that the Courts even in the event of refusal of bail have no choice but to set the person arrested at liberty by folding their hands as a helpless spectator in the face of what is termed as 'legislative causes omissus' or legal flaw or lacuna, it will become utterly illogical and absurd. Section 104(2) of Customs Act replace Section 167(1) and serve as a substitute thereof substantially satisfying all the required basic conditions contained therein and that consequence upon such replacement of sub-section (1) of Section 167, the arrested person under those special Acts would be an accused person to be detained by the Magistrate under sub-section (2) of Section 167. There is no expression 'police officer' deployed in Section 167(1) nor does it appear in any part of Section 167(2). The authority for detaining a person as contemplated under Section 167(2) is in aid of investigation to be carried on by any prosecuting agency who is invested with the power of investigation. Director of Enforcement v. Deepal Mahajan, AIR 1994 SC 1775 : (1994) 3 SCC 440 : 1994 CrLJ 2269 : JT 1994 (1) SC 2901 : 1995 (82) Comp Cas 103 reversing 1991 CrLJ 1124 (FB) : (1990) 2 Rec CrR 133.

[11714] ● Nature of Customs Act, 1962.—The Statute is a complete Code by itself. It not only deals with the imposition of penalty or order of confiscation of properties under the Act but also with offences having serious consequences. Noor Aga v. State of Punjab, (2008) 16 SCC 417 : JT 2008 (7) SC 409.

2. SECTION 14

[11715] ● Section 14.—"Landing charges" are exactly what the words mean, the expenditure incurred by an importer for bringing goods on board ship to land. Landing charges, in law, must be assessed on actuals, but, as a matter of practice, particularly to facilitate expeditious clearance, landing charges are assessed at a percentage of the value of the goods and such assessment is accepted. When so assessed landing charges cover the totality of all that an importer extends expends to bring imported goods to land.....

It is open to the Customs authorities not to assess landing charges at a percentage and to assess them at actuals. But if they do assess them on a percentage basis, they cover thereby all aspects of landing charges and it is not open to them then to seek to add any amount thereto on the basis that this or that or the other was not covered thereby. Coromandal Fertilisers Ltd. v. Collector of Customs, AIR 2000 SC 606 (607) : (2000) 1 SCC 448.

3. SECTION 25

[11716] ● Section 25.—The analysis of Section 25(1), Customs Act, 1962 show inter alia that an exemption granted may be an absolute one or subject to such conditions, as may be specified in the notification and further that the conditions specified may relate to a stage before the clearance of the goods or to a stage subsequent to the clearance of goods. We are equally unable to agree that by virtue of the fiction contained in the exemption notification the ship-owners are being made to pay a higher duty than the statutory duty. By a fortuitous combination of circumstances, it so happens that the value of the ship when it was imported in 1968 as on ocean going vessels happens to be less then the value of the ship today when it has become junk and fit only for scrapping/breaking on account of the steep rise in the prices of steel, such an unusual situation has come about but this circumstance in no way affects the validity of the notification. The notification shifts the date of import in the case of a ship which in imported as an ocean going vessel but is subsequently broken up-from the actual date of import to the date of breaking-up by creating a legal fiction. Once it is held that it is open to the central Government to impose such a condition or to create such a fiction, as the case may be, the condition or the faction has to be given full effect to. It must be deemed that the ship is imported on the date it is broken up and its value and rate of duty should be determined with reference to such date. By doing this, the duty is chargeable by virtue of the exemption notification is not going beyond the statutory duty payable on such date. Union of India v. Jalyan Udyog, AIR 1994 SC 88 (97, 98) : (1994) 1 SCC 318.

4. SECTION 104

[11717] ● Power to arrest a person by Customs Officer.—Power to arrest a person by a Customs Officer is statutory in character and cannot be interfered with. Union of India v. Padam Narain Aggarwal, AIR 2009 SC 254 : (2008) 13 SCC 305 : 2008 (4) Crimes 177 : JT 2008 (11) (SC) 6.

[11718] ● Power of Customs Officer to arrest—Safeguards against abuse of powers.—The law thus, on the one hand, allows a Custom Officer to exercise power to arrest a person who has committed certain offences, and on the other hand, takes due care to ensure individual freedom and liberty by laying down norms and providing safeguards so that the power of arrest is not abused or misused by the authorities.

Such power of arrest can be exercised only in those cases where the Custom Officer has 'reason to believe' that a person has been guilty of an offence punishable under Sections 132, 133, 135A or 136 of the Act. Thus, the power must be exercised on objective facts of commission of an offence enumerated and the Custom Officer has reason to believe that a person sought to he arrested has been guilty of commission of such offence. The power to arrest thus is circumscribed by objective considerations and cannot be exercised on whims, caprice or fancy of the officer.

The section also obliges the Custom Officer to inform the person arrested of the grounds of arrest as soon as may be. The law requires such person to be produced before a Magistrate 'without unnecessary delay'. Union of India v. Padam Narain Aggarwal, AIR 2009 SC 254 : 2008 (4) Crimes 177 (SC) : JT 2008 (11) SC 6.

5. SECTION 105

[11719] ● Section 105.—A search in violation of Sec. 103, CrPC 1898 (Sec. 100, CrPC, 1973) would not vitiate the proceeding. It may only affect the weigh of the evidence in support of the search and recovery. Sundari Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1956 SC 411 : 1956 CrLJ 801.

[11720] ● Article when secreted in place.—If the information is such as leads the Customs Officer to believe that articles of search are secreted in a place he may thereby have reason to believe and issue warrant even if he then does not know the name of the person who is in possession of the articles of search. All that the Court can consider is whether there is ground prima facie justifying a reasonable belief. Pukhraj v. D.R. Kohli, AIR 1962 SC 1559 : 1962 Supp (3) SCR 866.

[11721] ● Power to authorise search exercised by Magistrate.—Under Section 172 of the Sea Customs Act power to authorise search was to be exercised by the Magistrate on the basis of belief of the Customs Officer or on the basis of the belief of the Assistant Collector of Customs. Under the old law when the goods and documents were seized by the Customs authorities in execution of search warrant by the Magistrate, the Customs authorities were not entitled to the custody of the goods or the documents seized. The ultimate disposal of the goods used to depend upon a Magisterial order. Mohammad Serajuddin v. R.C. Mishra, AIR 1962 SC 759 : (1962) 1 CrLJ 692 : (1963) 1 SCJ 56 : 1963 Mad LJ (Cri) 40.

[11722] ● Search if illegal.—Even if the search is illegal the seizure of the articles is not vitiated. It may be that when the provisions of Sec. 103, Customs Act and Sec. 165, CrPC 1973 are violated the search can be resisted by the person whose premises are sought to be searched. It may be that because of the illegality Court may be inclined to examine carefully the evidence regarding seizure. But beyond these two consequences no further consequence ensues. Radha Krishnan v. State of U.P., AIR 1963 SC 822 : 1963 CrLJ 309 : 1963 Sup SCR 408.

[11723] ● Power of search—Power of general search.—The power of search is a power of general search. No specific description of the goods or documents expected to be recovered is necessary in the search warrant. Only condition is this that officer issuing the warrant must have reasons to believe that any documents or things which in his opinion are relevant for any proceeding under the Act are secreted in the place of search. Durga Prasad v. Supdt. Central Excise, AIR 1966 SC 1209 : (1966) 2 SCR 991.

[11724] ● Word 'secreted' means document kept not in normal or usual place.—The word 'secreted' in the context means 'documents which are kept not in the normal or usual place with a view to conceal them or it may even mean 'documents or things which are likely to be secreted', in other words, documents or things which a person is likely to keep out of the way or to put in a place where the officer of law cannot find it. It is not correct to say that the word "secreted" is used in Section 105 in the sense of being hidden or concealed. Durga Prasad v. Supdt. Central Excise, AIR 1966 SC 1209 : (1966) 2 SCR 991.

[11725] ● Object of grant of power under Section 105, Customs Act not search for particular documents.—The object of grant of power under Section 105 is not search for a particular document but of documents or things which may be useful or necessary for proceedings either pending or contemplated under the Customs Act. At that stage it is not possible for the officer to predict or even to know in advance what documents could be found in the search and which of them may be useful or necessary for the proceedings. It is only after the search is made and documents found therein are scrutinised that their relevance or utility can be detertained. To require, therefore, a specification or description of the documents in advance is to misapprehend the purpose for which the power is granted for effecting a search under Section 105 of the Customs Act. Therefore, the power of search granted under Section 105 of the Customs Act is a power of general search. But it is essential that before this power is exercised, the preliminary conditions required by the section must be strictly satisfied, that is, the officer concerned must have reason to believe that any documents or things, which, in his opinion, are relevant for any proceeding under the Act, are secreted in the place searched. Durga Prasad v. Supdt. (Prev), Central Excise, Nagpore, AIR 1966 SC 1209 : (1966) 2 SCR 991.

[11726] ● Procedure prescribed in Section 165, CrPC for search not applicable to Section 105(2) Customs Act.—The procedure prescribed in Section 165, CrPC for search is not applicable to Section 105(2) of the Act inasmuch as the two sections are intended to meet really different situations. So recording of the reasons by the collector is not necessary. Gopi Kissen Agarwal v. Assistant Collector of Customs, AIR 1967 SC 1298 : 1967 CrLJ 1194.

[11727] ● Reasons to believe on which warrant for search issued if challenged.—If the reasons to believe on which warrant for search were issued are challenged in Court, it is incumbent upon the authorities to disclose materials upon which the belief is formed, for the Court can examine the materials to find out whether an honest and reasonable person can base his reasonable belief upon such materials although the sufficiency of the reasons for belief cannot be investigated by the Court. Sheo Nath Singh v. Applt. Asstt. Commr. I.T., AIR 1971 SC 2451 : (1972) 3 SCC 234 : 82 ITR 147 : 1971 TaxLR 1747.

[11728] ● Discretion to Tribunal to condone obligation to deposit.—The proviso to Section 120-E of the Customs Act gives a discretion to the tribunal in cases of undue hardship to condone the obligation to deposit or to reduce unconditionally or subject to conditions. Navin Chandra Chhotelal v. Central Board of Excise and Customs, New Delhi, AIR 1971 SC 2280 : (1971) 1 SCC 289 : (1971) 3 SCR 357.

[11729] ● Evidence procured by illegal means.—Evidence procured by illegal means may be admitted in evidence of it is relevant and admissible. Magraj Patodia v. R.K. Birla, AIR 1971 SC 1295 : 1970 SCC 888 : (1971) 2 SCR 118.

[11730] ● Power to issue search warrant.—The power to issue search warrant can be exercised by Asstt. Collector of Customs too. This power is not an uncanalised power, nor a power without any guideline. Enough guidance is provided in S.105, Customs Act itself. The power is not hit by Art. 14, Constitution of India—For effect of vesting of uncanalised power without guidelines. Maneka Gandhi v. Union of India, AIR 1978 SC 597 : (1978) 1 SCC 248 : (1978) 2 SCR 621 : (1978) 2 SCJ 312.

[11731] ● Independent witness when not available.—When no independent witness available, Customs Officials may be search witnesses. State of Maharashtra v. P.K. Pathak, AIR 1980 SC 1224 : (1980) 2 SCC 259 : 1980 SCC (Cri) 428 : 1980 CrLJ 923 : 1980 UJ (SC) 320 : (1980) 3 MahLR 127 (SC) : 1980 SC CrR 300 : 1980 CrAppR (SC) 321.

[11732] ● Expression reason to believe not synonymous to subjective satisfaction.—The expression 'reason to believe' is not synonymous with the subjective satisfaction of the officer. The belief must be held in good faith; it cannot be merely a presence. The subject underlying S. 105, Customs Act which confers power for issuing authorisation for search of the premises and seizure of incriminating articles was to search for goods liable to be confiscated. The search must in regard to the two categories mentioned in the section. Though under the section the officer concerned need not give reasons, if the existence of belief is questioned in any collateral proceeding he was to produce relevant evidence to sustain his belief. Pratap Singh (Dr.) v. Director of Enforcement (Investigation), AIR 1985 SC 989 : (1985) 3 SCC 72 : 1985 SCC (Cri) 312

[11733] ● Search and seizure if illegal.—If for any reason the search and seizure were illegal the consequence would not be that the documents seized must be returned. Pratap Singh (Dr.) v. Director of Enforcement, AIR 1985 SC 989 : (1985) 3 SCC 72 : 1985 SCC (Cri) 312 : 1985 SCC (Tax) 352 : (1986) 1 Supreme 360 : (1985) 2 Cur Civ Cas 599 : (1985) 6 ECC 103. 6. SECTION 106, CUSTOMS ACT, 1962

[11734] ● Section 106, Customs Act, 1962.—To seize goods the Customs Officer concerned must have reason to believe that the said goods were improperly imported. So when a challenge is thrown it is necessary to find out if the officer concerned has in fact formed the belief and, secondly, whether there were materials relevant or germane upon which the authority concerned could have formed the belief. It there are some materials upon which such belief could have been formed, the Court is not concerned with the propriety of the belief or the sufficiency of the material. M.A. Rasheed v. State of Kerala, AIR 1974 SC 2249 : (1974) 2 SCC 687. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Barium Chemical v. Company Law Board, AIR 1967 SC 295 : 1966 Supp SCR 311.

[11735] ● Powers of custom officer includes all consequential actions necessary.—Powers of Customs Officer includes all consequential actions necessary to immobilise the driver or occupant of the vehicle. Costao Farnandes v. State, AIR 1996 SC 1383 : (1996) 7 SCC 516 : 1996 CrLJ 1783 : 1996 (1) Crimes 125 (SC).

[11736] ● Powers of Customs Officer.—Customs Officer exercises its powers for the purpose of detection of crimes and bringing the offenders to book. Noor Aga v. State of Punjab, (2008) 16 SCC 417 : 2008 (10) SCR 379 : JT 2008 (7) SC 409.

7. SECTION 107

[11737] ● Waiver contractual.—Waiver is contractual and may constitute cause of action, it is an agreement to release or not to assert a right. But estoppel is not a cause of action, it is a rule of evidence which comes into operation where : (a) a statement of acceptance of fact is made by the defendant or an authorised agent to the plaintiff or someone in this behalf; (b) with the intention that the plaintiff shall act upon the faith of the statement; and (c) the plaintiff does act upon the faith of that statement. Baseswarnath v. Commr. of I.T., AIR 1959 SC 149 : 1959 Supp (1) SCR 528. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) For distinction between waiver and estoppel, Provash Chandra Dalni v. Biswanath Bannerjee, AIR 1989 SC 1834 (1840-41) : 1989 Supp (1) SCC 487.

[11738] ● Section 107.—As to procedure after the arrest this Act provides that where an officer of Customs has arrested any person under Section. 104(1) he for the purpose of releasing the person on bail shall have the same power as that of an officer in charge of a police station. Section 107 authorises a Customs Officer to examine any person in connection with the smuggling of gold—thus Customs Officer has now been invested with many powers which heretofore were non-existent, yet a Customs Officer is not a police officer because he has no power to file charge-sheet under Section 173, CrPC. Illias v. Collector of Customs, AIR 1970 SC 1065 : 1970 CrLJ 998 : (1970) 1 SCJ 701 : 1970 Mad LJ (Cri) 325 : 1970 Mad LJ (SC) 133 : (1970) 1 Andh WR (SC) 133 : (1970) 2 SCA 165 : (1969) 2 SCR 613.

[11739] ● Confessional statements recorded under Section 107 of Customs Act.—Confessional statements recorded under Section 107 are not hit by Section 25 of the Indian Evidence Act nor attract the prohibition against testimonial compulsion envisaged in Art. 20(3) of the Constitution of India. Ramesh Ch. Mehta v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1970 SC 940 : 1971 CrLJ 863 : 72 Bom LR 787 : (1970) 2 SCA 174 : (1969) 2 SCR 461. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Harbans Singh v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1972 SC 1224 : 1972 SCC (Cri) 843 : 1972 CrLJ 759 : 1972 UJ (SC) 746 : 1972 SCCrR 327.

[11740] ● Evidence if any collected by examining person arrested under Section 171-A of Sea Customs Act—Admissibility.—A person arrested by the custom officer because he is found in possession of smuggled goods or on suspicion that he is concerned in smuggling is not, when called upon by the customs officer to make a statement or to produce a document or thing, a person accused of an offence within the meaning of Art. 20(3) of the Constitution. The steps are taken by the customs officer for the purpose of holding a inquiry under the Sea Customs Act and for adjudging confiscation of goods dutiable or prohibited and imposing penalties. The evidence, if any collected by examining him under Section

171-A of the Sea Customs Act is not inadmissible. Ramesh Chandra Mehta v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1970 SC 940 : 1970 CrLJ 863 : (1969) 2 SCR 461 (A case under Sea Customs Act) To the same effect : (1) Maqbool Hussain v. State of Bombay, AIR 1953 SC 325 : 1953 SCR 730; (2) Thomas Dana v. State of Punjab, AIR 1959 SC 375 : 1959 CrLJ 392 : 1959 Supp (1) SCR 274; (3) Hera H. Advani v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1971 SC 44 : (1969) 2 SCC 662 : 1971 CrLJ 5 : (1970) 1 SCR 821.

[11741] ● Confession to Customs Officer.—Confession to Customs Officer is not hit by Section 24 Evidence Act. P. Rustomji v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1971 SC 1087 : (1973) 1 SCC 847 : 1971 CrLJ 933 : 1971 SCD 124 : (1973) 2 SCJ 338 : 1973 MadLJ (Cri) 497.

[11742] ● Collector's power quasi-judicial.—The power of the Collector is quasi judicial and not administrative. Asstt. Collector of Customs v. Charandas, AIR 1972 SC 689 : (1971) 1 SCC 697.

[11743] ● Power of Custom Officer to examine person subsequently arraigned as accused.—It is not proper to state that customs officer cannot examine a person subsequently arraigned as an accused. In view of Section 107(b), Customs Act any officer of Customs empowered in this behalf by general and special order of the Collector of Customs may during the course of enquiry in connection with the smuggling of any goods examine any person acquainted with the facts and circumstances of the case. Balkrishna v. State of W.B., AIR 1974 SC 120 : (1974) 4 SCC 567 : 1974 CrLJ 280.

[11744] ● Statement to Custom Officer does not attract bar of Article 20(3) of constitution.—Statement to Customs Officer does not attract the bar of Art. 20(3), Constitution of India. Veera Ibrahim v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1976 SC 1169 : 1976 CrLJ 860.

[11745] ● Retracted confession before Customs Officer.—Retracted confession before Customs Officer corroborated by independent witnesses is admissible. State of Maharashtra v. P.K. Pathak, AIR 1980 SC 1224 : (1980) 2 SCC 259 : 1980 SCC (Cri) 428 : 1980 CrLJ 923 : 1980 UJ (SC) 320 : (1980) 3 MahLR 127 (SC) : 1980 SC CrR 300 : 1980 CrAppR (SC) 321.

[11746] ● Person being interrogated during investigation under Customs Act—Lawyer's assistance.—"We do not find any force in the arguments of Mr. Salve and Mr Lalit that if a person is called away from his own house and questioned in the atmosphere of the Customs office without the assistance of his lawyer or his friends his constitutional right under Article 21 is violated. The argument proceeds thus : if the person who is used to certain comforts and convenience is asked to come by himself to the Department for answering questions it amounts to mental torture. We are unable to agree. It is true that large majority of persons connected with illegal trade and evasion of taxes and duties are in a position to afford luxuries on lavish scale of which an honest ordinary citizen of this country cannot dream of and they are surrounded by persons similarly involved either directly or indirectly in such pursuits. But that cannot be a ground for holding that he has a constitutional right to claim similar luxuries and company of his choice. Mr. Salve was fair enough not to pursue his argument with reference to the comfort part, but continued to maintain that the appellant is entitled to the company of his choice during the questioning. The purpose of the enquiry under the Customs Act and the other similar statutes will be completely frustrated if the whims of the persons in possession of useful information for the departments are allowed to prevail. For achieving the object of such an enquiry if the appropriate authorities be of the view that such persons should be dissociated from the atmosphere and the company of persons who provide encouragement to them in adopting a non-cooperative attitude to the machineries of law, there cannot be any legitimate objection in depriving them of such company. The relevant provisions of the Constitution in this regard have to be construed in the spirit they were made and the benefits thereunder should not be "expanded' to favour exploiters engaged in tax evasion at the cost of public exchequer. Applying the 'just, fair and reasonable test' we hold that there is no merit in the stand of appellant before us." Poolpandi v. Supdt. Central Excise, AIR 1992 SC 1795 : (1992) 3 SCC 259 : 1992 SCC (Cri) 620 : 1992 CrLJ 2761.

8. SECTION 108

[11747] ● Section 108.—As held by the majority of Supreme Court, a Customs Officer is not a police officers for the purpose of Section 25 of the Evidence Act and the statements to Customs Officers were admissible in evidence at the trial of persons accused of offences, inter alia, under the Sea Customs Act, 1878. State of Punjab v. Barkat Ram, AIR 1962 SC 276 : (1962) 3 SCR 338.

[11748] ● Statement under Section 171-A(4) Customs Act containing inculpatory and excul- patory portions.—As to statements under Section 171-A(4), Sea Customs Act, it does not stand at par with confession so that it had to be taken as a whole or rejected as a whole. As to statements under Section 171-A(4) inculpatory portion can be accepted if the exculpatory portion is found to be inherently improbable. H.H. Advani v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1971 SC 44 : (1969) 2 SCC 662 : 1971 CrLJ 5 (SC) : (1970) 1 SCR 821. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Nishi Kanta v. State of Bihar, AIR 1969 SC 422 : (1969) 1 SCC 347 : 1969 CrLJ 671.

[11749] ● Power of customs officer to interrogate person in connection with smuggling of goods.—At the stage envisaged by Section 171A, a Customs Officer is given the power to interrogate any person in connection with the smuggling of any goods which it is his duty to prevent. Such a person may have nothing to do with the smuggling of any goods although he may know where such goods are or who has or had them. Sub-Section (3) of Section 171A does not compel any person to make a statement but if he makes a statement he has to state the truth so as to avoid punishment under Section 193, IPC. At that stage nothing may be known as to whether an offence has been committed or who has committed it and the person interrogated at that stage is not a person accused of or charged with an offence. He is merely called upon to give evidence to facilitate the inquiry. He is not a witness giving evidence in a Court and his testimony will make him liable under Section 193, IPC only because of the express provision of law in sub-section (4) of Section 171A. H.H. Advani v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1971 SC 44 : (1969) 2 SCC 662 : 1971 CrLJ 5 (SC) : (1970) 1 SCR 821.

[11750] ● Statement recorded by officer of custom—Admissibility.—The statement recorded by an officer of Customs under the customs Act are admissible in evidence and are not hit by Section 25 of the Evidence Act or Art. 20(3) of the Constitution of India. Harbans Singh Sardar Lena Singh v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1972 SC 1224 : (1972) 3 SCC 775 : 1972 SCC (Cri) 843 : 1972 CrLJ 759. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Ramesh Chandra Mehta v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1970 SC 940 : 1970 CrLJ 863.

[11751] ● Detention under COFEPOSA.—Despite a single incident of smuggling one may be detained under COFEPOSA if he is found to be a member of a smuggling syndicate. Shiv Ratan Makhin v. Union of India, AIR 1986 SC 610 : (1986) 1 SCC 404 : 1986 SCC (Cri) 74 : 1986 CrLJ 813 : (1986) 1 Crimes 465 (SC) : (1986) 1 Supreme 475 : 1986 Cr AppR (SC) 32.

[11752] ● Statement of accused before customs officer.—Customs party following a tip off waylaid a jeep with contraband good. The driver scenting the trouble before hand stopped the jeep at a safe distance. The inmate escaped under the cover of darkness. The Customs Officials came to the abandoned vehicle and found a large number of watches of foreign make. Initially nine persons were arrayed as accused. One of the accused turned a prosecution witness. The weapons at the armoury of the prosecution was the oral evidence of the approver i.e. one who earlier was included as an accused and later turned to be a prosecution witness; and the statements of A-1 & A-2 under Section 108, Customs Act. The apex Court held the statements under Section 108, Customs Act cannot be corroborative piece of evidence of the statement of co-accused turned prosecution witness. Supdt. of Customs v. Bhanabhai Khalpabhai, AIR 1992 SC 1583 : 1992 CrLJ 2516 (SC) : JT 1992 (22) SC 305.

[11753] ● Persons called for questioning during investigation not accused.—Persons called for questioning during investigation by authorities are not accused. The prayer to have the presence of lawyer during interrogation can be validly turned down. This refusal does not entail violation of Article 20(3) or Article 21, Constitution of India. Phool Pandi v. Superintendent, Central Excise, 1992 (3) SCC 259 : 1992 SCC (Cri) 620 : 1992 CrLJ 2761 (SC) : JT 1992 (4) SC 119 : 1992 (2) Crimes 648 : 1992 (3) SCR 247.

[11754] ● Statement made by appellant under Section 108 of Customs Act—Use of.—The statement made by the appellant under Section 108 of the Customs Act, 1962 can be used against him. Bhanabhai Khalapabhai v. Collector of Customs, 1994 Supp (2) SCC 143 : 1994 SCC (Cri) 882 (884-885) : (1994) 1 Crimes 940.

[11755] ● Statement made before Custom Officer not statement recorded under Section 161, CrPC.—Statement made before the customs officials is not a statement recorded Section 161, CrPC. Therefore, it is a material piece of evidence collected by the customs officials under Section 108, Customs Act. When that statement of one accused implicates the accused himself as also the co-accused, that statement can be used as substantive evidence connecting the co-accused with the contravention of a provision of the Customs Act. The conviction of co-accused only on such evidence, no matter it has received independent corroboration or not, is legal and permissible. Naresh J. Sukhwani v. Union of India, AIR 1996 SC 522 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 76 : 1995 Supp (4) SCC

663 : JT 1995 (8) SC 160 : 1995 (4) Crimes 340 (SC).

[11756] ● Statement made before—Customs Officer—Use of.—The statement made before Customs officials can be used as substantive evidence connecting the petitioner with contravention by exporting foreign currency out of India and therefore, no illegality in order to confiscation and imposition of penalty. Naresh J. Sukhawani v. Union of India, AIR 1996 SC 522 : 1995 Supp (4) SCC 663 : 1995 CrLR (SC) 753 : 1995 (6) Scale 386 : 1995(4) Crimes 340.

[11757] ● Statement recorded under—Admissibility.—The inculpatory statement made by any person under S. 108 is to non-Police personnel and, hence, it has no tinge of inadmissibility in evidence if it was made when the person concerned was not then in Police custody. Nonetheless, the caution contained in law is that such a statement should be scrutinised by the Court in the same manner as confession made by an accused person to any non-Police personnel. The Court has to be satisfied in such cases, that any inculpatory statement made by an accused person to a Gazetted Officer must also pass the tests prescribed in S. 24 of the Evidence Act. If such a statement is impaired by any of the vitiating premises enumerated in S. 24 that statement becomes useless in any criminal proceedings. We held that, a statement recorded by Customs Officers under S. 108 of the Customs Act is admissible in evidence. The Court has to test whether the inculpating portions were made voluntarily or whether it is vitiated on account of any of the premises envisaged in S. 24 of the Evidence Act. Assistant Collector of Central Excise v. Duncan Agro Industries Ltd., AIR 2000 SC 2901 (2904) : (2000) 7 SCC 53 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 1275 : 2000 CrLJ 4035 : 2000 CrLR (SC) 640.

[11758] ● Recovery of heroin and opium from two trucks—Driver admitting in his statement under Section 108 Customs Act that he knew about presence of said drugs in vehicle and about illegal transport.—In this case, the appellant Tarlochan Singh was the driver of the vehicle DIL 3372. He was also in custody of vehicle PJA 8677. His statement was recorded under Section 108 of the Customs Act. From his possession the articles of opium and heroin were recovered and in his statement he admitted that he knew about the presence of these drugs in the vehicle and about the transport of the drugs illegally from Ludhiana to Bombay. It is evident from the statement made by him that he committed the offences punishable under Sections 18, 21, 22, 23, 25, 29 and 30 of the NDPS Act. That is no reason to interfere with the conviction and sentence entered against the appellant Tarlochan Singh and the criminal appeal stands dismissed. Balwinder Singh v. Asstt. Commissioner, Customs and Central Excise, AIR 2005 SC 2917 : (2005) 4 SCC 146 : 2005 SCC (Cri) 1092 (1094) : 2005 (3) Crimes 22.

[11759] ● Enquiry under Section 108.—The enquiry under section 108 is for the purpose of the Customs Act, 1982 and not for the purpose of convicting an accused under any other statute. Noor Aga v. State of Punjab, (2008) 16 SCC 417 : 2008 (10) SCR 379 : JT 2008 (7) SC 409.

[11760] ● Power of Custom Officer to summon a person for evidence.—The underlying object of Section 108 is to ensure that the officer questioning the person elicits truth concerning the incident. The person summoned to state truth is not absolved from speaking truth on the ground that such statement is admissible and can be used against him. Union of India v. Padam Narain Aggarwal, AIR 2009 SC 254 : (2008) 13 SCC 305 : 2008 (4) Crimes 177 (SC) : JT 2008 (11) SC 6.

[11761] ● Duty of person summoned to give evidence—Nature of Statement.—A person summoned to give evidence is bound to comply with the direction. But he cannot be said to be an accused. The statement recorded under Section 108 is distinct that recorded by Police Officers during the course of investigation under the provisions of CrPC. Union of India v. Padam Narain Aggarwal, AIR 2009 SC 254 : (2008) 13 SCC 305 : 2008 (4) Crimes 177 (SC) : JT 2008 (11) SC 6.

9. SECTION 110

[11762] ● Section 110.—The Court while considering this case under the prevention of Corruption Act and the nature and standard of proof required the accused under Section 105 of the Evidence Act, held that the Evidence Act does not contemplate that the accused should prove the case with same strictness and rigour. But in this case the nature of the evidence on which the reliance could not be placed was rightly rejected by the customs and the High Court held it properly that the petitioner had not discharged the on us to prove that the goods were not smuggled. Indru Ramchand Bharwani v. Union of India, 1990 CrLR (SC) 87.

[11763] ● Seizure of goods.—When the goods are seized under S. 110(1) of the Customs Act that amounts to seizure of the goods under the Act and one of the conditions for invoking the provisions of S. 123 are satisfied by the mere factum of seizure. The effect of non-compliance of the provisions of S. 110(2) would only be that the seized goods are returned to the person from whose possession they were seized. It would not render the initial seizure of the goods illegal. We therefore held that the seizure of the goods under S. 110(1) by itself is sufficient to comply with the requisite condition under S. 123. What happens to the goods thereafter is of no consequence. J.K. Bardolia Mills v. M.L. Khunger, Dy. Collector, (1994) 5 SCC 332 : 1994 SCC (Cri) 1497 (1500, 1501).

10. SECTION 111

[11764] ● Section 111.—The appellant may, if he chooses, not appear as a witness in the proceedings under Ss. 111 and 112 of the Customs Act. The necessity to enter the witness-box for substantiating his defence is not such a compulsion as would attract the protection of Art. 20(3). Even in a criminal trial, any person accused of an offence is a competent witness for the defence under Section 342-A of the CrPC and may give evidence on oath in disproof of the charges made against him. It may be very necessary for the accused person to enter the witness-box for substantiating his defence. But this is no reason for saying that the criminal trial compels him to be a witness against himself and is in violation of Art. 20(3). Compulsion in the context of Art. 20(3) must proceed from another person or authority. The appellant is not compelled to be a witness if he voluntarily gives evidence in his defence. Different considerations may arise if he is summoned by the Customs authorities under Section 108 to give evidence in the proceedings under Ss. 111 and 112. Tukaram G. Gaokar v. R.N. Shukla, AIR 1968 SC 1050 : 1968 CrLJ 1234 (1238) : (1968) 3 SCR 422.

[11765] ● Ingredients in respect of offence under Section 111 read with Section 135 of Customs Act different from Section 85 of Gold Control Act.—It is not in dispute that the respondents were tried and acquitted for the offence under the Customs Act in connection with the possession of a quantity of gold. Then trial would be barred by Section 403(1) provided they are sought to be prosecuted or "same facts" for any offence for which a different charge from the one made against them might have been made under Section 236, CrPC, for which they might have been convicted under Section 237, CrPC. The ingredients required to be established in respect of the offence under Section 111 read with Section 135 of the Customs Act are altogether different from those required to be established for offence under Section 85 of the Gold Control Act. V.K. Agarwal v. Vasantraj Bhagwanji Bhatia, AIR 1988 SC 1106 : (1988) 3 SCC 467 : 1988 SCC (Cri) 679 : 1988 CrLJ 1106 : 1988 CrLR (SC) 263.

[11766] ● Confiscation and penalty under Sections 111(d) and 112 Customs Act when not justified.—A harmonised interpretation has to be given to each of the calcareous stones mentioned in the said tariff item in ITC Schedule and nothing should be left out or made redundant in giving the interpretation. The commercial nomenclature or understanding the trade which is generally given in tax statute cannot be taken recourse to in the instant case inasmuch as the statutory context in which the tariff item appears requires departure in the instant case. In the tariff item the calcareous stones used for monumental or building purposes and of a specific gravity of 2.5% or more is used in the scientific or technical sense and as such the commercial nomenclature or understanding in the trade should not be taken recourse to in interpreting the word 'marble'. The reference to the requirement of specific gravity of 2.5% or more is also a purely technical criteria or requirement which shows that the principle of trade nomenclature or commercial understanding is not applicable to that tariff item. Moreover, the said Harmonised system of Nomenclature (HSN) contains a specific note regarding serpentine rocks to the effect that the same are sometimes called marbles, but the same is excluded from Chapter Heading 25. 15. This again clearly shows that according to HSN Chapter, Heading 25. 15. has to be construed according to its technical meaning. Technically, serpentine does not fall under heading 25. 15 and the same is accordingly excluded therefrom by the HSN. If commercial meaning is to be applied then serpentine would have to be classified under item 25. 15 inasmuch as it is sometimes called marble in the trade. The HSN explanation notes, therefore, establish that Chapter Heading 25. 15 must be construed by its technical sense and not by applying a commercial nomenclature test. Considering all these aspects, there is no other alternative but to conclude that the slabs of calcareous stone imported by the appellant are not marbles as mentioned in Entry 62 of Appendix 2 of the Import and Export Police for April 1968 - March 1991 and so it is covered by Open General Licency. The imported goods cannot be confiscated by the Government under Section 111(d) of the Customs Act, 1962 nor the appellant can be given the option to clear the said goods for home consumption on payment of fine of Rs. 5,00,000/- in lieu of confiscation under Section 25 of the Customs Act, 1962. The appellant cannot be said to have imported calcareous stones without an import licence and as such there being no violation of the Import Control Policy the imposition of penalty of Rs. 10,00,000/- under Section 112 of the Customs Act, 1962 is also unwarranted and not sustainable. Akbar Badruddin Giwani v. Collector of Customs, Bombay, AIR 1990 SC 1597 : (1990) 2 SCC 203 : 1990 CrLJ 1304.

[11767] ● Confiscation and penalty when not warranted.—In the instant case, even if it is assumed for argument's sake that the stone slabs imported for home consumption are marbles still in view of the finding arrived at by the Appellate Tribunal that the said product was imported on a bona fide belief that it was not marble, the imposition of such a heavy fine is not at all warranted and justifiable. Akbar Badruddin Giwani v. Collector of Customs, Bombay, AIR 1990 SC 1579 : (1990) 2 SCC 203 : 1990 CrLJ 1304.

[11768] ● Imposition of penalty and fine when justified.—Imposition of penalty and fine justified. Basant Export Corporation v. Collector of Customs, 1995 SCC (Cri) 696.

[11769] ● Smuggling—Detention.—Section 2(39) of the Customs Act refers to goods brought from a place outside India shall be liable to confiscation. Unless there is proper enquiry and arrive at a conclusion in terms of Section 111 or Section 113 of the Customs Act, it cannot be concluded that smuggling had taken place. There is nothing in the order of detention which would indicate that any of the said earlier imports were effected in contravention of any of the provisions of the Customs Act, 1962, or that they could have been regarded as having been smuggled into the country within the meaning of Section 2(39) of the said Act. Except notice for reopening the order clearing eight consignments prior to Bills of Entry dated 25-4-2007, there is no adjudication and final order by the authority concerned. In other words, the reference to alleged violation of the Customs Act in respect of import of eight consignments which was only at the pre-mature stage and considering extraneous materials, which are inconclusive cannot be a valid ground for clamping detention under COFEPOSA Act. Inasmuch as, the Detaining Authority has extensively relied upon the allegations that the detenu was involved in the import of eight consignments through M/s. P.P. Dutta, reliance on those irrelevant material vitiates the detention order. This is more so as the said alleged earlier imports, apparently constitute the main basis for the opinion formed by the Detaining Authority that the detenu had the propensity and potentiality to indulge in smuggling activities in future. Pooja Batra v. Union of India, AIR 2009 SC 2256 : (2009) 5 SCC 296 : 2009 CrLJ 2797 (2803, 2804) : (2009) 2 Crimes 49.

11. SECTION 112

[11770] ● Section 112.—The next question which was canvassed before the High Court was that the quantification of the penalty was very high. The High Court however, noted that the liability was incurred by the petitioner in 1973 and the Collector made the order in 1975. Admittedly for about ten years even after the Collector's order imposing the penalty, the amount of penalty had not been paid by the petitioner. The value of the smuggled goods was Rs. 87,455/- even at that time, on that there is no dispute. The penalty permissible is up to five times the value of the goods. The High Court noted that the benefit derived by the petitioner by non-payment of the amount of Rs 2,00,000/- at least for ten years is sufficient indication that the penalty could not be treated as arbitrary. Chuhar Mal v. Union of India, AIR 1988 SC 1474 : (1988) 3 SCC 257 : 1988 SCC (Cri) 664 : 1988 (3) SCR 797 : 1988 CrLR (SC) 341.

[11771] ● Proceedings for initiation of criminal trial and departmental proceeding under Section 112(b) of Customs Act parallel proceedings.—The proceedings for initiation of Criminal Trial and departmental proceeding under Section 112(b) are parallel proceedings and mere acquittal by Criminal Court does not bind authorities under statute from proceedings under Section 112(b) of the Customs Act and passing appropriate order. Collector of Central Excise, Madras v. K. Ranganathan, (1990) 2 Crimes 570 : (1990) 1 Mad LW 61 : (1990) 1 Mad LJ 399.

12. SECTION 113

[11772] ● Section 113.—So far as the confiscation of goods is concerned, the order in an adjudication proceeding is an order in rem and the penalty is enforced against the goods whether the offender is know or unknown. Indra Senrai v. Collector of Customs, AIR 1958 SC 845 : 1958 CrLJ 1355. TO THE SAME EFFECT : (1) Collector of Customs v. D. Bhurmull, AIR 1974 SC 859 : (1974) 2 SCC 544 : 1975 CrLJ 545.

[11773] ● Collector of Customs to act judicially.—In a proceeding of like nature Collector of Customs acts judicially. Leo Roy Frey v

Supdt., District, AIR 1958 SC 119 : 1958 CrLJ 260. To the same effect : (1) Sewpujanrai v. Collector of Customs, AIR 1958 SC 845 : 1958 CrLJ 1355.

[11774] ● Imposition of fine quasi-judicial act.—The imposition of fine is a quasi judicial act and the test of the quantum of it is the gravity of the offence. Ambalal v. Union of India, AIR 1961 SC 264 : (1961) 1 CrLJ 326 : (1961) 1 SCR 933.

[11775] ● Hire-purchase agreements between owner and customer.—There are three types of hire-purchase agreements. In the first stage of its evolution a transaction of hire-purchase used to take place between the owner or the dealer and the customer, the former wanting to sell his goods and the latter was unable to pay the money necessary for paying the price in one instalment. The parties, therefore, used to enter into an agreement called hire-purchase agreement under which the customer was allowed to use the goods but the owner or dealer, continued to be the owner till the entire consideration was paid by the customer in agreed instalments and till he exercises his option to buy. But the owner or the dealer had not always enough financial solvency to wait till such time as the instalments were paid. This caused the next stage of evolution under which a financier intervened between the dealer and the customer - the financier purchasing goods from the dealer and then entering into an agreement with the customer under which agreement the financier becomes the owner and the customer hirer until such time as the customer carries out the terms of the agreement. Sundaram Finance v. State of Kerala, AIR 1966 SC 1178 : (1966) 2 SCR 828.

[11776] ● Exclusion of jurisdiction of Civil Court—Inference of.—Exclusion of the jurisdiction of the civil Courts cannot be readily inferred but must either be explicitly expressed or clearly implied. Even in cases of such exclusion of jurisdiction the civil Courts can examine cases where statutory provisions have not been complied with or statutory tribunals have not acted in conformity with the fundamental principles of natural justice or the fundamental principles of judicial procedure. State of W.B. v. Indian Iron & Steel, AIR1970 SC 1298 : (1970)2 SCC 39 : (1970) 2 SCWR 41 : 1970 SCD 544.

[11777] ● Export of goods contrary to any law.—Before invoking Section 113(d) contravention of the Act or any law for the time being in force must be proved. A citizen of Nepal contracted with a firm in Cairo for shipment of dal through Calcutta. On the point of time he was shipping dal in Calcutta port, the consignment was seized - held, Nepal has not undertaken not to re-export the goods imported from India by the treaty entered into in 1960 between Nepal and India and the confiscation is illegal as no contravention is proved. Padam Kumar Agrwala v. Addl. Collector, Customs, AIR 1972 SC 542.

[11778] ● Seizure of property by Customs Authority—Return of.—In respect of property seized by Customs authority, when the trial pends, Magistrate has no jurisdiction to return unless it is produced in Court. Remo Paul Altoe v. Union of India, AIR 1977 SC 2255 : (1977) 4 SCC 437 : 1977 CrLJ 1933.

13. SECTION 114-A

[11779] ● Section 114-A—Applicability.—Section 114-A can be invoked for imposition of equivalent amount of duty as penalty in cases where the short levy or non-levy has occurred due to misdeclaration or suppression of facts on the part of assess importer. Commissioner of Customs v. M.M.K. Jewellers, (2008) 5 SCC 617.

14. SECTION 123

[11780] ● Section 123.—The only prerequisite condition for application of Section 123, i.e. for invoking the presumption that the goods are smuggled goods is the subjectivity of the customs officer in having a reasonable belief that the goods found in possession of any person are smuggled goods. Then the burden of proving the contrary i.e. that the goods are not smuggled falls upon that person. Babulal v. Collector of Customs, AIR 1957 SC 877 : 1957 SCR 1110.

[11781] ● Seizure by proper officer.—For invocation of presumption the seizure must be proper officer. Gian Chand v. State of Punjab, AIR 1962 SC 496 : (1962) 1 CrLJ 485.

[11782] ● Burden of proof.—The burden of proof is shifted to accused only when the goods were "seized" in the sense that they were taken out of possession of an accused by a proper officer. Gian Chand v. State of Punjab, AIR 1962 SC 496 : (1962) 1 CrLJ 485.

[11783] ● Waiver—Intentional relinquishment.—Waiver is an intentional relinquishment of known right. Such intention may be inferred from circumstances, but the right in question must be a known right. Dhiren Garai v. Sudhir, AIR 1964 SC 1300 : (1964) 6 SCR 1001. To the same effect : (1) Motilal Padamput v. State of U.P., AIR 1979 SC 621 : (1979) 2 SCC 469 : (1979) 2 SCR 641; (2) Provash Chandra Dolui v.

Bishwanath Bannerjee, AIR 1989 SC 1834 (1840) : 1989 Supp (1) SCC 487.

[11784] ● Opportunity of being heard does not includes cross-examination.—Section 124(c) which provides for reasonable opportunity of being heard does not include the right to cross-examine persons not summoned by Department but on whose statements reliance is placed by Department. Kanungo & Co. v. Collector of Customs, AIR 1972 SC 2136 : (1973) 2 SCC 438.

[11785] ● Notice to owner of goods statutory requirement.—A mandatory requirement of the statute is giving of the notice to the owner whose goods are being confiscated within six months from the date of the seizure. The Collector at the instance of the investigating Customs Officer after hearing the person concerned may extend the time. Asstt. Collector of Customs v. Charan Das Malhotra, AIR 1972 SC 689 : (1971) 1 SCC 697.

[11786] ● Waiver of notice under Customs Act—Principles of.—For principles of waiver of notice under the Customs Act. Loke Nath Tolaram v. B.N. Rangwani, AIR 1974 SC 150 : (1974) 3 SCC 575 : 1975 CrLJ 540.

[11787] ● Discharge of burden by accused that seized liquor not smuggled.—In the present case, Section 123 was notified to be applicable to liquor on 10.10.74. Seizure was effected on 27.9.74 and confiscation made on 25.6.75 Section 123 applies and the person is to discharge the burden that seized liquor was not smuggled. Balumal v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1975 SC 2083 : (1975) 4 SCC 645 : 1975 CrLJ 1862.

[11788] ● Section 123 of Customs Act to be applied when.—Section 123 can be applied when the case comes up for trial, it being immaterial when the seizure was effected. Balumal Jamnadas v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1975 SC 2083 : (1975) 4 SCC 645 : 1975 CrLJ 1862.

[11789] ● Goods smuggled—Inference as to origin and recent import.—The very appearance of the goods and the manner in which they were packed indicated that they were newly manufactured and brought into this country very recently from another country. The inscriptions on them and writing on the boxes were parts of the State in which the goods in unopened boxes were found, from which inference about their origin and recent import could arise. The appellant's conduct, including his untruthful denial of their possession, indicated consciousness of their smuggled character or mens rea. In any case there was some evidence to enable the Court to come to the conclusion that the goods must have been known to the appellant to be smuggled even if he was not a party to a fraudulent evasion of duty. Balumal Jamnadas Batra v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1975 SC 2083 : (1975) 4 SCC 645 : 1975 SCC (Cri) 660 (663) : 1975 CrLJ 1862 : 1975 CrLR (SC) 533 : (1976) 1 SCR 539 : 1975 UJ (SC) 701.

[11790] ● Seizure of goods must be by proper custom officer.—In order to apply Section 123 of the Customs Act there must be a "seizure" of the goods by the proper Customs Officer duly authorised as provided by Section 110 of the Act. The learned counsel relied strongly on Gian Chand v. State of Punjab, AIR 1962 SC 496 : 1962 (1) CrLJ 485. Where it was held under the corresponding provisions of Sea Customs Act, 1878 that the burden of proof was shifted on to the accused only when the goods were "seized" in the sense that they were taken out of the possession of an accused by the "proper officer". That was also a case of "seizure" of allegedly smuggled gold. There the police had initially commenced proceeding under Sections 411, and 414, IPC against the accused but afterwards the case was handed over to the custom authorities. The initial "seizure" being one by the ordinary police, it was held to be not under the Act and that no presumption would arise against the accused.. Burden of proof on accused was not wrongly placed. Labhchand Dhanpat Singh Jain v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1975 SC 182 : (1975) 3 SCC 385 : 1975 SCC (Cri) 11 (13-14) : 1975 CrLJ 246 : 1975 CrLR (SC) 105.

[11791] ● Adjudicator when committing manifest error.—An adjudicator committing manifest error, High Court under Art. 226, Constitution of India can interfere. Collector of Customs v. Padnekar, AIR 1976 SC 1408 : (1976) 3 SCC 790.

[11792] ● Gold with foreign markings recovered from accused.—Gold with foreign markings recovered from the possession of accused; the accused admitting he had no permit for importing gold under Section 106 read with presumption of Section 114, Evidence Act the accused knew that the gold in his possession was smuggled. Shah Guman Mai v. State of A.P., AIR 1980 SC 793 : (1980) 2 SCC 262 : 1980 SCC (Cri) 432 : 1980 CrLJ 557 : 1980 MadLW (Cri) 125 : 1980 CrApR (SC) 97.

[11793] ● Accused coating pure gold by silver.—The fact that accused coated pure gold by silver (here a gold chain) by itself evokes the suspicion that it was made of smuggled gold

State of Gujarat v. Mohanlal Jitmalji Porwal, AIR 1987 SC 1321 : (1987) 2 SCC 364 : 1987 CrLJ 1061 : (1987) 2 Crimes 1 (SC).

[11795] ● Smuggled goods—Reasonable belief of customs officer seizing foreign made watches.—The evidence in the present case discloses that all the wrist watches are having foreign marks. The Customs Officers, taking into consideration the various impelling circumstances appearing in the case, have arrived at the conclusion on a reasonable belief that these goods are smuggled goods. As rightly pointed out by learned Addl. Solicitor General, the respondents from whom these contrabands were seized have not satisfactorily discharged the burden of proof cases upon them as required by Section 123 of the Customs Act that they are not smuggled goods. When the facts of the case are examine the light of the dictum laid down by this Court, we have no compunction. In coming to the conclusion that the prosecution has established its case. Union of India v. Shyamsunder, AIR 1994 SC 485 : (1994) 74 ELT 197.

[11796] ● Accused found in possession of silver ingots when.—Where the accused is found in possession of silver ingots in notified areas the burden is on the accused to prove that either he does not know about the existence of ingots or is unconnected with the same. Dev Chand Kalyan Jandel v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1996 SC 2787 : 1996 (6) SCC 255 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 1303 : 1996 CrLJ 4147 : JT 1996 (7) SC 256 : 1996 (6) Supreme 151.

[11797] ● Gold-biscuits found in possession of respondent liable for confiscation.—The Appellate Authority itself did not choose to rely upon any presumption available under S. 123 of the Customs Act but proceeded to consider and rely upon the material that was available to establish that on the date of arrest the respondent was in possession of unmarked gold biscuits; in regard to origin of which or importation of which the respondent was either ignorant or was not willing to divulge and remained evasive. The authorities also have taken note of other materials on record to which we have made reference and which in our opinion, are sufficient in the circumstances of this case to come to the conclusion that the gold found in possession of the respondent is liable for confiscation and the respondent was liable for the penalty de hors the presumption contemplated under Section 123 of the Customs Act. Union of India v. Rajendra Prabhu, AIR 2001 SC 1672 : (2001) 4 SCC 472 : 2001 SCC (Cri) 745(751).

15. SECTION 125

[11798] ● Section 125.—Under Section 125(1) of the Act, the Collector of Customs has discretion to give option for redemption of confiscated goods on payment of such fines as might be determined by him, having regard to the facts and circumstances of the case. It was just, fair and proper for the authority to have addressed himself to the question of giving the said option. The Matter is, therefore, remitted to the Collector of Customs for determining as to whether or not to give option to redeem the confiscated goods on payment of such fine as may be considered appropriate by him in lieu of confiscation. Hargovind Das K. Joshi v. Collector of Customs, AIR 1987 SC 1982 : (1987) 2 SCC 230 : 1987 SCC (Cri) 343 : 1987 CrLR (SC) 543.

[11799] ● Redemption fine—Imposition of.—It is an admitted fact that the goods were released to the appellants on an application made by it and on the appellant executing a bond. Under these circumstances, of subsequently it is found that the import was not valid or that there was any other irregularity which would entitle the customs authorities to confiscate the said goods, then the mere fact that the goods were released on the bond being executed, would not take away the power of the customs authorities to levy redemption fine. Weston Components Ltd. v. Commissioner of Customs, New Delhi, AIR 2000 SC 561 (562) : (2000) 1 SCC 565.

16. SECTION 129-E

[11800] ● Section 129-E.—Section 129-E of the Customs Act, 1962 provides a conditional right of appeal in respect of an appeal against the duty demanded or penalty levied. Although the section does not expressly provide for rejection of the appeal for non-deposit of duty or penalty, yet it makes it obligatory on the appellant to deposit the duty or penalty, pending the appeal, failing which the Appellate Tribunal is fully competent to reject the appeal. In the instant case, the only substantive right is the right of appeal as contemplated under Ss. 129-A and 129-E of the Customs Act and that right is a conditional one and the Legislature in its wisdom has imposed that condition. No question of whittling down that right by an alteration of procedure arises in this case. Right to appeal is neither an absolute right nor an ingredient of natural justice the principles of which must be followed in all judicial and quasi-judicial adjudications. The right to appeal is a statutory right and it can be circumscribed by the conditions in the grant. It is not the law that adjudication by itself following the rules of natural justice would be violative of any right – Constitutional or statutory - without any right of appeal, as such if the statute gives a right to appeal upon certain conditions, it is upon fulfillment of these conditions that the right becomes vested and execrcisable to the appellant. The proviso to Section 129-E of the Act gives a discretion to the Tribunal in cases of undue hardships to condone the obligation to deposit or to reduce. It is a discretion vested in an obligation to act judicially and properly. Vijay Prakash D. Mehta and Jawahar D. Mehta v. Collector of Customs (Preventive) Bombay, AIR 1988 SC 2010 (2012, 2013) : (1988) 4 SCC 402 : 1989 CrLR (SC) 75 : JT 1988 (3) SC 435 : (1988) 2 UJ (SC) 609.

17. SECTION 132

[11801] ● Allegations of commission of offence of false declaration and false documents committed under IPC.—The plea raised that since the allegation in the complaint related to false declaration and false documents, the appellant could be prosecuted only under Section 132 of the Customs Act and not under the offences covered by the Indian Penal Code was unsustainable. Merely because there may be some overlapping in the two offences, it does not mean that the appellant cannot be tried under the offences covered under the Penal Code. M. Natarajan v. State, (2008) 8 SCC 413 : (2008) 3 SCC (Cri) 507 : JT 2008 (6) SC 451.

18. SECTION 135

[11802] ● Section 135.—Initiation and continuances of proceedings for imposition of penalty for a person complicity in the smuggling of gold would not amount to a contempt of Court, though his trial in a criminal Court for offences under Section 135(b) of the Act and other similar offences were imminent and identical issues would arise in the proceedings before the custom authorities and the criminal Court. Tukaram Gaokar v. B.N. Shukla, AIR 1968 SC 1050 : 1968 CrLJ 1234 : (1969) 1 SCA 189 : (1968) 3 SCR 422.

[11803] ● Accused in conscious possession or keeping of smuggled gold.—The High Court overlooked several tell-tale circumstances appearing in evidence which unerringly pointed to the conclusion that the gold in question was smuggled gold. These circumstances are : (a) The gold biscuits in question bore foreign markings which proclaimed their foreign origin; (b) This gold was of 24 carat purity which was not available in India at the material time. This circumstance reinforces the inference of its being smuggled gold; (c) These gold biscuits were found concealed and stitched in the folds of jacket specially prepared for this purpose; (d) The gold, was in the shape of gold biscuits and was of huge value, which at the then prevailing market rate, was Rs. 1,85,000; (e) After the seizure of this gold the accused absconded and continued to be a fugitive from justice till March 4, 1962. The circumstances catalogued above irresistibly lead to the conclusion that the gold in question is smuggled gold, having been recently brought into India from a foreign country without payment of duty, and further it had been brought into India in contravention of the notification dated March 25, 1947 issued by the Central Government under Section 89(1) of the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act, 1947 prohibiting the import into India of gold without the permission of the Reserve Bank. In view of the above facts and circumstances, it was for the accused-respondent to show that it had been brought into India with the permission of the Reserve Bank. The existence of this fact viz., whether it had been imported with or without the necessary permission of the Reserve Bank, was a matter within the peculiar knowledge of the accused-respondent. It was, therefore, for the accused to rebut the inference which arose under Section 114, Evidence Act from the surrounding circumstances of the case, that it was contraband gold, smuggled into India. Once it is held that the accused was in conscious possession or "keeping" of this smuggled gold, it will follow as a necessary corollary therefrom that he had the mens rea requisite under cls. (a) and (b) of Section 135(1), Customs Act. State of Maharashtra v. Natwarlal Damodardas Soni, AIR 1980 SC 593 : (1980) 4 SCC 669 : 1980 SCC (Cri) 98 (106-107) : 1980 CrLJ 429 : 1980 CrLR (SC) 105 : (1980) 2 SCR 340 : 1980 UJ (SC) 171.

[11804] ● Requisite guilty knowledge or mens rea to be established by circumstantial evidence.—The requisite guilty knowledge or mens rea under cls. (a) and (b) of Section 135(1). Customs Act can be established by circumstantial evidence, also. In order to substantiate the charge under cl. (b) against the respondent, the prosecution had to prove:

(a) that he had acquired possession of or was in any way concerned in keeping or concealing the gold bars;

(b) that he knew or had reason to believe that these gold bars were smuggled goods, and, thus liable to confiscation under Section 111 of the Customs Act. It is trite law that even in cases where Section 123(1) of the Customs Act is not attracted, the prosecution can discharge its burden by establishing circumstances from which a prudent man, acting prudently, may infer that in all probability, the goods in question were smuggled goods, and the accused had the requisite guilty knowledge in respect thereof. State of Maharashtra v. Natwarlal Damodardas Soni, AIR 1980 SC 593 : (1980) 4 SCC 669 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 98 (105) : 1980 CrLJ 429 : 1980 CrLR (SC) 105 : (1980) 2 SCR 340 : 1980 UJ (SC) 171.

[11805] ● Imposition of fine in lieu of confiscation—Discretion of custom authorities.—Of course, the fine to be imposed in lieu of confiscation is in the discretion of the customs authorities but it would be unfair if the punishments awarded respectively to the appellants and the licensee mills were glaringly disproportionate when, as would appear from the facts summarised above both were guilty of trafficking in licence. Jayantilal K. Katakia v. P. Govindan Nair, AIR 1981 SC 1196 : (1981) 2 SCC 423 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 458 (462) : 1981 CrLR (SC) 508.

[11806] ● Accused mature person convicted for smuggling large quantity of gold.—Not entitled to benefit under Section 4 of probation of Offender Act.—The respondent was convicted for an offence under clause (a) read with clause (i) of Section 135 of the Customs Act, another under clause (b) read with clause (i) of that Section and still another under Rule 126-H (a) read with Rule 126-P(ii) and (iv) of the Defence of India Rules and was sentenced to various terms of imprisonment and fine. The conviction recorded against and the sentence imposed upon the respondent were challenged by him right upto this Court which remanded the case to the High Court for a fresh decision. Before the High Court, the only prayer made was that the respondent be given the benefit of Section 4 of the probation of Offenders Act. That prayer was accepted by the High Court. However, the fact that such offence have become rampant and have already endangered the economy of the nation is part of current history and the Supreme Court cannot look upon the present state of affairs with equanimity and deal with the commission of such offences leniently. In this view of the matter, recourse to Section 4 of the Act was not at all called for. State of Maharashtra v. Kapur Chand Kesarimal Jain, AIR 1981 SC 927 : (1981) 2 SCC 458 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 491 : 1980 CrLR (SC) 506.

[11807] ● Export of silver without licence.—The words "with respect to such goods" occurring at the end of cl. (a) of Section 135(1), Customs Act are not limited only to goods falling within the first part of Section 135(1)(a), that is goods on which duty is chargeable but it refers to any goods in respect of which prohibition is imposed under the Customs Act 1962, or any other law for the time being in force. A fishing vessel loaded with huge quantity of silver ingots on way to an Island to load the silver to a ship going to Dubai was intercepted by Customs official after hot chase. No duty was chargeable on export of silver, still the accused was answerable under Section 135(1)(a)(ii). The ingredients of Section 135(1) (a) explained. Asstt. Collector of Customs v. Babu Miya Seith, AIR 1983 SC 974 : (1983) 3 SCC 447 : 1983 SCC (Cri) 662 : 1983 CrLJ 1494 : 1983 CrLR (SC) 434 : (1983) 2 Crimes 281 : 1983 ELT 1666.

[11808] ● Sentence—Modified to period already undergone.—It was brought to our notice that appellant Suraj Mal Saraf is aged about 80 years and Raj Kumar Mehra is aged about 65 years, that both of them are of indifferent health; that they have undergone the ordeal of trial and subsequent proceedings for nearly 25 years and as such the appellants may not be sent back to Jail. Accordingly we modify the sentence awarded to the appellants the period of imprisonment already undergone by them. Suraj Mal Saraf v. Assistant Collector of Customs Amritsar, AIR 1987 SC 1158 : (1987) 2 SCC 283 : 1987 SCC (Cri) 348 (349-350) : 1987 CrLJ 1057 : 1987 CrLR (SC) 193.

[11809] ● Sentence—Reduction of.—In the instant case, we take into consideration his advanced age (65 years here) and the passage of time and reduce his substantive sentence from five years R. 9 to three years R. 9 and enhance the fine from Rs. 5000 to Rs. 20,000 and in default sentence to one year should be fail to pay the fine. Mehtab Singh Gulati v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1991 SC 1925 : 1991 SCC (Cri) 1044 (1045) : 1991 Supp (2) SCC 391 : 1991 CrLJ 2325.

[11810] ● Statement before customs authorities not to be used for corroboration of co-accused.—Statement given before the custom authorities is not to be used for the corroboration of the evidence of the co-accused turned prosecution witness. Accused cannot be convicted solely on such evidence. Superintendent of Customs v. Bhanabhai Khalpabhai Patel, AIR 1992 SC 1538 : 1992 CrLJ 2516 : JT 1991 (2) (SC) 305.

[11811] ● Sentence—Reduction of.—In view of the existence of mitigating circumstances—This Court reduces the sentence to period already undergone and increased the fine. Rohit Kumar Mehra v. Asstt. Collector, Customs, 1994 SCC (Cri) 154 (SC).

[11812] ● Bar on acquiring specified goods within specified area.—Sub-section (2) of Section 11-J, Customs Act prescribes a bar on acquiring any specified goods within the specified area unless before making such acquisition, he delivers to the proper officer an intimation containing the particulars of the place where such goods are proposed to be kept or stored, after such acquisition. Per se this will amount to be prohibition in acquiring specified goods within the specified area, the value whereof exceeds fifteen thousand rupees, unless the conditions for such acquisition are fulfilled with. There is no dispute in the present case that the appellant, never before making acquisition, delivered to the proper officer any intimation in respect of acquisition, of those silver ingots and the place where such silver ingots were proposed to be kept or stored after the acquisition. In this background, there should not be any difficulty in holding that the appellant was concerned in fraudulent evasion or attempt at evasion of the aforesaid prohibition under sub-section (2) of Section 11-J in relation to specified goods. Bhanbhai Khalphabhai v. Collector of Customs, 1994 Supp (2) SCC 143 : 1994 SCC (Cri) 882 (887).

[11813] ● Charge of carrying silver without any transport voucher within specified area.—The fact that accused was found to be inside the vehicle from which the silver ingots were recovered; the fact that the vehicle did not stop even though customs authorities signalled for stopping; the fact that two Courts below disbelieved the plea of accused, Devanchand about the break down of his fiat car and he is taking an innocent lift by the ambassador car from the secret pocket of which the silver ingots were recovered; and that the place from where recovery was made is undoubtedly a place within the notified area under Section 11 K of the Act and further that there was no transport voucher as required under Section 11 K of the Act, unhesitatingly pointing towards the complicity of the accused in the commission of the offence under Section 135(1) and the presumption. Under Section 138-A having been rightly attracted. The burden lay on the accused appellant to establish that either he did not know about the fact of silver ingots being transported in the vehicle or that he was in no way connected with the same. But the accused utterly failed to discharge the said burden. The conviction must be held to be well founded and the sentence passed thereunder is wholly justified. Devchand Kalyan Tandel v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1996 SC 2787 : (1996) 6 SCC 255 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 1303 : 1996 CrLJ 4147.

[11814] ● Presumption as to culpable mental state under Section 138-A of Custom Act—Raising of.—It is, no doubt true that in a charge for violation of the provisions of Section 135-(1)(a) it is required for the prosecution to establish that the accused have fraudulently evaded or attempted to evade any duty chargeable on the goods or that violated the prohibition imposed under the Act in respect of the goods. But if the prosecution establishes the aforesaid facts then there is no necessity of attracting the statutory presumption under Section 135(1)(a). But the Legislature having found it difficult to establish the necessary ingredient of such evasion of duty or prohibitions and the economic offences having grown in proportion beyond the control, came forward with the presumption available under Section 138-A of the Act. The main object of Section 138-A is to raise a presumption as to culpable oriental state or the part of the accused when he is prosecuted in a Court of law. In other words, if a recovery is made from the accused of any prohibited goods within the notified area then the statutory presumption would arise that he was knowingly concerned in the fraudulent evasion or attempted evasion of any duty chargeable on the goods in question. Devchand Kalyan Tandel v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1996 SC 2787 : (1996) 6 SCC 255 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 1303 : 1996 CrLJ 4147.

[11815] ● Sentence reduction of—To period of imprisonment already undergone.—The prosecution has established that the appellant was concerned in an attempt at evasion of duty under the provisions of the Act, as such committed the offence under first part of Section 135(1)(a) of the Act. He was also concerned in evasion of the prohibition imposed by sub-section (2) of Section 11-J of the Act, by not having delivered to the proper officer, an intimation containing the particulars of the place, where the silver ingots, in such a huge quantity were to be kept and stored.

as such he committed the offence even under the second part of Section 135(1)(a) of the Act. The very fact that 3274.98 kgs. of silver ingots worth more than rupees 18 lakhs had been kept buried near the well in the garden, leads to irresistible conclusion that the said silver ingots had not been kept or stored in normal course of business.

The appellant in this case had already undergone imprisonment for nearly five months. The offence is under Section 135 of the Customs Act on the allegation that he was found in possession of 48 wrist watches costing about Rs. 22000/- incident happened on 1st January, 1976. It is not necessary to confirm the sentence of one year imposed on him due to this distance of time and also due to the broad aspect involved in this case including the value of the contraband seized from him. The sentence is reduced to the period of imprisonment which appellant has already undergone. Udai Kant Jha v. Union of India, AIR 2000 SC 3641 : (2000) 9 SCC 199.

[11816] ● Release of petitioner on bail on executing bail bond.—In the instant case a poor lady of foreign country who has been arrested for offences under Sections 132 and 135 is kept as undertrial for two long years. It is totally unjust to keep such persons as undertrials for years together on the allegation that the petitioner is involved in smuggling activities for which no other prosecution is pointed out to be pending. Further, to impose a condition that the petitioner shall execute a bail bond for a sum of Rs. 6 lakhs would be unjust in a circumstance of the present case, considering the aforesaid facts it is ordered that the petitioner shall be released on bail on her executing a bail bond for a sum of Rs. 10,000/- with one surety. Olga Kozirena v. Department of Customs, (2002) 10 SCC 373 : 2004 SCC (Cri) 1126 (1127).

[11817] ● Scope of Section 135.—Section 135(1)(a) of the Act is in two parts. The first part relates evasion of duty, the second part relates to prohibitions. The word "or" used therein must be read disjunctively and not conjunctively. Gurcharan Singh v. Directorate of Revenue Intelligence, (2008) 17 SCC 28 : 2008 CrLJ 2238 (SC) : JT 2008 (4) SC 383 : 2008 (5) SCR 856.

[11818] ● Complaint for offences—Allegations disclosing prima facie case—High Court refused to quash proceedings.—In the instant case, it was alleged that the accused including a custom officer conspired in regard to export of inferior quality of ready-made garments which had been over-invoiced. The High Court correctly refused to quash the proceedings, as the allegations made out a prima facie case disclosing an offence under Section 135 of the Act. Gurcharan Singh v. Directorate of Revenue Intelligence, (2008) 17 SCC 28 : 2008 CrLJ 2238 : 2008 (5) SCR 856 : JT 2008 (4) SC 383.

19. SECTION 137

[11819] ● Compounding of offences—Basic requirement.—For compounding of offences under Section 137(3), the disclosure, which is the basis and requirement of compounding of offences, has to be in relation to the facts of the case. Compounding authority must be satisfied that the applicant has done all he could or need to do in the matter. If there are demonstratable contradictions or inconsistencies or incompleteness in the case of applicant, the application for compounding of offences under Sections 137(3), 135(1)(a) and 132 of the Customs Act, is liable to be rejected. Union of India v. Anil Chanana, (2008) 4 SCC 175 : 2008 (2) SCC (Cri) 761 : 2008 (2) SCR 1 : JT 2008 (2) SC 1.

[11820] ● Compounding of offences—Requirement.—The applicant has to be one-time evader and has to make clean breast of his affairs. Union of India v. Anil Chanana, 2008 (2) SCC (Cri) 761 : JT 2008 (2) SC 1.

20. SECTION 138-A

[11821] ● Section 138-A.—Section 138-A had come in force before the trial commenced. The provision relates only to burden and nature of proof at the trial, as such it was applicable in the present case. In view of the aforesaid section, a presumption has to be drawn, in respect of existence of the alleged mental state. An option has been given to the accused to prove by way of defence the fact, that he did not have any such mental state with respect to the act charged which is an offence. It can be said that the provision aforesaid is an exception to the general criminal jurisprudence that onus never shifts on the accused and he has only to raise a doubt in the mind of the Court, in respect of the correctness of the prosecution version. It is different from Sections 106 and 114 of the Evidence Act. In view of Section 138-A, once a presumption is raised about a culpable mental state on the part of the accused, that he had stored the silver ingots, to export them outside the country evading payment of custom duties, the accused has to prove as defence that no such mental state with respect to the act charged, did exist. No material has been produced on behalf of the appellant to discharge this burden. He had not explained as to why 3274.98 kgs. of silver ingots, worth rupees more than 18 lakhs had been concealed underground near a well in his Wadi without any intimation being given to the proper officer concerned, before acquisition of those silver ingots as required by sub-section (2) of Section 11-J. Bhanabhai Khalpabhai v. Collector of Customs, 1994 Supp (2) SCC 143 : 1994 SCC (Cri) 882 (887).

21. SECTION 151

[11822] ● Section 151.—Section 151 of the Customs Act empowers and requires certain specified officers enumerated under clauses (a) to (e) to assist officers of the customs in the execution of the Act one of the officers enumerated under clause (c) is "officers of police". But this section does not empower Police Officers to exercise the powers conferred upon Customs Officers by and under the Act but only authorities and requires the Police Officers to assist the Customs Officers in the exercise of their powers. The "proper officer" referred to in various provisions of the Customs Act, who is to perform any function under the said Act, means the Officer of Customs who is assigned those functions by the Board or Collector of Customs as defined under cl. (34) of Section 2 of the Customs Act, but it does not include the Officers of Police or any other Officers enumerated under Section 151. Therefore, the Police Officers have no independent role to play in exercise of the powers under the Customs Act as in Ss. 45 and 46 of the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act. Directorate of Enforcement v. Deepak Mahajan, AIR 1994 SC 1775 : (1994) 3 SCC 440 : 1994 SCC (Cri) 785 : 1994 CrLJ 2269.

22. SECTION 155

[11823] ● Section 155.—It is, however, necessary to indicate a note of caution in the matter of consideration of protection against criminal liability if sought for under Section 155 of the Customs Act at the threshold of the Criminal Trial. Since such immunity is claimed at the threshold, the Court should carefully scrutinise the relevant facts and materials placed before it for the purpose of finding (a) that the concerned officer was authorised to act for prevention of smuggling activity and in fact had bona fide acted in exercise of his duties and functions in preventing the smuggling activities being carried or about to be carried, (b) there are prima facie materials to indicate that such officer had honestly attempted to stop the conveyance for effecting search of the same, (c) that such an attempt to stop the vehicle was sought to be frustrated either by not stopping the vehicle or by attempting to forcibly take away the vehicle despite attempt by the concerned officer to stop the vehicle, and (d) that recourse to use of force on the driver or occupant of the vehicle was apparently necessary to immobilise the vehicles or to save himself from imminent danger of personal risk. If on consideration of the materials placed before the Court, a possible view can be objectively taken that in discharge of the duties and functions under Section 106 of the Customs Act that a competent officer had bona fide used force and such use of force is not just a ruse for high handed action on his part which was not at all necessary in the facts of the case but prima facie there is justification for the course of action pleaded by the officer, the Court would give effect to the protection under Section 155 of the Customs Act by dropping the criminal case initiated against the concerned officer. The facts already on record, some of which have been indicated in the judgment of my learned brother, indicate that the appellant was on official duty as preventive officer to look out for smuggling activities at the relevant time and in discharge of his official duties he had chased a speeding contessa car driven by the deceased in an attempt to stop the car for searching the same. As a matter of fact, he overtook the car and having disclosed his identity asked the deceased to stop the car but when the driver had attempted to flee with the car, he jumped into the same and tried to take out the ignition key in order to stop the vehicle. It has not been revealed that appellant had received various injuries including incised wounds which on the basis of medical report are likely to have been caused at the time when attempt to stop car was made. Such facts prima facie support the appellant's claim for the protection under Section 155 of the Customs Act. In the facts of the case, it will not be proper to disallow such protection under Section 155 of the Customs Act to the appellant but to subject him to a full fledged trial on a charge of murder by pointing out that it would be open to the appellant to plead for right to private defence in such trial, like any other accused. Costao Fernandes v. State, AIR 1996 SC 1383 : (1996) 7 SCC 516 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 489 : 1996 CrLJ 1723 (SC) : 1996 CrLR (SC) 339 : (1996) 3 Crimes 125 : (1996) 1 CCR 193.

1. APPLICATION OF SECTION 149, IPC

[11824] ● Application of Section 149, IPC.—Framing of a charge under Section 395, r/w Section 149, IPC, is a mere surplusage as an offence under Section 395 would come into existence only when an act of dacoity is committed by 5 or more persons jointly. On consideration of the evidence only three of the appellants are found guilty under minor offences. Musakhan v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1976 SC 2566 : (1977) 1 SCC 733 : 1976 CrLJ 1987 : 1976 CrLR (SC) 466.

2. ATTEMPT TO COMMIT DACOITY (SECTION 398, IPC)

[11825] ● Attempt to commit dacoity.—Different words are used in to sections, viz., "used" in Section 397 and "is armed" in Section 398; the anomaly is resolved if the two terms are given identical meaning. When the offender is armed with a deadly weapon which was within the vision of the fiction so as to be capable of creating a terror in his mind, the offender must be deemed to have used that deadly weapon in the commission of dacoity. Phool Kumar v. Delhi Admn., AIR 1975 SC 905 : (1975) 1 SCC 797 : (1975) SCC (Cri) 336 : 1975 CrLJ 778 : 1975 CrLR (SC) 272 : 1975 All CrC 219.

[11826] ● Mere scattering of articles in house does not constitute offences of robbery or dacoity.—When no robbery or dacoity has been committed as such, in the sense that no property was removed from the house of the complainants and nothing said to be belonging to the complainants was recovered, it would be difficult to hold that there was any attempt in regard to the commission of robbery or dacoity. Scattering of articles in the house may cause a scene as if ransacked, but that does not prove the charge, on the evidence, the conviction of the appellant under Section 398, IPC is not sustainable. Chinnadurai v. State of T.N., AIR 1996 SC 546, at p. 547 : 1996 (1) CCR 153.

3. ESSENTIALS

[11827] ● Essentials.—The essential element of the offence of dacoity under Section 395 is that five or more persons must be concerned in the commission of robbery or in the attempt to commit it. The combined effect of the definitions of robbery and dacoity in Sections 390 and 391 is that if theft is in fact committed by five or more persons conjointly, and if while the offenders are carrying away the property obtained by theft, any one of them voluntarily causes or attempts to cause death or hurt or fear of instant death or hurt, each one of the offenders is said to commit "dacoity". Shaym Behari v. State of U.P., AIR 1957 SC 320 : 1957 CrLJ 416.

[11828] ● Accused running away without committing robbery.—When a murder is committed by one of the dacoits at the time when they are chased, say by shooting at or by giving a knife blow to some one of the pursuers, and he and his companions are charged under Section 396 for the offence of dacoity with murder, the first question which the Court has to determine is whether at the time when the murder took place the dacoits were running away with looted property or were running away empty-handed. If at the time when the murder took place, the dacoits were running away with the property obtained in the loot, each one of them would be guilty under Section 396 of the offence of dacoity with murder, whatever be the distance of the spot where the murder was committed from the scene of the dacoity and whatever the gap of time between the two, because the act of dacoity continues in law as long as the looted property is being carried away. On the other hand, if the dacoity has failed and the offenders are running away empty-handed, while they are being chased, and then one of them commits the murder of someone of the persons who are chasing them, it becomes a question of fact in each case whether the others could be held guilty under Section 396. In such a case the question whether the transaction of dacoity was still continuing right up to the time when the murder took place or whether it was completed before then, will depend upon the facts and circumstances of each case, and in determining that question the Court will have to take into consideration factors such as the lapse of time, the distance of the pursuit, the break in the pursuit, etc., etc. If after considering all the circumstances, the Court concludes that the transaction of dacoity was still continuing, the others will be guilty under Section 396, and if not, they will be guilty under Section 395 only, even though the principal offender is convicted under Sections 396 and 302. Shyam Behari v. State of U.P., AIR 1957 SC 320 : 1957 CrLJ 416.

[11829] ● Accused while carrying away stolen property exploded crackers to frighten inmates of house—Conviction.—The appellants have been rightly convicted under Section 395, IPC because while carrying away the stolen property they exploded crackers to frighten the inmates of the house who wanted to pursue them. Kusho Mahton v. State of Bihar, AIR 1980 SC 788 : 1980 Supp SCC 344 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 279 (280) : 1980 CrLJ 313.

4. ASSEMBLING FOR PURPOSE OF COMMITTING DACOITY (SECTION 402, IPC)

[11830] ● Assembling for purpose of committing dacoity.—Prosecution evidence merely showed, that eight persons were found in the school premises, some of them armed with guns, some had cartridges and others ran away. The mere fact that these persons were found at 1 a.m. does not, by itself, prove that the appellants were there for the purpose of committing dacoity or for making preparations to accomplish that object. The High Court itself observed that the school was quite close to the market and hence it was difficult to believe that the appellants would assemble at such a conspicuous place with the intention of committing a dacoity and would take such a grave risk. There was no legal evidence to support the charges against the appellants. Possibility that they might have collected for the purpose of murdering somebody or committing some other offence could not be safely eliminated. Decision of the Patna High Court was reversed. Chaturi Yadav v. State of Bihar, AIR 1979 SC 1412 : (1979) 3 SCC 430 : 1979 SCC (Cri) 502 : 1979 CrLJ 1090 : 1979 CrLR (SC) 369 : 1979 BBCJ (SC) 61 : 1979 UJ (SC) 404 : 1979 BLJR 519.

5. CONVICTION OF LESS THAN FIVE PERSONS

[11831] ● Conviction of less than five persons.—If some of the accused are acquitted, not because of a doubt as to their identity, but because of doubt as to their participation in the offence, and as a result the number of the accused who are left in becomes less than five, the charge under Section 395 must be held to have fallen through, and the only question which remains is whether the accused who are left in can be convicted for the offence of robbery under Section 392, or Section 392 read with Section 34. The Court must, in such a case, carefully examine the evidence against each remaining accused, in the same manner as if he had been originally charged under Section 392 or 392/34. It is only when the Court is satisfied that the evidence on record clearly establishes beyond doubt against each of the remaining accused that he was concerned in the act of robbery or participated in its commission, that he can be convicted of that offence. Every one of those accused against whom there is no such clear evidence must be given the benefit of doubt and must be acquitted. Ram Shankar Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1956 SC 441 : 1956 CrLJ 882.

[11832] ● Robbery offence of conviction converted from under Section 395 to one under Section 392.—When the charge under Section 395 fails for the reasons stated above, each one of the remaining accused can be convicted under Section 392 only on the strength of his own individual acts, and if the prosecution fails as to any of them to prove the active or passive part he played in the commission of robbery, he must be acquitted on the charge of robbery as well. The same principles will apply equally to a case in which the Sessions Court has convicted five or more accused under Section 395, and on appeal the High Court acquits some of them, so that the question arises whether the legality of the conviction under Section 395 of the remaining accused whose number is less than five could be sustained.

In such a case, the question depends upon whether, on the facts of the case, it could be held that the offence of robbery was definitely committed by five or more persons and some of the accused who were convicted by the trial Court have been acquitted by the High Court only because of a doubt, as to their identity, or whether the prosecution case throughout was that the accused charged were the only persons concerned in the offence, and the High Court having acquitted some of them because of a doubt as to their participation in the offence, the number of the remaining convicted accused falls below five. In the former case, the conviction of even less than five accused on the charge of dacoity under Section 395 does not suffer from any illegality. But in the latter case, such conviction would be illegal, and the remaining accused can legally be convicted only under Section 392 for the offence of robbery. In such a case, the proper thing for the appellate Court to do is to convert their conviction from under Section 395 to one under Section 392. Ram Shankar Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1956 SC 441 : 1956 CrLJ 822.

[11833] ● Dacoity—Charge sustainable when presence of at least five of accused proved.—When five or more persons are charged under Section 395, Penal Code, and the prosecution case is that the accused before the Court and they alone were concerned in the offence, that is, when the charge against the accused does not state that they committed dacoity along with some other persons who are untracked or are unknown, the charge under Section 395 can be sustained, only when at least five of the accused are proved to have been concerned in the offence. Ram Shankar Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1956 SC 441 : 1956 CrLJ 822.

[11834] ● Conviction of less than five not illegal when some acquitted.—In a case where 5 or more were charged under Section 395, IPC but some of them are acquitted because of a doubt as to their identity, the conviction of even less than five accused under Section 395 is not illegal. Ram Shankar Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1956 SC 441 : 1956 CrLJ 822.

[11835] ● Three out of six not found guilty, conviction of remaining when.—High Court having come to the conclusion that three out of the six accused were not guilty, should have gone into the question whether there was satisfactory evidence to show that the three remaining accused could be convicted under Section 395, Penal Code, on the charge as framed. In any event the three remaining accused could be convicted of the lessor offence of robbery under Section 392, Penal Code if there was evidence to show that they had committed acts of theft and used violence while committing the theft. Ram Shankar Singh v. State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1956 SC 441 : 1956 CrLJ 822.

[11836] ● Dacoity—Conviction of less than five can be sustained.—Where the charge is that apart form the named 7 or 8 persons where were 5 or 6 others who had taken part in the commission of dacoity, the circumstances that all except the 3 accused have been acquitted by the High Court will not militate against the conviction of those three accused for dacoity, where the High Court held that the identity of the accused, acquitted could not be established and did not find that the group which committed robbery in the house of the complainant consisted of less than 5 persons. Saktu v. State of U.P., AIR 1973 SC 760 : (1973) 1 SCC 202 : 1973 SCC (Cri) 307 : 1973 CrLJ 599.

[11837] ● Dacoity—Conviction of appellant alone—Sustainability.—In a case of dacoity, the appellant was tried along with 8 others who alone were named in the FIR as having committed the offence. The appellant was convicted while all others were acquitted. Conviction of the appellant alone is unsustainable as assembly of 5 persons is necessary, to make out the offence under Section 395. Ram Lakhan v. State of U.P., AIR 1983 SC 352 (1) : (1983) 2 SCC 65 : 1983 SCC (Cri) 339 : 1983 CrLJ 691 (1) : 1983 CrLR (SC) 191 : 1983 ALJ 283 : 1983 CrAppR (SC) 123 : (1983) 2 Chand LR (Cri) 1 : 1983 BBCJ (SC) 51 : (1983) 1 Crimes 734 (2) : 1983 UPCrR 147 (1).

[11838] ● No finding recorded by Trial Court that accused and two other unknown persons committed dacoity.—Neither the charge nor the finding recorded by the Trial Court was that accused-Om Prakash, Munna, Amarjit Singh and two other unknown persons had committed dacoity. Specifically, the five named accused were alleged to have committed the offence. Two accused having been acquitted it ought to have been appreciated that only the remaining three accused had committed the said offence. Therefore, it was not proper to convict the remaining three accused under Section 395, IPC. Their conviction will have to be altered to one under Section 392, IPC. Om Prakash v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1998 SC 1220 (1221) : 1998 SCC (Cri) 696 : 1998 CrLJ 1636 : 1998 CrLR (SC) 164 : JT 1998 (1) SC 395 : (1998) 1 Crimes 139.

[11839] ● For sustaining conviction under Section 395, IPC—Finding sine qua non that appellant committed robbery.—For sustaining a conviction under Section 395, IPC, a finding is sine qua non that the appellants have committed the offence of robbery and if the number of the assailants crossed the figure of five the offence would escalate to Section 395, IPC. Krishna Gopal Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 2000 SC 3616 : 2000 SCC (Cri) 93 (494).

[11840] ● Presence and participation of two out of six accused persons doubted by Court—No conviction.—"In the instant case, earlier, there were six accused. Out of those six accused, two were acquitted by the trial Court without recording a finding that though offence of dacoity was committed by six persons, identity of two accused could not be established. They were simply acquitted by the Court. In our opinion, therefore, as per settled law, four persons could not be convicted for an offence of dacoity, being less than five which is an essential ingredient for commission of dacoity. Moreover, all of them were acquitted for an offence of criminal conspiracy punishable under Section 120-B, IPC as also for receiving stolen property in the commission of dacoity punishable under Section 412, IPC. The conviction of the appellant herein for an offence punishable under Section 396, IPC, therefore, cannot stand and must be set aside.

For the foregoing reasons, the appeal is allowed. The conviction of the appellant for an offence punishable under Section 396, IPC is set aside and he is ordered to be acquitted. Since the appellant is in jail, he is ordered to be released forthwith if his presence is not required in any other case. Raj Kumar v. State of Uttaranchal, AIR 2008 SC 3248 : 2008 (11) SCC 709 : 2008 (3) SCC (Cri) 888 : 2008 (5) SCR 1216 : JT 2008 (5) 519 : 2008 (7) Scale 1 : 2008 (3) Recent CR 604.

[11841] ● Non-examination of S.O. and glaring discrepancies—Effect.—In the instant case the High Court, in view of the non-examination of the S.O. who was the architect of facts of the case, and also in view of the glaring discrepancies, set aside the order of conviction. Held: "...... in the facts and circumstances of the present case and on the evidence on record, the order of acquittal was reasonably possible to arrive at and that being the position, we do not find any reason to interfere with the judgment of acquittal in the exercise of our jurisdiction under Article 136 of the Constitution. At the risk of repetition, we may also reiterate that the High Court, after consideration of all the evidence and materials on record had come to a conclusion of fact that the prosecution story as made out to convict the accused/ respondents under Sections 399 and 402 of the IPC could not at all be believed and therefore, the order of conviction of the Additional Sessio Judge. VIth Court at Etah was needed to interfered with. There is one further aspect of th matter. In our view, the High Court was justifi in drawing an adverse inference against the pros cution as it had failed to examine the adjoinin grove holders or land holders who were said have been present in the grove at the time occurrence. That apart, it was rightly pointed o by the High Court that adverse inference ought have been drawn against the prosecution as adm ttedly, the persons who were caught on the sp were caught without any resistance or strugg from their side. From the judgment of the Hig Court, it is also evident that the High Court ha found discrepancies in the examination-in-chi and the cross-examination of PW-1 as to the tim of his departure from the Police station and als as to the fact of his leaving the station with th
S.O., Ram Charan Singh. At this stage, we ma further reiterate that the Additional Sessio
Judge. VIth Court at Etah, while convicting accused/respondents had practically relied on th evidence of PW-1, whose evidence, in fact, wa rightly not accepted by the High Court in view the discrepancies found in his evidence. Finall in our view, the High Court, while reversing th order of conviction, had also noted other contr dictions viz., vii, viii and ix, as noted herein ea lier, which, in our view, are material contradi tions which would lead to acquitting the accuse respondents."

"In view of our discussions made here above, we do not find any ground to interfere wit the decision of the High Court, which on cons deration of all the materials on record and th evidence adduced by the parties had acquitted th accused/respondents and therefore, no interf rence is warranted in the exercise of our pow under Article 136 of the Constitution." State

[11842] ● Number of accused persons require to establish dacoity.—To prove allegations dacoity under Section 397, IPC against accuse persons, the prosecution has to prove that th accused persons were five or more then five number. Amin Khan v. State of Rajasthan, (200

6. DOUBLE JEOPARDY

[11843] ● Double jeopardy.—The further co
tention that under the Customs Act, 1962 for th

self same contravention the penalty proceedings terminated in favour of the appellant, is of little avail to the appellant for the reason that two Acts operate in different fields, one for contravention of the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act and the second for evasion of customs duty. The mere fact that the penalty proceedings for evasion of the customs duty had ended in favour of the appellant, does not take away the jurisdiction of the enforcement authorities under the Act to impose the penalty in question. The doctrine of double jeopardy has no application. P.V. Mohammad Barmay Sons v. Director of Enforcement, AIR 1993 SC 1188 : 1993 Supp (2) SCC 724 : 1993 SCC (Cri) 777 (784) : 1993 CrLJ 197 : JT 1992 (4) SC 565.

7. EVIDENCE AND PROOF

[11844] ● Evidence and proof.—The prosecution cannot be permitted to rely on such evidence without placing admissible evidence part of the information on the record. The information given by the accused may be such which if scrutinized shows only his remote connection and not the direct connection. In such a situation evidence of the bare fact of information having been given may be admissible but such evidence may cause serious prejudice. Ram Kishan Mithanlal Sharma v. State of Bombay, AIR 1955 SC 104 : 1955 CrLJ 196.

[11845] ● Person found in possession of stolen property not named by eye-witness or in dying declaration—Conviction.—Where the person found in possession of stolen property was not named by the eye-witnesses or in dying declaration and no witness claimed to have identified from taking part in dacoity, it can be held that he can only be convicted under Section 411, IPC. Sheo Nath v. State of U.P., AIR 1970 SC 535 : 1970 SCC (Cri) 15 : 1970 CrLJ 601.

[11846] ● Unknown dacoits committed crime—Circumstantial evidence.—The theory of some unknown dacoits having committed the crime cannot be believed when a number of villagers came running to the spot and stood outside the main gate of the house in which the dacoity was committed, some of them had torches and it was also a moonlit night, and the accused would have been falsely involved and implicated if they never came to scene of the occurrence. Brahma Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1972 SC 1229 : 1972 CrLJ 763.

[11847] ● Finding against accused inconsistent with findings upon which other accused acquitted.—Where the High Court had found the prosecution case concocted, and the story that the three accused including the appellant had been recognised among the dacoits, doubtful, the conviction of the appellant is inconsistent with the findings upon which it had acquitted all the other accused especially when the ballistic expert was unable to express any definite opinion about one of the two cartridges said to have been fired from the gun alleged to have been recovered form the appellant, and the prosecution failed to prove that the articles were really looted during the dacoity. Nanhey v. State of U.P., AIR 1977 SC 783 : (1977) 2 SCC 74 : 1977 SCC (Cri) 241 : 1977 CrLJ 583 : 1977 CrLR (SC) 22 : 1977 SCCrR 136 : 1977 CrAppR (SC) 111.

[11848] ● Conviction for having sought to fish in tank belonging to complainant by force.—According to the prosecution as many as 400 persons variously armed with deadly weapons came to the tank, tried forcibly to take away fishes from the tank and when the witnesses protested they were threatened with dire consequences and even with the fear of death if they tried to interfere with the act of theft sought to be committed by the appellants. The appellants have not produced a single document to show that the tank belonged to the Govt. It is well settled that the question of bona fide claim of right arises only where the accused show to the Court's satisfaction that their belief is reasonable and is based on documents or title, however weak it may be. In the instant case, however the appellants sought to fish in the tank by sheer force of arms. For these reasons it is held that the case of dacoity has been made out. Gedda Raminaidu v. State of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 1980 SC 2127 (2127) : (1980) 1 SCC 676 : 1980 SCC (Cri) 322 : 1980 CrLJ 1477 : 1980 CrLR (SC) 239 : 1980 UJ (SC) 567.

[11849] ● Conviction for trying to forcibly take away fish from tank.—Conviction was for trying to forcibly take away fish from the tank of which the complainant was the lessee. Appellants did not produce a single documents to show that the tank belonged to the Government, or any iota of evidence to support the appellants' stand that they had any bona fide claim to the tank. Question of bona fide claim of right arises only where the accused show to the Court's satisfaction that their belief is reasonable and is based on some documents of title, however weak it may be. Appeal was dismissed. G. Raminaidu v. State of A.P., AIR 1980 SC 2127 : 1980 SCC (Cri) 322 : 1980 CrLJ 1477 : 1980 CrLR (SC) 239.

[11850] ● Dacoity—Appreciation of evidence.—In a dacoity case, the judgment of the trial Court was completely wrong in its approach and the reasons given for acquitting the appellants were totally unsound and legally unsustainable. The High Court was fully justified in reversing the order of acquittal. It was not a case where any other view was possible on the evidence which could be taken by the High Court. Appreciation of evidence, would disclose that the only view possible in the case was, that the appellants had been fully proved to have participated in the dacoity. Appeal was dismissed. Juggal Gope v. State of Bihar, AIR 1981 SC 612 : (1981) 3 SCC 272 : 1979 SCC (Cri) 499 : 1981 CrLJ 4 : 1979 CrLR (SC) 571 : 1980 Bihar CrC (SC) 171 : 1980 UP CrC (SC) 171.

[11851] ● Many inherent improbabilities in prosecution case.—In the instant case there are many inherent improbabilities in the prosecution case, so far as the participation of appellant is concurred. In the first place, admittedly the appellants is concerned. In the first place, admittedly the appellant was a respectable man in the sense that he was possessed of sufficient means and was a well known homoeopath doctor and also the neighbour of the complainant. In this view of the matter it is difficult to believe that he would commit dacoity in the house of his own neighbour and that too in the early hour of the evening so that he may be caught any moment and take the risk of a conviction under Section 395, IPC. Secondly the evidence of the complainant clearly shows that the dacoits had no doubt concealed their identity but they did it in such a way that their faces were visible. Indeed if the appellant had participated in the dacoity, and taken the precaution of concealing his identity, then he would have seen to it that his face was fully covered so that identification by the complainant or the witnesses would become impossible. If he was a dare-devil then would not had concealed his identity at all. Thirdly, FIR having been lodged the same evening the police visited the house of the appellant next morning and found him there. If the appellant had really participated in the dacoity, he would have at least might himself scarce. The house of the appellant was also searched and nothing incriminating was at all found. Finally there was the important circumstances that in view of a dispute between complainant and the appellant there was a clear possibility of the appellant having been falsely implicated due to enmity. Lakshman Prasad v. State of Bihar, AIR 1981 SC 1388 : 1981 Supp SCC 22 : 1981 SCC (Cri) 642 (643) : 1981 CrLJ 1010 : 1981 CrLR (SC) 478.

[11852] ● Totality of evidence proving commission of offence by accused.—Where there was long-standing enmity between the accused and the victim party and the offence was committed during midnight and there was sufficient moonlight and lantern light enabling eye-witnesses to identify all the accused, the totality of evidence proved the commission of the offence by the accused. Conviction is proper. Om Prakash v. State of U.P., AIR 1983 SC 431 : (1983) 2 SCC 358 : 1983 SCC (Cri) 475 : 1983 CrLJ 831 : 1983 (1) Crimes 804 : 1983 CrAppR (SC) 287 : 1983 (1) CrLC 588 : 1983 UPCrR 215.

[11853] ● Dacoity when ruled out one murder taken place inside house—Unreasonable to suspect prosecution version.—It is on record that the dead bodies were kept inside the house during the right and were brought out in the early morning. It is certainly not suggestive of the fact that the incident might have taken place inside the house on that day. The probability suggested by the accused, on the contrary was that there was dacoity in the house of the deceased in which they must have been murdered. Apparently, this suggestion has no basis. The Investigating Officer did not notice any mark of ransaking or the traces of fire arms inside the house of Muriya Lal. The witnesses have testified to the effect that there was no dacoity in their house. When dacoity is ruled out and when there is not other suggestion that the murder could have taken place inside the house, it would be unreasonable to go on suspecting the prosecution version. State of U.P. v. Ram Swarup, AIR 1988 SC 1028 : 1988 Supp SCC 262 : 1988 SCC (Cri) 552(557) : 1988 CrLR (SC) 193 : JT 1988 (1) SC 436 : (1988) 2 UJ (SC) 65 : (1988) 1 Crimes 994(2).

[11854] ● No corroborative evidence showing involvement of accused in dacoity.—Where there is no corroborative evidence showing the involvement of the accused in the dacoity and where the evidence regarding their identity is not dependable, they are entitled to the benefit of doubt. Where the name of A-1 was mentioned in the FIR and A-4 and A-7 were already known to the first informant, from whom the money was robbed, recovery of money from these three accused lent corroboration to his evidence as also the evidence of his mother who came along with him. Where the lower Courts doubted the capacity of P.Ws. 1 and 2 to possess Rs. 73,600/- and required them to prove how P.W. 2 had over a period of 10 years saved the said amount notwithstanding the find of Rs. 33,600/- from their residence after their complaint, that Rs. 40,000/- was robbed from them, the approach of the lower Courts is wrong and it resulted in an erroneous conclusion. The acquittal of A's-1, 4 and 7 is set aside and they are convicted under Section 392, IPC though they were charged under Section 395, IPC as the acquittal of the remaining four accused was confirmed. Suryamoorthi v. Govindaswami, AIR 1989 SC 1410 : (1989) 3 SCC 24 : 1989 CrLJ 1451.

[11855] ● Persons from whom money demanded not injured though accused persons fired on them.—Both the witnesses in the instant case deposed that the appellant and the other convicted accused came to their farm house, demanded Rs. 50,000 and when their payment was not met with, the appellant with his pistol fired. These averments in their evidence specifically made against the appellant also find corroboration from the fact, namely, recovery of the pistol alongwith the empties and the missed cartridges. Moreover, the accused were chased and were caught red-handed and the Police-Inspector who came on the spot found them in custody and had formally arrested them and proceeded with the investigation. Therefore, the evidence is sufficient to bring home the guilt to the appellant. Sukhwinder Singh Alias Jaggi v. State of Punjab, AIR 1994 SC 764(765) : 1994 Supp (3) SCC 727 : 1994 CrLJ 111.

[11856] ● Dacoity committed by causing injuries.—In this case the accused, particularly A-2, pleaded that they were innocent and they were going to a neighbouring place and the villagers who were running hither and thither caught hold of them and on suspicion they were implicated. The High Court convicted these two accused solely on the ground that they were caught while running. No recovery was effected from them. There is no material whatsoever that they participated in dacoity or caused injuries to inmates including the witnesses. The explanation given by the accused cannot be rejected outright. It is well-settled that the accused need not prove their plea beyond all reasonable doubt. Latel v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1994 SC 763 (764) : 1994 CrLJ 1122.

[11857] ● Dacoity with murder—Proof of common intention or common object of all not necessary.—If a dacoit in the progress of and in pursuance of, the commission of a dacoity commits a murder, all of his companions, who are participating in the commission of the same dacoity may be convicted under Section 396, IPC although they may have no participation in the murder beyond the fact of participation in dacoity. It is not necessary that the murder should have been within the contemplation of all or some of them when the dacoity was planned, nor is it necessary that they should have actually taken part in, or abetted its commission. Indeed they may not have been present at the scene of murder, or may not have known even that murder was going to be, or had in fact been committed. But nonetheless they all will be liable for enhanced punishment, provided a person is in fact murdered by one of the members of the gang on commission of the dacoity. It is not necessary for the prosecution in such a case to establish either any common intention envisaged in Section 34 or common object contemplated in Section 149 of the IPC. If one of the dacoits committed murder during the commission of dacoity, the tentacles of Section 396 would prance to envelop all the dacoits huddled within its penal circumference and then it would be immaterial that the other dacoits did not share the intention with that person who committed murder. Kalika Tewari v. State of Bihar, AIR 1997 SC 2186 (2188) : (1997) 4 SCC 445 : 1997 SCC (Cri) 600 : 1997 CrLJ 2531 : 1997 CrLR (SC) 375 : JT 1997 (4) SC 405.

[11859] ● Extra-judicial confession—Participation of accused established in dacoity.—Having considered the evidence of the prosecution witnesses, this Court is satisfied that A-1 was one of the dacoits who committed the dacoity at the house of PW 18 and that he had given to stick blows to PW 18 and that he was caught by the village people who had chased the dacoits. Their evidence receive support from dacoits. Their evidence receive support from extra-judicial confession made by A-1 himself and thus his participation in the dacoity can be said to have been established by the prosecution beyond any reasonable doubt. The High Court therefore, committed a grave error in acquitting him. As regards participation by A-3, A-4, A-5 and A-6 the counsel for the State submitted that they were identified by two or more witnesses and, therefore, their participation in the dacoity ought to have been believed. In spite of their identification by two or more witnesses the High Court did not think it fit to confirm their conviction as it appeared to it that A-4, A-5, and A-6 were probably involved because of enmity or their strained relations with Chandreshwar Thakur of village Pakaria. The High Court has also pointed out that A-4, A-5 and A-6 were not named by A-1 in his extra-judicial confession. They were all agriculturists and had no connection with 'K'. In these circumstances the view taken by the High Court that the prosecution cannot be said to have proved beyond reasonable doubt that A-4, A-5 and A-6 had also participated in the dacoity, is quite reasonable. As regards A-3 the High Court has pointed out that 'R' who was referred to as one of the dacoits by A-1 in his extra-judicial confession, was the person of village Singharia whereas A-3 is of village Pakaria. Subsequent correction made in Exh. 5/1 also creates a doubt regarding 'R' of village Pakaria having participated in the dacoity. As we find that the reasons given by the High Court for acquitting A-3, A-4, A-5 and A-6 are not unreasonable, the order of acquittal passed in their favour does not call for any interference. In the circumstances these appeals are partly allowed. The judgment and order passed by the High Court as regards A-3, A-4, A-5 and A-6 is confirmed but the order of acquittal passed in favour of A-1 is set aside and he is convicted for the offence punishable under Section 396, IPC and is sentenced to suffer imprisonment for life. A-1 is ordered to surrender to custody to serve out the remaining sentence. State of Bihar v. Anirudh Thakur, AIR 1998 SC 921 : (1998) 9 SCC 616 : 1998 CrLJ 1201 at p. 1204 (SC) : JT 1998 (1) SC 505 : 1998 (1) Scale 419 : 1998 (1) Crimes 174 (SC) : 1998 (2) SLT 542 : 1998 (1) CCR 274 (SC) : 1998 (1) Supreme 515. [G.T. NANAVATI AND S.S.M. QUADRI, JJ].

[11860] ● Dacoity identification.—The condition of Dal Chand was quite good on 14.10.1977 and, therefore, he was discharged from the hospital. The High Court was, therefore, right in holding that the Investigating Officer was not telling the truth when he stated that he could not record the statement of Dal Chand on 14.10.1977 as his condition was not good. So also the explanation of the Investigating Officer regarding late recording of the statement of Darshani Devi (PW 5) has been rightly not accepted. Even if late recording of their statements is considered only as an act of negligence on the part of the Investigating Officer, the fact remains that they had not disclosed the name of Subhash till 18.10.1977 to any one. That creates a serious doubt regarding their having identified Subhash as one of the dacoits. One of the prosecution witnesses has stated that it was suspected by the village people right from morning of the next day that Subhash and his associates had committed the dacoity. It appears that because of suspicion Subhsah was involved for the first time on 18.10.1977. It is not believable that in all the rooms in which inmates of the house were sleeping and also in the courtyard 60 watts electric bulbs were kept burning. The evidence regarding discovery of bushirt, pant and ring by Subhash was rightly rejected by the High Court as it was not probable that while committing dacoity Subhash had taken away clothes also along with the golden ring and buried them in the courtyard of the house. Shambhu Dayal v. Subhash Chandra, AIR 1998 SC 1732 (1735).

[11861] ● Dacoity—Appreciation of evidence.—If the witnesses were able to recognise the colour of the clothes worn by the dacoits, surely they could have recognised their faces also of those who were known to them. One electric pole was to the north -east of the house of Om Prakash and one was towards north-west. The accused had come from the north-western direction and even if it is assumed that their caps could have cast a shadow over their faces while they were passing any the north-western electric pole then light from the other pole would have fallen on their faces. Om Prakash and others had stood up to see that what was happening. Thus they were not taken by surprise. Therefore, their evidence that they stood up and noticed that there were about 20-25 persons about 30-35 steps away from the house deserves to be believed. State of U.P. v. Bhoora, AIR 1998 SC 254 (256) : 1998 CrLJ 478 : 1997 (4) CCR 90 : 1997 (4) Crimes 208.
